A COLLECTION
OF THEOLOGICAL TRACTS, IN SIX VOLUMES.

By RICHARD WATSON, D.D. F. R.S.
LORD BISHOP OF LANDAFF,
AND REGIUS PROFESSOR OF DIVINITY IN THE UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE.

VOL. II.

CAMBRIDGE:
Printed by J. ARCHDEACON, Printer to the UNIVERSITY; for J. & J. MERRILL, Cambridge; T. EVANS, London;

M. DCC. LXXXV.
A COLLECTION
OF ATHELINICAL TRACTS

by ADAMS 1811

v. 2.

The

I. 1. 1. 1.

The first book of

the agreement

Costum and

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and

the agreement

the agreement

and
CONTENTS

OF THE

SECOND VOLUME.

This Book of Dr. Lardner, otherwise intitled the Supplement to the Credibility of the Gospel History, was published in 1756-7. It is so full and judicious on the Subject of the Canon of the New Testament, that it may of itself be sufficient to give the Reader very satisfactory Information on that Point. Du Pin published a complete History of the Canon and Writers of Books of the old and new Testament, which was translated into English, in 1699, 2 Vols. Fol. Bp. Cosin published a Scholastical History of the Canon of the Holy Scripture, in 1672, 4to. In Carpzovius's Introduction to the Canonical Books of the Old Testament, the Reader will find many learned Remarks on the Constitution of the Canon of Scripture. He may also if he thinks fit, consult Jones's full Method of settling the Canonical Authority of the New Testament; Mills' Prolegomena; Richardson's Defence of the Canon of the New Testament, against Toland; Dr. Clarke's Reflexions on Amyntor, &c. Dr. Owen published a sensible Tract in 1764, intitled, Observations on the four Gospels, tending chiefly, to ascertain the Times of their Publication, and to illustrate the Form and the Manner of their Composition; his Scheme of the Times, &c. is printed at the End of this Volume. Much Information on the same Subject, may be had in Macknight's Preliminary Dissertations; in Michaelis's Introductory Lectures; in Georgii Pritii Introduc~tio in Lectionem Novi Testamenti, and in a Variety of other Authors.
A HISTORY OF THE APOSTLES AND EVANGELISTS, WRITERS OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

CHAP. I.

General Denominations of the Collection of sacred Books, received by Christians.

One of the general denominations of sacred books is Scripture, or Scriptures, literally, and primarily signifying writing. But by way of eminence and distinction the books in the highest esteem are called Scripture, or the Scriptures.

This word occurs often in the New Testament, in the Gospels, the Acts, and the Epistles. Whereby we perceive, that in the time of our Saviour and his Apostles this word was in common use, denoting the books received by the Jewish People, as the rule of their faith. To them have been since added by Christians the writings of Apostles and Evangelists, compleating the collection of books, received by them as sacred and divine.

Some of the places, where the word Scripture is used in the singular number for the books of the Old Testament, are these. 2 Tim. iii. 16. All scripture is given by the inspiration of God. And Luke iv. 21. John ii. 22. Acts i. 16. viii. 32. 35. Rom. iv. 3. Gal. iii. 8. James ii. 18. 23. 1 Pet. ii. 6. 2 Pet. i. 20. Scriptures, in the plural number, in these following, and many other places. Matth. xxi. 42. xxii. 29. xxvi. 54. Luke xxiv. 27. 32. 45. John v. 39. Acts xvii. 2. 11. xviii. 24. 28. 2 Tim. iii. 15. 2 Pet. iii. 16.

Vol. II. A

St. Peter
St. Peter applies this word to the books of the New, as well as of the Old Testament, to St. Paul’s Epistles, in particular. 2 Pet. iii. 16. . . as also in all his epistles . . . which they that are unlearned, wrest, as they do also the other scriptures, unto their own destruction. Plainly denoting, that *St. Paul’s Epistles are Scriptures in the highest sense of the word.

II. Bible is another word, which has now been long in use among Christians, denoting the whole collection of writings received by them, as of divine Authority.

The word, primarily, denotes book. But now is given to the writings of Prophets and Apostles by way of eminence. This collection is the Book, or Bible, the book of books, as superior in excellence to all other books. The word seems to be used in this sense by Chrysostom in a passage already (a) cited. “I therefore exhort all of you to procure to your selves Bibles, βιβλία. If you have nothing else, take care to have the New Testament, particularly, the Acts of the Apostles, and the Gospels, for your constant instructors.” And Jerome says, “That (b) the Scriptures being all writ by one Spirit, are called one book.” We like-likewise saw formerly a passage of Augustin, where he informs us, “That (c) some called all the canonical scriptures one book, on account of their wonderful harmonie, and unity of design throughout.” And I then said: “It is likely, that this way of speaking gradually brought in the general use of the word Bible, for the whole collection of the scriptures, or the books of the Old and New Testament.”

In short, the ancient Christians were continually speaking of the Divine Oracles, and the Divine Books, and were much employed in reading them, as Chrysostom directs in a passage, transcribed (d) below: where he recommends the reading the divine books daily, forenoon and afternoon. At length the whole collection was called the book, or the bible.

Dr. Heumann has an Epistle, or short Dissertation (e) concerning the origin of this name of our sacred collection of books. And for some while he was of opinion, that (f) it was so called, as being the most excellent of all books: in like manner as the Jews had before called their collection the Scriptures, by way of eminence. So Acts xviii. 24. and 28. But (g) afterwards he suspected, that the origin of this name was in those

* Hac parte (quod bene notandum est) Petrus canonizat, ut ita loquar, id est, in canonem facrarum scripturarum ascribit, atque canonicae facit epistolae Pauli. Dicem enim, ficta & ceteras scripturas, utique significat, le etiam illas in scripturarum numero habere. De facris autem scripturis eum loqui, in confesso est. Eft. in loc.

those words of Paul, 2 Tim. iv. 13. The cloak that I left at Troas with Carpus, when thou comest, bring with thee, and the books, κεῖτα χιλία. For he believed, that thereby the ancient Christians understood the sacred code. But he afterwards acknowledgeth, that he had not found any instance of that interpretation in ancient writers. It seems to me therefore, that this conjecture should be dropped, as destitute of foundation: and that it should be better for us to adhere to the forementioned origin of this name, which appears to have in it a good deal of probability.

III. Canon is originally a Greek word, signifying a rule or standard, by which other things are to be examined and judged.

As the writings of the Prophets and Apostles and Evangelists contain an authentic account of the revealed will of God, they are the rule of the belief and practice of those who receive them.

Sometimes canon seems equivalent to a list or catalogue, in which are inlerted those books, which contain the rule of faith.

Du Pin says, "This (b) word signifies not only a law or rule, but "likewise a table, catalogue, list. Some have supposed, that the canonical books were so called, because they are the rule of the faith. But "though it be true, that they are the rule of our faith; yet the reason of "their being called canonical, is, because they are placed in the catalogue of sacred books."

Perhaps, there is no need to dispute about this. For there is no great difference in those two senses. And there may be passages of ancient writers, where it would be difficult to determine, which of them is intended.

St. Paul has twice used the word canon, or rule. Gal. vi. 16. As many as walk according to this rule. Upon which verse Theodoret's comment is to this purpose: "He (i) calls the forementioned doctrine a rule, "as being strict, and having nothing wanting, nor superfluous." Again, says St. Paul, Philip. iii. 16. Whereunto we have already attained, let us walk according to the same rule. Where he speaks of the doctrine of the gospel in general, or of some particular maxim of it: not of any books, containing the rule of faith. However, his use of the word may have been an occasion of affixing that denomination to the books of scripture. For it is of great antiquity among Christians.

Irenæus, speaking of the scriptures, as the words of God, calls (k) them the rule, or canon of truth. Here canon is not a catalogue, but the books, or the doctrine contained in the books of scripture.

Clement of Alexandria, referring to a quotation of the Gospel according to

(b) Le mot signifie non seulement une loi, une regle, mais aussi une table, un catalogue, une liste. ... Quelques-uns ont cru, que les livres canoniques etoient ain si appelezz, parcequ'ils font la regle de la foi. Mais quoique cela soit vrai, ce n'est pas ce qui leur a fait donner le nom de canoniques, qu'ils n'ont que parceque l'on a nommez canon le catalogue des livres sacrez. Diff. Prelim. l. 1. cb. 1. §. ii.

(i) Κακον εκθασε την σερειομισσιν διδασκαλιαν, ὡς εὑθυτη κοσμουμισσιν, καὶ μὴς ἐλεητων τι μπε σεριδιον ἱχθυαν. Thoed. in loc.

(k) Nos autem unum et folum verum Deum doctorem sequentes, et regulam veritatis habentes ejus sermones, de iisdem semper eadem dicimus omnes. Iren. l. 4. c. 35. al. 69. f. p. 277.
to the Egyptians, says with indignation: "But (l) they who choose to " follow any thing, rather than the true Evangelical Canon, [or the ca- "non of the Gospels,] insist upon what follows there as said to Salome." In another place he says: "The (m) ecclesiastical canon is the consent "and agreement of the Law and the Prophets with the testament deli- "vered by the Lord."

Eusebe, as (n) formerly quoted, says of Origen: "But in the first book "of his Commentaries upon the Gospel of Matthew, observing (o) the "ecclesiastical canon, he declares, that he knew of four Gospels only."

I shall add a few more passages from later writers, chiefly such as have been already quoted in the foregoing volumes: to which passages therefore the reader may easily have recourse.

Athanayi (p) in his Festal Epistles speaks of three sorts of books, the canonical, the fame, which are now received by us, such as were allowed to be read, and then of such as are apocryphal: by which he means books forged by heretics.

In the Synopsis of Scripture, ascribed to him, but probably not writ till above a hundred years after his time, near the end of the fifth centurie, is frequent mention (q) of canonical and uncanonical books.

The council of Laodicea, about 363, ordains, that (q) "no books, not "canonical, should be read in the church, but only the canonical books "of the Old and New Teftament."

Rufin, enumerating the scriptures of the Old and New Teftament, makes (r) three sorts of books, such as are included in the canon, such as are not canonical, but ecclesiastical, allowed to be read, but not to be al- leged for proof of any doctrine, and lastly, apocryphal books, which were not to be publicly read.

Jerome likewise often speaks of the canon of Scripture, as we law in his chapter, where he says: "Ecclesiasticus, (t) Judith, Tobit, and the "Shepherd, are not in the canon:" and "that (u) the Church reads, or "allows to be read, Judith, Tobit, and the Maccabees, but does not re- "ceive them among the canonical scriptures: and that they, and the "books of Wisdom and Ecclesiasticus, may be read for the edification of "the people, but not as of authority, for proving any doctrines.” And for the Old Testament he recommends (x) the true Jewish canon, or Hebrew

(l) See Vol. ii. p. 529. or 527.

(m) καὶ ἤχησας ἑν τῇ συμφωνίᾳ καὶ ἐν συμφωνίᾳ τῷ τῇ προφητῶν τῷ καλῷ τῷ τῷ χριστίαν παραδοθοῦν διακή. Cl. Strom. l. 6. p. 676. C.

(n) Ch. 38. vol. iii. p. 235.

(q) The same. p. 291. (r) See vol. x. p. 187. 188.

(i) Haec sunt, quae patres intram canonem conclufuerunt, & ex quibus fidei "noli praeritiones confarate voluerunt. . . Sciemus tamen eft, quod alii librī "funt, qui non funt canonicì, sed ecclesiasticì a majoribus appellati sunt. . . "Quae omnia legi quidem in ecclefiis voluerunt, non tamen proferri ad auotó- "ritatem ex his fidei confirmandum. Ceteras vero scripturas apocryphas no- "minarunt, quas in ecclefiis legi noluerunt. Rufin. citat. ubi supra p. 185. "not. (g).

(t) Vol. x. p. 41. (u) . . . p. 43. (x) . . . 52.
Hebrew verity. I refer below (y) to another place relating to the books of the New Testament.

The third Council of Carthage, about 397. ordains, “that (z) nothing “befide the canonical scriptures be read in the Church under the name “Divine Scriptures.”

Augustin, in 395. and afterwards, often (a) speaks of canonical scriptures, and the (b) whole canon of scripture, that is, all the sacred books of the Old and New Testament. We “(c) read of some, says he, that they “searched the scriptures daily, whether those things were so.” Acts xvii. 11. “What scriptures, I pray, except the canonical scriptures of the Law and “the Prophets? To them have been since added the Gospels, the Epistles “of Apostles, the Acts of the Apostles, and the Revelation of John.” Of the superior authority of the canonical scriptures to all others, he speaks frequently in passages afterwards alleged (d) in the same chapter.

Chrysostom in a place already cited (e) says: “They (f) fall into “great absurdities, who will not follow the rule (or canon) of the divine “scripture, but trust entirely to their own reasoning.” I refer to an- “other place (g) to the like purpose.

Says Isidore of Pelusium, about 412. “that (i) these things are so, we “shall perceive, if we attend to the rule [canon] of truth, the divine “scriptures.”

And Leontius, of Constantinople, about 610. having cited the whole cal- “togue of the books of scripture from Genesis to the Revelation (k) concludes: “These (l) are the ancient and new books, which are re- “ceived in the Church as canonical.”

By all which we discern, how much the use of these words, canon and “canonical, has obtained among Christians, denoting those books, which “are of the highest authority, and the rule of faith: as opposed to all other “whatever, particularly, to ecclesiastical, or the writings of orthodox and “learned catholics, and to apocryphal, the productions, chiefly, of heretics, “which by a specious name and title made a pretension to be accounted “among sacred books.

IV. The most common and general division of the can- “onical books, is that of ancient and new, or the Old and New Testament. The Hebrew word, berith, from which it

(y) Vol. x. p. 86. (z) p. 193. (a) p. 207.
(b) Totus autem canon scripturarum... his libris continentur. Ib. not. (r) p. 208.
(c) p. 252. (d) See p. 253. 256. 259. 268.
(e) Vol. xii. p. 126.
(f) Osas, εἰς ὅσιν ἄτοπιαν ἰκπίθεσιν οὐ μὴ βεβλημοντι τῷ τῆς Θείας γεγραμμένοι παρακληθέντι κανῶν x. λ. In Gen. cap. 33. hom. 58. T. 4. p. 566. B.
(g) Vid. hom. 33. in Ad. Ap. sub fin.
(i) Οτι δε ταυτα ἐστοι ἵκειν τὸν κανόνα τῆς ἀληθείας, τὰς Θείας φημὶ γεγραμένα, καλωσινομεν. Ibid. ep. 114. l. 4.
(k) See Vol. xi. p. 381.
(l) Ταυτά ἢ τὰ κανονζόμενα σημεία ἐν τῇ ἲκπηθεῖσι, καὶ σωληνα ἤ νεα; Cis- sarc. ibid. p. 380. not. (r).
it is translated, properly signifies (m) covenant. St. Paul, 2 Cor. iii. 16. . . . 18. shewing the superior excellence of the gospel-covenant, or the dispensation by Christ, above the legal covenant, or the dispensation by Moses, useth the word testament, not only for the covenant itself, but likewise for the books, in which it is contained. At least he does so, in speaking of the legal covenant. For, representing the case of the unbelieving part of the Jewish People, he says v. 14. Until this day remaineth the same vail untaken away in reading the Old Testament.

It is no wonder therefore, that this way of speaking has much prevailed among Christians. Melito, Bishop of Sardis, about the year 177, went into the East, to get an exact account of the books of the Law and the Prophets. In his letter to his friend Onesimus, giving an account of his journey, and reckoning up the books in their order, he calls them (n) the ancient books, and (o) the books of the Old Testament. Eusebe calls it (p) "a catalogue of the acknowledged scriptures of the Old Testament." Our Ecclesiastical Historian elsewhere (q) speaks of the scriptures of the New Testament. I shall remind my readers of but one instance more, Cyril of Jerusalem, introducing his catalogue of scriptures received by the Christian Church, says: "These (r) things we are taught by the divinely inspired scriptures of the Old and New Testament." Many other like examples occur in the preceding volumes of this work.

V. Instead of testament Latin writers sometimes use the Instrument. word instrument, denoting writing, charter, record. We find it several times in Tertullian, reckoned the most ancient Latin writer of the Church now remaining. In a passage already (s) cited he calls the Gospels, or the New Testament in general, the Evangelic Instrument. And says: "How (t) large chains Marcion has made in the epistle to the Romans, by leaving out what he pleases, may appear from our entire Instrument:" or our unaltered copies of the New Testament, particularly of that epistle. Speaking of the Shepherd of Hermas, he says, it (u) was not reckoned a part of the Divine Instrument: thereby meaning, as it seems, the New Testament. Which passage was quoted (x) by by us formerly. He calls (y) the Law and the Prophets the Jewish Instruments: that is, writings, or scriptures. He speaks of the antiquity (z) of the Jewish Instruments, or Scriptures. He (a) seems in one place to use the word instrument, as equivalent to scriptures, containing the doctrine of revelation, or the revealed will of God.

(o) . . . Καὶ ἀκεφίας μαθῆ τὰ τῶν ἀπαλαιῶν διασκέψων βιβλία. Ib. p. 149. A.

VI. Digest is another word used by Tertullian in speaking of the scriptures. "Luke's (b) Digest, he says, is often ascribed Digest to Paul." He calls (c) the Gospels, or the whole New Testament, our Digest, in allusion, as it seems, to some collection of the Roman Laws digested into order. Those two passages were cited in the chapter of Tertullian. I now transcribe the later below (d) more at large, it having also the word instrument, as equivalent to the New Testament. He likewise calls the Jewish Scriptures (e) Sacred Digests. He seems to use the word digest (f) elsewhere, as equivalent to writing, or work, in general.

I shall not take notice of any other general denominations of the sacred scriptures.

VII. My chief concern is with the New Testament, which, as is well known, consists of Gospels, the Acts, and Epistles. The only word, that needs explanation is the first.

Gospel is a translation of the Greek word εὐαγγέλιον, the Latin word, evangelium, which signifies any good message or tidings. In the New Testament the word denotes the doctrine of salvation, taught by Jesus Christ, and his Apostles. Which indeed is gospel by way of eminence, as it is the best tidings that ever were published in this world. Says Theodoret upon Rom. i. 1. "He (g) calls it gospel, as it contains affirmative furanse

(y) Aut nunquid non jufti Judæi, & quibus pœnitentia non opus est, habentes gubernacuia disciplinæ, & timoris instrumenta, Legem & Prophetas. De Pudicitia. cap. 7. p. 722. B.

(b) See Vol. ii. p. 581. or 579.

(c) The same p. 629. or 630.

(d) Si vero Apostoli quidam integrum evangelium contulerunt, de sola convictus inæqualitate reprehendi, Pseuadoapostoli autem veritatem eorum interpolarunt, et inde sunt nosfra digesla: quod ert germanum illud Apostolorum instrumentum, quod adulteros passum est? Advcr. Marc. l. 4. cap. 3. p. 504. B.

(e) Sed homines gloriae, ut diximus, et eloquentia solius libidinosi, sì quid in fannâs offenderunt digestis, exinde regetum pro inftituto curiositatis ad propria vererunt. Apol. cap. 47. p. 41. B.

(f) Elegi ad compendium Varronis opera, qui rerum divinarum ex omnibus retro digestus commentatus, idoneum fì nobis fcopum expofuit. Ad Nation. l. 2. cap. 1. p. 64. C.

(g) Εὐαγγέλιον δὲ τὸ κήρυγμα προφητευμιν, ὡς σφιλλων ἀγαθων ὑποσχέσειν χρησιν. Εὐαγγελιζεται γαρ τας της διακολα τας, την τη διαβολα λαλακον, των αμαρτημάτων την ἀφεσιν, την εικόνα την σαλωτιν, των μεριμνήσεως την ἀναστασιν, την ζωή την αἰωνίον, την βασιλεία των ἀνθρωπων. In ep. ad Rom. T.3. p. 10. B.
“surance of many good things. For it proclaims peace with God, the "overthrow of Satan, the remission of sins, the abolishing of death, the "resurrection of the dead, eternal life, and the kingdom of heaven.”

Says St. Matthew iv. 23. And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom. Και περιήγησεν το σιναγωνιον τως βασιλειαςς. Mark xiii. 10. And the gospel [το εὐαγγελιον] must first be preached to all nations. Ch. xvi. 15. Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. Κηρυξατε το εὐαγγελιον.
It is called the word of truth, the gospel of our salvation. Epi. i. 13. And in like manner, in other places.

But by gospel, when used by us concerning the writings of the Evan-gleists, we mean the history of Christ’s preaching, and miracles. The word seems also to be so used by St. Mark i. 1. The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Which may be understood, and paraphrased thus:
“Here (A) begins the History of the life and doctrine of Jesus Christ,
“the Son of God, and Saviour of mankind.”

St. Luke, referring to the book of his Gospel, says: Acts i. 2. The former treatise have I made, o Theophilus, of all that Jesus began to do and teach, until the day in which he was taken up, after that he through the Holy Ghost had given commandments unto the Apostles, whom he had chosen.
But St. Luke, as it seems, there puts the principal part for the whole.
For he has therein writ also the history of our Lord’s miraculous birth, and divers extraordinary events attending it: and likewise the history of the birth of John the Baptist, and divers circumstances of it, and his preaching and death.

In this sense the word Gospel is frequently understood by us. A Gospel is the history of Jesus Christ, his doctrine, miracles, resurrection, and ascension: not excluding the history of his fore-runner, who (b) also is said to have preached the gospel, that is, the doctrine of the gospel, or the kingdom of God.
The Gospel according to Matthew, Mark, Luke, John, is the history of Jesus Christ, as writ by those several Evangelists.

(a) That is Dr. Clarke’s Paraphrase. But I am sensible, it will not be allowed by all. Theocritus says, that by gospel Mark does not intend his own writing, but Christ’s preaching. Μακεσθε, αεχισι γην, τω ευαγγελισιν δειος χειμες αλλα τω αυτε συνεγερασιν καιρι ευαγγελιον, αλλα τω τω χριστι κιεν μα. Occum. in Ad. Ap. He proceeds to say, that the faithful afterwards called the writings of the Evangelists Gospels, as truly containing the gospel, that is, the doctrine of Christ. See Vol. xi. p. 413.

(b) Matt. iii. 1. 2. In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea, and saying: Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.
Compare Mark i. 4. Luke iii. 1. 2. And says St. Luke iii. 18. And many other things in his exhortation preached he unto the people. Πολλα μεν εν εις ετερα σωακαλω, εις πνευμονιτο τω λαον. Which may be literally rendered thus:
And exhorting many other like things, he evangelized [or preached the gospel to] the people.
C H A P. II.

General Observations upon the Canon of the New Testament.

I. The canonical books of the New Testament, received by Christians in this part of the world, are the Four Gospels, the Acts of the Apostles, Fourteen Epistles of St. Paul, Seven Catholic Epistles, and the Revelation

II. There may be different canons of the New Testament among Christians.

Indeed, there have been in former times, and still are, different sentiments among Christians, concerning the number of books to be received as canonical. The (a) canon of the Syrian churches is not the same as ours. Jerome tells us, that (b) in his time some of the Latins rejected the epistle to the Hebrews, and some of the Greeks the book of the Revelation. From Chrysostom’s works we perceive, that (c) he did not receive the second epistle of St. Peter, nor the second and third of St.
John, nor the epistle of St. Jude, nor the Revelation. And there is reason to think, that (d) Theodoret’s canon likewise was much the same with Chrysostom’s, and that of the churches in Syria. Nevertheless, we have observed in the course of this work, that about the same time the Egyptians, and the Christians in divers other parts of the world, had the same number of canonical books, that we have.

But to come nearer our own time. Calvin (e) Grotius (f) Le Clerc
(g) Philip Limborch (h) and some other learned moderns, have not admitted the epistle to the Hebrews to have been writ by St. Paul: though (i) they were willing to allow it to be the work of an apostolical man, and a valuable part of sacred scripture. But I cannot say, that they were in the right in so doing. For it appears to me to have been a maxim of the ancient Christians, not to receive any doctrinal or pre-ceptive writing, as of authority, unless it were known to be the work of

(b) Vol. x. p. 122. 123. (c) The same. p. 341.
(d) Vol. xi. p. 83. 89. 91.
(e) *Ego ut Paulum agnoscam autorem, adduci nequeo. Calvin. argum.
in ep. ad Hebr.*
(f) Facillima refutatu est postrema hæc opinio, ideo quod Paulinae epifo-læ inter fæ sint germanæ, pari charitati ac dicendi modo: hæc vero manifierte ab iis discrepant, seleciores habens voces Græcas, leniusque fluens, non autem frafta brevibus incisis, ac falebrofa. .... Grot. Proem. in ep. ad Hebr.
(g) Hist. Ec. Ann. 69. p. 455... 461.
(h) Prolegom. in ep. ad Hebr.
(i) *Hifice argumentis utrinque attente expensis dicendum videtur, Paulum epistolæ hujus scriptorem non videri. ... Quis vero illius scriptor sit, incertum est. Alii eam Luce, alii Barnabæ, alii Clementi adscribunt. ...
Interim divinam hujus epistolæ autoritatem agnoscam, multique alis, quas ab Apostolis esse scriptas, constat, ob argumenti quod tractat praefantiam preferendum judicamus. Limb. ibid. Vid. et Calvin. ubi supra.*
an Apostle. Consequently, the epistle to the Hebrews, if writ by an apostolical man only, should not be esteemed canonical.

Grotius (k) likewise supposed the second epistle ascribed to Peter, not to have been writ by the Apostle Simon Peter, but by Simeon, chosen Bishop of Jerusalem after the death of James the Just, whose epistle we have. Which Simeon lived to the time of Trajan, when he was crucified for the name of Christ. Upon which I only observe at present, that if this Simeon be the writer of this epistle, it should not be a part of canonical scripture.

The same learned man supposeth (l) the second and third epistles, called St. John's, not to have been writ by John the Apostle, but by another John, an Elder or Presbyter who lived about the same time, and after him, at Ephesus.

And the epistle called St. Jude's, he thought (m) to have been written by one of that name, who was Bishop of Jerusalem in the time of the Emperor Adrian, and not till after there had been several other Bishops of that church, since the death of the forementioned Simeon. If so, I believe, all men may be of opinion, that this epistle ought not to be placed in the canon of the New Testament.

It may not be thought right, if I should here entirely omit Mr. Whiston, whose canon consisted of the (n) Apostolical Constitutions, and divers other books, as sacred, beside those generally received: and (o) the Constitutions,

(m) Quare omnino adducor, ut credam esse hanc epitholam Judae Episcopi Hierofolymitanit, qui fuit Adriani temporibus, paullo ante Barachoebam. Id. in Annal. ad ep. Judea.

(n) "The sacred books of the New Testament still extant, both those in the 85. canon, and those written afterwards, are the same, which we now receive: together with the eight books of Apostolical Constitutions, and their epitome, the Doctrine of the Apostles: the two epistles of Clement, the epistle of Barnabas, the Shepherd of Hermas: and perhaps the second book of apostrophal Epistras, with the epistles of Ignatius and Polycarp." Essay on the Apostolical Constitutions. cb. i. p. 70. 71.

(o) "If any one has a mind to sort the several books of the New Testament, he may in the first place set the Apostolical Constitutions, with it's extract, or Doctrine of the Apostles, as derived from the body, or College of the Apostles, met in Councils. In the next place he may put the four Gospels, with their appendix, the Acts of the Apostles. The Apocalypse of John Constitutions, in particular, as the most sacred of all the canonical books of the New Testament.

Concerning which I beg leave to observe, first, that the receiving the Constitutions as a sacred book, and part of the rule of faith, would make a great alteration in the Christian scheme. Some might be induced to think it no great blessing to mankind, and scarcely deserving an apology. Secondly, Mr. Whiston's canon is not the canon of the Christian churches in former times; as is manifest from the large collections, made by us in the preceding volumes, from ecclesiastical writers of every age, to the beginning of the twelfth century. Thirdly, Mr. Whiston, notwithstanding all his labours, made few converts to this opinion. Which I impute to the knowledge and learning of our times. And as the Christian Religion is built upon facts, the study of Ecclesiastical Antiquity will be always needful, and may be of use, to defeat various attempts of ingenious, but mistaken and prejudiced men.

III. A short canon of Scripture is most eligible.

Religion is the concern of all men. A few short histories and epistles are better fitted for general use, than numerous and prolix writings. Besides, if any writings are to be received as the rule of faith and manners, it is of the utmost importance, that they be justly entitled to that distinction. Otherwise men may be led into errors of very bad consequence. If any books pretend to deliver the doctrine of infallible, and divinely inspired teachers, such as Jesus Christ and his Apostles are esteemed by Christians: great care should be taken to be well satisfied, that their accounts are authentic, and that they are the genuine writings of the men, whose names they bear. The pretensions of writings, placed in high authority, to which great credit is given, ought to be well attested.

Dr. Fortin, speaking of the work, called Apostolical Constitutions, says: "The (p) authors of them are, it is pretended, the twelve "Apostles and St. Paul gathered together, with Clement their amanuensis."

"If their authority should appear only ambiguous, it would be our "duty to reject them, lest we should adopt as divine doctrines the commandments of men. For since each Gospel contains the main parts "of Christianity, and might be sufficient to make men wise to salvation; there is less danger in diminishing, than in enlarging the number "of canonical books: and less evil would have ensued from the loss of "one of the four Gospels, than from the addition of a fifth and spurious "one."

In John also cannot be reckoned at all inferior to them, though it be quite of another nature from them. In the third rank may stand the Epistles of the Apostles, Paul, Peter and John. In the fourth rank may stand the Epistles of the brethren of our Lord, James and Jude. In the fifth and last rank may stand the epistles and writings of the companions and attendants of the Apostles, Barnabas, Clement, Hermas, Ignatius, Polycarp. All which, with the addition perhaps of apocryphal Esdras, and of the Apocalypse of Peter, and the Acts of Paul, were they now extant, I look upon, though in different degrees, as the sacred books of the New Testament." Ibid. p. 72–73.

In my opinion, that is a very fine and valuable observation.

And I shall transcribe again an observation of augustin, formerly (q) taken notice of. “Our canonical books of scripture, which are of the highest Authority with us, have been settled with great care. They ought to be few, lest their value should be diminished. And yet they are so many, that their agreement throughout is wonderful.”

IV. I have been sometimes apt to think, that the best canon of the New Testament would be that, which may be collected from (r) Eusebe of Cæsarea, and seems to have been the canon of some in his time.

The canon should consist of two classes. In the first should be those books, which he assures us were then universally acknowledged, and had been all along received by all catholic Christians. These are the four Gospels, the Acts of the Apostles, thirteen epistles of St. Paul, one epistle of St. Peter, and one epistle of St. John. These only should be of the highest authority, from which doctrines of religion may be proved.

In the other class should be placed those books, of which Eusebe speaks, as contradicted in his time, though well known: concerning which there were doubts, whether they were writ by the persons, whose names they bear, or whether the writers were Apostles of Christ. These are the epistle to the Hebrews, the epistle of James, the second of Peter, the second and third of John, the epistle of Jude, and the Revelation. These should be reckoned doubtful, and contradicted: though many might be of opinion, that there is a good deal of reason to believe them genuine. And they should be allowed to be publicly read in Christian assemblies, for the edification of the people: but not be alleged, as affording, alone, sufficient proof of any doctrine.

That I may not be misunderstood, I must add, that there should be no third class of sacred books: forasmuch as there appears not any reason from Christian antiquity to allow of that character and denomination to any Christian writings, beside those above-mentioned.

In this canon the preceeding rule is regarded. It is a short canon. And it seems to have been thought of by some (A) about the time of the Reformation.

V. Nevertheless that, which is now generally received, is a good canon.

(A) We learn from Paul Sarpi’s Histories of the Council of Trent, that one of the doctrinal articles concerning sacred scripture, extracted, or pretended to be extracted out of Luther’s works, was this; “that no books should be reckoned a part of the Old Testament, beside those received by the Jews: and that out of the New Testament should be excluded the epistle to the Hebrews, the epistle of James, the second of Peter, the second and third of John, the epistle of Jude, and the Revelation.” And there were some Bishops in that Council, “who would have had the books of the New Testament divided into two classes: in one of which should be put those books only, which had been always received without contradiction: and in the other those, which had been rejected by some or about which at least there had been doubts.” And Dr. Courayer, in his notes, seems to favor this proposal. See his French translation of the History of the Council of Trent, liv. 2. ch. 43. Tom. 1. p. 235. and ch. 47. p. 240. and note i.
For it contains only those books, which were acknowledged by all in the time of Eusebe, and from the beginning, and seven other, which were then well known, and were next in esteem to those before mentioned, as universally acknowledged: and were more generally received as of authority, than any other controverted writings. Nor is there in them any thing inconsistent with the facts, or principles, delivered in the universally acknowledged books. And moreover, there may be a great deal of reason to think, that they are the genuine writings of those, to whom they are ascribed, and that the writers were apostles. This evidence will be carefully examined, and distinctly considered, as we proceed.

In this canon likewise the above-mentioned rule is regarded. It is a short canon. For out of it are excluded many books, which might seem to make a claim to be ranked among sacred and canonical scriptures.

VI. There are not any books, besides those now generally received by us, that ought to be esteemed canonical, or books of authority.

I suppose this to be evident to all, who have carefully attended to the historic in the several volumes of this work: and that there is no reason to receive, as a part of sacred scripture, the epistle of Barnabas, the epistle of Clement, the Shepherd of Hermas, the Recognitions, the Clementin Homilies, the Doctrine of the Apostles, the Apostolical Constitutions, the Gospel of Peter, or Matthias, or Thomas, the Preaching of Peter, the Acts of Peter and Paul, of Andrew and John and other Apostles, the Revelation of Peter, and Paul, their Travels or Circuits. That these books were not received, as sacred scripture, or a part of the rule of faith, by christians in former times, has been shewn. Nor can they therefore be reasonably received by us as such.

The only writing of all these, that seems to make a fair claim to be a part of sacred scripture, is the epistle of St. Barnabas, if genuine, as I (s) have supposed it to be. Nevertheless, I think, it ought not to be received as sacred scripture, or admitted into the canon, for these reasons.

1. It was not reckoned a book of authority, or a part of the rule of faith, by those ancient christians, who have quoted it, and taken the greatest notice of it.

Clement of Alexandria has (t) quoted this epistle several times, but not as decisive, and by way of full proof, as we shewed. Nor is it so quoted by (u) Origen. Nor is the epistle of Barnabas in any of (x) Origen's catalogues of the books of Scripture, which we still find in his works, or are taken notice of by Eusebe. By that Ecclesiastical Historian, in one place it is reckoned (y) among spurious writings, that is, such as were generally rejected and supposed not to be a part of the New Testament. At other times it is called by him (z) a contradicted book, that is, not received by all.

Nor

(s) See Ch. i. Vol. i. p. 23...30.
(u) See Vol. iii. p. 305. 306.
(z) See Vol. ii. p. 521...523.
(x) The same p. 234...243.
(z) P. 96. 97.
Nor is this epistle placed among sacred scriptures by following writers, who have given catalogues of the books of the New Testament. It is wanting, particularly, in the Feftal Epiftle (a) of Athanafius, in (b) the catalogue of Cyril of Jerufalem, of (c) the Council of Laodicea, of (d) Epiphanius, (e) Gregorie Nazianzen, (f) Amphilochius, and (g) Jerome, (h) Rufin, (i) the Council of Carthage, and (k) Auguftin. Nor has it been reckoned a part of canonical epifture by later writers.

2. Barnabas was not an Apostle.

For he was not one of the twelve Apostles of Chrift. Nor was he choft in the room of Judas. Nor is there in the Acts any account of his being choft into the number of Apostles, or appointed to be an Apostle by Chrift, as Paul was. What St. Luke fays of Barnabas is, that he was a good man, and full of the Holy Ghost, and of faith. Acts xi. 24. And in ch. xiii. 1. he is mentioned among Prophets and Teachers in the church of Antioch. But St. Luke speaks in the like manner of Stephen, of whom he fays, he was a man full of faith, and of the Holy Ghost. vi. 5. full of faith and power. v. 8. full of the Holy Ghost. vii. 55. And all the feven were full of the Holy Ghost, and wisdom. vi. 3.

That Barnabas was not an Apostle, I think, may be concluded from Gal. ii. 9. where Paul fays: And when James, and Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars, perceived the grace that was given to me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hand of Fellowship. By grace I fuppofe St. Paul to mean the favour of the apostleship. So Rom. i. 5. By whom we have received grace and apostleship, that is, the favour of the apostleship. Ch. xii. 3. For I fay, through the grace given to me, meaning the especial favour of the apostleship. And see ch. xv. 15. 1 Cor. xv. 10. Eph. iv. 7. compared with ver. 11.

If Barnabas had been an Apostle, in the fufleft fene of the word, St. Paul would not have faid in the above cited place from the fecd to the Galatians, when they perceived the grace given to me, but, when they perceived the grace given to me, and Barnabas. And in the preceding part of the context, particularly, in ver. 7. 8. he twice fays me, where he would have faid us, if Barnabas had been an Apostle. For he had been mentioned before, in ver. 1.

Indeed, in the Acts, where Paul and Barnabas are mentioned togethcr, Barnabas is sometimes first named, as Acts xi. 30. xii. 25. xiii. 1. 2. and 7. xiv. 14. xv. 12. 25. Which, I think, not at all strange, among perfons, who were not intent upon precedence: when too Barnabas was the elder in years and discipleship. But in several other places Paul is first named, as in Acts xiii. 43. 46. xv. 2. 22. 35. of which no other reafon can be well afligned, beffide that of Paul's apostleship.

Moreover, wherever they travelled together, if there was an opportunity for discoursing, Paul fpake. So at Paphos, in the island of Cyprus.

(b) P. 269. 270.
(c) P. 291... 293.
(d) P. 303. 304.
(e) Vol. ix. p. 133.
(f) P. 147. 148.
(g) Vol. x. p. 76. 77.
(h) P. 177. 178.
(i) P. 193. 194.
(k) P. 210. 211.
Acts xiii. 6...12. And at Antioch in Pisidia. ch. xiii. 15. 16. See also ch. xiv. 12.

And that Paul was the principal person, appears from that early account, after they had been in Cyprus. ch. xiii. 13. Now when Paul and his companion loosed from Paphos, they came to Perga, in Pamphylia.

However, there are some texts, which must be considered by us, as seeming to afford objections.

Acts xiv. 4. But the multitude of the city was divided. Part held with the Jews, and part with the Apostles: that is, Paul and Barnabas, who were then at Iconium. And afterwards, at Lystra. ver. Which when the Apostles, Barnabas and Paul, heard, ... Here Barnabas is stiled an Apostle, as well as Paul.

To which I answer, first. Both being now together, and meeting with the like treatment, might be called Apostles: though only one of them was, properly, so. Secondly, it is not unlikely, that Barnabas and Paul are here stiled by St. Luke Apostles, in regard to what had been done at Antioch, as related by him. ch. xii. 1...4. when by an express order from heaven, they were sent forth from the church at Antioch, upon a special commission, in which they were still employed. That designation, however solemn, did not make either of them Apostles of Christ in the highest sense. It was not the apostolical, which is a general commission. But it was a particular commission, as appears from that whole historie, and from what is said at the conclusion of the journey, which they had taken. Acts xiv. 26. And thence they failed to Antioch, from whence they had been recommended to the grace of God, for the work, which they had fulfilled. Nevertheless, they are not unjustly called Apostles upon account of it. So 2 Cor. viii. 13. Whether any do inquire of Titus, he is my partner, and fellow-helper concerning you: or our brethren be enquired of, they (1) are the messengers of the churches, literally, apostles of the churches, and the glory of Christ. If those brethren, which had been appointed by the churches to go to Jerusalem, with the contributions, which had been made for the relief of the poor saints in Judea, might be called Apostles; there can be no doubt, but Paul and Barnabas might be called Apostles in regard to the work, to which they had been solemnly appointed by the church at Antioch.

Again 1 Cor. ix. 5. 6. Have we not power to lead about a sister, a wife, as well as other Apostles, and as the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas? Or I only, and Barnabas, have not we power to forbear working?

Some may think, that Barnabas is here supposed to be an Apostle. I answer, that though Barnabas was not an Apostle properly, or equally with himself, yet Paul, out of an affectionate respect to his friend, companion, and fellow-laborer, might be disposed to mention him, upon this occasion, in the manner he has done. This is said, supposing all before-mentioned to have been Apostles of Christ, in the highest sense. But, secondly, it is not certain, that all, before-mentioned, were strictly Apostles. It seems to me more likely, that by the brethren of the Lord some are intended, who were not Apostles. If so, Paul might reasonably, and without offence, gratify his friendly disposition: and insert here the name

(1) ἀπόστολος ἵκκλησιών.
name of Barnabas, who had shared with him many fatigues and difficulties in the service of the gospel, though he was not an Apostle.

I do not therefore discern any good reason from the New Testament, why Barnabas should be reckoned an Apostle. But quite otherwise.

The sense of the primitive Christians is agreeable hereto. Few or none of them have thought Barnabas an Apostle.

Clement of Alexandria has quoted Barnabas (m) five or six times. Twice he calls him Apostle. In another place he calls him the apostolic Barnabas, who was one of the seventy, and fellow-laborer of Paul. These are the highest characters, which he intended to give to Barnabas, and what he means, when he calls him Apostle, as is fully shewn in the place just referred to.

By Tertullian, as cited by us (n) formerly, Barnabas is plainly reckoned no more, than (o) a companion of Apostles.

Eusebius, in a chapter concerning those who were disciples of Christ, says: “The (p) names of our Saviour’s Apostles are well known from ‘the Gospels. But there is no where extant a catalogue of the seven-ty disciples. However, it is said, that Barnabas was one of them, who is expressly mentioned in the Acts, and in Paul’s epistle to the Galatians.” That learned writer therefore did not know, that Barnabas was an Apostle. In (q) another place of the same work, his Ecclesiastical Historie, he quotes a passage from the seventh book of Clement’s Institutions or Hypotoposes, where Barnabas is named one of the seventy. In his Commentarie upon Isaiah (r) Eusebius computes fourteen Apostles, meaning the twelve, and Paul, added to them, and equal to them, and James the Lord’s brother, Bishop of Jerusalem, whom Eusebius did not think to be one of the twelve. Nor does he here say, that (s) he was equal to them, or Paul. However, from all these places we can be fully assured, that our learned Ecclesiastical Historian did not so much as suspect Barnabas to have been an Apostle, in the highest sense of the word.

Jerome, in the article of Barnabas, in his book of Ecclesiastical Writers, says, he (t) was ordained with Paul an Apostle of the Gentiles. But authors, who write in haste, as Jerome often did, do not always express themselves exactly and properly. Jerome did not think, that Barnabas was equally an Apostle with Paul. This may be concluded from what there follows: He wrote an epistle for the edification of the Church, which is read among the apocryphal scriptures. If Barnabas had been an Apostle, strictly speaking, Jerome would not have said, he wrote an epistle for the edification of the Church. Which any man might do. Nor would his epistle have been reckoned apocryphal, as Jerome here, and elsewhere calls

(m) Vol. ii. p. 521... 523.
(n) ... P. 606... 608.
(p) ... Τῶν ἐκ ἐξερεύνησεν μᾶλλον καλάλογον μὲν ἄλλοι ἐξαμύθησαν. Αὐτῶν γε μὴ ἐς αὐτῶν ἔπτυχες. x. H. E. 1. 1. cap. xii.
(q) L. 2. cap. i. p. 38. D.
(r) Comm. in Es. p. 422.
(t) See Vol. n. p. 142. 143.
(u) See again, as before, Vol. x. p. 143.
(x) Vol. xi. p. 96. See also p. 97. 99. 103.
(y) See Vol. x. p. 366...370.
(z) See Apostles in the alphabetical Table of principal Matters.
(d) Ego autem non tanquam doctor, sed unus ex vobis, demonstrabo pauca, per que in plurimis lectores fitis. Barn. ep. cap. i.
General Observations upon the, &c. Ch. II.

"teacher, but as one of you, shall lay before you a few things, that you "may be joyful."

And somewhat lower: "Again, (e) I entreat you, as one of you."

He writes as a man, who had gifts of the Spirit, but not that full measure, which was a prerogative of Apostles. "He (f) who put the "engraven gift of his doctrine in us, knows, that no man has received "[or learned] from me a truer word. But I know, that you are "worthie."

I shall add a few more very modest expressions, not suitable to an Apostle.

"Thus (g) as much as in me lies, I have writ to you with great "plainness. And I hope, that according to my ability, I have omitted nothing conducive to your salvation in the present circumstance."

In the last chapter: "I (b) beseech you: I ask it as a favour of you, "whilst you are in this beautiful vessel of the body, be wanting in none "of these things."

And still nearer the conclusion. "Wherefore (i) I have endeavoured "to write to you, according to my ability, that you might rejoice."

Upon the whole, this epistle well answers the character given of Barnabas in the Acts, particularly, ch. xi. 24. He was full of the Holy Ghost. The writer of this Epistle had the gift of the Spirit, though not that measure, which was peculiar to Apostles. He was full of faith. The writer of this epistle had an earnest zeal for the truth and simplicty of the gospel. He was also a good man. In this epistle we observe the mildness and gentleness, by which Barnabas seems to have been distinguished. But we do not discern here the dignity and autho-

Consequently, this epistle may afford edification, and may be read with that view. But it ought not to be esteemed by us, as it was not by the ancients, a part of the rule of faith.

(e) Adhuc & hoc rogo vos, tamquam unus ex vobis. Ib. cap. 4.

(f) Οἶδαν ὃ τῶν ἐμφυτον δωρεὰν τῆς διδαξῆς ἀντεύει Διμυθρός ὁ ἦμεις ἐδείξας γνωωτερον ἐμαὐτία ἀπ' ἐμὲ λόγου. Ἀλλὰ οἶδα, ὅτι ἔξιοι ἐν τὶς ἐμις. Cap. 9.

(g) Ἐστὼ ὅσον ἦν ἐν δυνατῷ ὑπάρχοντες δικασθῆναι ὑμῖν ἐπιτίθεμεν γιὰ τῇ ἐπιθυμίᾳ μεν ἐν παραλείποντια μεν τῆς ἐν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις ὑμῖν εἰς σωτηρίαν, ἰστῶναι. Cap. 17.

(b) Ἐγὼ ὑμῖν, χάριν αὐτέρμισθον. k. l. Cap. 21.

(i) Διὰ μᾶλλον ἱστοῦσα γράφαι, ἄφ' ἐν ἡμῖν, εἰς τὸ εἰσφέρας ὑμῖν. Ibid.
Of the Method, in which the Canon of the New Testament has been formed.

The canon of the New Testament is a collection of books, writ by several persons, in several places, and at different times. It is therefore reasonable to think, that it was formed gradually. At the rise of the Christian Religion there were no written systems or records of it. It was first taught and confirmed by Christ himself in his most glorious ministration: and was still farther confirmed by his willing death, and his resurrection from the dead, and ascension to heaven. Afterwards it was taught by word of mouth, and propagated by the preaching of his Apostles and their companions. Nor was it fit, that any books should be writ about it, till there were converts to receive and keep them, and deliver them to others.

If St. Paul's two epistles to the Thessalonians were the first written books of the New Testament, and not writ till the year 51. or 52. about twenty years after our Saviour's ascension, they would be for a while the only sacred books of the new dispensation.

As the Christians at Thessalonica had received the doctrine taught by Paul, not as the word of men, but, as it is in truth, the word of God. i Thess. ii. 13. they would receive his epistles, as the written word of God. And himself taught them so to do, requiring, that they should be solemnly read unto all the holy brethren. i Thess. v. 27. He gives a like direction, but more extensive, at the end of his epistle to the Colossians, iv. 16. requiring them, after they had read it among themselves, to cause it to be read also in the church of the Laodiceans: and that they likewise read the epistle, that would come to them from Laodicea.

All the Apostle Paul's epistles, whether to churches or particular persons, would be received with the like respect by those to whom they were sent, even as the written word of God, or sacred scriptures. And in like manner the writings of all the Apostles and Evangelists.

They who first received them would, as there were opportunities, convey them to others. They who received them, were fully assured of their genuineness by those who delivered them. And before the end of the first century, yea not very long after the middle of it, it is likely, there were collections made of the four Gospels, and most of the other books of the New Testament, which were in the hands of a good number of churches and persons.

From the quotations of Irenæus, Clement of Alexandria, Tertullian, and other writers of the second century, of Origen in the third, and of Eusebius in the fourth century, it appears, that the greatest part of the books, which are now received by us, and are called canonical, were universally acknowledged in their times, and had been so acknowledged by the elders and churches of former times. And the rest, now received by us, though they were then doubted of, or controverted by some, were (a) well known, and approved by many. And Athanasius, who lived not long after Eusebius, (having flourished from the year 326. and afterwards) wards) received all the same books, which are now received by us, and no other. Which has also been the prevailing sentiment ever since.

(a) See Eusebius Vol. viii. p. 96. 97.

This canon was not determined by the authority of Councils. But the books, of which it consists, were known to be the genuine writings of the Apostles and Evangelists, in the same way and manner that we know the works of Cesar, Cicero, Virgil, Horace, Tacitus, to be theirs. And the canon has been formed upon the ground of an unanimous, or generally concurring testimonie and tradition.

In the course of this long work we have had frequent occasion to observe, that the canon of the New Testament had not been settled by any authority universally acknowledged, particularly, not in time of (b) Eusebius, nor of (c) Augustin, nor of (d) Cassiodorus: but that nevertheless there was a general agreement among Christians upon this head.

That the number of books to be received as sacred and canonical had not been determined by the authority of any Council, or Councils, universally acknowledged, is apparent from the different judgements among Christians, in several parts of the world, concerning divers books, particularly, the epistle to the Hebrews, and the Revelation: which were received by some, rejected, or doubted of by others. Not now to mention any of the Catholic Epistles. There was no catalogue of the books of scripture in any canon of the Council of Nice. Augustin (c) giving directions to inquisitive persons, how they might determine, what books are canonical, and what not, refers not to the decisions of any Councils. Cassiodorus, in the sixth centurie, has (f) three catalogues, one called Jerome's, another Augustin's, another that of the ancient version. But he refers not to the decree of any Council, as decisive. And it seems to me, that in all times Christian people and churches have had a liberty to judge for themselves, according to evidence. And the evidence of the genuinneffe of most of the books of the New Testament has been so clear and manifest, that they have been universally received.

The genuinneffe of these books, as before said, is known in the same way with others, by testimonie or tradition. The firft testimonie is that of those who were contemporarie with the writers of them. Which testimonie has been handed down to others.

That in this way the primitive Christians formed their judgement concerning the books proposed to be received as sacred scriptures, appears from their remaining works. Says Clement of Alexandria: "This " (g) we have not in the four Gospels, which have been delivered to us, "but in that according to the Egyptians." Tertullian may be seen largely to this purpose. Vol. ii. 576...581. I pass on to Origen, who says: "As (b) I have learned by tradition concerning the four Gospels, "which alone are received without dispute by the whole Church of God "under heaven." So Eusebe, in his Ecclesiastical History, often observes, what books of the New Testament had been quoted by the ancients, and what not. And having rehearsed a catalogue of books universally

(b) Vol. xiii. p. 105.  (c) Vol. x. 207...211.  (d) Vol. xi. 279.
(b) Vol. x. p. 207.  (f) Vol. xi. p. 303...306.
(g) Vol. ii. p. 496, and 529.  (b) Vol. iii. p. 235.
versally received, and of others controverted, he says: "It (i) was need-ful to put down these also: distinguishing the scriptures, which according to ecclesiastical tradition are true, genuine, and universally acknowledged, from those which are controverted, and yet appear to have been known to many: that by this means we may know them from such as have been published by heretics, under the names of Apostles. Which books none of the ecclesiastical writers in the succession from "the times of the Apostles have vouchsafed to mention in their writ"ings." I may not transcribe, but only refer to (k) Athanasius in his Fethal Epistle, to (l) Cyril of Jerusalem, (m) Rufin, and (n) Augustin.

However, beside observing the testimonie of writers in former times, they critici the books, which were propo to them: examining their ftile and contents, and comparing them with those books, which had been already received as genuine upon the ground of an unanimous testi-monie, and undoubted tradition. Says honest Serapion, Bishop of Antioch, in an epiftle to fome, who had too much respeét for a writing, entitled the Gospel of Peter: "We (o) brethren, receive Peter, and the other "Apostles, as Chrifl: but as fkillful men, we reject them writings, which "are falsely ascrib to them: well knowing, that we have received no "fuch." And he adds, that upon perufing that work, he had found the main part of it agreeable to the right doctrine of our Saviour: but there were some other things of a different kind. And Eufèbe adds in the place tranfcribed above: "The (p) ftile also of these books is entirely different from that of the Apostles. Moreover the sentiments "and doctrine of these writings differ from the true orthodox Christianit. "All which things plainly fiew, that they are the forgeries of heretics."

It has been fometimes said, that the Council of Laodicea firft settled the canon of the New Teftament. But it may be juftly faid to have been settled before. At left there had been long before a general agreement among Chriftians, what books were canonical, and what not: what were the genuine writings of Apoftles and Evangelifts, and what not. From the decree of the Council iftelf it appears, that there were writings already known by the title of canonical. That Council does nothing in their laft canon, but declare, "That (q) private psalms ought not to be "read in the church, nor any books not canonical, but only the cano-
-ncal books of the Old and New Teftament." After which follows a catalogue or enumeration of fuch books. The fame may be faid of the third Council of Carthage, whose 47. canon is to this purpoze: "More- "over (r) it is ordained, that nothing befide the Canonical Scriptures be "read in the church, under the name of Divine Scriptures."

I shall now tranfcribe below a long and fine paffage of Mr. Le Clerc, wherein he fays: "We (s) no where read of a Council of the Apoftles, "or

(l) P. 268.
(m) Vol. x. p. 193.
(n) P. 207. 208.
(p) Vol. viii. p. 98.
(s) Nusquam quidem legimus, Collegium Apostolicum, aut coetum ulum Rectorum Ecclesiaram Christianarum coactum esse, qui pro auctoritate defi-
"or of any assembly of the Governours of Christian churches, convened, to determine by their authority, that such a number of Gospels,
"neither more nor fewer, should be received. Nor was there any need "of it, since it is well known to all from the concurring testimonic of "contemporaries, that these four Gospels are the genuine writings of "those whole names they bear: and since it is also manifest, that there "is in them nothing unworthy of those, to whom they are ascribed, nor "any thing at all contrarie to the revelation of the Old Testament, nor "to right reason. There was no need of a synod of Grammarians, to "declare magisterially what are the works of Cicero, or Virgil. . . In "like manner the authority of the Gospels has been established by gen"eral and perpetual consent, without any decree of the Governours of "the Church. We may say the fame of the Apostolical Epifles, which "owe all their authority, not to the decisions of any ecclesiastical aflem-
"blie, but to the concurring testimonic of all Christians, and the things
"themselves, which are contained in them."

Mr. James Bosnaga (t) has several chapters, shewing how the canon of the New Testament was formed, without the authoritative decifions of Councils. I likewise refer to (u) Mr. Jones upon this subject. I must also remind my readers of (x) Augustin’s excellent obfervations, in his arguments with the Manicheans, concerning the genuineffe and integrity of the books of the New Testament. I shall transcribe from him here a few lines only, which are very much to the present purpose.
"We (y) know the writings of the Apoflles, says he, as we know the "works of Plato, Aristotele, Cicero, Varro, and others. And as we know
"the writings of divers ecclesiastical authors: furasmuch as they have "the testimonie of contemporaries, and of those who have lived in fuc"ceeding ages."

Upon the whole, the writings of the Apoftles and Evangelists are received, as the works of other eminent men of antiquity are, upon the ground

nierint hunc numerum Evangeliorum effe admittendum, non majorem, nec minorem. Sed nec opus fuit, cum omnibus confiraret, ex testimonio et con-fenfu æqualium, quatuor haec Evangelia eorum vere fuiffe, quorum nomina præferunt: cumque nihil in iis legatur quod scriptoribus dignum non fit, vel revelationi Veteris Testamenti, rectiève rationi, vel minimum adversetur: aut quod inferius ævum, recentiorumque manus ullo modo recipiat. Non opus fuit synodo Grammaticorum, qui, pro imperio, pronunciaret ea scripta, verbi causa, Ciceronis et Virgilii, quæ eorum effe non dubitamus, re vera tauto-rum ingeniourum fectus fuiffe, et polemata ea in re confluerent. Omnium confeffus, non quæstus, non rogatus, fed sponte significatus, prout occafio tulit, refque ipsæ omnibus, qui posita vixere, dubitationem omnem antever-tur, . . Sic et Evangeliorum autoritas merito constituita est, et invaluit, perpetuo confeffus, fine ullo Rectorum Ecclesiae decreto.

Idem dixerimus de Epifolos Apoftolici, quæ nullius ecclesiastici conventus judicio, fed confirante omnium chrifianorum testimonia, rebuflque ipsis, quas complectuntur, autoritatem omnem suam debent. Cleric. H. E. ann. 100.
num. iii. iv. Vid. et ann. 29. num. xcii.

(i) Hisf. de P. Eglife, t. 8. ch. v. vii.
(u) New and full Method. Part i. ch. v. vi. viii.
ground of general consent and testimony. Nor does the canon of the scriptures of the New Testament owe its establishment to the decisions of Councils: but it is the judgement of Christian people in general. And so far as we are able to perceive, after a long and careful examination, it is a right and reasonable judgement. And it may induce us to believe, that if men were encouraged to think freely, in other matters also, and to judge for themselves, according to evidence, and proper affinities were afforded them, it would not be at all detrimental to the interests either of truth or virtue.

CHAP. IV.

Of the Time of writing the Gospels, especially the first three.

SECT. I.

That the Gospels are not mentioned, nor referred to, in the Epistles of the New Testament.

USEB E intimates, that (a) many before him supposed, that E when Paul in his epistle speaks of his own gospel, he intended the USEB E Gospel according to Luke. We will therefore consider those texts, and some other of a like kind.

I. St. Paul says Rom. ii. 16... in the day, when God shall judge the secrets of men, according to my gospel. The same phrase occurs again ch. xvi. 25. and 2 Tim. ii. 8. Remember, that Jesus Christ, of the seed of David, was raised from the dead, according to my gospel.

In all which places, I apprehend, it must be reasonable to understand, not any written Gospel, or historic of Jesus Christ: but the doctrine of the gospel of Jesus Christ, which had been preached by Paul. Which is also the opinion of learned modern interpreters in general.

II. 2 Cor. viii. 18. And we have sent with him the brother, whose praise is in the gospel, throughout all the churches.

Many have been of opinion, that St. Luke is the brother, here intended, and that St. Paul refers to Luke’s written Gospel. This (b) is said to be Origen’s interpretation. But I do not clearly perceive it. Origen (c) speaking of the four Gospels, says: “The (d) third is that according to

(a) *Phæl. dicit, οὐ μετὰ μὲν τῷ καὶ αὐτῷ εἰσαγγέλθη μὴ προσέχειν ὅ τι θεοῦ εἰσῇ, ὑποστάσθη ὡς πιστεύειν τὸν ιδίον εἰσαγγελέα γράφῃ ἑνας, καὶ τὸ εἰσαγαγεῖν μοι. Enl. H. E. l. 3. c. 4. p. 73. D.

(b) “Who this brother was, is much contested. Antiquity has carried it for St. Luke, worthy of praise in all the churches for the Gospel, which he wrote. “The authority of this assertion seems to rest upon the words of Origen, the “interpolated Ignatius, and St. Jerome.” So Whitby upon the Place.

(d) See Vol. iii. p. 235.
to Luke, commended by Paul." I say, I do not perceive it to be clear, that Origen had an eye to 2 Cor. viii. 18. He might intend Rom. ii. 16. or xvi. 25. or 2 Tim. ii. 8. However, whether it be Origen's interpretation of that text, or not, it is Jerome's: who writing the his torie of St. Luke in his book of illustrious Men, says: "He (e) wrote a Gospel, of which Paul makes mention, saying: And we have sent with him the brother, whose praise is in the Gospel." To the same purpose (f) also in the prologue to his Commentarie upon St. Matthew; and likewise in (g) his Commentarie upon the epistle to Philemon.

Chrysostom upon the place speaks after this manner. "And (h) who is this brother? Some say, Luke: and think, that the Apostle refers to the historie, writ by him. Others say, Barnabas. For by gospel he intends unwritten preaching." Theophylact (i) speaks to the like purpose. Theodoret (k) by the brother understand Barnabas. And therefore could not think of any written Gospel, no such work having been ascribed to him by the ancients. Occumenius's note is to this purpose. "Many (l) say, this brother is Luke, mentioned upon account of the Gospel composed by him. Many others suppose him to be Barnabas. For, as they say, unwritten preaching is here called gospel. Which is the more likely. For what follows is more suitable to Barnabas: whose praise is in the gospel. As much as to say: he not only preaches, but commendably." And afterwards. "The meaning is, he not only evangelizeth, and preacheth the gospel admirably, and commendably, but he has been chosen to travel with us, with this grace also." Such are the sentiments of the ancients upon this text.

Let us now observe the interpretations of some judicious moderns.

Gratius says: "he (m) does not dislike the opinion of those, who think Luke to be here intended. But he does not think, that St. Paul refers to his book of the Gospel, which was not then published: but to the office of an Evangelist, which Luke had discharged in several places, or to his preaching the gospel. And he says, that in the gospel, may be the same as by the gospel. So in ch. x. 14. of the same epistle."

Ephrius likewise says, that (n) by gospel is to be understood preaching: not St. Luke's Gospel, which we are not certain was then published.

Le Clerc, in his French Testament, translates in this manner: one of our brethren, who is praised on account of the gospel in all the churches. And in his notes says, "that generally St. Luke is here supposed to be intended: though St. Paul refers rather to his preaching the gospel, than to "the book of his Gospel."

Beaufobre translates after this manner: one of the brethren, who has made himself famous in all the churches by [preaching] the gospel. And says in his notes: "that though some of the ancients have hereby under¬ "stood St. Luke and his Gospel: he thinks, that by the gospel is here "intended the preaching of the gospel. Besides, there is no proof, that "St. Luke had as yet writ his Gospel. It is rather reasonable to think," he had not."

Upon the whole, though we cannot certainly say, who is the brother, whose praise was in the gospel: whether (o) Luke, or Barnabas, or Silas, or Apollos: I presume we are sufficiently warranted to say, that by gospel is here intended neither the gospel according to Luke, nor any other written Gospel whatever.

III. i Tim. vi. 20. O Timothie, keep that which is committed to thy trust.

Hereby some have been disposed to understand a written Gospel. But they are not favored by the best interpreters. Grutius says, that (p) this deposit, or thing committed to Timothie's trust, is the sacred doctrine of the gospel. Estius (q) says the same. I place below like¬ wise (r) a part of Beza's note upon this text. Le Clerc in his notes explains it thus: "the doctrine of the gospel, which was a sacred deposit, committed by "the Apostles to their disciples." And Beaufobre thus: "the doctrine," "which had been committed to, or entrusted with Timothie." See also, says he, i Tim. i. 18. and 2. Tim. ii. 2. I say no more to this text.

IV. 2. Tim. i. 13. 14. Hold fast the form of sound words, which thou hast heard of me. . . That good thing, which was committed unto thee, keep by the Holy Ghost, which dwelleth in us.

Hereby some may understand a written Gospel, or history of Jesu Christ. Nevertheless, I think, I need not add much here to what has been already said of the preceding text, it being nearly parallel. The meaning of both is much the same. Timothie is here again exhorted, and required, to retain with all fidelity those sound words, that pure doc¬ trine of the gospel, which he had been taught by the Apostle, and had often heard from him.

It
It does not appear, then, that there are in the apostolical epistles of the New Testament any references to written Gospels, or histories of Jesus Christ. I no not say, this is a proof, that no such histories were then written. Nevertheles, I have thought it not improper to shew, that there is no notice taken of any such histories in these epistles: and therefore they cannot afford any evidence of their being then writ and published, I think likewise, that it was not amiss to embrace this occasion to shew the true meaning of some texts, which have been often misinterpreted.

S E C T. II.

Observations of ancient Christian Writers, leading to the true time, when the Gospels were writ.

1. AY S Irenaeus, as formerly (s) quoted, For (t) we have not "received the knowledge of the way of our salvation from "any others, than thofe, by whom the gospel has been brought "to us. Which gospel they first preached, and afterwards by the will of "God committed to writing, that for time to come it might be the "foundation and pillar of our faith. Nor may any fay, that they preach-"ed, before they had a compleat knowledge of the doctrine of the gos-"pel. For after that our Lord rose from the dead, and they [the Apo-"ftles] were endowed from above with the power of the Holy Ghost "coming down upon them, they received a perfect knowledge of all "things. They then went forth to all the ends of the earth, declaring to "men the blessing of heavenly peace, having all of them, and every one "alike, the gospel of God."

He then proceeds to speak of the Gospels of the four Evangelists severally, and the times and occasions of writing them. All which will be taken down by us hereafter in proper places. Here is sufficient to induce us to think, that the written Gospels, or histories of Jesus Christ, were not published, till some good while after our Lord’s ascension. For the Apostles first preached, he says, before they wrote.

2. Says Eusebe in a long passage formerly quoted: “Thofe (u) admi-"rable and truly divine men, the Apostles of Christ,—neither knew, "nor attempted, to deliver the doctrine of their master with the artifice "and

(s) See Vol. i. p. 353.
(t) Non enim per aliis dispositionem salutis nostre cognovimus, quam per eos, per quos evangelium pervenit ad nos: quod quidem tunc praeconerunt, posse vero per Dei voluntatem in scripturis nobis tradiderunt, fundamentum & columnam fidei nostræ futurum. Nec enim fas eft dicere, quoniam ante prædicaverunt, quam perfectam haberant agnitionem, ficut quidam audent dicere, gloriantes, emendatores fæ esse Apoftolorum. Posleia enim quam sur-

(xvii) Vol. viii. p. 90... 92.
and eloquence of words... Nor were they greatly concerned about the writing of books, being engaged in a more excellent ministry, which is above all human power. Infomuch that Paul, the most able of all in the furniture both of words and thoughts, has left nothing in writing, beside a few epistles... Nor were the rest of our Saviour's followers unacquainted with these things, as the seventy disciples, and many others, beside the twelve Apostles. Nevertheless all of the disciples of our Lord, Matthew, and John only have left us any memoirs: who too, as we have been informed, were compelled to write by a kind of necessity." And what follows.

3. This passage should be compared with another of (x) Origen. And they who please may also consult our remarks (*) upon what has been now transcribed from Eusebe. Which may be of use to caution us, not to be too precipitate in giving a very early date to the Gospels, as if they were writ immediately after our Lord's ascension: when there is reason to think, they were not writ, till after numerous converts had been made, who expressed their desires to have written histories of what they had heard, for refreshing their memories.

4. Says Theodore, Bishop of Mopsuestia, in the later part of the fourth centurie, about the year 394. "After (y) the Lord's ascension to heaven, the disciples stayed a good while at Jerusalem, visiting the cities in it's neighbourhood, preaching chiefly to the Jews; until the great Paul, called by the divine grace, was appointed to preach the gospel to Gentiles openly. And in process of time Divine Providence, not allowing them to be confined to any one part of the earth, made way for conducting them to remote countreys. Peter went to Rome, the others elsewhere. John, in particular, took up his abode at Ephesus, visiting however at seafons the several parts of Asia... About this time the other Evangelists, Matthew, Mark, and Luke, published their Gospels, which were soon spread all over the world, and were received by all the faithful in general with great regard."... He proceeds to say, "that nevertheless, the Christians in Asia, having brought those Gospels to him, earnestly entreated him to write a farther account of such things, as were needful to be known, and had been omitted by the rest. "With which request he complied."

This remarkable passage, upon which divers observations were made, when it was first quoted, may dispose us to think, that all the four Gospels were writ about the same time, and that none of them were publised till after, or about the sixtieth year of our Lord's Nativity.

5. By divers ancient Christian writers it is said, that (z) Mark, the disciple and interpreter of Peter, at the desire of the brethren of Rome, wrote a short Gospel, according to what he had heard related by Peter. So Jerome (a) beside others, as before quoted, in his book of Illustrious Men.

(x) See Vol. p. 236.
(*) Vol. viii. p. 124... 137.
(z) See Vol. i. p. 247... 249. ii. 472... 489. viii. 305... 306. xi. p. 31.
(a) Vol. x. p. 92.
St. Peter, I reckon, did not come to Rome before the reign of Nero, probably, not till the second time that Paul was in that city, in the year 63. or 64. And yet, at this time, the Christians at Rome desired Mark to give them in writing an account of Peter's preaching, for refreshing their memories concerning what the Apostle had said of Christ, and his doctrine. The consequence is manifest. They had not then any written Gospel in their hands. Nor did they know, that there was one. "The truth is, says Mr. Jones (b), if St. Mark, or any one else, had had "St. Matthew's Gospel, at Rome, there would have been no need of St. "Mark's writing."

These are general observations in the ancients, or deduced from them, which may be of no small use to lead us to the true time of writing the first three Gospels.

S E C T. III.

That the first three Gospels were published before the destruction of Jerusalem, which happened in the year of the Christian epoch LXX.

CONCERNING this I transcribe below (c) a very good argument of Le Clerc from his Dissertation upon the four Evangelists.

The Jewish war began, according (d) to Josephus, in the Month of May, in the 66. year of the Christian epoch, and ended in September, in the year 70. in the desolation of the city of Jerusalem and the temple. And I think, it may be shewn to be very probable, that the first three Gospels were writ before the year 66. when the final troubles and calamities of the Jewish People were coming on.

This must appear to have a great deal of probability from the predictions therein recorded concerning the desolation of the temple, the overthrow of the city of Jerusalem, the ruin of the Jewish State and People in Judea, together with divers circumstances of these events, and many troubles and calamities preceding them. These predictions are recorded in the histories of our ministrie, which we call Gospels, pels, without any the least hint, either express and designed, or accidentally dropping from the writers, that those predictions had been fulfilled and verified, or that the things spoken of had happened. Those prophecies are recorded in Matth. xxiii. 34. 39. and xxiv. Mark xiii. Luke xxii. St. Luke has also elsewhere recorded the affectionate concern, which our Lord expressed in the view and prospect of those impending evils. ch. xiii. 34. 35; and xix. 41. 44. These things are also referred to, and spoken of, in divers other discourses, some plain, some parabolical, or otherwife figurative: as Matth. xxi. 33. 46. xxii. 1. Mark xii. 1. 12. Luke xiii. 1. 9. xx. 9. 20. xxi. 5. 13. In none of all which places does there appear any intimation, that the things spoken of were come to pass. And in recording the prelages of this final and total overthrow of the Jewish nation the historians have inserted warnings and admonitions, proper to excite the attention of readers, and induce those who lived in Judea, to take care of their own safety, without delay. Matt. xxiv. 15. 18 When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the Prophet, stand in the holy place, (whoso readeth, let him understand:) then let them which be in Judea flee into the mountains. Let him which is on the house-top not come down to take any thing out of his house. Neither let him which is in the field, return back to take his clothes. And what follows. And to the like purpose in Mark xiii. 14. 16. When these discourses were recorded, the things spoken of had not yet come to pass. There were men living, to whom those admonitions might be useful for securing their safety.

(b) Vindication of the former part of St. Matthew's Gospel p. 54. chap. vi.

Moreover, though those predictions must have been recorded, before they were accomplished; I think, the fulfilment was then near at hand, and not far off. This seems to be implied in that expression: Let him that readeth, understand. And indeed it must have been difficult and hazardous to publish such things in writing. How offensive these sayings must have been to the Jewish People, and perhaps to some others likewise, is easie to conceive from the nature of the things spoken of. And it may be confirmed by divers instances. When our Lord had spoken the parable of the vineyard, let out to husbandmen, recorded in Luke xx. 9. 18. it is added by the Evangelist. ver. 19. 20. And the Chief Priests, and the Scribes, the same hour sought to lay hands on him. But they feared the people. For they perceived, that he had spoken this parable against them. And they watched him, and sent forth scribes, which should feign themselves just men, that they might take hold of his words, that so they might deliver him unto the power and authority of the Governor. And among the odious charges brought against our Saviour by false witneses, this was one, that he said: I am able to destroy the temple of God, and to build it in three days. Matth. xxvi. 61. With this he was reproached likewise, when hanging on the cross. xxvii. 40. The like offensive charges were brought against Stephen. Acts vi. 14. We have heard him say, that this Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy this place, and shall change the customs, which Moses delivered to us. And, possibly, he did say somewhat not very different. So likewise St. Matthew, and the other Apostles, might repeat in the hearing of many what Christ had said to them, and in part to others also, concerning the overthrow of the temple, and the Jewish state. Yea, very probably, they had often repeated these things to attentive hearers.
The Time of writing

Ch. IV.

hearers. But speaking and writing are different. And I apprehend, it could not have been safe, nor prudent, to record these predictions, (many of which are very plain, and all intelligible,) soon after our Lord’s ascension.

These prophecies therefore of our Lord, as recorded in the first three Gospels, afford at once an argument, that they were written and published before the destruction of Jerusalem: and that they were not published many years before it, or however, not many years before the commencement of the war at the time above-mentioned.

S E C T. IV.

O N E can suppose, that the book of the Acts of the Apostles was composed before the year 62. or 63. as the historie is there brought down to the period of St. Paul’s two years imprisonment at Rome.

And, very probably, the Gospel, to which St. Luke refers at the beginning of that book, had not been written before. This I suppose to be now the common opinion of learned men. And for giving the greatest satisfaction to all my readers, I shall transcribe below at large the sentiments of several to this purpose, such as that of the late (e) Mr. Jones, and (f) E/lius, (g) Mill, (h) Dodwell, and (b) Basnage: though the thing

(e) “Hence we see near to what time this historie of the Acts was written: viz. either in the year 62. or not long after: it being altogether probable, that St. Luke would not defer writing long after his departure from St. Paul. Which seems to have been now, when the Apostle was set at liberty from his confinement at Rome... That he wrote both the Gospel and the Acts in the same year, seems very probable: as it is certain, that one of them is only to be looked upon as the second part, or continuation of the other.” Jones New and Full Method, &c. Part. 4. cb. xvi. Vol. 3. p. 158. See him also cb. xi. p. 115.

(g) Voluminis hujus D. Lucæ partem posteriorem, seu λόγος διηνεφες quod attinet, librum dico Actuum Apostolorum, haud dubium est. quin is scriptus sit statim post λόγον πρώτον, evo Evangelium. Mill. Pref. num. 121.

(b) Non multum vero interjactum suisse temporis inter Auctorum Apostolorum et Evangelii confectionem, conjectura ex prefatione ad Theophilum duci potest. Primum quidem librum confec. ... Actuum ergo liber continuatio est, seriefque Evangelii, ... Multum vero abifisse temporis ante quem a priore libro omnibus numeris explice ad posteriorem tranfine Lucas, nulla ratione cogimur ad credendum, &c. Basnage. Ann. 60. num. xxviii.
thing appears to me very obvious. And if so, we have gained very nearly the date of one of the four Gospels.

Grotius supposeth, that (i) when Paul left Rome, he went into Spain: and that at the same time Luke went into Greece, and there wrote both his Gospel and the Acts. Jerome supposeth, that (k) the book of the Acts was writ at Rome. But that makes no difference in point of time: since he allows, that it reaches to the end of St. Paul’s two years imprisonment at Rome.

This one consideration, so far as I am able to judge, overthrows the opinion, that St. Luke’s Gospel, was writ about fifteen years after our Lord’s ascension. Yea, it evidently shews, that it was not writ till the year 60. or afterwards.

And the beginning of St. Luke’s Gospel affords an argument, that the other two Gospels of St. Matthew and St. Mark, were not writ sooner. For this Evangelist knew nothing of them. Consequently, they were not then writ, and published: or, but lately. Every word of his introduction shews this. Let us observe it.

Forasmuch as many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things, which are most surely believed among us... It seemed good unto me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, to write unto thee in order, most excellent Theophilus: that thou mightest know the certainty of those things, wherein thou hast been instructed.

When St. Luke says, that many had undertaken to write histories of our Saviour, he cannot mean Matthew alone, nor Matthew and Mark only. For they are not many. He must intend them, and others, or some different from them. Which last will appear most likely, if we consider what there follows.

Of those many he says, they had taken in hand, undertaken, or attempted. St. Luke would not have spoken thus of Matthew, or Mark. Indeed, we may suppofe, that (l) those narrations, to which St. Luke refers, were not false and fabulous, nor heretical. But they were defective.

Grotius says, the (m) word is of a middle meaning. And that it does not necessarily imply, that the writers here intended, had failed to perform what they undertook.

Nevertheless

(i) Librum autem et hunc, et qui de Aetibus Apostolorum, scriptum arbitror, non multo postquam Paulus Româ abibit in Hispaniam. Nam in id tempus definit Auctum liber, qui si serius scriptus esset, in ulteriora etiam tempora narrationem pretenderet. Puto autem, Româ iisse Lucam in Achaian, atque ibi ab eo confcriptos quos habemus libros. Grot. Pr. in Evang. Lucâ.

(k) See Vol. x. p. 94. 95.

(l) Quod idtos ait Lucas, non satis commoda prestatisse: minime tamen, opinor, fabulofas, immo etiam impia narrationes intelligens, tandem Ecclesia, sub Nicodemi,.... Thomæ, Egyptiorum nominibus impudentibus illas obtrusas. Nec tamen hic reie colligunt, Lucam post Matthæum et Marcum hanc suam historiam edidisse. Bez. in Luc. cap. i. ver. 1.

(m) Et ex illum aggreffi sunt. Bene notavit vir eruditissimus, vocem esse medianum: neque enim ex ea colligi posse, non prestatum ab illis scriptoribus quo aggreffi sunt. Grot. in loc.
Nevertheless the ancient Christians, to several of whom the Greek language was natural, understood the word differently. And their judgements must be of value in this case. Origen's observations upon St. Luke's introduction may be seen. vol. iii. p. 316...319. where he says, "St. Luke's expreffion, taken in hand, implies a tacit accumulation of "thofe, who without the gift of the Holy Ghost took upon them to write "Gospels. For Matthew, and Mark, and Luke, and John did not take "in hand to write: but being full of the Holy Ghost wrote Gospels." In which words, and afterwards, continually, he diftinguifheth the four Evangelifrs from the writers, referred to by St. Luke. To the like pur- pofe (w) Ambroje, who either copied, or closely imitated Origen. And fays Eufebe: "Luke (o) at the beginning affigns the reafon of his writing, "declaring, that whereas many others had rashly undertaken to compofe "relations of the things, which were most firmly believed, he therefore "thought himfelf obliged, in order to divert us from the uncertain rela- "tions of others, to deliver in his Gofpel a certain account of thofe "things of which he was fully affurcd." Which paflage was tranfcribed by us (p) formerly. And Epifhaniius, whom (q) I now place below, plainly affixed a difadvantageous meaning to this word.

Beaufobre readily allows, that (r) we ought to follow the ancients in their interpretation of this word, and to fuppofe, that St. Luke here speaks of some attempts, and effays, that had not been well executed.

This may be fufficient to fatisfy us, that St. Luke does not speak of any of our Evangelifts. Mr. (*) Dodwell was of the fame opinion.

But we may have yet farther aflurance of it by observing what St. Luke fays of himfelf, and his own defign. Which is to this purpofe: "That "it had feemed good to him, to fend to Theophilus in writing a distinct "and particular historie of Jefus Chrift: that he might better know, and "be more fully confirmed in the truth of thofe things, in which he had "been instructed by word of mouth."

In my opinion, this implies a fuppofition, that Theophilus had not yet in his hands any good written historie of the words and works of Jefus Chrift.

Confquently St. Luke at the year 62. and possibly somewhat later, did not know of St. Matthew's and St. Mark's Gofpels. And therefore we must

(n) See Vol. ix. p. 245.
(o) ... δηλων ως αγα σκολλων κ' αλλων μεροπετηρον επιτηδευκοτων δηγνων αυτοναθανα δω αυτως απλανοφερον λογου. k. l. Eufe. l. 3. c. 24. p. 96. G.
(p) Vol. viii. p. 95.
(q) ... φασκων ειποιητερ σκολλων επεκηρησαν εις τως επικεχειστας διηγη φοροι δε τως περι κυριουν κε κυριουν κε τως αλλως. H. 51. num. viii. p. 428.
(r) Ce mot Grec, επεκηρησαν, es certainement tres equivoque, et peut fort bien signifier des tentatives malheureufes, des efforts qui ont mal reussi. St. Epi- phane ne l'a pas entendu autrement. Origene de meme, dans la preface fur S. Luc. et aprés lui la plupart des Interpretes Grecs. Quand il s'agit de la signification des termes Grecs, et que les auteurs Grecs, qui les expliquent, n'ont aucun interet a leur donner des fens forcés, ces derniers semblent dignes de creance. Beauf. Remarques sur Luc. ch. i. p. 100.
(*) Ut plane aliosuisse neceaffi sit evangelicae historiae scriptores a Luca vifos, a noftris, quos habemus Evangeliftis. Diff. Iren. i. num. xxxix.
must suppose, that they were not yet writ and published, or however, but lately. For if they had been published several years, St. Luke, who had accompanied Paul in Greece, Asia, Palestine, and Rome, could not have been unacquainted with them.

This argument appears to me valid. At left I cannot discern, where it fails. It has long seemed to me a clear and obvious argument, that the Gospels of St. Matthew and St. Mark were not writ till the year 60, or afterwards. For if they had been writ sooner, they would by this time have been in the hands of St. Luke, and Theophilus, and all the faithful in general. And St. Luke could not have expressed himself, as he does in this introduction: nor indeed would he have writ any Gospel at all.

CHAP. V.

ST. MATTHEW, APOSTLE, AND EVANGELIST.

I. His Historie. II. Testimonies of ancient Writers to his Gospel. III. Remarks upon them, for discerning the Time of this Gospel. IV. Characters of Time in the Gospel itself. V. The Language, in which it was writ.

I. MATTHEW (A) called also (b) Levi, son of (c) Alpheus, M was a Publican, or (b) Toll-gatherer under the Romans. He was, undoubtedly a native of Galilee, as the rest of Christ's Apostles were: but of what city in that country, or which tribe of the people of Israel, is not known.

(A) The historie of our Lord's calling this disciple is in Matth. ix. 9...

(b) This Evangelist, in his account of his being called by Christ, names himself Matthew, ch. ix. 9. But St. Mark and St. Luke in their accounts of it call him Levi. Mark ii. 14. Luke v. 27. & 29. This has induced Grotius to argue, that Matthew and Levi are different persons: though he cannot deny, that the circumstances of the historie lead us to think, one and the same person to be intended. Video omnes hodie ita eximiam, hunc eundem esse, quem Marcus & Lucas Levi nominant. Et fane congruant circumstancialiœ. Grot. ad Mat. ix. 9. It is observable, that Heracleon, the Valentinian, as cited by Clement of A. Str. 1. 4. p. 502. reckons among Apostles, who had not suffered martyrdom, Matthew, Philip, Thomas, and Levi. By Levi, probably, Heracleon meant Lebbeus, other wise called Thaddeus. Vid. Fabr. Bib. Gr. 1. 4. cap. 5. T. 3. p. 126. Coteler. Anot. in Constitut. 1. 8. cap. 22. Dedow. Diff. Iren. i. n. 24. It is certain, that Eusebe and Jerome thought Matthew and Levi to be only two names of one and the same person. /See in this work, vol. viii. p. 83. Vol. x. p. 83. and 89. Moreover, in the catalogues of the Apostles, which are in Mark iii. 18. Luke vi. 15. Acts i. 13. is the name Matthew. It is likely, that Levi was the name, by which the Apostle was called in the former part of his life: and Matthew the name, by which he was best known afterwards. (See notes (c) and (d) p. 34.)
As he sat at the Receipt of Custom, by the sea-side, in the city of Cer-naum, or near it, Jesus said unto him: Follow me. And he arose and followed him. Which need not to be understood to imply, that Matthew did not make up his accounts with those, by whom he had been employed, and entrusted.

Afterwards (e) he made an entertainment, at his house, where Jesus was present, and likewise divers of his disciples. And there sat at table with them many Publicans, and others, of no very reputable character in the eye of the Pharisees, who were strict in external purifications, and other like observances. Matthew, it is likely, was willing to take leave of his former acquaintance in a civil manner. He was likewise defi-rinous, that they should converse with Jesus, hoping, that they might be taken with his discourse. And Jesus, with a view of doing good, and to them, that he did not disdain any man, made no exceptions to this design of his new disciple. Nor is it unlikely, that the ends aimed at were obtained, in part at least. Matthew's former friends did, probably, discern somewhat extraordinary in Jesus, so far as to induce them to think, it was not unreasonable in him to leave his former employment, for the fake

(c) That is said by St. Mark only ch. ii. 14. But we do not perceive, who Alpheus was. Tillenius observes to this purpose. "St. Mark gives him the surname of Alpheus: τον του ἀλπησαν. Which may have been the name of his father. This has given occasion to some of the ancients, and to all the modern Greeks, to say, that James the son of Alpheus was his brother:
though it be entirely destitute of all probability. Quoiqu'il n'y ait en

Dr. Doddridge, Family Expositor. Sect. 44. Vol. 1. p. 280. says roundly, that Matthew, otherwise called Levi, was the son of Alpheus, and the brother think, those texts can afford sufficient proof, that Matthew, and James the son of Alpheus, had the same father, and were brothers. If that had been the case, their relation to each other would have been hinted, or plainly declared in the Gospels.

I do not love bold conjectures in others, and will not indulge my-self in them. But I suspect, that these words in Mark ii. 14. †ον of Alpheus, τον του ἀλπησαν, are an interpolation, some how or other, undesignedly, and acciden-tially inserted in that place. What is truly said of James, has been also applied to Matthew. The curious may do well to consider, whether this conjecture be not countenanced by the singularity of the thing, said no where else, and by the various readings of that text, which may be seen in Beza, Mill, and Wetstein.

(b) "His office seems more particularly to have consisted in gathering the customs of commodities, that came by the sea of Galilee, and the tribute, which passengers were to pay, that went by water." Cave's Lives of the Apostles, p. 177.

(e) That this entertainment was not made by Matthew on the very day that Christ called him to attend on him, is argued by Mr. Jones in his Vindication of the former part of St. Matthew's Gospel, p. 129... 137. and by Dr.
Doddridge. Family Expositor, Vol. i. sect. LXXI. note (a). who says: "It is certain, the feast was after the day of his calling, perhaps, some months after: when he had made up his accounts, and regularly passed his business into other hands: which, to be sure, from a principle of justice, as well as prudence, he would take care to do."
fake of the companie of Jesus, and the advantages, which in time he might receive from him. The Pharisees made reflections. But our Lord vindicated himself. And all the three Evangelists have recorded this instance of our Lord's amiable familiarity and condescension, which is one of the distinctions of his shining character. And it is a proof, that at the time of their writing, severally, their Gospels, they were molded into the temper and principles of him, whose history they wrote.

Jesus now called Matthew to be with him, to be a witnesse of his words and works, and he put him into the number of his Apostles. Thenceforward he continued with the Lord Jesus. And after his acfencion, he was at Jerusalem, and partook of the gift of the Holy Ghoft, with the other Apostles. Together with them he bore testimonie to the resurrection of Jesus: and, as may be supposed, preached for some while at Jerusalem, and in the several parts of Judea, confirming his doctrine with miracles, which God enabled him to perform in the name of Jesus.

In his own catalogue of the twelve Apostles, ch. x. he is the eighth in order. In St. Mark's ch. iii. and St. Luke's ch. vi. he is the seventh. He is also named in the eighth place, Acts i. 13. Nor is there any particular account in the Gospels of the call of any of the Apostles, except his, and four other, Andrew and Peter, and the two sons of Zebedee, who were called before (f).

Clement of Alexandria says, that (a) the Apostle Matthew used a very sparing diet, eating no flesh, but only vegetables. But, perhaps, this is said upon the ground only of some uncertain tradition, not well attested.

Socrates, in the fifth centurie, says, that (b) when the Apostles went abroad to preach to the Gentiles, Thomas took Parthia for his lot, Matthew Ethiopia, and Bartholomew India. And it is now a common opinion, that Matthew (c) died a Martyr in Ethiopia, in a city called Naddabar, or Nadderer: but by what kind of death, is altogether uncertain. However, some others speak of his preaching, and dying in Parthia, or Persia. And the diversity of those accounts seems to shew, that they all are without good foundation.

I think, it may be of use to take here at length a passagge of Eusebe, at the beginning of the third book of his Ecclefiaftical historie, after having in the preceding book spoked of the many calamities in Judea, when the war was just breaking out. "This, says he, was the state of things with the Jews. But the holy Apostles and Disciples of our Saviour being dispersed abroad, preached in the whole world. Thomas, as we learn by

(f) St. John says ch. i. 43. The day following, Jesus would go forth into Galilee, and findeth Philip, and faith unto him: Follow me. If Philip was then called by our Lord to be an Apostle, he ought to be added to the others above named.

(a) Μαθαῖος μὴ ὡς ὁ ἀπόστολος ὑπερμαχῶν, ὡς ἀπεδώκων, ὡς λαχανόν, ἠνυ ἐκείνω ἐντελῶς μετελάμβανον. Clem. Paed. l. 2. p. 148. D.

(b) Ηικία ὁ ἀπόστολος ψάλλει τῶν ἐκ τῆς τοῦ Ἰησοῦ συνόριων ἔσοντες, ἢμοιζέμεν ἐν τοῖς πάρθενων ἀπεδηκών ὑπεδείχθη Ματθαίου ὑπεβιβάζετο. Μαθαίος ὁ ἐκ Αἰδιόπιων. κ. λ. Socr. H. E. l. 1. c. 19.

(c) See Cave's Lives of the Apostles, and his Hist. Lit. by tradition, had Parthia for his lot, Andrew, Scythia, John Asia. Who having lived there a long time died at Ephesus. Peter, as it seems, preached to the dispersed Jews in Pontus and Galatia, Bithynia, Cappa-docia, and Asia. At length coming to Rome, he was crucified, with his head downward, as he had desired. What need I to speak of Paul, who fully preached the gospel of Christ from Jerusalem to Illyricum, and at last died a Martyr at Rome, in the time of Nero? So says Origen expressly in the third tome of his Expositions of the book of Genesis."
Thus writes our Ecclesiastical Historian. But, as Valesius observes, it (d) is not easy to determine exactly, where the quotation from Origen begins.

However, from this passage, as it seems, we may conclude, that at the beginning of the fourth century, there were not any certain and well attested accounts of the places, out of Judea, in which many of the Apostles of Christ preached. For if there had, Eusebe must have been acquainted with them. In particular we may hence infer, as I apprehend, that there was no certain account, whither Matthew went, when he left Judea.
For there is no notice taken of him in this passage. Nor does Jerome in his article of St. Matthew, in his book of Illustrious Men, formerly, (e) transcribed at large, take any notice of the countreys, in which he preached. Nor do I recollect, that in any other of his genuine works he has said any thing of the travels of this Apostle.

Heracleon, a learned Valentinian, in the second century, as cited by Clement of Alexandria, reckons (f) Matthew among those Apostles, who did not dye by martyrdom. Nor does Clement contradict him.

It is also observable, that (g) Chrysostom has a commendation of Matthew, consisting of divers articles: his humility, mercifulness or liberality, piety, general benevolence, writing a Gospel, finally, fortitude, inasmuch as he came from the presence of the Council rejoicing: referring, I suppose, to Acts v. 41. But says nothing of his martyrdom. Which may induce us to think, that there was not any tradition about it among Christians at that time, or that it was not much regarded.

II. Having thus given the historie of this Apostle, I proceed to the consideration of his Gospel, one of the universally acknowledged books of the New Testament. Two things principally are to be the subjects of our inquirie, the time of writing it, and the language in which it was writ. And I propose to recite here briefly all, or most of the authors, that have been largely quoted, in the former volumes, so far as relates to those two particulars.

Papias, Bp. of Hierapolis, about A. D. 116. by some supposed to have been acquainted with John the Apostle, by others with John the Elder only, in his five books, entitled Explications of the Oracles of the Lord, which

(d) Cum Eusebius hic dicat, superiora ex libro tertio Explanationum Origenis in Genemf esse defuncta, dubitari meritum potest, unde incipiant Origenis
(e) Vol x. p. 89, 90.
(f) Ὅν γὰς ἡμετέρας ἀμολογήσας τῷ δικα τῆς φωνῆς ἀμολογίας, ἐξ ἐξελθοὺς ἐς ἦν μαθαῖαν, φιλιππεῖς, θαμαῖς, λευκής ἔλλοι πολλοῦ. Clem. Str.
4. 502. B.
(g) In Matth. hex. 48. al. 49. T. 7. p. 491.
which seem to have been collections of ancient stories and traditions, makes (b) express mention of Matthew’s Gospel, and says, that he wrote the Divine Oracles in the Hebrew tongue.

Irenæus, Bishop of Lyons, about the year 178, who was born in Asia, and in his youth was acquainted with Polycarp, disciple of St. John, says: “Matthew (i) then among the Jews wrote a gospel in their own language, “while Peter and Paul were preaching the gospel at Rome, and found-“ing [or establishing] the church there. And after their exit, [that is, “death, or departure,] Mark also the disciple and interpreter of Peter, “delivered to us in writing, the things that had been preached by Peter. “And Luke, the companion of Paul, put down in a book the gospel “preached by him. Afterwards John, the disciple of the Lord, who “leaned upon his breast, likewise published a Gospel, whilst he dwelt at “Ephesus, in Asia.” In another place he says, “the (k) Gospel accord-“ing to Matthew was delivered to the Jews.”

Origen, about 230, says, “that (l) according to the tradition received “by him, the first Gospel was written by Matthew, once a Publican, “afterwards a Disciple of Jesus Christ: who delivered it to the Jewish “believers, composed in the Hebrew language.” And in another place he says, “that (m) Matthew wrote for the Hebrews.”

Says Eusebius, about 315, “Matthew (n) having first preached to the “Hebrews, when he was about to go to other people, delivered to them “in their own language the Gospel according to him, by that writing “supplying the want of his presence with those whom he was leaving.”

Athanasius, in his First Epistle (o) does not say, where, or in what language, Matthew wrote. But in the Synopsis, ascribed to him, it is said, “that (p) Matthew wrote his Gospel in Hebrew, and published it at Jerusalem.”

Cyril of Jerusalem says, “that (q) Matthew wrote in Hebrew.”

Epiphanius likewise says, “that (r) Matthew wrote in Hebrew.” And afterwards. “Matthew (s) wrote first, and Mark soon after him, being a follower of Peter at Rome. If Mark did not write till after Peter came to Rome, and Matthew but a little before him; it follows, that Matthew’s Gospel was not written so soon, as many later writers have supposed.

Gregorius Nazianzen, in his catalogue, says, “that (t) Matthew wrote “for the Hebrews.”

And Ebedjesu, “that (u) Matthew, the first Evangelist, published his “Gospel in Palestine, written in Hebrew.”

Theodore

(b) See of this work. Vol. i. p. 242. the second edition.

(i) O μᾶς δὲ μαθηταῖς εἰς τοὺς ἔφαγον τῷ αὐτῶν διαλέγετο καὶ γράφων ἑξήκοντα ἑττομανίαν, τῷ πίστις, καὶ τῷ πάσην εἰς ὑμᾶς ἐκαθισμόν σεισμόν ἐν θεματίζων τὸν ἐκκλησίαν. κ. λ. Adv. Haer. i. 3. cap. i. Et ap. Euseb. l. 5. c. 8. And in this work Vol. i. p. 353.

(k) See Vol. i. p. 356.

(m) P. 278.

(n) Vol. viii. p. 92. See also p. 177.

(o) P. 249.

(q) P. 271.

(r) P. 304. and 305.

(i) Ἐνδο οἱ μαθηταί καλῶς γυμνῷς καὶ μάρκας ἄντι πτωτοῖς ἐστὶν ἔσον. Citat. ib. p. 305.

(u) P. 216.

C 3
Theodore of Mopsuestia says, "that (x) for a good while the Apostles preached chiefly to Jews in Judea. Afterwards Providence made way for conducting them to remote countries. Peter went to Rome, the chief elsewhere, John, in particular, took up his abode at Ephesus. . . . About this time the other Evangelists, Matthew, Mark, and Luke, published their Gospels, which were soon spread all over the world." This supposes a late date of the Gospels, as was argued vol. ix. p. 405, that is, after the beginning of Nero's reign, when Peter went to Rome, and not long before the war in Judea, which broke out in 66. about which time John left that country, and settled at Ephesus.

Says Jerome in the prologue to his Commentarie upon St. Matthew: "The (y) first Evangelist is Matthew, the Publican, surnamed Levi, who wrote his Gospel in Judea, in the Hebrew language, chiefly for the sake of the Jews that believed in Jesus, and did not join the shadow of the law with the truth of the gospel." To the like purpose in the article of St. Matthew, in his book of Ecclesiastical Writers: "Matthew (z) called also Levi, of a Publican made an Apostle, first of all wrote a Gospel in Judea in the Hebrew language, for the sake of those of the circumcision, who believed." Who afterwards translated it into Greek, is uncertain.

Chrysostom in the introduction to his homilies upon this Gospel: "Matthew (a) is said to have writ his Gospel at the request of the Jewish believers, who desired him to put down in writing what he had taught them by word of mouth. And he is said to have writ in Hebrew." He speaks with hesitation, and is not positive about the occasion of writing this Gospel, or the language, in which it was writ. Afterwards he says: "In (b) what place each one of the Evangelists wrote, cannot be said with certainty."

Cosmas of Alexandria, about the year 535, says: "Matthew (c) is the first Evangelist, that wrote a Gospel. There being a persecution, when Stephen was stoned, and he also being about to go from that place, the believers entreated him to leave with them a written instruction, with which request he complied." And what follows.

The Author of the Imperfect Work upon St. Matthew, in the sixth century, about the year 560, observes to this purpose: "The (d) occasion of Matthew's writing is said to be this. There being a great persecution in Palestine, so that there was danger, lest all the faithful should be dispersed: that they might not be without teaching, though they should have no teachers, they requested Matthew to write for them a historic of all Christ's words and works, that wherever they should be, they might have with them the ground of their faith." This writer does not say, that this was the persecution, that arose about the time of the death of Stephen. He seems to speak of a later, and more general persecution and dispersion, such as may be well supposed to have been in Judea, near the war in 66. When most, or all the Apostles, and many of the Jewish believers, removed, and were dispersed into other countries.
In the Paschal Chronicle, a work composed in the seventh century, as formerly cited, it is intimated, that (e) St. Matthew published his Gospel in Palestine, about fifteen Years after our Lord's ascension, and soon after the Council at Jerusalem of which an account is given Acts xv.

And, to draw to a conclusion of this list of writers. Theophylact, in the eleventh century, says: "Matthew then (f) first wrote a Gospel in the "Hebrew language, for the sake of the Hebrew believers, eight years after "our Saviour's ascension."

Euthymius in the beginning of the twelfth century: "That (g) Matthew's Gospel was the first, and writ in Judea, in Hebrew, for the Jewish "believers, eight years after our Lord's ascension."

Nicephorus Callisti, in the fourteenth century, says: "Matthew (h) "having preached the saving word to the Jews, when he was about to go "abroad to the Gentils, thought it best to write in his native language an "account of his preaching, to supply the want of his presence. Which "he did at about fifteen years after our Saviour's ascension."

III. Who now of all these writers deferves the greatest regard? Irenaeus, I think, as being the most ancient. And with him agree Epiphanius, Theodore, of Mopsuestia, and the Author of the Imperfect Work, as it seems. Nor is he contradicted by Eusebius of Cesarea, so far as I can (i) perceive. He says, "that when Matthew was about "to go to other people, he delivered his Gospel to the Hebrews in their "own language." But he does not say in his Ecclesiastical Historie, nor "any where else, when this Apostle left Judea. Some (k) may have understood him to mean about eight years after our Saviour's ascension, and others about fifteen years after it, as Nicephorus, and perhaps the Paschal Chronicle. But himself has not expressly mentioned the time. And he may have been undetermined in his mind about the time, when Matthew left Judea. Moreover, he has inserted (l) in his Ecclesiastical Historie the passage of Irenaeus above quoted, upon which we insist. And a late date of the Gospels is agreeable to his own, and others observations, before taken notice of, that the Apostles of Christ did not write many books, and were not very forward to write, but as they were compelled by a kind of necessity.

There are divers learned moderns of good judgment in these matters, who pay a great regard to this testimonie of Irenaeus, particularly, (m) Fabricius, (n) Mill, (o) Bajnaje, and before them (p) Martin Chem-

Mill

(e) See Vol. viii. p. 178.
(f) Vol. xi. p. 419. 420.
(g) P. 435.
(h) P. 442.
(i) See Vol. viii. p. 177... 179.
(l) L. 5. cap. 8. p. 172. C.
(m) De tempore, quando scripsit, cui potius fidem habeamus, quam S. Irenaeo, temporibus illis proximo, qui tradit eum edidisse evangelium, τον πεπελευ με τον αναθ. in ρωμων Εναγγελιαν και θεματον τον ίκλησιαν. Bib. Gr. l. 4. c. 5. T. 3. p. 126.
(n) Prolegom. num. 61.
(o) A. 64. n. xii.
(p) Examen Concil Tird. p. 16.
Mill supposed it to be highly probable, that (q) Irenaeus had this account from Papias. Le Clerc (r) likewise seems to have thought, that Irenaeus found this in the five books of Papias. But that is only conjecture. Eusebe quoting Papias observes, that he said, Matthew wrote in Hebrew. But he does not say, that Papias mentioned the time of writing his Gospel. However, it was the opinion of Irenaeus. And it may be reckoned not improbable, that he had a tradition to that purpose, which he relied upon as right. For he speaks of it without hesitation. It might be derived from several, one of whom was Papias.

Irenaeus says, that “Matthew published his Gospel, when Peter and “Paul were preaching at Rome;” that is, says (s) Mill, in the year 61. “For, adds he, I understand him of the first time, that Paul was at Rome.” But if Irenaeus says right, it must have been at the second time that Paul was at Rome. For we have no reason to believe, that Peter was at all in that city, when Paul was sent thither by Festus. But, very probably, Peter and Paul were there together afterwards, and suffered martyrdom there, about the same time. That is the season, to which we should be led for fixing the writing of St. Matthew’s Gospel, if Irenaeus may be relied upon. Accordingly Baffnage (t) in his Annals speaks of St. Matthew’s Gospel at the year 64. And though, as he says, he does not know the year, nor the place, where St. Matthew’s Gospel was publifhed, yet he expreffeth himself, as if he was inclined to think, it was not writ, till Nero’s reign was somewhat advanced, in the year 64. or 65. the time of that Emperour’s perfecution of the Christians.

Other learned men are for an earlier date. Whose opinions also, undoubtedly, ought to be taken notice of, and considered by us.

Cave thought, that (u) St. Matthew’s Gospel was writ about the fifteenth

(r) Vid. Diff. de iv. Evan. sub init.

(s) Atque hoc ipso quidem anno l.x.i. prodidiff videtur Evangelium Matthaei. Ego quidem de priori adventu intelligendum Irenaeum omnino arbitror. Ib. num. 61. 62.

teenth year after our Saviour's ascension, in the year 48. a short time before the council of Jerusalem, or soon after it.

Baronius was of opinion, that (x) this Gospel was published in the year 41. soon after that Peter, had begun to preach to Gentiles at the house of Cornelius in Cæarea.

Grotius (y) and G. I. Vossius (z) were likewise of opinion, that St. Matthew's Gospel was writ about eight years after Christ's ascension.

Tillemont argues, "That (a) St. Matthew wrote his Gospel about three years after the crucifixion of Christ. For it must have been writ before the Apostles left Judæa. The time of their going abroad, as he owns, is uncertain. But it must have been about the year 36. Forasmuch as it appears, that in the year 37. when Paul came to Jerusalem, there were no other Apostles there, beside Peter, and James the Less." But that argument is of no value. For the Apostles might be all at Jerusalem, or in it's neighbourhood, though Paul saw none, beside the two just mentioned.

Mr. Jones earnestly contends, that (b) this Gospel was writ about eight years after our Lord's ascension, in the year 41. But I do not think it needful to take any farther notice of his arguments, than has been done (c) already.

Mr. Wetstein has lately declared in favour of the same opinion. "And (d) hence, says he, we discern the reason, why this Evangelist has inserted so many discourses about the Jewish superstitions: which could be of little or no use to other people, and among other nations, when the temple was once destroyed, or was near being destroyed." But I am not able to discern any force in that way of reasoning, because I perceive not any superfluities in this, or any of the Evangelists. Our Lord's reproofs of Jewish superstitions, his declarations of the superiority of moral virtue, or righteouness and true holiness, above the righteousnesse of the Scribes and Pharisees, his cenfures of the pride and covetousnesse, false maxims, and hypocritical conduct

(x) Baron. Ann. 41. num. ix. xvi.
(y) Grot. Pr. ad Matth.
(z) Si quidem Matthaeus in Palestina scribatur, idque intra proximum a passione Christi oecentium. Voss. de Gen. f. C. cap. 4. §. ii.
(a) Il semble mesure neceffaire de dire, que S. Matthieu a ecrit trois ans seulement apres la mort de J. C. . Le temps de cette division des Apôtres est incertain. Il semble neanmoins, que c'a été vers l'an 36, puisqu'il paroit, qu'il n'y avoit aucun Apotre a Jerusalem, lorsquc S. Paul vint en 37. hors S. Pierre, et S. Jacque le mineur. S. Matthieu. Mem. T. i.
(b) New and full Method. &c. Vol. iii. cb. v. p. 59. . 64.
(c) See Vol. viii. p. 176. . 179.
duct of the same men, will be useful to all people, so long as the world stands. As our Lord was a Jew, and his ministrie was employed among those people in Judea; it is no wonder, that in his discourses, recorded by St. Matthew, whenever he wrote, there should be frequent allusions to their laws, customs, and worship. The like (e) are in the other two first Evangelists. And in St. John's Gospel, the last of the four, are as long discourses with the cavilling Jews, as in any of the rest.

I therefore readily assent to those, who think, that this Gospel was writ in the time of the Emperour Nero, not till about thirty years after our Saviour's ascension. I am not able to assign the year, in which it was writ. But I am somewhat inclined to the year 63. 64. or 65. of the vulgar epoch. This is agreeable not only to the testimonies of Irenaeus, and some other ancients, but to the circumstances of things. At the year 64. or thereabout, the gospel had been propagated in many Gentil countries, the times were troublesome in Judea, and the war was coming on: several of the Apostle's were dead, others of them, who survived, were gone, or going abroad, and many of the Jewish believers were about to seek shelter elsewhere. Now was a proper time, to write a historie of Christ and his miracles. Moreover in this Gospel are recorded divers plain predictions of the miseries and defolations of Jerusalem, and the overthrow of the temple, and the Jewish state, beside many other figurative intimations of the same things in many of our Lord's discourses and parables. Which could not be well published to all the world in writing, till about this time. The suitableness of St. Matthew's Gospel to the state of the Christian Religion, and of the Jewish people, about the year 64. or 65. leads to that time. And however unwillingly, from private apprehensions and prejudices, we may admit the thought of protracting so long the writing the historie of our Lord's ministrie; the circumstances of things will constrain us to acquiesce in this season, as the most likely.

IV. This leads me now to observe some characters of time in the Gospel itself.

Marks of Time in this Gospel. It is well known, and allowed by all, that (f) for a while our Lord's disciples labored under Jewish prejudices: and that they did not fully understand all his discourses, at the time when they were spoken. They did not, they could not, clearly discern the comprehensive design of the evangelical dispensation, till after Peter had been at the house of Cornelius, and there received into the Church Gentil converts, without circumcision: nor till after the Gospel had been preached abroad in foreign countries by Paul, and other Apostles, and ministers. Let us

(e) When Mr. Wetstein speaks of the many discourses about Jewish superstitions, which are in St. Matthew's Gospel: I imagine, he may particularly refer to Matt. xxiii. 1... 30. Nevertheless divers of those things occur also in the Gospels of St. Mark and St. Luke. See Mark xii. 38... 40. Luke xi. 42... 52. and xx. 46. 47. And both Mark viii. 14... 21. and Luke xii. 1. 2. have recorded our Lord's injunctions, to beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and Sadducees, or Herodians, as well as Matthew xvi. 6... 12. Not now to mention any other like things.

(f) There are many proofs of this in the Gospels. See particularly John xvi. 7... 14. and likewise the historie in the Acts. ch. x.
us therefore now observe the book itself of St. Matthew, and see what knowledge he appears to have had of the scheme of the gospel.

1. His account of the commission, which our Lord gave to the twelve Apostles is in ch. xxviii. 19. Go ye therefore into all the world, and teach all nations. Matthew did not then think, that the Apostles of Jesus were to teach Jews only, but that they were required to teach all people, and all nations in general.

2. I suppose, that he fully understood our Lord's doctrine, when he recorded that summary account of it, which is in the fifth, sixth, and seventh chapters of his Gospel. The beatitudes, at the beginning, are a proof of it. And at the conclusion, they who heard and did those sayings, are compared to a man that built his house upon a rock: though there had been nothing said to enforce the rituals of the Mosaic law.

3. And that he well understood the spirituality, and the freedom of the gospel, appears from what he has recorded ch. xv. 10...20.

4. His clear discernment of the design of the gospel-dispensation appears even in his account of our Saviour's nativity, particularly, in what he says ch. i. 21, of the message of the angel to Joseph. And thou shalt call his name Jesus. For he shall save his people from their sins.

5. If he had not known, that our Saviour was designed to be, or was already become a blessing to Gentils, he would scarcely have thought of inferring the historic of the Magians coming from the East to Jerusalem, to inquire after the birth of the King of the Jews. Chap. ii.

6. It is also very likely, that he understood those words of John—the Baptist, recorded by him ch. iii. 9. God is able of these stones to raise up children to Abraham.

7. St. Matthew's knowledge of the calling of the Gentils, and the rejection of the Jews, may be concluded from many things recorded by him. In the historic of our Lord's healing the Centurion's servant at Capernaum he inserts our Lord's commendation of his faith, and that declaration: Many shall come from the East and the West, and sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven: but the children of the kingdom shall be cast out. ch. viii. 10...12.

8. The admission of the Gentils to equal privileges with the Jews must be intimated in the parable of the laborers hired into the vineyard at several hours of the day. ch. xx. 1...16.

9. The calling and acceptance of the Gentils, and the rejection of the Jewish People, and even their overthrow, are plainly declared in the parable of the vineyard, let out to husbandmen, and the discourse, which follows. xxi. 33...46. The same things are intimated in the parable of the King that made a wedding-feast for his son, which is at the beginning of the next chapter. xxii. 1...14.

10. I might likewise take notice of the historic of our Lord's curing the daughter of the woman of Canaan. ch. xv. 21...28.

11. It is also very likely, that St. Matthew had some good knowledge, and a distinct apprehension of the extent of our Lord's kingdom, and the progression of his doctrine, when he recorded those parables in the thirteenth chapter of his Gospel: where our Lord has compared the kingdom of heaven, or the preaching his gospel, to a grain of mustard-seed, the least of all seeds, but becomes a tree: to heaven, by which a large lump lump is leavened: to a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind. And, explaining the parable of the tares, our Lord says, ver. 37. 38. He that soweth the good seed is the Son of Man. The field is the world. And what follows.

12. It is probable, that this Evangelist had some knowledge of the gospel having been preached out of Judea, when he put down that declaration of our Lord concerning the woman, that poured the rich ointment upon his head: Whereforever the gospel shall be preached in the whole world, there shall this also, that this woman has done, be told for a memorial of her. ch. xxvi. 13.

13. In his account of the institution of the eucharist. ch. xxvi. 28. our Lord says: This is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many, that is, for all men, for the remission of their sins. And in ch. xx. 28. our Lord says: The son of man came ... to give his life a ransom for many.

14. There is also an expression used by him once or twice, intimating, that it was some considerable space, since the time of the event and his writing about it. ch. xxviii. 8. Wherefore that field was called the field of blood to this day. Having related the affair of the soldiers, and the directions given to them by the Jewish Council to say, that his disciples came by night, and stole him away, he adds: And this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day. ver. 15. Such an expression does not denote any certain period. But one would think, that, in this case, thereby must be intended a considerable space of time, more than eight, or ten, or fifteen years.

15. I formerly (g) shewed divers advantages of the late publication of the Gospels. The life of Jesus could not be forgotten in thirty, or forty years. His life and death were very public, as well as very extraordinary. His resurrection and ascension were most publicly attested by his Apostles, and others, as we know from the book of the Acts. And from that time forward there were many, who were continually speaking of the things said and done by him, and of the evidences of his resurrection and exaltation. They were soon known to multitudes of people, small and great, and men of all ranks and characters. As St. Paul says to Jesus, in a very great assembly. Acts xxvi. 36. For the King knoweth of these things, before whom also I speak freely. For I am persuaded, that none of these things are hidden from him. For this thing was not done in a corner. And was it not the cry at Thessalonica? Acts xvii. 6. These that have turned the world upside down, are come hither also. The account of St. Paul's manner of living at Rome, about the years 61. and 62. is, that he dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him ... teaching these things, which concern the Lord Jesus Christ. Acts xxviii. 30. 31. Whilft there were men, who at the hazard of their lives taught, and others that embraced, the things concerning the Lord Jesus, they could not be forgotten. And if about thirty years after our Lord's ascension, his history was writ by eye-witnesses, or their companions, it was soon enough. Yea, it was the fittest time of all. At the year sixty of our Lord's nativity, according to the vulgar aera, and

(g) See Vol. viii. p. 124. 137.
and later, there certainly were enough of such persons, as those just mentioned, still living, to record his words and works, and more, who were willing, and desirous to read written histories of him, than before: and also more to transcribe and copy out those histories for their own use, and for the use and benefit of others, than in any preceding time.

V. It remains, that we consider, in what language this Gofpel was writ: because many of the ancients, whose testimonies have been lately recited, though they allow the other Gospels to have been writ in Greek, have delivered it as their opinion, that this Gofpel was writ in Hebrew.

Of this I have already spoken several times, particularly, in the chapter of (b) Papias, and in the chapter of (i) Origen, and (k) of Eusebius of Caesarea: where also the opinions of divers learned moderns were alleged, who think, it was writ in Greek. To them I now add (l) Le Clerc, who has an argument upon this head, proper to be confulted by those who have leisure, but too long to be inserted here: and his learned successor Mr. Wetstein, who says: "Here (m) we are of opinion, that the Fathers do not so properly bear testimonie, as deliver their own conjecture: which needs not to be admitted, if it be not supported by good reasons, or may be refuted by probable arguments. Supposing, and taking it for granted, that Matthew wrote for the Jews in Judaea, they conclude, that he wrote in Hebrew. But there is no weight in that reason. "The Greek language was at that time much used throughout the whole Roman Empire, and particularly in Judaea. Papias, who first advanced this opinion, was a weak and credulous man. Nor are there in our Greek Gofpel any marks of it's being a translation from another language."

Mr. Jones (n) has a long argument, well deserving to be read, shewing, that this Gofpel was originally writ in Greek.

Mr. Baynace (o) is of the same side, and, and has argued exceeding well for it. I shou'd transcribe him, if I had room. As I have not, I refer to him.

Says

(b) Vol. i. p. 243. 244. (i) Vol. iii. p. 403. 408.

(n) See his Vindication of the former part of St. Matthew's Gofpel ch. 17. . . 19. p. 18c. 186.
(e) Ann. 64. n. xiii.
St. Matthew.

Ch. V.

Says (*) Dr. Fortin: "In the time of Christ and his Apostles the Greek was really the universal language. The New Testament is a proof of it, if proof were wanting. And this is one reason amongst many others, why St. Matthew probably wrote his Gospel in Greek. See Wetstein's N. T. p. 224. St. Matthew ch. v. 47. 48. says: "οτι τιλωνι 'ουτω ωνιστεν εστιν ευμιτ τιλων. . . . that is, be not τιλωνι, but τιλων. Videtur autem Mattheus vocem τιλωνι hic habuisse, ut τιλωνι: opponeret. Wetstein. Add to this, that τιλωνι and τιλως are both derived from the same word τιλος. See again, ch. vi. 16. we find an antithesis in the words αφανιζοι τα πρόευκα, ἐπις πάνως. Eleganter dicitur: Tegunt faciem, ut apparent, &c. Wetstein.

And many others of the same sentiment might be mentioned, who are men of great learning and good judgment.

I shall now propose some observations relating to this point.

1. If St. Matthew did not write till about thirty years after our Lord's ascension, we must be led to think, he would use the Greek language. That he did not write sooner, I suppose to have been shewn to be very probable. If indeed there were good reasons to think, his Gospel was writ within the space of eight years after Christ's ascension, we might well conclude, that he wrote in Hebrew. But, to me it seems, that we may be fully satisfied, that Matthew did not write within that space, nor soon as fifteen years after our Lord's ascension, nor till some good while afterwards. St. James, refiding at Jerusalem, writes an epistle about the year of Christ 60. as is supposed. It is addressed to the twelve tribes scattered abroad. And he writes in Greek, as is allowed. Why, then, should not St. Matthew use the same language?

2. There was very early a Greek Gospel of St. Matthew. It is quoted, or referred to by Clement of Rome, Ignatius, Polycarp, Justin Martyr, not now to mention any others: none of whom intimate, that they made use of a translation.

3. Though many of the ancients say, that St. Matthew wrote in Hebrew, they seem not to have fully believed it. For they have shewn very little regard to the Hebrew edition of it. This has been particularly shewn in the chapters of (p) Origen, (q) Eusebius of Cæsarea, and (r) Jerome, the most likely of any of the ancients to make use of that edition, if they had been persuaded, that it was authentic and original.

4. There are not in our Greek Gospel of St. Matthew any marks of a translation. So said Mr. Wetstein in the passage just transcribed. And this observation was before made by us in the chapter of (s) Papias.

5. There is no where any probable account, who translated this Gospel into Greek. No particular translator was mentioned by Papias, as may be concluded from the accounts given of his books by Eusebius. Nor is any translator of this Gospel named by Irenæus, Eusebius, or any of the writers writers of the first three centuries, that are come down to us. Nor is there any reason to think, that he was named in any other: forasmuch as no notice is taken of him by Eusebe, or Jerome, who saw many writings of ancients now lost, both catholics and heretics. Jerome having said, that Matthew wrote in Hebrew, presently adds: "Who (t) afterwards translated him into Greek, is uncertain." And all the accounts of a translator, since given, are too late to be credited, and are likewise very improbable. In the Synophs ascribed to Athanasius, but not writ till long after his time, it is said, "That (u) Matthew's Gospel was translated into Greek by James, the first Bishop of Jerusalem." Which is very improbable. It would be more reasonable to imagine, that he translated it out of Greek into Hebrew. But as that is not said by the ancients, so neither have we reason to say it. Moreover, the same reasons, as one may think, which would induce James to make a Greek translation, should have induced Matthew to write in Greek. Nevertheless Dr. Mill (x) has pitched upon that person for the translator, and formed an argument thereupon. Which only serves to shew, that there is nothing, for which something may not be said by those, who indulge themselves in suppositions, without ground. Theophylact informs us, that (y) in his time it was said, that John translated this Gospel into Greek. But it was only a common report. And indeed it could be no more. However, out of a regard to such reports and testimonies, Mr. Lampe (z) has very properly reckoned a translation of this Gospel among the works falsely ascribed to St. John.

(*) See his Discourses concerning the Christian Religion. p. 176. note (o) the third edition.

6. Once more, I apprehend, we may discern the origin of this opinion, that St. Matthew's Gospel was writ in Hebrew. There was soon made a translation of his Greek Gospel into Hebrew. We have seen proofs, that (a) in very early days of Christianity there was a Hebrew Gospel. And many, not examining it particularly, nor indeed being able to do it, for want of understanding the language, imagined, that it was first writ in Hebrew. Jerome expressly tells us, that (b) by many in his time the Gospel

(y) Matheasae de tuo iawhne apo tis iegaiwn ylwtthn eis tiv ilyvnix, oys Theopb. Pr. in Matth. p. 2. D.
(z) Matthaei Evangelium Graece a Joanne Evangelista versum esse, refert Eutychius Tom. i. Annalium p. 328. et Nicetas præfatione ad Catenam in Matthaeum. Lampe Prolegom. in Joan. l. i. cap. 7. num. 31.
(b) In Evangelio, quo utuntur Nazareni et Ebionitae, quod nuper in Graecum de Hebraeo fermone translatilimus, et quod vocatur a plerique Matthaei authenticum. Hier. in Matth. cap. xii. T. 4. P. i. p. 47.
Gospel according to the Hebrews was reckoned the true and authentic Gospel of Matthew.

To this Hebrew translation of St. Matthew's Gospel, possibly, are owing divers things said by the ancients: as that Matthew published his Gospel at Jerusalem, or in Judea, for the Jewish believers, and at their request, before he went abroad to other people. I say, I do suspect the truth of these, and some other like things, said of St. Matthew, and his Gospel. All which may have had their rise from the Hebrew edition of his Gospel, which they imagined to be the original. For I think, that St. Matthew's, and all the other Gospels were writ, and intended, for believers of all nations. His Gospel was writ for the Jews, but not for them only, but for Gentils also: as manifestly appears from the Gospel itself, or the things contained in it.

I am also ready to say, with (c) Mr. Basnage, that I do not know where it was published, whether in Judea, or somewhere else. But as I think, the Nazareni Gospel to be St. Matthew's Gospel translated from Greek, with (d) the addition of some other things, taken from the other Gospels, and from tradition: So I reckon, that the Gospel of Matthew, writ in Greek, was the Gospel, which first came into their hands, and which they gladly received, and made use of. I say again, the notion of St. Matthew's writing in Hebrew, probably, had its rise from the Hebrew edition of his Gospel. For allowing that date of his Gospel, which to me appears most probable, I cannot conceive the reason, why Matthew should write in Hebrew any more than any of the other Evangelists. For it may be reckoned highly probable, or even certain, that he understood Greek, before he was called by Christ to be an Apostle. Whilst a Publican, he would have frequent occasions both to write and speak Greek. And could not discharge his office, without understanding that language.

This Hebrew Gospel may likewise have been the cause, why so many ancient Christian writers say, that Matthew wrote first. This may be true. But I do not think, it was laid upon the ground of any certain knowledge, or good information. I apprehend it not to be easy to say, which Gospel was first writ. For all the first three Gospels were writ about the same time. And St. Luke's, for any thing that I know, may have been writ first. Which (e) was the opinion of Mr. Basnage.

(c) Annum tamem perinde atque locum, ubi a Matthaeo conditum est, in incerto esse, faciles patimur. Ann. 64. num. xii.

(e) Ann. 60. num. 31.
Of the Time, when the Apostles left Judea, to go and preach the Gospel in other Countries.

S many ancient Christian writers, whom we have lately quoted, say, that St. Matthew, having preached some while in Judea, was desired by the believers there, to leave with them in writing, before he went away, a history of what he had taught by word of mouth: this may not be an improper place to inquire, how long it was after the ascension of Jesus, before Matthew, and the other Apostles, left Judea, to go abroad into foreign countries.

And first of all, we will observe some remarkable passages of ancient writers, relating to this matter. And then, secondly, we will consider what light the book of the Acts may afford upon this subject.

Clement of Alexandria, about 194. quotes from a work, entitled the Preaching of Peter, this passage: "Therefore (a) Peter says, that the Lord said to the Apostles: If any Israelite will repent, and believe "in God through my name, his sins shall be forgiven: After twelve "years go ye out into the world, that none may say: We have not "heard.""

The next passage is that of Apollonius, undoubtedly, in part contemporarie with Clement, and placed by Cave at the year 192. by me at 211. as near the time of his writing against the Montanists. "Moreover, says (b) Eusebe, he relates as from tradition, that our "Saviour commanded his Apostles, not to depart from Jerusalem for "the space of twelve years." Which passage has been already cited in this (c) work.

By these two passages Cave was induced to think, that (d) for twelve years after Christ's ascension the Apostles did not depart from the neighborhood of Jerusalem. Supposing our Saviour to have been crucified, and to have ascended to heaven in the year 29. of the vulgar æra, which was a common opinion of the ancients, these twelve years ended in the year 41. Supposing those great events to have happened in the year 33. which is a common opinion of learned moderns, those twelve years would reach to the year 45.

Beside those two passages alleged by Cave, and other learned men, I shall take notice of some others also.

Origen says in general, "That (e) when the Jews did not receive the word, the Apostles went to the Gentils.
Of the Time, Ch. VI.

Chryfoflom in a homilie upon Acts xi. 19. and what follows, speaks to this purpose. "They heard, that Samaria had received the word, and they sent Peter and John. They heard what had happened at Antioch, and they sent Barnabas. For (f) that was a great distance. And it was not fit, that the Apostles should go so far as yet, left they should have been esteemed defectors, and thought to have fled from their own people. But it then became necessarie for them to separate, [or go from thence] when the Jews shewed themselves to be incurable."

In the Paschal Chronicle are the expressions, speaking of Paul. "Afterwards (g) he coming to Jerusalem with Barnabas, and finding there Peter, and the rest of the Apostles, with James the Lord’s brother, the Apostles send an epistle to Antioch in Syria, etablifhing their church. And Paul and Barnabas carry the epistle to Antioch, as, the Acts shew. By this it appears, that the Apostles then wrote their catholic epiftles, before their dispersion."

Such are the paffages of ancient writers, which must be reckoned to be of some weight.

Let us now obferve the historic in the Acts. And it seems to me, there is reafon to conclude, that the Apostles flaid in Judea, till after the Council at Jerusalem, of which an account is given in the xv. chapter of that book. For St. Luke does continuall speak of the Apostles, as being at Jerusalem, or near it. Acts viii. 1. And at that time, there was a great perpetuation against the church, which was at Jerusalem. And they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the Apostles. One of those perfons, who then left Jerusalem, was Philip, the Deacon and Evangelift: who went to Samaria, and preached Chrifi unto them, and with good effect. Whereupon at ver. 14. Now when the Apostles, which were at Jerusalem, heard that Samaria had receiv’d the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John. This needs no Comment. Here is proof, that when the rest of the disciples were scattered abroad, Peter and John, and the other Apostles, were still at Jerusalem.

In Acts ix. 26... 30. is St. Luke’s account of Paul’s coming to Jerusalem, after his conversion. Where he says, that the disciples were afraid of him. ... But Barnabas took him, and brought him to the Apostles. St. Paul speaking of the fame journey, Gal. i. 18. 19. says: Then after three years I went up to Jerusalem, to see Peter, and abide with him fifteen days. But other of the Apostles saw I none, save James the Lord’s brother. Here we find, that at this time, three years after his conver-

(g) Μετέτιθα εἰς καθ’ ἐκείνης τῆς ἐργασίας μετὰ βαραξία, ή διὰ τῆς ἀπόστολος ἔρα ἤπειρον ἢ τῆς καθ’ ἐκείνης τῆς ἀπόστολος ἀπογούστης ἢ ἀπογούστης ἢ ἀπογούστης ἢ ἀπογούστης. Ch. Pasch. p. 253. B. C.
tion, Paul saw two Apostles only, Peter and James. But St. Luke's words, as seems to me, imply, that all the Apostles were then at Jerusalem, though Paul saw two only, the rest for some reasons declining to show themselves in person to him. Dr. Doddridge has this note upon ch. ix. 27. "Paul himself tells us, that upon his going up to Jerusalem, he saw no other Apostles, but Peter and James. Gal. i. 19. Beza well observes, we are quite uncertain, on what occasion, the rest were then absent from Jerusalem. Had they been there, though Paul said but about a fortnight, he would no doubt have seen them. Nevertheless, the solution of this difficulty appears to me very easy. The Apostles were now all at Jerusalem, or near it. But they lived privately, because it was a time of persecution. The great persecution against the church, which began with the death of Stephen, was not yet over. The Apostles therefore could not appear abroad without danger. And it was sufficient, that they spoke to Paul, and received him, by Peter and James. Which I take to be the true import of St. Luke's expression: But Barnabas took him, and brought him to the Apostles.

After Peter had been at the house of Cornelius, it is said, Acts. xi. 1. And the Apostles and brethren that were in Judea, heard, that the Gentiles also had received the word. Another proof, that all the Apostles, or most of them, were still at Jerusalem. But I do not suppose, that the Apostles, like many other of the Jewish believers, were offended at what Peter had done. Or, if they were at first somewhat offended, they were soon, and easily satisfied, and were very willing to testify their approbation of Peter's conduct.

From the 12. chapter of the Acts we know, that James son of Zebedee, and brother of John, and Peter, were at Jerusalem, in the year 44. or thereabout, near the end of the reign of Herod Agrippa: the former of whom was beheaded, and the other imprisoned. And at ver. 17. is mention made of another James, supposed to be the Lord's brother, and always resident, at Jerusalem.

From the account of the Council of Jerusalem; and of the occasion of it, all the Apostles appear to have been then in Judea, and at Jerusalem, or in its neighborhood. Acts xv: When therefore Paul and Barnabas had no small dissension and disputation with them, they determined, that Paul, and Barnabas, and certain other of them, should go up to Jerusalem, unto the Apostles and Elders about this question. ver. 4. And when they were come to Jerusalem, they were received of the church, and or even the Apostles and Elders. . . . ver. 6. And the Apostles and Elders came together, that is, met in Council, for to confer of this matter. . . . ver. 22. Then pleased it the Apostles, and Elders, with the whole church, to send chosen men of their own company, to Antioch. . . . ver. 23. And they wrote letters by them after this manner: The Apostles, and Elders, and Brethren send greeting. . . . ver. 33. And after they had tarried there a space, that is, at Antioch, they were let go in peace from the brethren unto the Apostles.

In all these places the Apostles must intend all the Apostles, or the Apostles in general. For how can the expression be understood otherwise?

If it should be said, that the Apostles might be at the Council at Jerusalem, though several of them had been before in other countries: I think, think, that would be said without ground and reason. It does not appear, that the Apoftles were sent to, invited, or called in from abroad, to attend this Council. But the Chriftians at Antioch suppofed, or rather knew, that the Apoftles were at Jerusalem, and therefore directly sent thither to them.

Indeed none of the Apoftles are expressly named as speakers in the debates of the Council, beside Peter and James. But all the rest may have been there. So upon divers other occasions in the Gofpels, and at the beginning of the Acts, Peter only spake, though all the rest were present. In Gal. ii. 8. 9. 10. St. Paul giving an account of a journey to Jerusalem, suppofed to be the fame with this to the Council, speaks of conferences, which he had with three, namely James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars. Here * is one more mentioned as present at Jerusalem, beside the two before taken notice of. And there must have been others beside thefe three, who seemed to be pillars, or were the moft eminent.

The first time, that we meet with the mention of any one of the twelve, as being out of Judea, is that in Gal. ii. 11. after this Council, as is generally allowed, when Peter was at Antioch. It is very observable, Acts xi. 19...22. when tidings came to the ears of the church at Jerusalem, that many Gentils had been converted at Antioch by fome of thole who were scattered abroad by the perfecution, they sent forth Barnabas, that he should go as far as Antioch. None of the Apoftles went, not fo much as one, to accompany him. And afterwards ch. xiii. 1...3. in the account of the extraordinarie mission of Paul and Barnabas from Antioch to Cyprus, and other parts, there is no mention made of any Apoftle, as present at Antioch. And it is plain, there was not one there.

All these confiderations induce me to think, that none of the twelve Apoftles left Judea to teach either Jews or Gentils in other Countreys, until after this Council.

Having now, as I apprehend, fhewn this to be very probable, I fhall mention fome remarks. Whereby there may be an opportunity for answering objections, though feveral have been already obviated.

1. There was a fitness in it. It was very proper, and even expedient, that the Apoftles fhoild stay a good while in Judea, to affer and confirm the truth of Chrifl's resurre&tion by teaching, and by miraculous works, and do their utmost to bring the Jewish People to faith in Jesus as the Chrift.

2. As this was fit, it is likely, that they had received fome command from Chrift himself, or fome direction from the Holy Ghost, to stay thus long in Judea.

3. There were confiderations, that would incline them to it, and induce them to do what was fit to be done, and was agreeable to the mind of Chrift. One was the difficulty of preaching the gosfel in foreign countreys. This would induce them to stay in Judea, till the circumftances of things facilitated their farther progrefe, or called them to it. Another

* Theodoret has a like argument: Εξ ζητητος καταδεικνυον, ζητητος καταδεικνυον τον ἑαυτον αποστόλος ἠκινητικός. Theod. Pr. in ep. ad Eph. Tom. 3. p. 290.
Another thing was their affection for the Jewish People, their countrymen, especially those of Judea, with whom they had been brought up, and among whom they dwelt, together with a persuasion of the great value of the blessing of the gospel. This last consideration, I apprehend, would induce them to labor in Judea, with earnest desires, and some hopes, of bringing all, or however, many, to faith in Jesus. This influenced Paul alto to a great degree, and for a good while. Nor was he without hopes of persuading his brethren and country-men to what appeared to himself very certain and evident. So he says in his speech to the people at Jerusalem. Acts xxii. 17...20. He assures them, that whilst he was worshipping at Jerusalem, in the temple, he had a transe or extaffe:
that he there saw Christ, who said to him: Make haste, and get thee quickly out of Jerusalem. For they will not receive thee testimony concerning me. Paul pleaded, that they must needs pay a regard to his testimony, who was well known to have been for some while very zealous in opposing his followers, and was now convinced and persuaded. But the Lord paid unto him: Depart. For I will send thee far hence unto the Gentils. This transe, or vision, seems to have happened in the year 44.
after that Paul had preached at Antioch with great success among Gentils. Nevertheless he had an earnest desire to make one attempt more among the Jews of Judea, where was the body of that people. And if they could have been persuaded, many abroad would follow their example.
And it required an express and repeated order from Jesus Christ, in vi-Sion, to induce him to lay aside that design, and to proceed to preach to Gentils in remote parts.

It is a most affectionate concern, which he expresses for the Jewish people in divers places of the epistle to the Romans, writ so late as the year 58. ch. ix. 1...5. x. 1. 2. xi. 4. if by any means, says he, I may provoke them to emulation which are my flesh, and might save some of them.
Nor can it be questioned, that the like sentiments prevailed in the other Apostles. If it needs any proof, let St. Peter’s discourses at the begining of the book of the Acts be consulted, particularly ch. ii. 38...40.
iii. 22...26. not to refer to any other.

4. There were many advantages attending the stay of the Apostles in Judea. Many more Jews were by this means converted, than otherwise there would have been. St. Luke says, Acts iv. 4. that the number of the men was five thousand. But when Paul came to Jerusalem some years afterwards, James says to him, Thou fool, brother, how many thousands of Jews there are which believe. xxii. 20. And it is very likely, that the Jewish believers had better, and freer principles, than otherwise they would have had. They were, it is true, for observing the law themselves: ver. 20. but they agreed, that the Gentils were under no such obligations. ver. 25. Farther, by this means every step taken in planting the Christian Religion, and spreading the gospel in the world, had the sanction of all the Apostles, and of the whole church of Jerusalem.

Upon occasion of the persecution at Jerusalem, many were scattered abroad, who went every where preaching the word. Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them. Acts viii. 45. Now when the Apostles, which were at Jerusalem, heard, that Samaritans had re-received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John. This was the first step taken in carrying the gospel to any, beside native Jews, and proselytes to their religion. And what had been done by Philip at Samaria, was approved and ratified by all the Apostles.

The next step was preaching to Gentils, which work was solemnly allotted to Peter. And the Apostles and Elders that were in Judea, heard that the Gentils had also received the word of God. ch. xi. 1. Upon Peter's rehearsing to them the whole affair, and what had happened at the house of Cornelius at Cesarea, all were satisfied. They glorified God, saying: Then hath God also to the Gentils granted repentance unto life, ver. 18.

Soon after this, some of those who were scattered abroad upon the persecution, went to Antioch, and there spake to the Greeks or Gentils, preaching the Lord Jesus. And a great number believed, and turned to the Lord. Then tidings of these things came unto the ears of the church, which was at Jerusalem. And they sent forth Barnabas, that he should go as far as Antioch, ver. 19. This step therefore was also approved and ratified by the whole church of Jerusalem, including the Apostles.

And henceforward no objections could be made by wise men against preaching to Gentils, and receiving them, but what arose from the difficulty of the work. Nevertheless some good while after this, there was a dispute raised at Antioch by some bigotted Jews, who asserted it to be necessary, that the Gentil believers should be circumcised after the manner of Moses. This occasioned the Council of Jerusalem. Where the controversy was fully determined by the Apostles and Elders. Which was a great advantage. By this means the manner of receiving Gentils was fixed, and settled beyond dispute, and beyond opposition. Or, if any should be made afterwards, it could not be successful, nor very troublesome. And we may be assured, that all the Apostles, and their disciples, would be harmonious, and preach the same doctrine to Jews and Gentils, wherefoever they went.

5. There was a necessity of the Apostles staying in Judea, till about this time. Otherwise, they could not have sufficiently testified the doctrine concerning Jesus in Judea, nor have fully taught the Jewish people, so as to render them inexcusable, if they did not believe, and repent.

If we consider the state of things in Judea, we may discern, that in the year 44. the Apostles had not had an opportunity to fulfill their ministrations in that country. It must be evident to all from the history in the Acts, that for some while, soon after our Lord's ascension, the Apostles were grievously harassed, and hardly used by the Jewish Council or Rulers, Which was the more so, because of the weakness of Pilate's government, for some time before he was dismissed from the province. And afterwards, about the time of his removal, Stephen was stoned, and a great persecution began. Which, as I apprehend, continued from the beginning of the year 36. to the beginning of the year 40. When the churches had rest. Of which rest undoubtedly the Apostles made good use. St. Luke's words are: Then had the churches rest throughout Judea, and Galilee, and Samaria, and were edified, and walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, were multiplied, ch. xi. 31.

After
After which follows an account of Peter's passing throughout all quarters, his going to Lydda, and there healing Eneas, then to Joppa, where he raised Tabitha: and from thence to Cesarea, and there preaching to Cornelius, and his companie: and of some other matters, reaching to ch. xi. 26. How long that rest, or peace and tranquility continued, in all its fulness, we cannot say exactly. Perhaps it lasted a year, or more. And it is not unlikely, that in that space of time other Apostles, beside Peter, travelled in Judaea, and the several parts of it, preaching the gospel, and confirming the disciples. But upon Herod Agrippa being made King of all Judaea by Claudius in the year 41. that peace would be abated, if not interrupted. From the beginning of his reign, especially from his arrival in Judaea, and during the remainder of it, the disciples must have been under many difficulties and discouragements, Prince and People being of one mind. And toward the end of his reign he became an open and violent persecutor, till Divine Providence smote him, that he died. After his death Judaea came to be in the hands of Roman Procurators, Caesarius Fadus, Tiberius Alexander, Cumanus, Felix, Festus: When probably, the disciples of Jesus had for several years together more liberty, than they had at any time, since the resurrection of Jesus, excepting the interval of rest and tranquility, before taken notice of. For those Governours, or Procurators, had no orders from the Roman Emperour to persecute or disturb any Jews. And that those Governours were not disposed to disturb the Christians, may be argued from the treatment given to Paul by Felix, and Festus, and the officers under them. Now therefore from the year 44. to the time of the Council in 49. or 50. and afterwards, the Apostles went on fulfilling their ministrerie. All of them, as I apprehend, stayed in Judaea till the time of the Council. Soon after which some did, probably, go abroad. However, several of them might stay there a good while longer, and not remove, till a little before the commencement of the Jewish war in 66.

6. We may now perceive, the benefit of the early choice and call of Paul to be an Apostle. Who having been several years employed and exercised in preaching to Jews in Judaea, and out of it, was ready to preach to Gentils likewise, as soon as a door was opened for applying to them at Antioch, and other places: as there was, after Peter had received Cornelius at Cesarea: whilst it was not as yet fit for any of the twelve Apostles to leave the land of Israel.

7. We now obtain some assistance for interpreting those expressions of Paul: Gal. ii. 7. 8. 9. When they saw that the gospel of the uncircumcision was committed unto me, as the gospel of the circumcision was committed unto Peter. For he that wrought effectually in Peter to the apostleship of the circumcision, the same was mighty in me toward the Gentils. And they gave unto me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship, that we should go unto the Heathen, and they unto the circumcision. And Rom. xi. 13. ingasmuch as I am the Apostle of the Gentils, I magnify my office. Those expressions cannot be intended to signify, that Paul was Apostle of the Gentils only, and exclusive of the Jews: or that Peter and the other of the twelve, were Apostles of the circumcision only, exclusive of the Gentils. For an Apostle is a teacher or master of the whole world. They were appointed to be so by Christ himself. Nor could their commision be limited by any compact among themselves. Our Lord's commission given to his twelve Apostles, is, in Matthew, to this purpose: Go ye therefore, and teach all nations. xxviii. 19. and in Luke: xxiv. 46. 47. he said to them, that repentance and forgiveness of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. And Acts i. 8. And Ye shall be witnesses unto me in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth. And Mark xvi. 15. And he said unto them: Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. And ver. 20. And they went forth and preached every where. Of Paul the Lord says in a vision to Ananias at Damascus: He is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles, and Kings, and the children of Israel. Acts ix. 5. And Paul says to King Agrippa: I was not disobedient to the heavenly vision: but shewed first unto them of Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coasts of Judea, and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent, and turn to God. ch. xxvi. 19. 20. Moreover we know from the historic of Paul's preaching recorded in the Acts, that he always first addressed himself to Jews, in all the places where he came, if there were any, and if they had there a synagogue.
Of the Time,

Ch. VI.

It should be observed likewise, that Peter had actually preached to Gentils, in Judea, and was the first disciple of Jesus, that did so. There is a particular account of it in the book of the Acts ch. x, and xi. And himself takes notice of it in his speech at the Council of Jerusalem. ch. xv. 7.

The reason therefore, why the gospel of circumcision is said to have been committed unto Peter, and the other Apostles with him, is, that for a good while, their ministry was soly, or however very much, and chiefly, employed among Jews in Judea: though afterwards they preached very freely to Gentils, in several parts of the world. And Paul is called the Apostle of the Gentils, and the gospel of the uncircumcision is said to have been committed unto him, because he got the start of all the rest in preaching to Gentils, and had laboured among them for a good while in divers countries, with great success, and had formed many churches in divers places: whilst they were still in Judea, teaching Jews, and had made no address to Gentils abroad in other countries.

It may be also implied in what St. Paul says in the epistle to the Galatians, that (b) several of the first twelve Apostles intended to stay still somewhat longer in Judea. This they were the more willing to do, being fully satisfied with the preaching of Paul in foreign countries: informuch that they encouraged him to proceed, as he had begun.

8. Once more, we may now be reconciled to the supplication of the late date of the Gospels. For they were not to be published, till the doctrine concerning concerning Jesus had been preached in divers parts, and many converts had been made, to whom they would be useful, for whom they would be needful, by whom they would be received with joy, be highly valued, frequently read, and often copied. Written histories of Jesus could be little wanted by the Jewish believers in Judea, whilst all the Apostles were still in that country, and there were also still living among them many sincere followers of Jesus, and eye-witnesses of his person and ministry. Very probably, therefore, there was no written gospel, till after the Council at Jeryusalem.

Still there may be objections, which should be stated and considered.

Obj. 1. It may be said: Was not the progress of the gospel by this means much retarded? I answer: No. And this objection, methinks, should be of little moment now, after all that has been said of the many advantages of the Apostles stay in Judea.

However, some considerations shall be here added to what has been already said. Though the Apostles did not leave Judea themselves, they encouraged those who did, who preached the gospel abroad, whether to Jews or Gentiles. Of this there is an instance with regard to the church of Antioch, related Acts xi. 19. . 22. And there may have been some other like instances. Moreover, the Apostles were very useful by their stay in Judea, as has been already shewn. They made many converts among the Jews. During their stay in that country, if there was any measure of public liberty for the believers, the Apostles would all, or most of them, be at Jeryusalem, at the great feasts, to which there was a general resort of Jews from all countries. Here the inquisitive of that People would have an opportunity of conversing with the Apostles. And if they were convinced, and persuaded by them, they would carry the doctrine of the gospel into the places of their usual residence, and propagate it there.

Obj. 2. But, if the Apostles had attempted to make a long stay in Judea, it seems, that they must have been all destroyed. I answer, that difficulties they met with many and great difficulties. What they were from the time of our Lord's ascension to the year 44. was briefly rehearsed just now. After that, for several years, as I apprehend, their difficulties would not be so great, as they had been. Yea, during that space would be the best opportunity that ever they had, to promote the interests of the gospel, as I said before. For (i) the Jewish people had not the power of life and death in their own hands. And the Roman Procurators curators were not disposed to give any men disturbance upon account of difference of opinion in religious matters. Finally, the Apostles of Jesus Christ, we have reason to think, had an especial direction, and an especial protection. They, who were employed in teaching so important a doctrine, and were enabled to work miracles upon others for confirming it, may be reasonably supposed to have been the subjects of some wonderful interpositions of Providence. And it must be reckoned very probable, that affairs would be so over-ruled and influenced, as that these chosen men should be upheld, and enabled to fulfill their ministrations, and bear such a testimonie to Jesus, as should be sufficient to lay a good foundation for the establishment of his Church in the world, and leave all those of the Jewish People, who did not receive him as the Messiah, absolutely inexcusable.

CHAP. VII.

ST. MARK, EVANGELIST.

I. That the Evangelist is the same as John Mark, and nephew to Barnabas.
II. His Historie from the New Testament. III. From other Writers.
IV. Testimonies to his Gospel, in ancient Writers. V. Remarks upon them. VI. The Time of writing his Gospel, according to these ancient Writers, and the Sentiments of learned Moderns. VII. Characters of Time in the Gospel itself. VIII. Observations upon this Gospel.

The Evangelist I. It is generally, or even universally, allowed, the same as

John Mark. But it has been doubted, whether he be the same as John Mark mentioned in the Acts, and some of St. Paul's epistles. And it appears from our collections out of ancient authors, that there were doubts about this in the minds of some in former times.

Divers learned moderns are persuaded, that they are different persons.
Of this number are (a) Cave, [who nevertheless thinks him (b) the same Mark, that is mentioned by St. Paul in his second epistle to Timothy,]
(c) Grotius, (d) Du Pin, and (e) Tillemont. Which last, in his Ecclesiastical Memoirs, makes two different articles for this name: one entitled, St. Mark the Evangelist, Apostle of Egypt, and Martyr: the other, St. John Mark, disciple and cousin of St. Barnabas. On the other hand they

(a) S. Marcus Evangelista, quem cum Joanne Marco, de quo Act. xii. 12.
(b) Cum enim illum epistola secunda ad Timotheum—Romam accerfive-rat Paulus—Id. ib.
(c) Gr. Pr. in Marc.
(d) Diff. Prelim. l. 2. ch. ii. §. iv.
(e) Mem. ec. Tom. 2.
they are reckoned one and the same by (f) Jer. Jones, (g) Lightfoot, and (h) Wetslein.

I shall now without delay consider the reasons of those, who think there are two Marks mentioned in the New Testament.

1. They say, that Mark the Evangelist was converted and baptised by Peter, because he calls him his son. 1 Pet. v. 13. But there is no reason to suppose this of John Mark.

To which I answer. That needs not to be reckoned the constant meaning of the expression. It may denote only great affection and tenderneffe, and a respect to faithful services: in like manner as Paul says of Timothie. Philip. ii. 22, that as a son with the father he had served with him in the gospel. Gratisius (i) and Du Pin (k) who mention this reason, seem not to have judged it conclusive. Moreover, if Mark was a convert of Peter, it does not follow, that he was not an early believer. For he might be one of that Apostle’s converts at his first preaching the gospel at Jerusalem. Mark the Evangelist, upon that supposition, could not be one of the seventy: but he might be among the first believers, and the son of Marie. However, I choose not to insist upon this, but chiefly upon what was before mentioned: that the appellation, my son, needs not to be understood rigorously, as meaning a convert begotten to the faith of the gospel.

2. It is said, that (l) Mark, the companion of Paul, was called John: but the Evangelist is never so called by the ancients, who mention him.

To which I answer. It is true, that Paul’s companion is sometimes called John, as Acts xiii. 5. and 13. But we are also informed that he was

(f) New and full Method. vol. 3. ch. vi. p. 65...70.

(g) Lightfoot is making observations upon the first epistle of St. Peter.

He sends this epistle, says he, by Sylvanus, Paul’s old attendant, but now with Peter. His naming of Mark with him calls our thoughts back to what has been mentioned of Mark heretofore: his being with Paul at Rome, and his coming from him into the East. To suppose two Marks, one with Peter, and another with Paul, is to breed confusion, where there needeth not.

... It is eaily seen, how John Mark came into familiarity with Paul and Peter. And other Mark we can find none in the New Testament, unless of our own invention.... He it was, that wrote the Gospel. Lightfoot Harm. of the N. T. Vol. i. p. 336.

(h) Nihil vetat, quo minus simpliciter cum Victore et Theophyllum hunc eundem Marcum intelligamus, quoties illius nomen in Aetis et Epistolis reperimus. Weß. Pr. in Marc. Tom. i. p. 551.

(i) Adde, quod Joannes Marcus inter primos Christianos: Marcus hic, ut videtur, Petri opera convertus. 1 Pet. v. 13. Nam tales peculiariter filios Iis Apostoli vocabant. 1 Cor. iv. 15. Gal. iv. 19. Gr. Pr. in Marc.

(k) Il y a plus d’apparence, qu’il a reçu l’évangile de S. Pierre, qui l’appelle fils, peut-être parce qu’il l’avait engendré en J. C. Diff. Precl. l. 2 ch. 2. §. iv.

(l) Joannes quoque ille Marie filius, Barnabæ consanguineus, Marcus vocabatur: quem multi hunc notrurn scriptorem putant. Quibus quo minus aßentiari, moveor veterum auctoritate, qui hunc scriptorem Joannem nunquam, Marcum semper vocant. Grat. Pr. in Marc.

L’Evangélîste n’est appelé nulle part du nom de Jean, qui étoit le nom propre de celui-ci. Du Pin, ubi supra.
was surnamed Mark. So Acts xii. 12. And when he had considered the thing, he came to the house of Marie, the mother of John, whose surname was Mark. And ver. 25. and took with them John, whose surname was Mark. And he is several times mentioned by the surname, Mark, only. Acts xv. 39. 2 Tim. iv. 11. Col. iv. 10. Philem. ver. 24. Secondly, such of the ancients, as supposed Mark, the Evangelist, to have been the same with him mentioned in the Acts, must also have supposed, that he was called John, as well as Mark, though they have generally mentioned him by his surname.

3. It is said, that (m) John Mark was much with Paul, Mark, the Evangelist, with Peter. So say the ancients in general.

I answer: It is not at all impossible, but that Mark might be sometimes with Paul, at other times with Peter. As may appear by and by.

As these reasons therefore do not appear to me conclusive, I rather think, that there is but one Mark in the New Testament, John Mark, the Evangelist, and fellow-laborer of Paul and Barnabas, and Peter.

II. I now proceed to write the historie of John Mark from the New Testament, mentioning, as they offer, some observations, shewing his acquaintance with Peter, as well as with Paul. After which I shall take notice of some other things said of him by the ancients.

He was the son of Marie, a pious woman at Jerusalem, and an early believer, at whose house the disciples used to meet, and that in troublesome and difficult times, as well as at other seasons. Peter having been delivered out of prison by an angel, came to the house of Marie, mother of John, whose surname was Mark, where many were gathered together praying. Acts xii. 12. So that the very first mention of John Mark assures us of Peter’s intimacy in that family.

That deliverance of St. Peter happened in the year 44; about the same time that Paul and Barnabas came to Jerusalem from Antioch with contributions for the relief of the brethren in Judea in the time of a famine, or scarcity. And it is said at the end of that chapter. And Barnabas and Saul returned from Jerusalem, when they had fulfilled their ministers, and took with them John, whose surname was Mark. This, with some other things to be hereafter mentioned, may dispose us to think, that this John Mark is the same, who in Col. iv. 10. is called sister’s son to Barnabas.

Mark therefore went now from Jerusalem to Antioch, with Paul and Barnabas. And, when some short time afterwards, they went abroad to other countreys, Mark accompanied them, as their minister. Acts xiii. 5. They went to Cyprus, and preached the word in that countrey. But when they returned to the continent, and came on shore at Perga in Pamphilia, he departed from them, and returned to Jerusalem. ver. 13. He therefore did not attend them in their farther progress to Antioch in Pisidia, Iconium, and other places, but went to Jerusalem.

(m) Et ita Petro addunt [Veteres] comitem, ac discipulum, ut non tantum de Barnaba, sed et de Paulo, quem Ioannes Marcus potil illud frigusculum sectatus est . . . nihil meminerint. Grot. ibid.

Il étoit disciple de S. Pierre, et attaché à lui, dans le temps que l’autre étoit avec S. Paul, et S. Barnabe. Du Pin. Ibid.
And now, very probably, he conversed again with Peter, and the other Apostles, and was present with them at their discourses, and their devotions. For, as I apprehend, all the Apostles were still in Judea, except James the son of Zebedee, who had been beheaded by Herod Agrippa, in the beginning of the year 44.

Paul and Barnabas having finished their progresse, returned to Antioch, and there abode. Whilft they were there, debates arose about circumcising Gentil converts. Which determined Paul and Barnabas to go to Jerusalem. That controversy being decided, they returned to Antioch.

Some time afterwards Paul said unto Barnabas: Let us go again, and visit our brethren, in every city, where we have preached the word, and see how they do. And Barnabas determined to take with them John, whose surname was Mark. But Paul thought it not good to take him with them, who had departed from them from Pamphylia, and went not with them to the work. Barnabas, however, persisted in his resolution, and went with Mark to Cyprus. And Paul chose Silas to accompany him. Acts xv. 36 . . . 41.

Hereby we perceive the good temper of Mark. He was now at Antioch, and was willing to attend Paul and Barnabas in their journeys, and actually went with Barnabas to Cyprus. And though Paul would not now accept of his attendance, he was afterwards fully reconciled to him. Mark is mentioned in several of his epistles sent from Rome, during his confinement there. I suppose, I shall hereafter shew, that St. Paul's second epistle to Timothie was writ in the summer of the year 61. not long after Paul's arrival at Rome. In that epistle he writes to Timothie, to come to him. And he desires him to bring Mark with him. 2. Tim. iv. 11. Take Mark, and bring him with thee: for he is profitable to me for the ministrie. Where Mark then was, does not clearly appear. It is probable, that he was either at Ephesus, or at some other place, where Timothie would find him in his journey from Ephesus to Rome. And, unquestionably, Mark did come with Timothie. He is mentioned in two of the epistles writ by the Apostle at Rome. Phil. ver. 24. and Col. iv. 10. Aristarchus salutes you, and Mark, sith's son to Barnabas, touching whom ye received commandments. If he come unto you, receive him. Mark is not mentioned in the epistle to the Philippians. Perhaps he was not acquainted there, or upon some occasion was absent from the Apostle, when that epistle was writ. Or rather, he is comprehended in those general expressins. ch. iv. 21. The brethren that are with me, greet you. For in the epistle to the Philippians St. Paul does not mention his fellow-laborers by name, as he does in the epistles to the Colossians, and to Philemon. Nor is he mentioned in the epistle to the Ephesians. To those who admit the true date of that epistle the reason will be obvious. It was writ, and sent away, before Mark came to be with St. Paul at Rome.

This is all we can say concerning St. Mark from the New Testament. But from that we can collect his excellent character, and may conclude, that after this time he no longer attended on Paul. It is not improbable, that going now into Asia, he there met with St. Peter, and accompanied him, till that Apostle came to Rome, where he suffered martyrdom.
tyrdom. Where likewise Mark wrote, and published the Gospel that goes by his name.

From other writers, III. We will now inquire, whether there is any thing in other writers to illustrate the history of this Evangelist.

Cave says, without hesitation, that (n) Mark was a Levite. But he does not say, upon what authority. I do not remember, that it is in any of the writers, of which I have given a particular account, excepting (o) Bede. It is also in a commentary upon St. Mark's Gospel, usually joined with Jerome's works, though (p) allowed not to be his. That writer says, that (q) Mark was a Levite, and a Priest. It is not unlikely, that this was inferred from Mark's relation to Barnabas, who was a Levite of Cyprus. Comp. Acts. iv. 36. and Col. iv. 10. But then Cave should not have denied, as he does in the same place, that Mark the Evangelist is the same as John Mark, mentioned in the Acts. For that, as I apprehend, is to remove out of the way the sole ground of this opinion.

By Eusebius we are informed, it (r) was said, that Mark going into Egypt, first preached there the Gospel, which he had writ, and planted there many churches. And afterwards, in another chapter, he says, that (s) in the eighth year of Nero, Anianus, the first Bishop of Alexandria after Mark, the Apostle and Evangelist, took upon him the care of that church. Of which Anianus he gives a great character, as beloved of God, and a wonderful man.

Epiphanius says, that soon after Matthew, Mark, companion of Peter, composed his Gospel at Rome. And having (t) writ it, he was sent by Peter into the country of the Egyptians.

Jerome, in his article of St. Mark, as (u) before quoted, after other things, says: "Taking (x) the Gospel, which himself had composed, he went

(o) Tradunt autem hunc, natione Israelitica, et facerdoziali ortum prosapia, ac post passionem ac resurrectionem Domini Salvatoris, ad predicacionem Apostolorum Evangelica fide a sacramentis imbutum, atque ex eorum usu pro numero, de quibus scribit Lucas, quia multa etiam turba facerdotum obediens fidei. Bed. ProL. in Marc.

(r) Toto di maestre perevera fass in trop aignyot sib. de h y euthymatos harcyzai, exedizai te perevera in tui aignyot oto aix evaivxai evaivxai. H. L. 1. 2. cap. 16.

(t) ... et de maestre toun aigoulo exa ignyot sib. deh e aix evaivxeiva evaivxeiva toun letpen toun deidexetai aiae iexilis deh wahta evaivxeiva, 18. cap. 24.

(x) Assumto itaque Evangelio, quod ipse confecerat, perrexit ad Aegyptum, et primus Alexandriæ Christum annuntians constituit ecclesiam ... Denique Philo. videns Alexandriæ primam ecclesiam adhuc judaizantem, quasi in laudem "went to Egypt, and at Alexandria founded a church of great note..."

"He died in the eighth year of Nero, and was buried at Alexandria, where he was succeeded, as Bishop, by Anianus."

From all these accounts, I think, it must appear to be probable, that if indeed Mark preached at all in Egypt, and founded a church at Alexandria; it must have been after he had writ his Gospel, and after the death of Peter and Paul at Rome. Nevertheless, when presently afterwards Eusebe, and Jerome likewise, speak of Mark's converts, and Philo's Therapeuts, as all one, they seem to have imagined, that Mark had very early preached in Egypt. But what they say upon that head is exceeding strange and unaccountable. For they both suppose, that Mark had writ his gospel at Rome, before he went into Egypt: and that his Gospel was not writ before the reign of Nero. If therefore Mark went at all to Alexandria, it was later, in the same reign: and Philo's Therapeuts could not be Christians, nor Mark's converts: but were a sort of people, who had a being, and had formed their institution, before the gospel could be published in Egypt, and before the rise of the Christian Religion.

By Baronius (y) and many others, it is said, that St. Mark died a Martyr. This is admitted by (x) Cave, and the (a) late Mr. Wetstein. But it is disputed by (b) S. Bajnaje: and as seems to me, with good reason. For St. Mark is not spoken of as a Martyr by Eusebe, or other more ancient writers. And Jerome, as before quoted, says, St. Mark died in the eighth year of Nero, and was buried at Alexandria. He does not say, that he was crowned with martyrdom: as he would have done, if he had known of it. And his expressions seem to imply a natural death. Fabricius (c) in his account of St. Mark, says nothing of his having been a Martyr.

IV. Having thus writ the historie of St. Mark, I shall now recollect the testimonies to his Gospel, which we have seen in ancient writers, particularly, with a view of ascertaining the time of it: observing likewise whatever may farther lead us into the knowledge of his station and character, and whether he was one of Christ's seventy disciples, or not.

The first writer to be here taken notice of is Papias, about A. D. 116. He says, "That (d) the Elder, from whom he had divers informations, said: Mark, being the interpreter of Peter, wrote what he received: but not in the order, in which things were spoken and done by:

laudem gentis sua, librum super eorum conversatione conscriptum. De V. L. cap. 8.

(y) An. 64. §. i. ii.
(b) Ann. 66. num. xii. xx.
(c) Vid. Fabr. Bibl. Gr. l. 4. cap. v. n. iii. Tom. 3. p. 130. • • • 132.
(d) Vid. i. p. 241.
by Christ. For he was not a hearer of the Lord, but afterwards fol-"owed Peter."

Irenæus, as before (e) cited, about 178. says: "After the death of
"Peter and Paul, Mark, the disciple and interpreter of Peter, delivered "to us in writing the things that had been preached by Peter."
In another place (f) he calls Mark "the interpreter and follower of "Peter."

Clement, of Alexandria, about the year of Christ 194. says: "That (g)
"Peter's hearers at Rome, not content with a single hearing, nor with "an unwritten instruction in the divine doctrine, entreated Mark, the "follower of Peter, that he would leave with them in writing a memo"rial of the doctrine, which had been delivered to them by word of "mouth. Nor did they desist, until they had prevailed with him. Thus "they were the means of writing the Gospel, which is called according "to Mark. It is said, that when the Apostle knew what had been "done, he was pleased with the zeal of the men, and authorized that "scripture to be read in the churches." That passage is cited from "Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History.

Again, Eusebius says: "Clement (h) informs us, that the occasion of "writing the Gospel according to Mark was this. Peter, having pub"licly preached the word at Rome; and having spoken the Gospel by the "Spirit, many who were there, entreated Mark to write the things that "had been spoken, he having long accompanied Peter, and retaining
"what he had said: and that when he had composed the Gospel, he de"livered it to them, who had asked it of him. Which when Peter knew;
"he neither forbid it, nor encouraged it."

Many remarks were (i) formerly made upon these accounts of Clement, which cannot now be repeated. But it may be needful to say something here for reconciling Irenæus and him. Irenæus said, that Mark published his Gospel after the death of Peter and Paul: whereas Clement sup-pposes Peter to have been still living, and that this Gospel was shewn to Peter, who did not disapprove of it. But the difference is not great.
Clement says, that Mark's Gospel was writ at Rome at the request of the Christians there, who were hearers of Peter. If so, it could not be composed long before Peter's death. For I take it to be certain, that Peter did not come to Rome, until the reign of Nero was far advanced, nor very long before his own death. So that it may be reckoned not improbable, that Mark's Gospel was not published, or did not become generally known, till after the death of Peter and Paul, as Irenæus says.

Tertullian, about the year 200. speaks of Mark as (k) an apostolical man, or companion of Apostles: and says, "That (l) the Gospel, pub"lished by Mark, may be reckoned Peter's, whose interpreter he Says Origen, about 230. "The (m) second Gospel is that according "to Mark, who wrote it as Peter dictated it to him. Who therefore "calls him his son in his catholic epistle." See 1 Peter v. 13.
"was."

St. Mark.

Eusebius, about 315. may be supposed to agree in the main with Clement and Irenaeus, whose passages he has transcribed, and inserted in his Ecclesiastical Historie. And in a long passage of his Evangelical Demonstration, formerly (n) transcribed by us, he says: "Peter out of abundant dance of modestie thought not himself worthie to write a Gospell. But Mark, who was his friend and discipile, is said to have recorded Peter's relations of the acts of Je. [s]." At the end of which passage he says: "And (o) Peter testifies these things of himself. For all things in Mark are said to be memoirs of Peter's discourses." He likewise says, "that (p) Mark was not present to hear what Jesus said." Nor (q) does it appear, that he thought the writer of the Gospell to be John, turnamed Mark, nephew to Barnabas. But unquestionably he supposed him to be the same that is mentioned i Pet. v. 13.

Mark is mentioned among the other Evangelists by (r) Athanasius, without other particularities. But in the Synopis, ascribed to him, and by many supposed to be writ by another Athanasius, Bishop of Alexandria, near the end of the fifth century, it is said, "That (s) the Gospell according to Mark was dictated by Peter at Rome, and published by Mark, and preached by him in Alexandria, and Egypt, and Pentapolis, and Lybia."

The author of the Dialogue against the Marcionites, about 330. says, that (t) Mark was one of Christ's seventy discipiles.

Epiphanius, about 368. says: "Matthew (u) wrote first, and Mark soon after him, being a companion of Peter at Rome." Afterwards he says, "That (x) Mark was one of Christ's seventy discipiles, and like wife one of those who were offended at the words of Christ, recorded John vi. 44. and then forsook him: but he was afterwards recovered by Peter, and being filled with the Spirit wrote a Gospell."

Upon the last passage of Epiphanius Petavius says: "Mark (y) might, possibly, have been Christ, and have been one of the seventy: but it is said by very few ancient writers of the Church."

In the Constitutions Mark (z) is reckoned with Luke a fellow-laborer of Paul. Which may induce us to think, that the author supposed Mark, the Evangelist, to be John Mark, mentioned in the Acts, and some of St. Paul's epistles.

Gregorie Nazianzen says, "That (a) Mark wrote his Gospell for the Italians," or in Italie.

Ebedesiu says, "The (b) second Evangelist is Mark, who preached [or wrote] in Latin, in the famous city of Rome."

Jerome's

(n) Vol. viii. 86. . . 88. (o) P. 88. (p) P. 86.
(q) P. 143. (r) Vol. viii. p. 227.
(i) Vol. viii. p. 250. (t) P. 255.
(u) P. 305. (x) P. 306.
(z) Vol. viii. p. 393.
(a) Vol. ix. p. 133.
(b) P. 216.

Vol. II.
Jerome's article of this Evangelist, in his book of illuſtrious Men, is to this purpose: "Mark (c) the disciple and interpreter of Peter, at the desire of the brethren at Rome, wrote a short Gofpel, according to what he had heard related by Peter. Which when Peter knew, he ap- proved of it, and authorized it to be read in the churches: as Clement writes in the sixth book of his Institutions, and also Papias, Bishop of "Hierapolis. Peter also makes mention of this Mark in his epistle writ "at Rome, which he figuratively calls Babylon... Taking the Gofpel, "which himself had composed, he went to Egypt, and at Alexandria "founded a church of great note. He died in the eighth year of Nero, "and was buried at Alexandria: where he was succeeded, as Bishop, "by Anianus."

In the prologue to his Commentarie upon St. Matthew, Jerome says: "The (c) second Evangelist is Mark, interpreter of the Apostle Peter, "and the first Bishop of Alexandria: who never saw the Lord himself, "but related things as he had them from his master, very truly, but not "exactly in the order, in which they were done."

In his Commentarie upon Philem. ver. 24. he says: "He (d) thinks, "that Mark there mentioned is the writer of the Gospel." That Mark "may be well supposed to be John Mark, mentioned in the Acts, and in Col. iv. 10. where he is called nephew to Barnabas. Whether that Mark was the Evangelist, was doubted of by some. Nor was Jerome positive. But he was inclined to think him the fame.

Augustin (e) calls Mark and Luke disciples of Apostles: and says, that. (f) Mark follows Matthew, as his abridger. Upon which some remarks were (g) made.

By Chrysopolon (h) Mark is said to have writ his Gofpel in Egypt, at the request of the believers there. However, at the end of that paflage he says: "In (i) what place each one of the Evangelists wrote, cannot "be said with certainty." He likewise (k) calls Mark disciple of Peter, "and Peter his master. He must have supposed him the same, that is mentioned 1 Pet. v. 13. But I do not recollect him to have any where said, that he was the fame as John Mark.

Vidar, writer of a Commentarie upon St. Mark's Gofpel, about the year 401. says: "He (l) was also called John: that he wrote a Gofpel "after Matthew, and was the son of Marie, mentioned Acts xii. For "a while he accompanied Paul, and his relation Barnabas. But when "he came to Rome, he joyned Peter, and accompanied him. For which "reason he is mentioned 1 Pet. v. 13. Mark is also mentioned by Paul, "Col. iv. 10. 2 Tim. iv. 11... When he was obliged to go from "Rome, and was earnestly desired by the believers there to write a hisf- "orie of the preaching of the heavenly doctrine, he readily complied, "This, as he adds, is said to have been the occasion of writing the Gof- "pel according to Mark."

(c) Vol. x. p. 92. 93. (e) P. 83. (f) P. 229. (g) P. 228. (h) P. 315. (i) P. 233... 236. (k) P. 318. 322. (l) Vol. xi. p. 30. 31.
Cæsennus, of Alexandria, about 535. says: "Mark (m), the second Evangelist, wrote a Gospel at Rome, by the direction of Peter."

By Isidore, of Seville, about 596. Mark (n) is said to have written his Gospel in Italie. Afterwards, he seems to say, it (o) was writ at Alexandria. But perhaps no more is meant, than that Mark preached at Alexandria the Gospel, which he had written.

Oecumenius, about 950. upon Acts xiii. 13. says: "This (p) John, who is also called Mark, nephew to Barnabas, wrote the Gospel according to him, and was also disciple of Peter, of whom he says in his first epistle: Mark, my son, salute thee."

Theophylact flourished about 1070. His preface to St. Mark is to this purpose: "The (q) Gospel according to Mark was writ at Rome ten years after Christ's ascension, at the request of the believers there, for this Mark was a disciple of Peter, whom he calls his son spiritually. His name was John. He was nephew to Barnabas, and was also a companion of Paul."

Eutychius, about 1110. says: "The (r) Gospel of Mark was writ about ten years after our Lord's ascension, at Rome, as some say, or in Egypt, according to others. He says, that at first Mark was much with his uncle Barnabas and Paul. Afterwards he was with Peter at Rome, as the first epistle of the Apostle shews, whom he there calls his son. From whom also he received the whole historie of the Gospel."

Nicephorus Callisti, about 1325. says: "Two (s) only of the twelve, Matthew and John, have left memoirs of our Lord's life on earth: and two of the seventy, Mark and Luke." And somewhat lower: "After this Mark and Luke published their Gospels by the direction of Peter and Paul."

I add here one author more, not particularly mentioned in the preceding part of this work, Eutychius, Patriarch of Alexandria, in the tenth centurie: who says, "that (t) in the time of the Emperour Nero, Peter the prince of the Apostles, making use of the pen of Mark, wrote a Gospel at Rome, in the Roman language. And he published it under Mark's name." By the Roman, probably, meaning the Greek language, which then very much prevailed in the Roman Empire, as (u) Selden has observed.

V. Let us now briefly recollect what has passed before us, Remarks upon them.

1. All the ancient writers in general suppose the Evangelist Mark to have been a companion of Peter in the later part of his life, and to have had great advantages from that Apostle's preaching for composing a Gospel.

2. Though

(m) P. 267.
(p) P. 413.
(r) P. 436.

2. Though some have doubted, who Mark was, many have been of opinion, that he was John Mark, son of Mary, a pious Jewish woman, and an early believer, of Jerusalem, and nephew to Barnabas.

3. If Mark, the Evangelist, be John Mark, as seem to me very probable, he was well acquainted with Barnabas and Paul, and other Apo-tles, and disciples, eye-witnesses of Jesus, beside Peter.

4. Some of the ancient writers, quoted by us, thought Mark to have been one of Christ’s seventy disciples. Which I apprehend cannot be either affirmed, or denied with certainty. But, if he was not one of them, he was an early believer, and an early disciple and companion of Apostles, and intimately conversant with them. Whereby, and by hearing Peter preach in Judea, and other places, and lastly at Rome, he was well qualified to write a Gospel.

S. Basnage has some observations upon this point, which deserve to be taken notice of. “Epiphanius (x) and the Author of the Dialogue against the Marcionites, suppose, Mark to have been one of Christ’s seventy disciples. But that opinion, says he, does not appear to me well grounded. It seems incredible, that Peter should call Mark, his son, if he was one of the seventy, who had a commissio from Christ himself, and were almost equal to Apostles. That ancient writer, Papias, excludes him from that number, saying, that Mark was not a hearer or follower of the Lord. ... And Tertullian calls Mark Peter’s interpreter, which office would be below the character of one of the seventy. ... Nor does Origen make him one of the seventy, whose authority must be of great weight. ... However, it seems to me very probable, that Mark was one of the five hundred brethren, who saw Christ after his resurrection. And having been an eye-witness of that, he was qualified to write a Gospel.”

Upon which I observe: The supposition, that Mark might be one of the five hundred, spoken of by St. Paul i. Cor. xv. 6. is a mere conjecture, without any authority, either in Scripture, or antiquity. But I would add a thought or two for strengthening the argument, that Mark was not one of the seventy disciples. Ensebe (y) in his Ecclesiastical Historic, has a chapter concerning the Disciples of our Saviour. But Mark is not there named, as one of them. Nor does Jerome say any thing of it in his book of Illustrious Men: nor elsewhere, that I remember. The silence of Origen, Ensebe, and Jerome, upon this head, must amount

(x) Marcum de LXX discipulis unum fuiffe, credidit Epiphanius. ... Nobis tamen non arridet ea sententia cum incommendabili fit, Petrum Marco filii nomen addidisse, si de septuaginta discipulis unus suiffet, quos Christus ipse legaverat, quique ab omni fere parte equeales erant Apostolis. Papias quos tetius ille auctor LXX discipulis Marcum eximit. ... Ex Tertulliano quoque fcius, Marcum interpretis officio functum fuiffe, quod infra LXX dignitatem fuit. ... Neque LXX discipulis eum apposuit Originus, cujus non minimi ponderis est testimonium. ... Nobis tamen est admodum probable, Marcum unum fuiffe quingentorum fratrum, qui Christum a morte revoca-tum contemplati sunt. Cuique, ut testi oculato, commissa est scribendi E-

(y) * H. E. l. 1. cap. xii.
amount to an argument of no small weight, that there was not in their times any prevailing tradition, that Mark was one of the seventy. It may be also reckoned an argument, that he was not of that number, in that he has not in his Gospel taken any notice of them, or of the com-mmission given to them. Which is in St. Luke only. ch. x. 1... 17.

I therefore conclude with saying, that Mark was an early believer, and an early disciple and fellow-laborer of Apostles. But that he ever faw, or heard the Lord Jesus, is not certain.

5. The general account of the above named writers is, that Mark wrote his Gospel at Rome. In this there is a remarkable agreement, with a very few exceptions. Chrysostom indeed speaks of it's being writ in Egypt. But he is almost singular. That it was writ at Rome, or in Italic, is said not only by Epiphanius, Jerome, Gregorie Nazianzen, Victor, and divers others: but the Egyptian writers likewise all along say the same thing: that it was writ by Mark at Rome, in the company of the Apostle Peter. So say Clement, of Alexandria, Athanasius, the supposed author of the Synopsis of Scripture, Cofmas, and Eutychius, all of Alexandria. Ebedjezu likewise, in his catalogue of Syrian writings, says, that Mark wrote at Rome. And the Latin author of the commentarie upon St.
Mark's Gospel, quoted some while ago, says, that it was writ in Italie.

6. This leads us to think, that St. Mark's Gospel was not writ before the year 63. or 64. For we cannot perceive any good reason to think, that St. Peter was at Rome, till about that time. And this date is supported by the testimonie of that ancient writer, Irenaeus, that Mark publisht his Gospel after the deceafe of Peter and Paul.

VI. These are observations, which the above cited testimonies seem naturally to afford. But before we proceed any farther, it will be fit for us to take notice of the sentiments of learned moderns concerning the time of St. Mark's writing his Gospel.

Cave supposeth St. Mark to have published his Gospel at Rome, in the year of Chrift 65. His argument for it I place (z) below.

Mr. Jones's opinion was, that (a) this Gospel was published between the year 64. and 67. or 68. when, according to his computation, Peter and Paul suffered martyrdom.

J. A.

(z) Rogatus Romæ a frattibus, scripsit Evangelium, a Petro approbatum, idque Graeco sermone Romanis satis familiari. Factum id circa ann. 65, Petro et Paulo jam morte sublatis. Cum enim illum epistolæ secunda ad Timothæo non longe ante martyrium scripta, Romam acceriverat Paulus, probabile est, Marcum vel codem, vel saltem frequenti anno illuc veniffe, ibique Evangelium vel primum condidisse, vel prius conditum in publicum edicidisse. Certe Irenæus, l. 3. cap. i. et apud Eusebium, l. 5. c. viii. S. Marcum mihi non tum tum εν ο亸ν ἔγωγαν Evangelium sumpsit conscriptissi die fecerat tradit. Cav.

(a) Mr. Jones's words are these: "These, with some other reasons, make it evident to me, that St. Peter was not at Rome, till the year of Chrift 63. or 64. and consequently, that the Gospel of St. Mark was not written before this time, but between that and the martyrdom of this Apostle and
p. 88.
St. Mark.

J. A. Fabricius (b) was for the year of Christ 63, the ninth of Nero.

Mill says, that (c) St. Mark published his Gospel at Rome in the year of Christ 63, after that the Apostles Peter and Paul had been gone from thence, as Irenaeus says.

But here I beg leave to observe, that, probably, Irenaeus does not speak of these two Apostles removal from Rome, but of their decease. Secondly, Dr. Mill has no reason to suppose, that Peter was at Rome, during the time of Paul's two years imprisonment there, especially at the period of it. But there is a great deal of reason to think otherwise. For we have several epistles of St. Paul, writ near the end of that confinement, in which no notice is taken of Peter.

Barnage (d) closely following Irenaeus, says, Mark's Gospel was published in the year 66, after the decease of Peter and Paul: whose martyrdoms, according to him, happened in (c) the year 65.

So that it has been of late the opinion of many learned men, of the best judgement in these matters, that St. Mark's Gospel was not published, till after the year of Christ 60. I readily allent to them so far. And as I am disposed to place the martyrdoms of these two great Apostles at Rome, in the later part of the year 64, or in 65, it seems to me probable, that St. Mark's Gospel was compos'd in the year 64, or 65, and made public by him the first fair opportunity, soon afterwards, before the end of the year 65. That I mention as the latest date. I do not presume to say the time exactly. For it might be finished, and published in the year 64.

I hoped to have had assistance from Mr. Wetstein in this disquisition. But have been somewhat disappointed. In his preface to St. Mark's Gospel he concludes from Col. iv. 10. and Philem. ver. 23, that (f) St. Mark had been with the Apostle Paul at Rome, in the time of his confinement there: that from thence he went to Colophone, and afterwards returned to Rome, where he is said to have writ his Gospel. Accordingly, as one would think, St. Mark's Gospel could not be published before the year 64. or 65. But in his preface to St. Luke's Gospel the same learned writer expresseth himself to this purpose. "According (g) to some

(b) Bib. Gr. l. 4. cap. v. Tom. 3. p. 124, et 131.
(d) De Marci Evangelio legimus apud Irenæum . . . Post vero horum exceßium . . . Quæ traditio magis apud nos valet, quam alia quælibet de tempore editi a Marco Evangelii chronologia. Bafn. ann. 66. n. xii.
(e) Vid. ann. 65. num. iv.
(g) Evangelium autem edidit xv, aut secundum alios xxii. poët Christi adscensionem annis . . . Lucam multa ex Matthæo, ex Marco plura conscrifice, ex collatione putat. Ib. p. 643.
Ch. VII. St. Mark.

"some ecclesiastical writers Luke published his Gospel fifteen, according "to others two and twenty years after Christ's ascension . . . . That "he transcribed many things from Matthew, and yet more from Mark, "is manifest."

But if St. Luke wrote within two and twenty years after Christ's ascension, and transcribed a great deal from St. Mark; St. Mark's Gospel must have been first published, and very early. If St. Mark's Gospel was not published, till the year 64. and St. Luke transcribed from him; St. Luke could not write, till a good while after two and twenty years from Christ's ascension. I do not perceive therefore, that Mr. West-jein had any determined opinion concerning the date of these two Gos- pels. Nor can I, as yet, persuade myself, that any of the Evangelists transcribed each other.

VII. I will now observe some characters of time in Marks of Time in the Gospel itself, like those before taken notice of in the Gospel itself.

St. Matthew.

1. From ch. vii. 14 . . 23. it appears, that St. Mark fully understood the spirituality of the doctrine of Christ, recommending righteousness and true holiness, without an obligation to Jewish ritual ordinances and appointments.

2. His historie of the Greek or Gentil woman, in the same chap. vii. 24. . . 30. who besought Jesus to heal her daughter, and obtained her request, deserves notice here.

3: The call of the Gentils, and the rejection of the Jews, as a People, are intimated in ch. xii. 1 . . 12. in the parable there recorded, of the Householder, who planted a vineyard, and let it out to husbandmen: to whom after a while he sent servants, and then his son, to receive from them the fruit of the vineyard. But they abused the servants, and kill- ed the son. It is added: What therefore will the lord of the vineyard do? He will destroy the husbandmen, and will let out the vineyard unto others. And what follows.

4. In ch. xiii. are predictions concerning the destruction of the tem- ple, and the defolations of the Jewish People. And, particularly, at ver. 14. . . 16. are remarkable expressions, intimating the near approach of those calamities, and suited to excite the attention of such as were in danger of being involved in them.

5. In his account of the institution of the eucharist our Lord says: ch. xiv. 24. This is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many: that is, for all men, not for Jews only, but for Gentils also.

6. In ch. iv. 30 . . 32. is the parable of the grain of mustard seed, the left of all seeds, which becometh greater than all herbs: representing the swift and wonderful progress of the gospel in the world. Of which it is very likely, St. Mark, at the time of writing, had some knowledge.

7. It is manifest, that he well understood the extent of our Saviour's comission to the twelve Apostles. For he has recorded it in these words, ch. xvi. 15. Go ye therefore into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature: or the whole creation, that is, Jews and Gentils, all mankind of every denomination.

8. Yea, it appears from the conclusion of his historie, that before he wrote, the Apostles (at least divers of them,) had left Judea, and had preached preached in many places. ver. 20. And they went forth, and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following.

9. Ch. xvi. 18. They shall take up serpents. Some may think, that here is a reference to the historie, which we have in Acts xxviii. 3. 6. I do not say, there is. But allowing it, I should not reckon it an objection to the genuinenesse of this part of that chapter. It would only be an argument for the late date of this Gospel. And it has been so understood by (b) some. For my own part, I cannot say, that St. Mark has referred to it. But I make no question, that he was acquainted with the event there related, when he wrote his Gospel.

Observations upon VIII. I shall conclude this chapter with some observations upon St. Mark’s Gospel.

1. It confirms the accounts given by the ancients, that it is the substance of Peter’s preaching.

This was taken notice of just now in our recollection. But I choose to enlarge upon it here, and shew, that the Gospel itself affords evidences of it’s being writ according to that Apostle’s discourses, or according to informations and directions given by him to this Evangelist.

1.) In the first place I would here remind my readers of a long passage of Eusebius, the learned Bishop of Cæarea, formerly transcribed, of which I take here a very small part only.

Having observed several things very honourable to Peter, related in the other Gospels, he adds: “Though (i) such things were said to Peter by “Jesus, Mark has taken no notice of them: because, as is probable, “Peter did not relate them in his sermons. For he did not think fit to “bear testimonie to himself by relating what Jesus said to him, or of “him. Therefore Mark has omitted them. But what concerned his “denial of Jesus, he preached to all men, because he wept bitterly. . . .

“For all things in Mark are said to be memoirs of Peter’s discourses.”

2.) And (k) Chrysostom, reconciling Matthew’s and Mark’s accounts of Peter’s denying Christ, says: “These things Mark had from his master.

“For he was a disciple of Peter. And what is very remarkable, though

“he was a disciple of Peter, he relates his fall more particularly, than any of the rest.”

3.) The (l) same great preacher explaining the historie of our Lord’s paying the didrachm or tribute-money to the temple, which is in Matth.

xviii. 24. . . . 27. and particularly those words: That take and give unto them for me and thee, says, “Mark, who was a disciple of Peter, omits “this, because it was honourable to that Apostle. But he relates the “historie

(k) Postremo, in ipsis Evangeliiis quædam exstante videntur criteria, ex quibus ea fero esse coniecta colligi potest. Phra£is μιχελ τις συμφωνει μι£α £ hunc diem. Mat. xxviii. 15. iulium spatum inter Chrifií refurreccionem et Evangelium exaratum poffulare videtur. Ita que Marcus cap. xvi. 18. de serpentiibus a Chrifií discipulis fine damno tollendis habet, ad Paulum, Romam tendentem, et quod ei in itinere in insula Mileto contiguit, respicere videntur.

"Historie of his denial of Christ. And perhaps his master forbid him to "insert such things, as tended to aggrandize him."

4.) No one has more largely treated this point, than Mr. Jones, who has (m) a catalogue of several places in the Gospels, containing things tending to Peter's honour, which are not mentioned in St. Mark's Gospel.

(1.) The account of Christ's pronouncing Peter blessed, when he had confessed him: Christ's declaring, that he had his faith and knowledge from God: the promise of the keys, and of that large power, which is made to him: are omitted by St. Mark, though the former and the succeeding parts of this discourse are both told by him. See Matt. xvi. 16. 17. 18. compared with Mark viii. 29. 30.

(2.) The relation of St. Peter's being commissioned by Christ to work the miracle, by getting money out of the fish's mouth, to pay the tribute-money, is told by St. Matthew. ch. xvii. 24. 25. 26. 27. but omitted by St. Mark: though the preceding and subsequent stories are the very same as in St. Matthew. See Mark ix. 30. 31. 32. 33.

(3.) Christ's particular expressions of love and favour to St. Peter, in telling him of his danger, and that he prayed particularly for him, that his faith might not fail, is omitted by St. Mark, but related Luke xxii. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38.

(4.) St. Peter's remarkable humility above the rest of the Apostles expressed in an unwillingness, that Christ should wash his feet, which none of the rest did express, with Christ's particular discourse to him. John xiii. 6. 7. 8. 9. &c. is omitted by Mark.

(5.) The instance of St. Peter's very great zeal for Christ, when he was taken, in cutting off the High-Priest's servant's ear. John xviii. 10. is not mentioned by Mark in particular, but only told in general, of a certain person that stood by. Mark xiv. 47. 48.

(6.) St. Peter's faith in casting himself into the sea, to go to Christ. John xxii. 7. is not mentioned by St. Mark. (A)

(7.) Christ's discourse with Peter concerning his love to him, and his particular repeated charge to him, to feed his sheep. John xxii. 15. is omitted by St. Mark.

(8.) Our Saviour's predicting to Peter his martyrdom, and the manner of it. John xxi. 18. 19. is not related by St. Mark.

"These, adds that diligent author, are some instances of things, tending to St. Peter's honour, recorded by the other Evangelists, none of which are so much as hinted by St. Mark. ... All which cannot be accounted for any way more probable, than supposing, that this Apostle did not publish those circumstances, which were so much to his honour."

Indeed, I think, they do confirm the accounts given of this Gospel by the ancients. For these omissions cannot be so well ascribed to anything, as to St. Peter's modesty and reservedness, who had not mentioned such things in his preaching, and discouraged the putting them down

(m) See new and full Method. Part 3. p. 79. 80.

(A) There is a like thing, and more extraordinarie, related by Matthew only. ch. xiv. 28. 29. 30. I do not know, why Mr. Jones omitted it.
down in writing: insomuch, that as Tertullian says, the (n) Gospel published by Mark, may be said to be Peter's.

5.) Nevertheless I must acknowledge, that there are some things in St. Mark's Gospel honourable to Peter, which are not in any other. I shall mention two or three.

Says St. Mark ch. i. 36. And Simon, and they that were with him, followed after him. If thereby be intended the whole companie of the Apostles, that way of describing them is very honourable to Peter. But some may suppose, none to be intended, beside those mentioned ver. 29. If so, it resembles Luke ix. 32. But Peter, and they that were with him: meaning John and James, and referring to ver. 28.

In Mark xiv. 3. Peter is mentioned, as one of the four Apostles, to whom our Lord addressed himself, when he foretold the destruction of the temple, and the calamities attending it. Which is a passage peculiar to St. Mark.

And Ch. xvi. 7. The message, which the angels sent to the disciples by the women at the sepulchre, is thus expressed: But go your way. Tell his disciples, and Peter, that he goes before you into Galilee. Peter is not mentioned, upon this occasion, by Matthew xxviii. 7. nor by any other of the Evangelists.

Upon this text Whitby says very well: "Peter is here named, not as "Prince of the Apostles, but, as the Fathers say, for his conflation, and "to take off the scruple, which might be upon his spirit: whether by "his threelfold denial of his master, he had not forfeited his right to be "one of Christ's disciples."

I now proceed to another observation.

2. St. Mark's Gospel, as is evident to all, is the shortest of the four. Jerome, as before cited, says, Mark (o) wrote a short Gospel. And Chrysostom observed, that (p) Mark had the concise nature of Peter, following his master.

3. Nevertheless there are in St. Mark many things peculiar to himself, not mentioned by any other Evangelist.

I shall here put down several such things, and not those, which are omitted by Matthew only, but such things, as are in Mark, and in no other of the Evangelists.

1.) In the account of our Saviour's temptation in the wilderness, St. Mark says, ch. i. 13. and was with the wild beasts: not mentioned by any other Evangelist, and yet very proper to shew the hardships, which our Lord underwent at that feaston.

2.) Ch. i. 20. In the account of the call of James and John, the sons of Zebedee, he says, they left their father in the ship, with the hired servants. A circumstance not mentioned by any other.

3. Ch. i. 29. And forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon, and Andrew, with James and John. In Matth. viii. 14. it is only, come into Peter's house. In Luke iv. 38. and entered into Simon's house.

4. Ch. i. 33. And all the city was gathered together at the door. Not in any other Evangelist. Compare Matt. viii. 16. Luke iv. 40. 41.

5.) Ch. i. 35. And in the morning rising up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed. 36. And Simon, and they that were with him, followed after him. 37. And when they had found him, they said unto him: All men seek thee. This is not at all in Matthew, and is here much fuller, and with more particulars, than in Luke iv. 42.

6.) Ch. i. 45. Of the leper, cured by our Saviour, he says: But he went out, and began to publish it much, and to blazo abroad the matter. Not particularly mentioned by the other Evangelists. Compare Matth. viii.

7.) In the cure of the paralytic. ch. ii. 2. And straightway many were gathered together, insomuch that there was no room to receive them, not so much as about the door. 3. And they came unto him, bringing one sick of the palsy, which was born of four. 4. And—-they uncovered the roof. No other Evangelist has so particularly described the crowd. In Mark only is it said, that this sick man was born of four. He likewiſe more particularly describes the uncovering the roof. Compare Matt. ix.

8.) In the historie of the man with a withered hand, cured in the synagoge, on a sabbath. ch. iii. 5. And when he had looked round about on them with anger, being grieved for the hardness of their hearts, he said unto the man: Stretch forth thy hand. Not so full in any other Evangelist. Compare Matt. xii. 9...13. Luke vi. 6...11.

9.) Ch. iii. ver. 6. And the Pharisees went forth, and straightway took counsel with the Herodians against him. Matth. xii. 14. mentions Pharisees only. Luke vi. 11. mentions no persons by name.

10.) Ch. iii. 17. And James the son of Zebedee, and John the brother of James. And he named them Boanerges. Not in any other Evangelist.

II. Ch. iii. 19...And they went into the house. 20. And the multitude cometh together again, so that they could not so much as eat bread. 21. And when his friends heard of it, they went out to lay hold of him. For they said: He is beside himself; Whether that expression, he is beside himself, is to be understood of Christ, or of the multitude, this passage is peculiar to St. Mark.

12.) Ch. iv. 26. And he said: So is the kingdom of God, as if a man should cast his seed into the ground, 27. and should sleep, and rise night and day, and the seed should spring and grow up, he knoweth not bow. 28. For the earth bringeth forth fruit of itself; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear. 29. But when the fruit is ripe, immediately he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come. This parable is peculiar to St. Mark. See Whitby upon the place, and likewiſe (q) Grotius.

13.) After the parable of the grain of mustard-seed, beside other things common to him and Matthew, he adds. ch. iv. 24. And when they were alone, he expounded all things to his disciples. Compare Matt. xiii. 31...34.

This particular leads us mightily, to think, that either Mark was an eye-witness, or had the best and fullest information of things.

14.) Mark iv. 36. And when they had sent away the multitude, they took him even as he was in the ship. This circumstance, peculiar to St. Mark, enables us to account for our Lord's fast sleep in his passage to the country of the Gadarens. We perceive from St. Mark, that this voyage was undertaken in the evening, after the fatigue of long discourses in public, and without any refreshment. Our Lord's sleep in the midst of a storm is mentioned by all three Evangelists. Matt. viii. 24. . . . 26. Mark iv. 37. 38. Luke viii. 23. 24. But this Evangelist alone leads us to discern the occasion of it.

15.) Farther, in the same ver. 36. of ch. iv. And there were also with him several other little ships. A particular, peculiar to St. Mark.

16.) And in the account of this voyage croufs the sea, he says ver. 38. that our Lord was in the binder part of the ship, asleep on a pillow: two circumstances, wanting in the other Evangelists.

17.) Certainly, these, and other things, are sufficient to assure us, that either Mark was an eye-witness: or, that he wrote things, as related to him by an eye-witness, even Peter himself, as all the ancients say.

18.) In Matt. viii. 28. . . . 34. Mark v. 1 . . . 19. Luke viii. 26. . . . 39. are the several accounts of our Lord's healing the demoniacs, or demoniacs, in the country of the Gadarens. For Matthew speaks of two, Mark and Luke of one only. In St. Mark's history are divers things, not in the other Gospels. In him alone it is said, that the man was always night and day in the mountains, and in the tombs, crying, and cutting himself with stones. And he only mentions the number of swine, that perished in the sea, saying, they were about two thousand.

19.) All the first three Evangelists have given a history of our Lord's raising the daughter of Jairus, and healing the woman with an issue of blood, both in connexion. Matt. ix. 18. . . . 26. Mark v. 22. . . . 43. Luke viii. 41. . . . 56. St. Mark has several things, which are in neither of the other. Of the woman he says ver. 26. she had suffered much of many Physicians . . . and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse. At ver. 29. And she felt in her body, that she was healed of that plague. At ver. 41. he infers the very words, which Jesus spake, when he raised the daughter of Jairus: Talitha Kumi. I have omitted some other things, peculiar to St. Mark, in the account of these two miracles.

20.) Ch. vi. 13. In the account of the commission given to the twelve by Christ in his life-time, he says: they anointed many with oyl, and healed them. Which is mentioned by no other Evangelist, as was observed of old by (r) Victor.

21.) Mark vii. 2. 3. 4. What is there said of the Jews washing themselves, when they come from the market, before they eat: and of their cleansing cups, pots, brazen vessels, and tables, is peculiar to St. Mark. Comp. Matt. xv. 1. 2. Comp. Matt. xv. 1. 2.

22.) Ch. vii. 21. 22. Are the things, that defile men. St. Matthew, ch. xv. 19. mentions seven things only. St. Mark has thirteen. And two of them, an evil eye, and foolishness, are very singular.

23.) Ch.

(r) See Vol. xi. p. 34.
23.) Ch. vii. 31...37. Our Lord bestows hearing and speech upon a deaf and dumb man.

24.) Ch. viii. 22...26. Our Lord cures a blind man at Bethsaida.

These two miracles are peculiar to St. Mark, being related by no other Evangelist.

25.) Ch. x. 46...52. is the account of the miracle on the blind man near Jericho. St. Mark, ver. 46. calls him blind Bartimeus, son of Timaeus. Not mentioned by the other Evangelists. See Matt. xx. 29...

26.) Ch. xi. 13. For the time of figs was not yet: that is, the time of gathering was not yet come. A most useful observation peculiar to this Evangelist, shewing, that as there were leaves, it was reasonable to expect fruit on this fig-tree, if it was not barren. Upon this text might be consulted (s) Bishop Kiddler, and (t) Mr. Hallet.

27.) Ch. xiii. 3. 4. And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, over against the temple, Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, asked him privately, ...When shall these things be? No other Evangelist has mentioned the names of the disciples, who put this question to our Saviour. Comp. Matt. xxiv. 1...3. Luke xxi. 5.

28.) In Mark xii. 41...44. and Luke xxi. 1...4. is the account of the people casting their gifts into the cheests of the treasurie, in the temple. St. Mark says: And Jesus sat over against the treasurie. In which expression there is great propriety. And he alone mentions the value of the poor widow's two mites, laying: Which make a farthing.

29.) Ch. xiv. 51. And there followed him a certain young man, having a linen cloth cast about his naked body. And the young men [the guards] laid hold on him. 52. And he left the linen cloth, and fled from them naked. A particular, in no other Evangelist, yet very fitly taken notice of, as intimating the usual noife and dilulance, when a man is taken up in the night-time, as a malefactor, and is carried before a magistrate. By (u) the noife of the people passing along that young person was excited to come hastily out of the house, where he was, to inquire, what was the matter. Mr. Le Clerc, in his French Testament, has an useful note upon this place. He observes the natural simplicty of the Evangelists narration. Which, as he justly says, confirms the truth of their historie.

30.) Ch. xv. xi. And they compell one Simon, a Cyrenian, who passed by, coming out of the country, the father of Alexander and Rufus, to bear his cross. That particular, the father of Alexander and Rufus, is in no other Evangelist. Comp. Matt. xxvii. 32. and Luke xxiii. 26.

31.) Ch.

(s) Demonstration of the Messiah. Part 2. ch. ii. p. 38. 39.

(t) Notes and Discourses. Vol. 2. p. 114...125.

(u) Non de Apostolorum grege...sed ex villa aliquia horto proxima, flrepitu militum excitaturs, et subito accurrentes, ut confpecerent, quid agere tur. Grot. ad Marc. xi. 51.
31.) Ch. xvi. 3. 4. And they said among themselves: Who shall roll us away the stone from the door of the sepulchre. For it was very great. In no other Evangelist.

32.) Ch. xvi. 7. But go your way. Tell his disciples, and Peter, that he goes before you into Galilee. The mention of Peter is peculiar to St. Mark. For in Matt. xxviii. 7. it is: Go quickly, and tell his disciples, St. Luke has not recorded that message.

33.) I add nothing more of this kind. I have omitted many things, which are in this Gospel, and no other, being apprehensive, that if I enlarged farther, I should be charged with prolixity.

34.) The particulars that have been alleged, are sufficient to assure us, that St. Mark is not an epitomizer of another author: and that he was well acquainted with the things, of which he undertook to write a historie. He writes as an eye-witness, or as one, who had full and authentic information at the first hand. In a word, St. Mark’s Gospel, though short, is a very valuable, and masterly performance.

4. It may be proper for me to add one thing more: That I suppose the twelve verses at the end of the sixteenth chapter to be a genuine part of this Gospel. If any doubt of it, I would refer them for their satisfaction to Dr. Mill, and to the observations of Grotius at the beginning of that chapter, and to Beza upon the ninth verse. And for explaining those twelve verses, and reconciling them with the other Evangelists, I refer to Grotius, and other Commentators.

C H A P. VIII.

ST. L U K E, Evangelist.

His historie from the N. T. Luke in the books of the New Testament is in his (A) own historie. Acts xvi. 10. 11. Whereby it appears, that he was in Paul’s companie at Troas, before the Apostle

(A) From some words in the Cambridge manuscript Bp. Pearson has argued, that Luke was in Paul’s companie from the year 43. Dein peragrat [Paulus] Phrygiam et Galatiam, et per Myüam venit Troadem, ubi se illi comitem adjuxisse indicat Lucas xvi. 10. Qui antea etiam Antiochiae cum Paulo fuit, postle took shipping to go into Macedonia: in which voyage St. Luke was one of the companie. ver. 8. And they passing by Mylia, came to Troas. 9. And a vision appeared to Paul in the night. There stood a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying: Come over into Macedonia, and help us. 10. And when he had seen the vision, immediatly we endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering, that the Lord had called us to preach the gospel to them. 11. Therefore loosing from Troas, we came with a strait course to Samothracia.

In that journey St. Paul went from Samothracia to Neapolis, and thence to Philippi. 11...17. So far St. Luke speaks in the first person plural. But having finished his account of the transactions at Philippi, which reaches to ver. 40. the last of that chapter: at the beginning of the next ch. xvii. 1. he (b) changeth the person, and says: Now when they had passed through Amphipolis, and Apollonia, they came to Thessalonica, where was a synagogue of the Jews.

Nor does he any more expressly speak of himself, until Paul was a second time in Greece, and was setting out for Jerusalem with the collections, which had been made for the poor saints in Judea, Acts xx. 1...6. And after the uproar [at Ephesus,) was ceased, Paul called unto him the disciples, and embraced them, and departed for to go into Macedonia. And when he had gone over those parts, and had given them much exhortation, he came into Greece, and there abode three months. And when the Jews laid wait for him, as he was about to sail into Syria, he purposed to return through Macedonia, et jam eum Troade affectus est: ut colligere licet ex Act. xi. 28. ubi Codex Cantabr. habet, ενοργαμμων δε ἵππων. Ab anno igitur 43. per octennium discipulus fuerat Antiochiae. Annal. Paulin. p. 10. But it is not safe to relye upon one manuscript only, different from all others, and of no great authority. As Mr. Tillemont took notice of this observation of Pearson, I Transcribe his thoughts about it. Selon le manuscrit de Cambrige S. Luc dit qu’il ejot avec S. Paul à Antioche, des l’an 43. ce que Pearson a receu. Mais il ne seroit pas feur de fier à un manuscrit different de tous les autres. Et quand cela se pourroit en quelques occasions, ce ne seroit pas à l’égard du manuscrit de Cambrige, qui est plein d’additions et alterations contraires au veritable texte de S. Luc. Mem. Ec. T. 2. S. Luc. note iii. Some may argue from these words, that Luke was a Gentil, converted by Paul at Antioch. And others might argue, that he is the same as Lucius, mentioned Acts xiii. 1. But I should think it best to neither side nor form an argument from this reading. Mr. Wetstein has referred us to a place of St. Augusfin, where this text is quoted very agreeably to the Cambridge manuscript. In illis autem diebus descenderunt ab Jerofolymis Prophece Antiochiam. Congregatis autem nobis, surgens unus ex illis, nomine Agabus. &c. De Serm. Dom. I. 2. c. 17. But it is observable, that Irenaeus i. 3. c. 14. init. a more ancient writer, enumerating St. Luke’s journeys in St. Paul’s companie, begins at Troas. Acts xvi. 8...10. I presume, it must be best to relye upon him, and the general consent of all manuscripts, except one, in the common reading.

Macedonia. And there accompanied him into Asia, Sephar, of Berea... These going before, tarried for us at Troas. And we failed away from Philippi... and came unto them at Troas in five days, where we abide seven days. So that Luke accompanied Paul, at that time, from Greece through Macedonia to Philippi, and also went with him from thence to Troas.

And it appears from the sequel of the historie in the Acts, that Luke was one of those, who accompanied the Apostle to Jerusalem, and staid with him there. And when the Apostle was sent a prisoner from Cesarea to Rome, he was in the same ship with him, and staid with him at Rome during the whole time of his two years imprisonment there, with which the historie of the Acts concludes.

From St. Paul's epistles writ at Rome, in the time of that confinement, we have proofs of Luke's being with him. He is mentioned as with the Apostle. 2 Tim. iv. 11. an epistle writ, as I suppose, in the summer, after the Apostle's arrival there. In Phil. em. ver. 24. he is one of those, who send fulutations to Philemon, and is mentioned by the Apostle, as one of his fellow-laborers. And, if Luke the beloved Physician, mentioned Col. iv. 14. be the Evangelist, that is another proof of his being then with the Apostle.

St. Luke is also supposed by some to be the brother, whose praise is in the Gospel throughout all the churches. 2 Cor. viii. 18. But that is not certain.

As I think, that all St. Paul's epistles, which we have, were writ, before he left Rome and Italy, when he had been sent thither by Fesus; I must be of opinion, that the New Testament affords us not any materials for the historie of St. Luke, lower than his own book of the Acts, which brings us down to the end of that period.

From ancients. II. I now therefore proceed without farther delay, to observe what light may be obtained from ancient Christian writers. And as St. Luke's two books, his Gospel and the Acts, were all along universally received; I intend here, for avoiding prolixity, to allege, chiefly, such passages only, as contain something, relating to the historie and character of St. Luke, or the time of writing his two above-named works.

Irenæus, as before quoted: "And (a) Luke, the companion of Paul, "put down in a book the Gospel preached by him." And the coherence seems to imply, that this was done after the writing of St. Mark's Gospel, and after the death of Peter and Paul. In a passage formerly cited (b) at length, Irenæus shews from the Acts, as we did just now, that Luke attended Paul in several of his journeys and voyages, and was his fellow-laborer in the gospel. He likewise says: "that "(c) Luke was not only a companion, but also a fellow-laborer of the "Apostles, especially of Paul." Again, he calls him "a (d) disciple and "follower of the Apostles." "The (e) Apostles, he says, envying none "plainly

(a) Vel. i. p. 354. (b) P. 361... 363.
(c) P. 365. (d) P. 361.
(e) Sic Apostoli simpliciter nemini invidentes que didicerant ipsi a Domino hac omnibus tradebant. Sic igitur et Lucas nemini invidens, ea que...
"plainly delivered to all the things which they had learned from the "Lord. So likewise Luke, envying no man, has delivered to us what "he learned from them, as he says: Even as they delivered them unto "us, who from the beginning were eye-witnesses and ministers of the word.

By all which it seems, that Irenæus reckoned Luke to have been a diciple of the Apostles, not a hearer of Jesus Christ himself.

Clement of Alexandria has bore a large testimonie to this Gospel, and the Acts, as well as to the other books of the New Testament. And as we learn from Eusebius, "in (f) his Institutions, he mentions a tradition concerning the order of the Gospels, which he had received from "Presbyters of more ancient times, and which is to this purpose. He "says, that the Gospels containing the genealogies were writ first:"
According to that tradition therefore St. Matthew's and St. Luke's Gospels were writ before St. Mark's. Which, according to the same Clément, and the tradition received by him, was writ at Rome, at the request of St. Peter's hearers, or the Christians in that city.

Tertullian (g) speaks of Matthew and John, as disciples of Christ, of Mark and Luke, as disciples of Apostles. Therefore, I think, he did not reckon these to have been of the seventy, or hearers of Christ. However, he ascribes a like authority to these, and says: "that (h) the Gospel, which Mark published, may be said to be Peter's, whose interpreter Mark was. For Luke's Digest also is often ascribed to Paul.
"And indeed it is easy to take that for the masters, which the disciples
"published." Again: "moreover (i) Luke was not an Apostle, but "apostolical: not a matter, but a disciple: certainly less than his master,
"but a disciple: certainly less than his master, certainly so much later,
"as he is a follower of Paul, the last of the Apostles." This likewise Origen mentions the Gospels in the order now generally received.

"The (k) third, says he, is that according to Luke, the Gospel commended by Paul, published for the sake of the Gentil converts." In his Commentarie upon the epistle to the Romans, which we now have in a Latin version only, he says, upon ch. xvi. 21. "Some (l) say, Lucius is Lucas the Evangelift, as indeed it is not uncommon to write "names sometimes according to the original form, sometimes according "to the Greek or Roman termination." Lucius, mentioned in that text of the epistle to the Romans, must have been a Jew. Nevertheles, as Origen assures us, some thought him to be Luke the Evangelist. The fame observation we saw in (m) Sedulius, who wrote a Commentarie upon St. Paul's epistles, collected out of Origen, and others.

Eusebius

ab eis didicerat, tradidit nobis, sicut ipsa testatur dicens: Quemadmodum tradiderunt nobis qui ab initio contemplatores et ministri fuerunt verbi. Adv.
H. l. 3. cap. 14. n. 2.

(f) Vol. ii. p. 475.

(g) Vol. ii. p. 587. 588.

(b) P. 581.

(i) P. 587.

(k) Vol. iii. p. 235.

(l) Sed et Lucium quidam perhibent esse Lucam Evangelistam, qui Evangel-gelium scriptit, pro eo quod folvent nomina interdum fecundum patriam de-

632. Bofl. 1571.

(m) Vol. xi. p. 182.

Vol. II.
Eusebius of Caesarea, as transcribed formerly, speaking of St. Paul's fellow-laborers, says: "And (n) Luke, who was of Antioch, and by profession a Physician, for the most part a companion of Paul, who had likewise more than a slight acquaintance with the rest of the Apostles, has left us in two books, divinely inspired, evidences of the art of healing souls, which he had learned from them. One of these is the Gospel, which he professed to have writ, as they delivered it to him, who from the beginning were eye-witnesses and ministers of the word: with all whom, he says likewise, he had been perfectly acquainted from the very first. The other is the Acts of the Apostles, which he composed now, not from what he had received by the report of others, but from what he had seen with his own eyes."

And in another place, cited (o) also formerly, he observes, "that (p) Luke had delivered in his Gospel a certain account of such things, as he had been well assured of by his intimate acquaintance and familiarity with Paul, and his conversation with the other Apostles."

From all which, I think, it appears, that Eusebe did not take Luke for a disciple of Christ, but of Apostles only.

In the Synopis ascribed to Athanasius it is said, "that (q) the Gospel of Luke was dictated by the Apostle Paul, and writ and published by the blessed Apostle and Physician Luke."

The author of the Dialogue against the Marcionites says, "that (r) Mark and Luke were disciples of Christ, and of the number of the Seventy."

Epiphanius (s) speaks to the like purpose.

Gregorie Nazianzen says, "that (t) Luke wrote for the Greeks." or in Achaia.

Gregorie Nyffen says, "that (u) Luke was as much a Physician for the soul, as for the body," taking him to be the same, that is mentioned Col. iv. 14.

In the catalogue of Ebedjose it is said, "that (x) Luke taught and wrote at Alexandria, in the Greek language."

The Author of the Commentarie upon St. Paul's thirteen epistles seems to have doubted, whether (y) the Evangelist Luke be the person intended Col. iv. 14.

Jerome agrees very much with Eusebe, already transcribed. Nevertheless I shall put down here somewhat largely what he says. "Luke (z) a Physician of Antioch, not unskilful in the Greek language, a disciple of the Apostle Paul, and the constant companion of his travels, wrote a Gospel—and another excellent volume, entitled the Acts of the Apostles. . . . It is supposed, that Luke did not learn his Gospel from the Apostle Paul only, who had not conversed with the Lord in the flesh, but also from other Apostles. Which likewise he owns at the beginning

(n) Vol. viii. p. 103. 104. (o) P. 95.
(p) . . . Τὸν ἀσφαλῆ λόγον ὅν ἀντίς Ἰκανόν τὴν ἀληθίναν καταλήψειν, ἐν τῇ ἀμα παία διανοούσιν τῷ διατριβῇ, κῇ τὰ τῶν λοιπῶν ἀποστόλων διαλογίας ἀφιείμασιν, διὰ τῷ ἑκά τέκλιναι ἰναγγελίας. H. E. l. 3. c. 24. p. 96. c.
(q) Vol. viii. p. 250. (r) P. 255. (s) P. 306.
(t) Vol. ix. p. 133. (u) P. 156. (x) P. 217.
beginning of his volume, saying: Even as they delivered them unto us,) who from the beginning were eye-witnesses and ministers of the word.
Therefore he wrote the Gospel from the information of others. But the Acts he composed from his own knowledge."
In the prologue to his Commentarie upon St. Matthew he says: "The
(a) third Evangelist is Luke, the Phyfician, a Syrian of Antioch, who was a disciple of the Apostle Paul, and published his Gospel in the countrieys of Achaia and Bæotia."
He oberserves elsewhere, "that (b) some faid, Luke had been a profelyte to Judaim, before his conversion to Christianity." He speaks of St.
Luke in many other places, which I need not now take notice of.
Augustin fays, "that (c) two of the Evangelists, Matthew and John, were Apostles. Mark and Luke disciples of Apostles." Chryfostom in the Synoptis, probably his, fays: "Two (d) of the Gofpels were writ by John and Matthew, Chrifl's disciples, the other two by Luke and Mark, of whom one was disciple of Peter, the other of Paul.
The former converfed with Chrift, and were eye-witnesses, of what they wrote. The other two wrote what they had received from eyewitnesses." And to the like purpofe in (e) his firft homilie upon St.
Matthew. Again he fays: "Luke (f) had the fluence of Paul, Mark concipenelle of Peter, both learning of their masters." And upon Col.
iv. 14. he fays: This (g) is the Evangelift.
Upon Col. iv. 14. Theodoret fays, "that (h) perfon wrote the divine Gofpel, and the historie of the Acts." He fays the fame upon (i)
2 Tim. iv. 11.
Paulinus (m) celebrates Luke, as having been firft a Phyfician of the body, then of the foul.
Here I would refer to the Author of Quæftiones et Responfiones, probably writ in the fifth centurie, who (n) reckons both the Evangellifts, writers of the genealogies, that is, Matthew and Luke, to have been Hebrews.
According to Euthalius (o) Luke was a disciple of Paul, and a Phyfician of Antioch.
Ifidore of Seville, fays: "of (p) the four Evangelists, the firft and laft relate what they had heard Chrift fay, or had feen him perform. The other two, placed between them, relate thofe things, which they had learned from Apostles. Matthew wrote his Gofpel firft in Judea.
Then Mark in Italie, Luke, the third, in Achaia, John the laft, in Asia." In another place he fays: "Of (q) all the Evangelists Luke, the third in order, is reckoned to have been the moft skilful in the Greek tongue. For he was a Phyfician, and wrote his Gofpel in "Greece."

(a) P. 83. 84.
(b) P. 97.
(c) P. 227. 228.
(d) P. 312.
(e) P. 314. 316. And see p. 325.
(f) P. 322.
(b) See Vol. xi. note (d).
(m) Vol. xi. p. 44.
(n) See Vol. i. p. 263.
(o) Vol. xi. p. 211.
(p) P. 367.
(q) P. 372.
In Theophylact are these things. In his preface to St. Matthew’s Gospel he says, “that (r) there are four Evangelists, two of which, Matthew and John, were of the choir of the twelve Apostles; the other two, Mark and Luke, were of the number of the Seventy. Mark was a disciple and companion of Peter, Luke of Paul. . . . Luke wrote fifteen years after Christ’s ascension.” In the preface to his Commentary upon St. Luke he says, “that (s) from that introduction it appears, “Luke was not from the beginning a disciple, but only afterwards. For “others were disciples from the beginning as Peter, and the sons of Zebedee, who delivered to him the things which they had seen or heard.” Upon which some remarks were made by us in the place referred to. In his comment upon the historie of the two disciples, whom Jesus met in the way to Emmaus, one of whom is said to be Cleophas. Luke xxiv. 18. Theophylact says: “Some (t) have thought the other to be Luke the Evangelist, who out of modestie declined to mention himself.” In his preface to the Acts Theophylact says: “The (u) writer is Luke, native of Antioch, by profession a Physician.

Euthymius says: “Luke (x) was a native of Antioch, and a Physician. He was a hearer of Christ, and, as some say, one of his seventy disciples, as well as Mark. He was afterwards very intimate with Paul. He wrote his Gospel, with Paul’s permission, fifteen years after our Lord’s ascension.”

So Euthymius. But I should think, that very few, who supposed Luke to have been a native of Antioch, could likewise reckon him a hearer of Jesus Christ. But Euthymius, as it seems, puts together every thing he had heard or read, without judgement or discrimination.

What Nicephorus Callistus says, is, briefly, to this purpose. “Two (y) only of the Twelve, Matthew and John left memoirs of our Lord’s life on earth; and two of the Seventy, Mark and Luke . . . Matthew wrote about fifteen years after our Saviour’s ascension. Long after that Mark and Luke published their Gospels by the direction of Peter and Paul. The same Luke composed also the book of the Acts of the Apostles.”

To these authors I now add Eutychius, Patriarch of Alexandria, in the tenth century, who says: “In (z) the time of the same Emperor, (that is, Nero,) Luke wrote his Gospel in Greek to a noble and wise man of the Romans, whose name was Theophilus: to whom also he wrote the Acts, or the historie of the Disciples. The Evangelist Luke was a companion of the Apostle Paul, going with him where-ever he went. For which reason the Apostle Paul in one of his epistles says: “Luke, the Physician, salutes you.”

III. Having

(r) P. 419, 420.  (s) P. 422.  (t) P. 423.
(u) P. 426.  (x) P. 437.  (y) P. 442.
III. Having thus recited the testimonies of all these writers concerning the Evangelist Luke, I shall now make some remarks.

1. We hence perceive, that the notion, that St. Luke was a Painter, is without foundation, no notice having been taken of it in these ancient writers. Indeed this is said by one of our (a) authors, Nicephorus Calliopius, in the fourteenth century, from whom a passage was quoted in the way of a summarié conclusion. But we do not rely upon him for any thing not confirmed by other writers, more ancient, and of better credit. Nor is this account received by (b) Tillemont, or (c) Du Pin, but rejected by them, as altogether fabulous, especially the later: though our Dr. Cave (d) was somewhat inclined to admit one testimonie to this affair, whilst he rejected the rest. For a farther account of St. Luke's pretended pictures of the Virgin Marie I refer to (e) Mr. Bow er.

2. We learn also, what judgement ought to be formed of the account given of St. Luke by (f) Hugo Grotius, and (g) J. J. Wetthein: which is, that he was a Syrian, and a slave, either at Rome, or in Greece: and that having obtained his freedom, he returned to his native place, Antioch: where he became a Jewish Profelyte, and then a Christian. Which

(c) Nicephore et les nouveaux Grecs le font Peintre. Et il y a en differens endroits des images de la Vierge, qu'on donne pour l'ouvrage de S. Luc. Ce sont des fictions, qui n'ont ni verité ni apparence. Du Pin Diff. l. 2. tb. 2. §. 5.
(d) Of more authority with me would be an ancient inscription, found in a vault near the church of S. Mary in via lata at Rome, supposed to be the place, where S. Paul dwelt: wherein mention is made of a picture of the B. Virgin. Una ex vii. a B. Luca depictis: One of the seven painted by St. Luke. Cave's Lives of the Apol's, in English, p. 222.
(f) Noltro autem nomen quidem Romanum fuiffe arbitrór, sed aliquanto longius. ... Quare et Lucas, si quid video, contra tum eft ex Romano nomine, quod suipicor fuiffe Lucillium. Nam ea gens tum Romæ florebât. ... Erat nóter hic Syrus, ut veteres consentirent, et medicinam fecerí. ... Syria autem multos Romanis fervos exhibebat. Et medicina, ut ex Plinio acque aliií dicitur, munus erat servile. Manumíss autem nomen patroni induebat, ut Comedíarum scriptor, Afer cum esset, dicit esse a patrono Terentio Terentíus. ... Ita hic a Lucillio Lucillius, et contracte Lucas. Credibiliter eft, cum Romae medicinam factísset aliquidinti, acceptà libertate, redíisse in patriam. &c. Grot. Pr. in S. Lucam.
(g) Exercuísse medicinam Paulus ad Colósfenses tuestatur. Eufebius autem et Hieronymus addunt fuiffe natione Syrum Antiochenum. ... Interpretus porro conjetura probablem, tum ex nomine, tum ex arte quam profitebatur, colligunt, fuiffe servum manumíss. Obseruant enim primo, nomen ejus in compendium fuiffe redactum, ut pro Lucillio vel Lucano vocaretur Lucas. ... Obseruant secundo, fervos et praecipue Syros medicinam factísse. ... Quod vero quidam exístimant, eum Romæ servíss, et a domino, qui ipsum manu- mísset, nomine Lucam appellatum fuiffe, non fatis certum videtur. Nam præter familiam Lucilliam, quæ Romana fuit, etiam Græcis illud nomen fuit imposítum, ut ex Anthologia constat. Weisb. Pr. ad Luc. T. i. p. 643.
those learned interpreters endeavor to make out in a somewhat different manner. But neither has alleged any ancient writer, saying, that the Evangelist Luke was once a slave, and afterwards became a free man. Some slaves indeed were skilful in the art of medicine, and practised it in the families of their Roman masters. But does it follow, that because Luke was a Phyician, that he was also a slave? This therefore being entirely deftitute of foundation in antiquity must be esteemed the fiction of some learned critic, who was much delighted with his own ingenious speculations.

3. The account given of this Evangelist by Eusebe, and Jerome after him, that he was a Syrian, and native of Antioch, may be justly suspected.

We do not find it in Irenæus, nor Clement of Alexandria, nor Tertullian, nor Origen, nor in any other writer before Eusebe. Probably, therefore, it is not founded in any general, or well attested tradition: but was the invention of some conjectural critic, who having first imagined, out of his own head, that Luke was originally a Gentil, at length determined, that he was converted by Paul at Antioch. But all this was taken up without any good ground, or sufficient authority. And Luke may have been a believer, before either Paul or Barnabas went to Antioch. The same Account is in Jerome. But he only follows Eusebe. He does not seem to have had any information about it from any others. Which is an argument, that there was not any early tradition to this purpose.

This storie, I say, is in Eusebe, and Jerome, and some others, after them, but not in all succeeding writers. Some of the ancients, as Epiphanius, and others, supposèd Luke to have been one of Christ's seventy disciples. Which is inconsistent with his being a native of Antioch. If any did not see this inconsistence, and allowed both, it must have been owing to want of due attention and consideration. And the supposition, made by some, that Luke was one of the Seventy, shews, that there was no prevailing, and well attested tradition, that he was a native of Antioch. For if there had been any such tradition, it is not easie to conceive, how any should have held the opinion, that he was one of the Seventy.

It was formerly observed, that (b) Chrysostom no where says in his remaining works, that Luke was of Antioch. Indeed, we (i) have loft one of his homilies upon the title and begining of the Acts of the Apostles. Nevertheless it seems, that in some of his many homilies, still remaining upon that book, or elsewhere, we should have seen this particular, if it had been known to him. He takes notice, that (k) there might be seen in his time the house, in which Paul dwellèd at Antioch. And he often speaks of the prerogatives of that city, in his homilies preached there. Methinks, this also should have been mentioned as one: that Luke, whom, (as is well known,) he often celebrates, was a native of that city. If this had been then known, or generally believed, it is reasonable to expect, that it should have been frequently mentioned by Chrysostom, a native and Prebyter of Antioch, who shined there as a Preacher twelve years.

(b) Vol. x. p. 328. (i) P. 323. (k) P. 371.
years. This has disposed me to think, that in his time there was not at Antioch any prevailing tradition to this purpose.

Cave says, it (l) is likely, that Luke was converted by Paul at Antioch. Mill (m) says the same, rather more positively. Which may now be the opinion of many. I have guessed, that it might be the opinion of the person, who first gave rife to the account, that Luke was a Syrian, of Antioch, mentioned in Eusebe. But I do not remember, that this is expressly laid by any of the ancient writers, out of whom I have made so large collections in the preceding volumes. And the thing is altogether unlikely. If Luke had been a Gentil, converted by Paul, he would have been always uncircumcised, and unfit to accompany Paul, as he did. For the Apostle would not have allowed the Greeks, or Gentils, of Antioch, or any other place, to receive that rite. Nor are there in the Acts, or Paul’s epistles, any hints, that Luke was his convert. Whereas, if he had been fo, there (c) would have appeared some tokens of it in the affectionate expressions of Paul toward him, on the one hand, or in the respectful and grateful expressions of Luke toward Paul, on the other hand.

4. It has been reckon’d doubtful by divers learned men, whether the Evangelist Luke was a Physician.

This particular is different from the fore-going. Nor has it any connexion with it. Luke may have been of Antioch, and not a Physician. He may have been a Physician, and not of Antioch. The question is, whether Luke, the beloved Physician, mentioned by St. Paul Col. iv. 14. be the Evangelist. Divers of the ancients, as we have seen, have supposed him there intended. Chrysostom’s expressions are these: “This (n) is the Evangelist. But he does not diminish him by naming him so late. He extols him, as he does Epaphras. It is likely, that there were others called by that name.” This last particular, perhaps, may deserve to be taken notice of. He affirms, that this is the Evangelist. But he supposed, that there were others of the same name.

That distinguishing character, beloved Physician, not given to the Apostle’s companion, and fellow laborer, in any other epistle, has induced divers learned and inquisitive moderns, to doubt, whether one and the

(m) Scriptor operi huic fusciendo, § quis unquam, summe idoneus: utpote qui ab ipso tempore conversionis, que contigit circa annum aere vulgaris XLI. Ipsum enim Iaevnrae iiftis, qui magno numero Antiochiae convertunt, [At. xi. 20.] omnino adnumerarim. Prom. n. 112.

(c) This thought occurred to Dr. Whitby, who in his preface to St. Luke’s Gospel speaks to this purpose: “We are told, that Luke was converted by Paul at Thessalon. Answer. But this we have only from Nicephorus. And it is the less credible, not only because it comes to us so late: but also because it appears not from any credible author, that St. Paul ever was there. It is more probable from the silence of St. Luke, and St. Paul, who never calleth him his son, that he was a Christian, or a believer, long before.”

(n) Ουτος ισιος ει διαγεγερλης . . εικος ειναι κε αλλας καλομενος τοι δοματι τοτη. Chry. in Col. iv. hom. 12, T. xi. p. 412.
the same person is intended. Among these are (o) Calvin, (p) Sam. Bajnagy, (q) Dr. Heumann, whose observations and arguments I transcribe below. On the other hand (r) Estius, and (s) Mr. Jones, strongly argue, that the same Luke is here intended, who is mentioned by St. Paul in some other epistles, even our Evangelist.

Upon the whole, it must be acknowledged, that this distinguishing character, beloved Physician, has occasioned a difficulty. Nevertheless, I would hope, that it is not insuperable. It is allowed, that in all other places of St. Paul's epistles by Luke is intended the Evangelist. We know from the book of the Acts, that Luke, the writer of it, went with Paul to Rome, and stayed with him to the end of his captivity there. Nor is there any reason to surmise, that at the time of writing this epistle he might be absent from the Apostle upon some special occasion. For he joyns in the salutations in the epistle to Philemon of Coloss, sent at the same time with this epistle to the Colossians. Where also he is stiled a fellow-laborer. Philem. ver. 24. So that I cannot but think it probable, that Luke, the Evangelist, was by profession a Physician.

5. St. Luke was a Jew by birth, at least by religion.

None of the writers, out of whom we have made collections, call him a Gentil. Some, in Jerome's time, whose names we do not know, said, Luke had been a Jewish Proselyte, that is, had been converted from Gentilism to Judaism, and afterwards became a Christian. But none, that I remember, expressly say, that he was converted from Gentilism to to Christianity. Unless we should make an exception for Nicephorus Calli\(\text{i}\)s, who in one place says so. But he is too late, and of too little credit, to be much regarded: especially, if he is singular. All our writers, who speak of Luke, as a companion and disciple of Apostles, must have supposed him to be a Jew. And some have said, that he was one of the Seventy, as we have seen.

(s) See Mr. Jones's New and Full Method, Vol. 3. p. 103. 104.

That Luke was a Jew by birth, or at least by religion, may be argued from his being a constant companion of Paul in many places, particularly, at Jerusalem. If Luke had been an uncircumcised Gentile, some exceptions would have been made to him. Nevertheless nothing of that kind appears either in St. Paul's Epistles, or in the Acts. Another thing leading to this supposition is his (1) following the Jewish computations of times: such as the Passover, Pentecost, the Fast. Of all which instances may be seen in Acts xii. 3. xx. 6. and 16. xxvii. 9.

Here it will be objected, that Luke the Physician, mentioned Col. iv. 14. must have been a Gentile, because at ver. 10. 11. the Apostle had mentioned all those of the circumcision, who were his fellow-workers, and had been a comfort to him. To which I answer. It is not certain, that Luke, the Evangelist, is the beloved Physician, there spoken of. We just now saw the reasons of doubting about it. But there is another solution. St. Paul (u) needs not to be understood to speak absolutely. There might be several exceptions to that proposition. Timothy was one, who Joins with the Apostle in sending the epistle. But he and Luke were so well known to all, as faithful to the Apostle, that they needed not to be there mentioned. And Luke and Demas follow afterwards, somewhat lower, nearer the end of the epistle, very properly. ver. 14. Luke, the beloved Physician, and Demas greet you. And I should be unwilling from this text, and the coherence, to conclude, that Demas was a Gentile. Says the Apostle: Philem. ver. 24. There salute thee Marcus, Aristarchus, Demas, Lucas, my fellow-laborers. The two first named were certainly Jews. I suppose, the other two were so likewise. Salutations from believers, of the Jewish People, would be very acceptable and encouraging to Gentile converts.

St. Luke says Acts i. 19. insomuch as that field was called in their proper tongue Acedama. Whence some may argue, that he was not a Jew. But it might be observed, that none of the Evangelists, when they speak of the Jews, say any thing, to denote they were of that people. Says St. Matthew ch. xxxviii. 15. And this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day. Mark vii. 3. For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, except they wash their hands, eat not. John i. 9. The Jews sent Priests and Levites from Jerusalem. ch. v. 1. After this there was a feast of the Jews. See also ch. xix. 40. 42. And does not St. Paul say 1 Thes.

(1) Quis vero cum veri specie aliqua Lucam Evangelifam unum ex Judaeis fuiffe neget? Lucam qui in designandis temporibus Judaeorum disciplinam adhiberet, Pentecosten biclicet, Jejunium, tertiam noctis vigiliam. Quae omnia ex Judaico more petuntur. Bafnag. An. 60. n. xxxiii.

(u) Adde, quod iste sermo, bi soli, non est ita rigide accipiendus, ut absolute exclutat omnes alios, sed benigne fensu: Hi fere soli sunt adjutores.
That this Evangelist was a Jew, is the opinion of many learned and judicious moderns: particularly, Mr. S. Basnage, whom I have cited at note (t) and F. A. Fabricius, who (x) likewise is clearly of the same opinion. Indeed, I think, it ought not to be questioned.

6. Luke, the Evangelist, was, probably, an early Jewish believer, soon after Christ's ascension, if not a hearer of Christ, and one of the seventy disciples.

Our most ancient writers, as we have seen, speak of Luke as a disciple of the Apostles. Some have reckoned him one of the Seventy, others have thought him to be Lucius, mentioned by St. Paul in the epistle to the Romans, and others have supposed, that he was one of the two disciples that met Jesus in the way to Emmaus.

The large accounts, which Luke has given in the book of the Acts of several, below the rank of Apostles, has made me think, that he was one of the same rank, and possibly one of them. There are three instances of this kind. The first is Stephen, one of the seven Deacons, who, as we learn, was full of faith and power, and did great wonders and miracles among the people: against whom there arose a strong opposition, so that he was the very first Martyr for Christ and his doctrine, and of whom St. Luke has recorded a long discourse before the Jewish Council. ch. vii. The second is Philip, another of the Seven, of whom St. Luke writes, that he first preached Christ to the Samaritans. ch. viii. 5...8. so that the people with one accord gave heed to those things, which Philip spake, hearing, and seeing the miracles which he did, and what follows. The same Philip afterwards, having first explained the scriptures to him, and brought him to sincere faith in Jesus as the Christ, baptized the Chamberlain and Treasurer of the Queen of Ethiopia, a Jewish profelyte, and a man of great distinction. ver. 26...40. The third instance of this kind is that of the men of Cyprus and Cyrene, who travelled as far as Phenice, Cyprus, and Antioch, professing the word to Jews only. Who soon after their coming to Antioch, spake unto the Greeks, preaching the Lord Jesus. And the hand of the Lord was with them. And a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord. ch. xi. 19...21. These were the men, who first preached to Gentils out of Judea: as Peter was the first, who preached to Gentils at the house of Cornelius in Cesaræa. ch. x. and not long before them. We have, as it seems, the names of three of those men. ch. xiii. 1. Simeon, called Niger, Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen. The second person, here named, may be our Evangelist.

A like argument may be formed in favour of St. Luke's having been one of Christ's seventy disciples, in that he, and he only of all the Evangelists, gelifts, has inserted in his Gospel an account of the commission, which Christ gave unto them. ch. x. 1... 20.
And indeed some learned men of later times, as well as formerly, have been of opinion, that Luke was one of the Seventy.
Among these is our Dr. Whitby, who (b) reckoned both Mark and Luke to have been of that number.
J. A. Fabricius (c) was inclined to be of the same opinion. And in favour of it refers to the passages of Adamantius and Epiphanius, before taken notice of by us. This likewise was the sentiment of (d) Mr. Basnage.
Dr. C. A. Heumann has lately published a dissertation concerning Christ’s Seventy Disciples, containing many curious observations. And he supposeth, that (*) these several following were of that number. Matthias, chosen in the room of the traitor, Joseph, called Barfus, surnamed Justus, and probably, the seven Deacons, or however, some of them, and the four teachers and Prophets of Antioch, Barnabas, Simeon called Niger, Lucius of Cyrene, whom he thinks to be our Luke the Evangelist, and Manaen. Acts xiii. 1.
His argument is to this purpoze. We have not in the Gospels the names of these Disciples. Nor did Christ form a college or companie of them, as he did of the Twelve, because it was a temporarie office, which subsisted for a short time only. They were but once sent forth. And when they were returned, their commissioun was at an end. Nevertheless they hereby became qualified for public service. And it may be reckoned very probable, that if an opportunity was afforded, they would be very willing, after Christ’s ascension, to exert themselves in his cause. And it is very likely, that some of these Seventy were chosen, and employed by the Apostles, as men, who had been already exercised in the service of the gospel, and were thereby fitted for farther usefulnesse.
So that learned writer. And it must be acknowledged, that this is a specious argument. But it is rather founded in an ingenious speculation, than in the authority of testimonie. Which, in this case, would be more valuable.
Indeed Epiphanius, beside the places (e) formerly alleged, where he says, Mark and Luke were of the Seventy, has another: where (f) he mentions a great many, who were said to be of that number: as the seven deacons, all whom he mentions by name, and also Matthias, Mark, Luke, Justus, Barnabas, Apelles, Rufus, Niger. And therefore, we cannot

(b) See his Preface to St. Luke’s Gospel.
(d) Ann. 60. num. xxviii.
(*) Dissertatio de Septuaginta Christi Legatis, ap. Nov. Syllog. Dissertat. Part. i. p. 120... 154.
(e) Haer. Ll. num. vi. xi.
(f) H. 20. num. iv.
not deny, that in the time of Epiphanius there were some, who entertained an opinion, that all these were of Christ’s seventy Disciples. Nevertheless we do not find it in Irenaeus, or Clement of Alexandria, or Origen, or any others of the highest antiquity, and best credit: nor in Eusebe, or Jerome, that I remember, who were acquainted with the writings of those ancient authors, and many others, which are not come to us. Eusebe has a chapter concerning the Disciples of our Saviour. He says, the names of Christ’s twelve Apostles were well known: but (g) there was no where any catalogue of the Seventy. However, he mentions Barnabas, Matthias, and the disciple put up with him, and one or two more, who were said to be of the Seventy. But he takes not here any notice of Mark, or Luke, or of any of the seven Deacons.

Matthias and Barnabas certainly were such men, as are described Acts i. 21. 22. And they may have been of the Seventy. But we cannot be certain, because we have not been assured of it by any accounts, that demand full assurance. Some of the seven Deacons may have been of the Seventy, as Stephen and Philip. But we do not know, that they were. It is very probable, that all those Deacons were not of the Seventy, particularly, Nicholas a proselyte, of Antioch. If Luke, the Evangelist, be the same as Lucius, of Cyrene, there ariseth a strong objection against his having been one of the Seventy. Simeon called Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, mentioned Acts xiii. 1. and the men of Cyprus and Cyrene, (of whom those two, just mentioned, were a part:) were early believers, after Christ’s ascension, and they may have heard and seen the Lord in person. But they cannot be well supposed to have been of the Seventy. Christ’s twelve Apostles were of Galilee. It is likely, that the Seventy also were of the same country, or near it. Christ sent them forth from him, to go over the land of Israel, and to return to him in a short time, where he should be. And his usual residence was in Galilee. It does not appear to me at all probable, that our Lord put into that commissione any men, who were born, and usually resided abroad, in other countries, out of the land of Israel.

Hitherto, then, we have not any full proof, that our Evangelist was one of the Seventy. Let us proceed.

St. Luke ch. xxiv. 13...34. relates how two disciples met Jesus after his resurrection, as they were going to Emmaus. And he says, that the name of one of them was Cleophas. Theophylact in his comment upon this place, as (b) formerly shewn, obserres: “Some (i) say, that one of these two was Luke himself: but that the Evangelist concealed his own name.” Nicephorus Callistii (k) in one place, makes not doubt, that Luke was the other disciple not named. It is likely, that he had met with it in more ancient writers. Sam. Basinge (l) readily declares himself of the

---

(g) Tων δὲ εὐθυμικῶν μαθητῶν κατάλογος μὲν ἡδείς ἡθαμὴ φίλιτα. H. E. l. i. c. 12.

(b) Vol. xi. p. 423.

(i) Τις τούτων τῶν δύο αὐτῶν τῶν λοικαί εἶναι φαντάσματα ἑπάνω τῆς αἰσχρελίσης. Theoph. in Luc. cap. xxiv. p. 539.

(k) Τοῖς δὲ λεκοῖς καὶ κλάσμαι τὴν ὁδόν περιέχει γνωρίζεται, καθὼς ἢσπέραν εἰς τὸ ποταμόν αὐτοῖς, πώς κατακληθήσεται. Niceph. l. i. c. 34. p. 117.

(l) Nulla sancit magis idonea ratio observatur animo, cur Cleopha, non alterius, Lucas meminerit: quomodo Ioannes, ubi de se mentionem agitavit, nomen
the same opinion. Indeed, I think, it has a great appearance of probability. It is much more likely, than the tradition, or interpretation in Epiphanius, that (m) it was Nathanael. The same Bajnage says that if Nathanael had been the other, St. Luke would have named him.

St. Mark ch. xvi. 12. 13. has a like account, but briefer, of two, to whom Christ appeared, as they were walking into the country. He does not name either of them. Gratius (n) allows, that Mark's and Luke's histories are of the same persons. Both the Evangelists speak of these as, two of them. They were not of the Twelve, but yet they were of their company, such as had been with Jesus: as is allowed by (o) Gratius, and (p) Beza. Nevertheless, they say, that (q) Luke is not the other. He is excluded, as they say, by the tenour of his introductions both to his Gospel, and the Acts. Their reasonings will be considered presently.

However, supposing Luke to be the person here intended, I do not think, that he is thereby shewn to be one of the Seventy. Cleophas and the other were disciples of Christ, and eye-witnesses. But it does not therefore follow, that they were of the number of the Seventy.

We proceed. Among the Salutations in the epistle to the Romans are these. ch. xvi. 20. Timothee my work-fellow, and Lucius, and Jason, and Sophater, my kinsmen, salute you. All these were Jewish believers, and, the three last mentioned, as it seems, were the Apostle's relations. That by Lucius some supposed the Evangelist Luke to be intended, we have been informed by so ancient a writer, as Origen. And it is very likely, that St. Luke's name was writ differently: Lucas, Lucius, and Lucanus. There is the more reason to think, that the Evangelist is here intended, because he must have been with the Apostle at the time of writing the epistle to the Romans. Says Mr. Tillemont: "Many (r) believe, that St. Luke is he, whom St. Paul in his epistle to the Romans calls nomen dissimulat suum. Si de grege Apostolorum fuissent, aut virorum multa laude in Evangelio celebratorum, uti Nathanael, quod Epiphanio visum, iterum atque iterum dicemus, tam ejus quam Cleopae nomen fecernarisset. Ann. 33. num. C. L.

(m) See vol. viii. p. 316.
(n) Quare immerito Enthymius hic aliam putat historiam indicari, quam cem, quae a Luca copiose describitur. Grot. ad Marc. xvi. 12.
(o) ... dove in aoutow.] tov metat inos xipropow, ut supra dixit ver. 10. Nam hoc nomine etiam alii extra xii. cenentur, praecipue qui de numero erant illorum septuaginta. Grot. ad Marc. xvi. 11.
(q) Alterum suisse hunc nostrum Lucam, quidam ex veteribus arbitrantur, quorum opinio refellitur ex præfatione Actis Apostolorum præposita. Bez. ad Luc. xxiv. 18.

(r) Mem, Ec. Tom. 2. S. Luc.
"calls Lucius, making his name a little more Latin. And it is the more "likely, inasmuch as the Acts assure us, that St. Luke was then with St. "Paul. If that be so, he was related to this Apostle." Gratus, who suppos'd our Evangelist to have been of Antioch, taking notice of the above-mentioned observation of Origen, says, that (s) Lucius, in Rom. xvi. is the same, as Lucius of Cyrene, mentioned Acts xiii. 1.

Fabricius (t) esteemed it somewhat probable, that Lucius is the Evangelist.

Dr. Heumann supposes (u) this Lucius to be St. Luke, and the same as Lucius of Cyrene, whom (x) he computes to be one of the seventy Disciples, as before seen.

Mr. Bajnage likewise argues very strongly, that (y) Lucius is our Evangelist.

Indeed this opinion cannot be well said to be deftitute of probability: since there is a good deal of reason to think, that Luke was in the Apostle's companion, when he wrote the epistle to the Romans. And if Lucius be not he, no mention is made of him. Which is very unlikely.

If this be our Evangelist, we hence learn, that he was a Jew, and related to the Apostle. And if this be Lucius of Cyrene, we know his character, and, in part, his historie, from Acts xi. 19... 21. and xiii. 1... 4. He was an early Jewish believer after Christ's ascension, and together with others was very serviceable in early preaching the gospel to Jews and Gentils out of Judea. And, once more, if the other, who accompanied companied Cleophas in the way to Emmaus, be Luke the Evangelist, he was a disciple and eye-witnesse of Jesus Christ. But I do not say, one of the Seventy.

(y) Lucam Evangelifam Paulo confanguineum fuiffe verisimilitudinis multum habet. Lucium fane, cujus nomine Romanos falent Apostolus, ex ipfius cognatis unus erat. Sunt vero non pertenus conjecture, quibus adducamur ad exiftimandum unum eundemque virum cum Luca Lucium esse. Quæ antiqua fane fententia fuit, cujus meminit Origenes in Rom. xvi... Silam quidem Paulus ipse Silvanum vocat. Aderat etiam Paulo comes Lucas, cum misfa eft ad Romanos epiftola, quem infalutatos præteriiffe, prorfus fit incredibile: quod tamen factum fuiret, fit Lucius eft a Luca diversus. Baf. ann. 60. n. xxxiiii.

Now we come to consider the objection of Beza, Grutius, and divers others: who have supposed, that St. Luke, in the introduction to his Gospel, excludes himself from the number of eye-witneses. But though this has been a difficulty with many, there have been of late divers learned men, remarkable for inquisitiveness, and good judgement, who are not much moved by it. One of them is Dr. Whitby, in his preface to St. Luke's Gospel, already taken notice of by us. Another (z) Fabricius, a third (a) Basnage, the fourth Heumann: who in his forecited Differmentation observes, that (b) St. Luke's introduction imports no more, than that he was not an eye-witnesse from the beginning, nor an Apostle. But he may have been for some while a follower of Christ very consistently with what he there writes. And, probably, he was so. But he very fitly puts the credit and authority of his historie upon the testimonie of the Apostles.

I shall likewise transcribe below a passage of Petavius (c) from his Animad-

(a) Ann. 60. num. xxviii.

(b) Repugnant quidem videri poftif ipfe Lucas cap. i. 2. scribens, fe quae tradat accipiffe α tois απι α̂ρχε̂ς αυ̂τοντα. Verum non fe negat fuiffe αυ̂τοντα, qui negat, fe αυ̂τοντα απι α̂ρχε̂ς fuiffe. Concedimus itaque, non ab initio statim, uti Apostolos, quos utpeltas to λεγε appellat, interfuiffe rebus a Christo gefitis Lucam. Sed aliquo jam tempore functo suo munere Meffie fe appliciffe Lucam, et postea semper in ejus comitatu fuiffe, quo minus credamus, hoc ipfius testimonium minime impedit. Accedit, quod modetifiæ erat, Apostolorum potius, quam fuum ipfius testimonium commendare, juberque lefiores, fi forte fibi credituri fint ægruis, fide habere Apostolis, fefibus nulli obnoxii exceptioni. Heum. Diff. ib. num. xx.

Animadversions upon Epiphanius, though it be somewhat long. I do it the rather, because he is an older author than any of those, hitherto cited in behalf of this interpretation. He is considering what Epiphanius says of Luke's being one of Christ's seventy disciples. The sum of what he advanceth is to this purpose: "He dares not affirm, that Luke "was a disciple of Christ, because many of the Fathers have thought "otherwise. But he says, there is nothing in St. Luke's introduction to "induce us to think, he was not a disciple of Christ, or that he had not "seen a large part of the things related by him: but rather the contrarie. "And he was willing to shew, that Epiphanius is not contradicted by St. "Luke himself."

7. St. Luke was for a good while a constant companion of St. Paul. But he was also acquainted with other Apostles.

Tertullian, and Chrysostom, as we have seen, call St. Paul Luke's Master. But they need not be understood to intend, that Luke learned nothing from other Apostles. So Irenaeus said: "Luke, the companion of Paul, put down in a book the Gospel that had been preached by Paul." But in another place he says: "That () Luke was a fellow-laborer of the Apostles, especially, of Paul." And in another place he calls Luke () "a follower and disciple of the Apostles." And Eusebius said: "Luke was for the most part a companion of Paul, but had also more than a slight acquaintance with the other Apostles." And Jerome says: "It was supposed, that Luke did not learn his Gospel from the Apostle "Paul only, who had not conversed with the Lord in the flesh, but also "from other Apostles. Which also he acknowledgeth at the beginning "of his volume, saying: Even as they delivered them unto us, who from the "beginning were eye-witnesses of the word."

That must be right, I think, because it is agreeable to the writer's own words in the introduction to his work. I always consider Paul as an eye-witness. But he was not an eye-witness from the beginning: nor a minister of the word, from the beginning. He must have had a distinct knowledge of all things concerning the Lord Jesus. Christianness, as has been often, and justly said, is founded in facts. In order to preach it, Paul must have had a knowledge of Christ's life, preaching, miracles, death, resurrection, and ascension. As he was not instructed by other Apostles in the doctrine preached by him, he must have had it from revelation. And I suppose, that a man, who, like Luke, often heard Paul preach, might have composed a Gospel, or history of Jesus Christ from Paul's sermons, preached in divers places, and to men of all characters. And the ancients seem to have supposed, that Luke had thereby great affinities for composing his Gospel. Which I do not deny. Nevertheless it seems fairly to be concluded from his own introduction, that he had consulted others also.

It might not be amisf, if I had room for such observations, to compare St. Luke's Gospel and the historical parts of St. Paul's Epistles, and (*) Quoniam non solum prosequutor, sed et cooperarius fuerit Apostolorum, maxime autem Pauli. Iren. l. 3. c. 14. n. 1. p. 201. b.

() Lucas autem sectator et discipulus Apostolorum. Ibid. cap. x. [al. xi.] in p. 189.
and also of his discourses recorded by Luke himself in the book of the Acts. It is reasonable to think, that wherever any disciples of Jesus preached the Christian Religion, they gave an account of the things concerning Christ. Wherever the Apostles, or others, preached, in order to induce faith in Jesus and his doctrine, their first discourses must have been historical. The reason of the thing leads us to this. And we are assured of it from their discourses, of which we have an account. We perceive this in the discourses of St. Peter at Jerusalem. Acts ii. 22. ... 36. iii. 12. ... 26. iv. 10. and at the house of Cornelius in Cesarea, x. 34. ... 43. from Paul’s discourses in the synagogue at Antioch in Pisidia. Ch. xiii. 23. ... 38. at Athens xvii. 31. at Corinthis. xix. 8. before the Governor Festus, and King Agrippa, ch. xxvi. and at Rome: though then many years had passed, since the ascension of Christ, and since his religion had begun to be preached, and propagated in the world. St. Luke’s general account of Paul there is thus: And Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him, preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ. xxviii. 30. 31. “That is, says (d) Grotius, his miracles, “doctrine, death, resurrection, and the mission of the Spirit: by which “things men were assured, that the heavenly kingdom was set up.” And this may have been the occasion of the frequent use of those expressions, preaching Christ, and preaching Jesus Christ, as equivalent to preaching the Christian Religion, or the doctrine of the Gospel.

I must own, that in the survey of St. Luke’s Gospel, and St. Paul’s discourses and epistles, I have not discerned any such special agreement, as to be induced to think, that one of them had copied the other.

St. Paul says, at Antioch in Pisidia Acts xiii. 23. Of this man’s seed has God raised unto Israel a Saviour, Jesus. And 2 Tim. ii. 8. Remember, that Jesus Christ, of the seed of David, was raised from the dead, according to my gospel. These things are agreeable to St. Luke’s Gospel. But they are also in St. Matthew’s. And must have been taught by all the Apostles, and all preachers of the gospel.

Acts xx. 35. And to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said: It is more blessed to give, than to receive. That saying of our Lord is not recorded by St. Luke in his Gospel, nor by any other of the Evangelists.

1 Cor. xv. 5. ... 7. And that he was seen of Cephas, then of the Twelve. After that, he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once. ... After that he was seen of James, then of all the Apostles. St. Luke’s account of our Saviour’s appearances after his resurrection are in ch. xxiv. and Acts i. 1. ... 12. And if they are observed, I suppose, that no remarkable agreement between Paul and Luke will be discerned, but rather the contrarie. The five hundred brethren, mentioned by St. Paul, probably, saw Jesus in Galilee: where, as in Matth. xxvi. 32. xxviii. 7. and Mark xvi. 7. he appointed to meet the disciples. But of this there is nothing in St. Luke. And all our Saviour’s appearances to the disciples, mentioned tioned by him, were at Jerusalem, or in it's neighborhood. Nor does Luke give any hint of that particular appearance to James, mentioned by St. Paul. Not now to add any thing farther.

However, I shall transcribe below (e) some observations of Mr. Wetstein, relating to this matter.

8. It may be reckoned probable, that St. Luke died a natural death: forasmuch as none of the most ancient writers, such as Clement of Alexandria, Ireneaus, Origen, Eusebius, Jerome, say any thing of his martyrdom. Gregorius Nazianzen, in (f) one of his orations, seems to put Luke among Martyrs. Nevertheless, as is well observed by (g) Tillemon, Elias Cretenfis, in the eighth centurie, famous for his Commentaries upon Gregorius, supposeth it certain, that (h) Luke did not dye a Martyr any more than John, the Apostle and Evangelist: but that after having suffered much in the cause of Christ, and the gospel, he returned in peace to the God of peace. Gaudentius, Bishop of Brefcia, about 387. observes, that (i) in his time it was generally said, that Luke and Andrew finished their course at Patrae in Achaia. He does not say, in the way of martyrdom. I do not perceive Paulinus, about the year 403. to (k) celebrate Luke, as a Martyr, but rather Nazarius, mentioned in the next verfe. If Martyr belongs to Luke, it may be understood in a general lenfe, as equivalent to Confessor, or a great sufferer for the gospel.

9. Cave says, that (l) Luke lived a single life, and died in the 84. year of his age, about the year of Christ 70. but of what death, is uncertain. And it is true, that Nicephorus, in the fourteenth centurie, says, that (m) Luke died in the 80. year of his age. And in some editions of Jerome's book of Illuftrious Men there is a paffage, near the end of the article of St. Luke, importing, that he lived 84. years in celibacie. But Martiany, the learned Benedictin editor of Jerome's works, says,

(e) Si Lucas vel Pauli hortatu, vel peculiaris Spiritus Sancti aflatus ad scribendum impulsum fuiflet, rem memoratu tam dignam... silentio neutiquam tranfiiffet. Quod vero quidam existimant, ex locis 2 Tim. ii. 8. et i. Cor. xv. 4. collatis cum Luc. x. 7. et xxiv. 34. probari, Lukeae, quod dictur, Evangelium ad Paulum potius auctorem eille referendum, nobis parum fit verofimile. Weiftein. ad Luc. cap. i. ver. 3. Tom. i. p. 644.

(f) Orat. 3. p. 76.

(g) St. Luc. Mem. Ec. T. 2.

(k) Quippe ne longe abeam, Joannes... et item Lucas hauquaquam interempti fuere, verum cum permultas propter Chriftum et ejus evangelium calamitates pertuliffent, in pace ad eum qui pacis Deus est, reversi sunt. El. Cr. Annot. p. 322. 323.

(i) Andreas et Lucas apud Patras, Achaia civitatem, confummati referuntur. Gaud. Serm. 17. op. Bib. PP. Tom. 5. p. 969. C.

(m) Oρνούκοντα ιτιω γενυμινε, άς νααιν. Niceph. 1. 2. c. 43.
fals, that (n) passage is not in any manuscripts. Nor does he know, whence that filly fiction was borrowed. Fabricius (o) confirms that account.

IV. There is no great difficulty in settling the time of St. Luke's writing his Gospel. The Acts of the Apostles were published in 63. or 64. and not long after his Gospel, as is generally allowed. Accordingly Dr. Mill (p) supposeth those books to have been two parts of one and the same volume, and to have been published in the year of Christ 64.

This argument was represented at length (q) formerly. The reader is referred to it, that I may not enlarge upon it in this place.

V. However, I cannot forbear to observe some marks Marks of Time in of time in the Gospel itself.

1. The occasion of writing it, as St. Luke assures us in the introduction, was, that many had already published narrations of these things. But it cannot be reasonably thought, that many should have writ histories of Jesus Christ presently after his ascension, nor indeed till many years after it.

2. There are several things in the Gospel, from which it may be fairly argued, that it was not writ, till after Peter and Paul, and perhaps other Apostles likewise, had preached to Gentils, and received them into the Church, without their embracing the peculiarities of the law of Moises.

3. In ch. ii. 10. the angel says to the shepherds near Bethlehem: I bring you good tidings of great joy to all people. At ver. 30...32. Simeon says, at the presentation of Jesus in the temple: Mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all people: a light to lighten the Gentils, and the glory of thy people Israel. In ch. iii. 8. says John the Baptist: God is able of these stones to raise up children to Abraham. And I might here refer to ch. i. 78. 79. I suppose, that when St. Luke recorded these things, he understood them. Which he could not do, till after the gospel had been freely and fully published among Gentils.

4. That St. Luke understood the spirituality of the doctrine of the gospel, may be concluded from the account, which he has given of our Lord's discourse, recorded ch. vi. 20...49. I might for this refer to ch. i. 74. 75. and other places.

5. Ch. vii. 9. When our Lord had heard the centurion's profession of faith, be marvelled at him, and said: I have not found so great faith, no not

(p) Voluminibus hujus D. Lucæ partem posteriorem, seu λόγον διατετάν quod attinet, librum dico Auctum Apostolorum, haud dubium est, quin is scriptus fuerit statim post λόγον πρῶτος, five Evangelium. Poleg. num. 121.

(q) See in his volume ch. iv. sec. iv.
not in Israel, In Matth. viii. 11, 12. is a farther enlargement. The like to which may be seen in Luke xiii. 28...30.
6. In ch. xiii. 6...9. is the parable of the fig-tree, spared one year more: representing the ruin of the Jewish church and people as near, if they did not speedily repent.
7. In ch. xi. 48...51. are predictions of the calamities coming upon the Jewish people. In ch. xiii. 34, 35. are our Lord's lamentations over the city of Jerusalem, in the view of the calamities coming upon it. See likewise xvii. 22...37, xix. 11...27, xx. 9...18, xxi. 5...11. and ver. 20...35. As St. Luke enlargeth so much in his accounts of these predictions, it may be argued, that the accomplishment was not far off, when he wrote.
8. In ch. xiv. 16...24. is the parable of a great supper. When they who were first invited, refused to come. Whereupon the invitations were enlarged, and made more general. And in the end he who made the supper declares, that they who were first bidden, should not taft of it: representing the call of the Gentils, and the general rejection of the Jews for their unbelief.
9. In ch. xiii. 18...21. are the parables of the grain of mustard-seed, and leaven, representing the wonderful progress of the gospel: of which, probably, St. Luke had been witness, when he recorded them.
10. Ch. xxiv. 46, 47. And he said unto them...that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. When St. Luke wrote this, it is very likely, that he well understood the commiffion of the Apostles, as reaching to men of all denominations, throughout the whole world.
11. But I need not enlarge farther on these internal characters of time, the other argument being sufficient and satisfaciorie.

The Place, where

VI. I must say something concerning the place, it was writ. where St. Luke's Gospel was writ.

Jerome, as before (r) quoted, in the preface to his Commentarie upon St. Matthew, says, that (s) Luke, the third Evangelift, published his Gospel in the countrey of Achaia and Boeotia. In his book of Illuftrious Men he says, the (f) Acts were writ at Rome. Gregorie Nazianzen says, that (u) Luke wrote for the Greeks, or in Achaia. And speaking of the provinces of divers of the Apostles and Evangelifts, he (x) assigns Judea to Peter, the Gentils to Paul, Achaia to Luke, Epirus to Andrew, Ephesus or Asia to John, India to Thomas, Italie to Mark: in which countrey, undoubtedly, many of the ancients believed this last mentioned Evangelift to have writ his Gospel. Chryfotam does not say, where Luke wrote: but only that (y) he wrote for all in general.

We are told by (z) Philoforje, that in the reign of the Emperor Constantius St. Luke's reliques were translated from Achaia to Constanti

(r) Vol. x. p. 84, 85.
(s) Ibid.
(f) Ib. p. 95.
(u) Vol. ix. p. 133.
(x) Exw πίπτων ᾿ιδαίων, τὶ πάνυ χειρὶ σης τα ἱβην, λευκὰ σης αἵαίαν...μαρκῖ σης ᾿Ιταλίαν; Gregor. Or. 25. p. 438. A.
(y) Vol. x. p. 318.
(z) Vol. xii. p. 317.
nople: It must therefore have been the general persuasion in those times, that St. Luke had died, and had been buried in Achaia. Nicephorus says, that (a) when Paul left Rome, Luke returned to Greece, where he preached the gospel, and converted many: where also he suffered martyrdom, and was buried. Soon afterwards he says, that (b) in the reign of Constantius Luke’s body was translated from Thebes to Constantinople. The connexion leads us by Thebes to understand Thebes in Greece.

Gratius says, he thinks, that (c) about the time that Paul left Rome, Luke also went thence into Achaia, and there wrote his books, which we have, as Jerome likewise says. Cave thought, that (d) both St. Luke’s books were writ at Rome, and before Paul’s captivity there was at an end.

But by Mill, Grabe, and Wetstein, it is said, that Luke published his Gospel at Alexandria, in Egypt. Let us observe their proofs.

First of all (e) Mill and (f) Wetstein quote Oecumenius, as saying, that Luke preached at Thebes in Egypt. Nevertheless I do not find it in Oecumenius. And I suppose, that Simeon Metaphrastes, a writer of no great credit, in the tenth century, in his life of St. Luke, is their authority. For he is the writer quoted by (g) Grabe, though he does it cautiously. Nor does Metaphrastes say, that St. Luke published his Gospel in Egypt. He supposed it to have been writ before he went thither. For he says, that (b) when Luke preached there, he sometimes argued from the Old Testament, and sometimes from the Gospel, which he had writ.

It may be reckoned probable therefore, that this journey of St. Luke into Egypt is a mere fiction, a thing without ground ascribed to him by some, after he had left Paul, and after he had writ his Gospel.

Nevertheless

(a) Συνδιάγων δ’ έν δόμη τῇ παλαιᾷ, ἵππαρκες τῇ ἱλιαδε τηςκ. η. Ν. Nisepb. I. 2. cap. 43. p. 210. (b)
(b) Ibid. C.
(c) Puto autem Româ iisfe Lucam in Achaiam, atque ibi ab eo conscriptos quos habemus libros. Quod et Hieronymus prodidit. Grot. Pref. in Evang. Luc.
(e) Certe post discessum a Româ Libyam petiisse nostrum hunc Evangelista, ac apud Thebanos verbum prædicasse, teftatur Oecumenius comment. in Lucam. Mill. Prof. n. 114.
(f) ... vel secundum Hieronymum ... in Achaiae Boeotiae quinbas, qui tamen Thebas Ægyptias, ubi teft Oecumenio Lucas prædicavit, pro Bocotiis accepisse videtur. Wetf. N. T. Tom. i. p. 643.

(b) Καὶ τῷ μίν ἁδύ τῇ παλαιᾷ παράγων γραφήν, τῷ δὲ ἐφ’ ἐπέκ τοῦ εἰς τῆς περιτελείας διακοτάσιον ἐυπροσλεπών. Τά περὶ της προφ. Sim. Metaphr. de Vit. S. Luca p. 858. B.
Nevertheless those learned men (i) have been pleased to argue from this passage of Metaphrases, that Jerome mistook Thebes in Boeotia for Thebes in Egypt. Which appears to me to be altogether arbitrarie. I should rather think, that some later writer mistook the place, and instead of Thebes in Boeotia, thought of Thebes in Egypt, a very famous city, and better known to himself than the other.

It may be of use to take here more at large the passage of Nicephorus, in part quoted juft now. "Luke (k) says he, was born at Antioch, which "is in Syria, by profession a Physician, and also well skilled in painting. "He came to Paul at Thebes with it's seven gates: where renouncing "the error of his ancestors, he embraced the Christian doctrine, and "of a Physician for the body, became a Physician for the Soul. He like- "wise wrote a Gospel, as Paul dictated it to him, and also the Acts of "the Apostles. Whilst Paul was at Rome, [or, When Paul had been "at Rome,] he returned into (d) Greece." This, I think, must confirm our supposition, that somebody mistook Thebes in Egypt for Thebes in Boeotia. It is plain, that Nicephorus means Thebes of Greece. And he seems to have supposed, in this place, that Luke was converted about the time he came to be with Paul in Macedonia and Greece. See Acts xvi. 10. He says, Luke returned into Greece. Therefore the Thebes before-mentioned must have been in that country. Nor was Paul ever at Thebes in Egypt. Luke therefore could not meet him, and be converted by him there. He calls it Thebes with it's seven gates. So (l) Thebes in Boeotia was sometimes called.

Secondly. Another argument, that St. Luke's Gospel was writ at Alexandria, is, that (m) it is so said in the Syriac version.

But those titles are of no great weight. Before the three Catholic Epifles, received by the Syrians, is a title or inscription, importing, that (n) they were writ by the Apostles, James, Peter, and John, witnesses of

(i) Neque aliunde in aliam sententiam ductum arbitrur Hieronymum, qui in Achaia Boeotiaeque finibus hoc Evangelium conditum ait, quam quod suum lector, suu ex traditione alicubi accepto, Lucam apud Thebanos praedicasse, ac conscriptisse Evangelium, inolas illos suisse exitimarat Thebarum Boeotiarum, non autem Thebarum urbibus AEgypti superioris, Mill. Proil. n. 115. Vid. et Weisstein. citat. supra not. (f).

(k) Niceph. l. 2. cap. 43. p. 210. A. B.

(d) All must be sensible, that this title of Nicephorus is very strange. For in one place he without hesitation speaks of St. Luke, as the companion of Chorbas, mentioned Luke xxiv. 18. Lib. 1. cap. 34. p. 117. A. And he several times speaks of Mark and Luke, as two of Christ's seventy disciples. Lib. 2. cap. 43. et in cap. 45. p. 213. B. "Et in twn duo 1bic, m655ov 7v nxav.

(n) Sanctorum Apostolorum, Jacobi, Petri, Johannis, transfigurationis Christi spectatorum, epistolæ singulae.
of our Saviour's transfiguration, taking James to be the son of Zebedee; whereas the epistle of James could not be writ till long after his death, who was beheaded by Herod Agrippa, as related Acts xii. 1, 2. And St. Paul's second epistle to Timothie (o) is said by the same Syrians, to have been writ at Rome, and sent by Luke. Which is manifestly contrary to the epistle itself. See 2 Tim. iv. 11, 12.

St. Luke's Gospel is also said in the Persic version, (p) to have been writ at Alexandria. But then it is allowed, that this version was made from the Syriac, not from the Greek.

Thirdly, it is also urged, that there are epigraphai or inscriptions in some manuscripts, at the end of this Gospel, where it is said, that it was writ in the great city of Alexandria.

But it is well known, that those inscriptions at the end of the books of the New Testament are of little value, divers of them containing manifest mistakes: and they are in late manuscripts only, or however, such as are not of the highest antiquity.

Fourthly. Grabe (q) likewise insifts upon a passage in the Apostolical Constitutions, where the Apostles are brought in, relating what Bishops had been appointed by them in their own time. And it is said, that in Alexandria, Anianus, the first Bishop, was ordained by the Evangelist Mark, and Abilius by Luke, also Evangelist. And (r) Mill in like manner quotes the constitutions, after Grabe, though almost ashamed so to do.

But it should be considered, that the author of that work is anonymous, and unknown, and his time not certain. He says what he pleases. And has been convicted of falsity in such accounts (s) as these, as well as in others. It has very much the appearance of fiction, that the first Bishop of Alexandria should be ordained by Mark, and the second by Luke. And possibly it is a fiction of the writer himself. For I do not recollect, that this is said any where else. Epiphanius, as well as more ancient writers, must have been totally unacquainted with this ordination, and with St. Luke's journeys in Egypt. For he says, that (t) this

(r) Et si Constitutionum Apostolica rum seu Ætiori seu confecratorii fideis, in ecclesia Alexandria, a Marco primum fundata... Avilium Aniani primi Episcopi succefforem, ordinaverit. Mill. Prol. n. 141.

(s) See in this work vol. viii. p. 352.

(t) Her. L. i. num. xi. p. 433.
this Evangelist preached the gospel in Dalmatia, Gaul, Italie, and Macedonia, but especially in Gaul.

Du Pin having taken notice of what is said relating to this matter in the inscriptions, which are in some manuscripts, the titles in the Syriac and Persian versions, Metaphrastes, and the Constitutions, concludes: "All (u) these monuments deserve no credit. We ought to adhere to what is said by Jerome, as most probable: that this Gospel was composed in Achaia, or Boeotia."

Upon the whole, there appears not any good reason to say, that St. Luke wrote his Gospel at Alexandria, or that he preached at all in Egypt. It is more probable, that when he left Paul, he went into Greece, and there composed, or finished, and published his Gospel, and the Acts of the Apostles.

VII. I would now offer something by way of character of this Evangelist. But I shall do it briefly, and cautiously. And if I mention doubtful things doubtfully, I may hope to escape cenure. It is probable, that he is Lucius, mentioned Rom. xvi. 21. If so, he was related to St. Paul the Apostle. And it is not unlikely, that that Lucius is the same as Lucius of Cyrene, mentioned by name, Acts xiii. 1, and in general with others. ch. xi. 20. It appears to me very probable, that St. Luke was a Jew by birth, and an early Jewish believer. This must be reckoned to be a kind of requisite qualification for writing a historie of Christ and the early preaching of his Apostles to advantage. Which, certainly, St. Luke has performed. I do not perceive sufficient reason to believe, that Luke was one of Christ's seventy disciples. But he may have been one of the two, whom our Lord met in the way to Emmaus, on the day of his resurrection, as related Luke xxiv. 13...35. He is expressly stiled by the Apostle his fellow-laborer. Philem. ver. 24. If he be the person intended Col. iv. 14. (which seems very probable,) he was, or had been, by profession a Physician. And he was greatly valued by the Apostle, who calls him beloved. Which must be reckoned much to his honour. For nothing could be so likely to recommend any man to St. Paul's esteem, as faithfulness to the interests of pure religion. It is undoubted, that he accompanied Paul, when he first went into Macedonia, Acts xvi. 8...40. And though we are not fully assured, that he continued to be with him constantly afterwards: we know, that he went with the Apostle from Greece through Macedonia, and Asia, to Jerusalem, and thence to Rome, where he stayed with him the whole two years of his imprisonment in that city. This alone makes out the space of above five years. And it is an attendance well becoming Lucius of Cyrene: to which no man could be more readily disposed, than one of the first preachers of the gospel to the Gentiles. We do not exactly know, when St. Luke formed the design of writing his two books. But, probably, they are the labour of several years. During St. Paul's imprisonment in Judea, which lasted more than two years, and was a time of inaction for the Apostle, St. Luke had an opportunity for compleating his collections, and filling up his plan. For in that time unquestionably Luke conversed with many early early Jewish believers, and eye-witnesses of the Lord, and some of the Apostles, who were still at Jerusalem. And I make no doubt, but that before that season he had conversed with several of the Apostles, and other eye-witnesses of our Lord's person and works. Nor can any hitherto to allow the truth of what is said by some of the ancients, that Luke, who for the most part was a companion of Paul, had likewise more than a slight acquaintance with the rest of the Apostles. Whilst he was with Paul at Rome, it is likely, that he had some leisure for composing, and writing. When St. Paul left Rome, I imagine, that Luke accompanied him no longer: but went into Greece, where he finished, and published, one after the other, his two books. Which he inscribed to Theophilus, an honorable friend, and a good Christian in that country. Here Luke died, and, perhaps somewhat in years. Nor need it to be reckoned an improbable supposition, that he was older than the Apostle.

(u) Dissert. sur la Bible, liv. 2. ch. 2. §. v. p. 39.

VIII. I shall conclude this chapter with some observations upon St. Luke's Gospel, and the Acts of the Apostles. But those upon his Gospel will chiefly relate to the introduction: though some were mentioned formerly.

Epiphanius (x) speaks as if he was in doubt, whether thereby should be understood a particular person, or a lover of God in general. Salvian (y) seems to have supposed it to be only a feigned name.

Augul tin (z) and Chrysflomon (a), and many others, have thereby understood a real person. Theophylact expresses himself after this manner: "Theophilus (b) to whom Luke wrote, was a man of senatorian rank, and possibly a Governor: forasmuch as he calls him most excellent, the "fame title, which Paul useth in his addresse to Felix and Festus," Occumenius says, "that (c) Theophilus was a Prefect or Governor." However, we have no particular account in the ancients, who he was, or of what country.

Cave (d) supposed Theophilus to have been a Nobleman of Antioch. And in his Lives of the Apostles and Evangelists (e) writ in English, he refers

(y) Poftius itaque in hoc ambiguæ opinionis incerto, optimum sìere credit, ut beati Evangelistæ sacratissimum sequeretur exemplum: qui in utroque divini operis exordio Theophili nomen inscribens, cum ad hominem scriptisse videatur, ad amorem Dei scriptit: hoc fìlicet dignissimum efti judicantis, ut ad ipsum affectum Dei scripta dirigeret, a quo ad scribendum impellus effet. Salvian. ad Salom. ep. 9. p. 215.

(z) De Consec. Evan. l. 4. c. 8. T. 3.

(b) See Vol. xii. p. 423.

(c) Ἑκατόμβιον ἓν εὐτος ἐθεοφιλος, &c. Comm. in Act. T. 2 p. 2 C.

(d) Utrumque opus inscrípit, Theophilo optimati, (ut credere fas est,) Antiocheno. Hift. Lit. in Luca.

(e) P. 224.
refers to the Recognitions: where is mentioned a rich man of Antioch, of this name. But I do not esteem that to be any proof, that St. Luke's Theophilus was of Antioch. That fabulous writer is not speaking of Paul, nor of Luke, but of Peter: who, as he says, in (f) seven days converted ten thousand people at Antioch. And Theophilus, the greatest man in the city, turned his house into a church. Moreover, supposing him to intend St. Luke's Theophilus, his authority is of no value. A writer at the end of the second century does not speak of his own knowledge. And if St. Luke published his books in Greece, which to me seems probable, I should be inclined to think, that Theophilus, to whom they are addressed, was a man of the same country.

2. It may be of more importance to inquire, whom St. Luke means by the many, who before him had attempted to write histories of Jesus Christ. Epiphanius says, that (g) St. Luke intended Cerinthus, Merinthus, and others. How Origen (h) expressed himself concerning this, in his preface to St. Luke’s Gospel: and how Jerome (i) in his preface to St. Matthew, may be seen by those, who are pleased to look back. They say, that many attempted to write Gospels, as Bafilides, Apelles, and others. And they mention divers Gospels, not received by the Church: Such as the Gospel of Thomas, and Matthias, the Gospels of the Egyptians, and of the Twelve. But it is not necessarie to be suppos’d by us, that they thought, that all, if any, of those Gospels were writ before St. Luke’s, or that he spoke of them. For Bafilides and Apelles could not write Gospels before the second centurie. And they might suppose, that several, if not all the other, mentioned by them, were writ after St. Luke’s. The meaning of what these ancient writers say, is, that the Church receives four Gospels only. There were many others. But to them may be applied the words of St. Luke: they only took in hand, or attempted. They did not perform, as Matthew, and Mark, and Luke, and John did. And they might express themselves in that manner concerning Gospels writ after St. Luke’s, as well as before it.

However, Theophylact, as was formerly (k) observed, in the preface to his Commentaric upon St. Luke, expresseth himself, as if he thought, the Evangelist referred to the Gospels according to the Egyptians, and according to the Twelve.

3. We will now observe the judgements of some learned moderns. Grabe (l) allows, that St. Luke did not refer to the Gospels of Bafilides, or

(f) Et ne multis immorer, intra septem dies, plus quam decem millia hominum credentes Deo baptizati sunt, et fanctificatione confecrati: ita ut omni aviditatis desiderio Theophilus, qui erat cunctis potentibus in civitate sublimior, domus suae ingentem basilicam, ecclesiae nomine confecravit. Recogn. I. x. cap. 71.

(g) .. φάσκων επιδιώκειν ὁλοίς εἰπεχείναι τίνα τοῦτο εἰς εἰπεχείναις δίκης, φραί ἃ τὸς εὐρή κηρύσσω, καὶ κηρύσσων, καὶ τὰς ἀλήθεις. H. L. I. n. vii. in.

(h) See Vol. iii. p. 317. 318.

(i) See Vol. x. p. 140. 141.

(k) Vol. xi. p. 422.

(l) Reliqua quippe ab Origene et Ambrosio nominata falsa Evangelia, veluti Bafilidis, aliudque Manichcorum, Apostolo Thomæ perceram adscriptionum, procul omni dubio propt S. Lucæ obitum prodiere: adeo ut ea in primis Evangelii verbis, in quorum explicatione Origenes et Ambrosius ulla afferunt, respicerere or Thomas, or some others, mentioned by Origen. For they were not published, till after St. Luke’s death. But he thinks, that St. Luke might refer to the Gospels according to the Egyptians, and according to the Twelve, and some others, now unknown.

That St. Luke might refer to the Gospel according to the Egyptians, he thinks for the following reasons, which I shall consider.

The first is, that (m) St. Luke’s Gospel was writ in Egypt. To which I answer: That is said without ground, as has been lately (n) shewn.

Grabe’s second argument is, that (o) Clement of Rome, or some other, in the fragment of the second epistle ascribed to him, has quoted the Gospel according to the Egyptians. Which argument, as one would think, might have been spared: since Grabe himself allows, that (p) second epistle to be supposititious, and not to have been composed, till about the middle of the third century. If that be the true date of the epistle, it is too late a thing, to warrant the supposition, that St. Luke referred to the Gospel according to the Egyptians.

I shall take no further notice of Grabe. But I imagine, that the Gospel according to the Egyptians was not composed before the second century. Clement of Alexandria is the first known Catholic author, that has cited it. And in his time it was very obscure and little known. This (q) was shewn formerly.

Dr. Mill does not much differ from Grabe. He thinks, that (r) of the many Narrations, to which St. Luke refers, the two principal were the Gospels according to the Hebrews, and according to the Egyptians.

The general account, which Mill gives of those Memoirs or Narrations, seems to be very just and reasonable. And I intend to transcribe him here largely. “About (s) the year 58. or somewhat sooner, says Mill respicere haud potuerit. Contra vero haud est absimile, ifa secundum Hebraeos et Aegyptios ante fuifte scripta, atque ad ea, una cum alius pluribus jam ignotis, Lucam intendisse digitum, dum praefatus est. &c. Gr. Spic. T. i. p. 31. 32.

(m) Evangelium, de quo agitur, ab Aegyptiis editum fuifte ante Lucæ Evangelium, huncque iftud inter alia, si non precipe, respexit, dum in proemo plures histiorias evangelicas memorat, ad quas emendandas, et delectas eorum supplendos, fuam literis consignatam fe innuit, probable redditur ex eo, quod Lucas Evangelium scripffe dicatur Alexandriæ in Aegypto. l’d. ib. p. 33. in.

(n) See before p. 103 . . 105.

(o) Accedit, quod jam Clemens Romanus, vel quisquis eft auctor ep. 2. ad Corinthios, certe antiquissimus, ifto Evangelio usus eft ex fragmento mox recitando, colligatur. Ibid. p. 34.

(p) Ceterum quasras, quando epiftola illa Clementi supposta fuerat, respondeo, id feculo iii. et quidem medio, fæctum effe. lbd. p. 260. in.

(r) Ex diffus autem hifice histioriolis . . due præ ceteris celebratis erant, quæ et ipsae Evangelia appellabantur, secundum Hebraeos alterum, alterum secundum Aegyptios. Proleg. n. 38. vid. et n. 39 . . 41. et n. 112. &c.

(s) Sub hoc quidem tempus, annum dico LVIII. feu etiam aliquanto ante, contextæ fucre a fidelius quibusdam illius ævii διψαμευς evangelice, feu
"Mill, were composed by some of the faithful Evangelical Narrations, or short histories of Christ. This appears from St. Luke's introduction to his Gospel. From which we learn, in the first place, that they were not our Evangelists, Matthew and Mark. For Matthew was an eye-witnefi. Nor can two be called many. In the next place, it is to be observed, that these narrations consisted of things most surely believed among us, that is, as I understand it, of the things fulfilled and done by Christ among the first professors of the faith: of which number Luke reckons himself. Lastly, from the words of that introduction it appears, that those Narrations were received either from the Apostles themselves, or from their assistants in the work of the gospel. It is therefore manifest, that there were some of the first Christians, who before Luke, (and also, as we may suppose, before Matthew and Mark,) wrote histories of the things done by Christ, and received from apotifical traditions: and that not with a bad, or heretical design, as may insituate, who comment upon this introduction of St. Luke, but with the same design, as our Evangelists: that Christians might have at least some account in writing of the Lord's actions. Nevertheless it may be also inferred from what St. Luke here says, that their histories were inaccurate, and imperfect: there were in them some things not certain, or well attested, and possibly, here and there, some mistakes.
For which cause it seemed good to him, who had attained to full information, to write a compleat and copious historie of the things done by Christ."

If this account be right, some consequences may be deduced, which will be of use to us.

And indeed, it seems to me to be very right. There were several hi-tories of Christ, to which St. Luke here refers. They were composed with a good view, like to that of our Evangelists. But they were defective and inaccurate. If there were any mistakes, I would imagine, that they were not numerous, nor in things of the greatest importance. Nor were the writers sufficiently qualified for the work, which they had undertaken.

"seu historiolas de rebus Christi. Patet hoc ex Evangelii D. Lucæ proemio: . . . Exinde colligimus, in primis equidem, τολάς hosce, qui historias conssidicabant, alios profus esse ab Evangelistis nostris, Matthæo et Marco. Erat enim Matthæus unus ex ἀυτοπταις, ideoque neque ab istorum traditionibus pendebat, sicut hi quos memorat Lucas. Ne dicam, quod duos duxvait nemo σωλάς dixerit. Deinde vero notandum, eos narrationes suas inftituiffe περὶ τοῦ ποιμαντοφρομίνων τοῦ προφήτων, hoc est, ut ego lubens interpretor, de rebus opud primos fidui professores, quorum numero sulpum accenfet Lucas, a Christo implesit live gettis. Denique liq et ex verbis modo citatis, traductas fuiffe narratiunculas itas feu proxime, seu mediate saltem, ab Apo-tolos ipis, eorumque in opere evangelico adjutoribus. Manifestum est igitur, fuiffe e primis Christiannis nonnullos, qui ante Lucam, [addo etiam Matthæum et Marcum,] res Christi, (feu Evangelia,) ex apostolicis traditionibus undecunque acceptis, confcripsent: idque non studio aliquo maligno, seu heretico, quod inanunt fere qui in hoc Lucæ proemium commentati sunt: sed cedem plane fine, quo Evangeliiæ nostri: ut haberet scilicet Ecclesia rerum a Domino nostro gestarum qualem qualem notitiat. Ceterum cum in iis quæ sequuntur apud Lucam, singula Christiæ rei historiam spectantia accurate se affectuum esse dicat Evangeliiæ . . . haud obscure quidem hinc colligi vi-detur,
undertaken. This, I think, to be intimated by St. Luke, though modestly, and without cenforiousness, in what he says of himself, that he had perfect understanding of all things from the very first. Which, probably, could not be said of the compofer of the Narrations, to which he refers. They were men, who had an honest zeal. But they had writ too hastily, before they had obtained full information. For which reason their histories could not answer the end aimed at.

These things being allowed to be right, several consequences may be deduced by us.

In the first place, and in particular, we hence learn, that the Gospel according to the Twelve, or according to the Hebrews, was not one of those Narrations, or Memoirs, to which St. Luke refers. For these were very short histories: [historiae as Mill calls them:] that was a full Gospel, or large historic of Jesus Christ. Many, in Jerome's time, supposed it to be the authentic Gospel of St. Matthew: which, certainly, is not a short and imperfect Memoir. From the notice taken of that Gospel by several ancient writers, especially by Jerome, it appears to me very probable, (and I should think, must appear very probable to others likewise,) that the Gospel according to the Twelve, or according to the Hebrews, either was St. Matthew's original Hebrew Gospel, with additions: or his original Greek Gospel, translated into Hebrew, with additions. But this last seems to me most likely, as has been often said already upon divers occasions.

Secondly. Another thing to be deduced from Mill's account, if right, is, that (r) the Gospel according to the Egyptians was not one of the Narrations, to which St. Luke refers. For that Gospel was not composed upon the same principles with those of our Evangelists. It was an heretical Gospel, as appears from the fragments of it, collected by Grabe, and (r) probably, it was composed in the second century, by some Ecranites, enemies of marriage.

Thirdly. I add one thing more, whether it be a consequence from what has been already said, or not: that nothing remains of the Narrations, to which St. Luke refers, not so much as any fragments, they not being quoted in any Christian writings, now extant.

3. I shall now transcribe a part of Dr. Doddridge's remarks upon St. Luke's introduction. "This (s) must refer to some histories of the life of Christ, detur, τῶν σωλήνων ἰεροῦ διηγήσεως minus accuratas suisse, minusque perfectas: ita quidem, ut in his, quæ tradiderant, aliqua hinc inde occurrerint parum certa, ne dicam a vero aberrantia. Unde omnino vifum fit ipsi planarium históriae hujus cognitionem consecutum, integrum jam et luculentum rerum a Christo gestarum Commentarium scribere. Mill. Prolog. num. 35.

... 37.

(r) I am not singular in supposing, that the Gospel according to the Egyptians is not intended by St. Luke. Beza says the same strongly. And as I imagine, he justly afferts, it not to have been writ, till after St. Luke's Gospel. Quod itos ait Lucas, non satis commode præfentiffime: minime tamen opinor, fabulosas, etiam imatas narrations intelligens, tandem Ecclesiae sub Nicodemi, Nazararorum, Thome, Ægyptiorum, nominibus impudentissime obturatas. Beza ad Luc. cap. 1. ver. 1.

(s) Vid. Grabe Spic. T. i. p. 31... 37.

"Christ, now loth. For Matthew and Mark, the only Evangelists that can be supposed to have written before Luke, could not with any propriety be called many. And of these two, Matthew at first wrote from personal knowledge, not from the testimony of others. I conclude, that the books referred to are loth: as I am well satisfied, that none of the apocryphal Gospels, now extant, published, particularly, by Fabricius, and Jones, can pretend to equal antiquity, with this of St.
Luke... And St. Luke seems to allow these histories, whatever they were, to have been honestly written, according to information received from capable judges."

4. Mr. Beausobre, speaking of these Memoirs, says: "The (t) life of our Saviour was so beautiful, his character so sublime and divine, his doctrine so excellent, and the miracles, by which he confirmed it, were so shining, and so numerous, that it was impossible, but many should undertake to write Memoirs of them. This produced many histories of our Saviour, some more, others less exact. It is great pity, that they are lost. For we might have consulted them, and could have judged for ourselves concerning the character of the writers, and their composition. St. Luke, who speaks of Narrations, or Gospels, that had preceded his own, intimates indeed, that they were defective, but he does not condemn them, as fabulous, or bad."

5. That is right. Those Memoirs were not bad, nor fabulous. But they were imperfect, as I apprehend, to a great degree. Nor do I lament the loss of them. I can pay so much deference to the judgement of Christian Antiquity, especially, the earliest of all, as to believe, that those many Narrations, to which St. Luke refers, did not deserve to be preferred, or to be much taken notice of, after the publication of the Gospels of our first three Evangelists. I imagine, that when once these came abroad, the former appeared to the faithful so low, and mean, and defective, that they could not bear to see, or read them.

Observations upon IX. I shall now make some observations upon the book of the Acts. other work of our Evangelist.

1. The book of the Acts was written according to (w) Mill, in the year
64. And from what has been argued by us in several places that must appear to be as likely a time, as any. It could not be written till after St.
Paul's confinement at Rome was come to a period. I suppose, it to have ended in the former part of the year of Christ 63. And I think it probable, that St. Luke finished this book the same, or the next year, either at Rome, or in Greece.

2. It cannot be disagreable to recollect here some of the observations of ancient writers upon this book, the only book of the kind, which we have, containing a historie of the preaching of Christ's Apostles after his resurrection.

3. Tertullian (x) often speaks of the importance of this book, as shewing Christ's fulfilment of the promisse of the Holy Ghost to his disciples.

(i) Hist. de Manich. Tom. i. p. 449. (u) Prolegom. num. 121.
(x) See Vol. ii. p. 588... 590. or p. 587... 589.
(y) Actus Apostolorum nudam quidem nonare videntur historiam, et nafcentis
"linus, concerning the studie of the Scriptures, seems to promise a bare "historie, and an account of the early infancy of the Church: but if we "consider, that the writer is Luke the Physician, we shall at the same "time discern, that every word is suited to heal the maladies of the soul."

5. Says Augustin: "Luke (x) after having writ a Gospell, containing "a historie of Christ's words and works to the time of his resurrection "and ascension, wrote such an account of the Acts of the Apostles, as "he judged to be sufficient for the edification of believers. And it is "the only historie of the Apostles, which has been received by the "Church: all other having been rejected, as not to be relied upon."

6. I beg leave to refer my readers to the passages of Chrysostom, al-ready (a) tranferred, relating to this book: and to the whole of his first homilie upon it. I add now only one passage more out of the fame homilie. "The (b) Gospels, says he, are the historie of the things, which "Christ did, and spake. The Acts the historie of the things, which "another Paradet spake and did."

7. It is not needful for me to make a distinct enumeration of the things contained in this book. Every one who has perused it with care, cannot but know, that it contains an account of the choice of Matthias to be Apostle in the room of the traitor, of the wonderful and plentiful pouring out of the gift of the Holy Ghost upon the Apostles, and other disciples of Jesus at Jerusalem, at the Pentecost next succeeding his crucifixion, and of the testimonie bore by the Apostles to his resurrection and ascension in their discourses, and by many miracles, and various sufferings: their preaching first at Jerusalem, and in Judea, and afterwards by themselves, or their assistants, in Samaria, and then to Gentils in Judea, and afterwards out of it, as well as to Jews: and of the conversion of Paul, and his preaching, miracles, labours, sufferings, in many cities and countreys, parts of the Roman Empire, and the polite world, and at length in Rome itself.

8. If we were to indulge ourselves in making remarks upon this useful and excellent performance, nothing, perhaps, would be more observable, than it's brevity and concisenesse: by which means many things must have been omitted, which happened during the period of that historie. For it is very true, which Chrysostom said, that (c) Luke leaves us thirsting for more.

9. Says Le Clerc: "Luke's (d) Apostolical Historie relates the begin-

(y) Tā μην ἐνίσχυσθείς ἢ ἡ χρηστὸς ἱππόσιν ὡς ἐνίσχυε τοις ἔργοις ἡς ἡ πράξεις, ὥς ἐτεροι παράκλητος ἐστι το ἱππόσιν. In Act. hom. i. Tom. 3. p. 9. B.

(c) Vol. x. p. 327.

(d) Hic vero definit Lucæ Historia Apostolica, quod initia praedicationis evangelicae apud Judæos, Ethnicoque, et ministerio quidem Petri et Pauli potissimum scribere adgreffius est. De ceteris Apostolis altum ubique apud eum est silentium... Utinam vero, vir quippe apostolicus, pari judicio et fide, ceterorum res geltas litteris mandasset, quæ narrationi Lucæ defunt sup-plere voluisset, idque opus ad nos pervenisset! Cler. H. E. An. 61. n. iv.
“ings of the preaching of the Gospel among Jews and Gentils, chiefly “by the ministrie of Peter and Paul. For of the other Apoftles he is “almost entirely silent. . . I wish, says he, that some other Apoftolical “man, of like judgement and integrity, had writ the historie of the other “Apoftles, and had undertaken to supply what was wanting in Luke’s “historie, and that this work had come down to us.” But, however desirable it may now appear to us, we cannot perceive from ecclesiastical historie, that ever such a work was publisht.

10. Eʃtius imagined, “that (c) Luke, possibly, intended to write a “third book, to supply, particularly, the omisſions of the two years, “which St. Paul spent at Rome.” But I verily believe, there is no ground at all for that conjectural fuppofition.

off the historie of St. Peter, of whom he had faid fo much before, very abruptly, in those words, Acts xii. 17. And he departed, and went to another place.” Nevertheless St. Luke afterwards drops St. Barnabas in a like manner. ch. xv. 39. And in the end he will take his leave of the Apoftle Paul himself without much more ceremonie.

12. Those omisſions are no reflection upon the writer, nor any disparagement to his historie. The proper deduction to be made by us is this: We hereby perceive, that it was not the design of St. Luke, to ag-grandize Peter, or Paul, or any of the Apoftles, nor to write their lives:
but to record the evidences of our Saviour’s resurrection, and to write a historie of the firft preaching and planting the Christian Religion in the world. This design he has admirably executed. And having filled up his plan, he concluded.

13. However, undoubtedly, many things are omitted by St. Luke.
Some of which we may learn from St. Paul’s epiftles. I shall observe some omisſions.

14. St. Luke has not in the courſe of his historie, mentioned the writing of any of St. Paul’s epiftles. It is probable, that he was at Corinth, when the Apoftle wrote thence his large epiftle to the Romans. Nevertheless he takes not any notice of it, nor of the epiftles writ by St. Paul at Rome, when he certainly was with him, nor indeed of any other.
By comparing the epiftles themselves, and St. Luke’s historie of the Apoftle in the Acts, we are enabled to trace the time and place of divers of those epiftles. But they are no where particularly mentioned by the historian.

conversion, speaks of his being at Damasæus, and his preaching there, and of the oppofition, which he there met with from the Jews, and his escape thence, and then going to Jerusalem. But St. Paul Gal. i. 17-18. informs

(c) Sed proculdabio multa auctorum Pauli a Luca sunt omiffa . . . Ac fortaffe Lucas mediatabatur tertium librum, in quo repetet aucta illius biennii
. . . ficut Aed. i. quædam expofuit tacita ultimo capite Evangelii. Eſt. ad

(f) Mirum eſt, Lucam, postquam liberationem Petri e carcer narravit cap. xii. 17. eumque in alium bonum, hoc eſt, extra Ierofoyam, ivifte dixit, ne verbolum quidem de eo habere, de quo tam multa alia dixerat.
Id. ibid.
18. informs us, that after his conversion he went into Arabia, and then returned to Damascus: and that three years passed between his conversion and his going to Jerusalem. This is an instructive instance.
For the omission is certain, and undoubted. I am of opinion, that St. Luke did not omit the journey into Arabia, because he did not know of it: but designedly, and because he did not judge it necessary to be mentioned. Jerome (g) has taken particular notice of the omission of that journey into Arabia.

1. Having given the historie of our Lord’s presentation at the temple, he says ch. ii. 39. *And when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee, to their own city, Nazare*th.* Nevertheless, I think, the holy family did not now go directly from Jerusalem to Nazareth, but to Bethlehem. There, as I suppose, our Lord received the homage of the Magians. And afterwards, to avoid the persecution of Herod, they removed thence to Egypt, and then returned to Nazareth. All which is recorded Matth. ii. 1 . . . . 13. The vifit of the Magians must have been after the presentation at the temple.
If it had been before, and if they had presented their gifts, gold, and frankincense, and myrrh: mentioned Matth. ii. 11. Marie would not have made the lesser offering for her purification, mentioned Luke ii. 23.
24. Nor could the child Jesus have been safely brought to Jerusalem, or such notice have been taken of him at the temple, as St. Luke particularly relates, ch. ii. 25 . . . 38. if Herod, and all Jerusalem, had been just before alarmed by the inquiries of the Magians: Where is he that is born King of the Jews? Matth. ii. 1. 2. Omitting therefore all those things, St. Luke says, as above observed, and afterwards they returned to Nazareth, the place of their usual abode. Which is agreeable to Matth.
ii. 22. 23.

2. Another thing observab]e is, that all our Saviour’s appearances to his disciples, after his resurrection, recorded by St. Luke ch. xxiv. were at Jerusalem, or near it. He takes not any notice of our Saviour’s meeting the disciples in Galilee, so particularly mentioned Matth. xxviii.
7. and Mark xvi. 7. St. John also ch. xxi. 1 . . . 23. speaks of our Sa-vour’s shewing himself to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias. And St.
Paul assures us, that our Lord was seen of above five hundred brethren at once. 1 Cor. xv. 6. Which, probably, was in the same country. And though at the beginning of his book of the Acts, St. Luke resumes the account of our Saviour’s shewing himself to the disciples after his resurrection; there is nothing more about Galilee, than in the former relation.
Infomuch, that, if we had St. Luke’s histories only, we might have been apt to conclude, that all the appearances of our Saviour to his disciples were at Jerusalem, or near it, and no where else.

But

(g) Lucam vero idcirco de Arabia præteriisse, quia forfi~ unt nihil dignum apollotatu in Arabia perpetratur: et ea potius compendiosa narrattonem dixisse: quæ digna Christi eva~ gelio videbantur. Nec hoc fegnitiae Apostoli deputandum, si frutai in Arabia fuerit: sed quod alia dispen~ satio et Dei præceptum fuerit, ut taceret. Hier. in Ep. ad Gal. ca~
VOL. II.

H
But we should have known many more, if we had had a parallel historian. A comparison of St. Luke's historie of our Saviour with that of the other Evangelists may assure us of this.

18. In the eleventh chapter of the second epistle to the Corintians, St. Paul mentions divers visions and revelations, with which he had been favored. But St. Luke has not taken notice of any of them. St. Paul in his speech to the people at Jerusalem, recorded by St. Luke Acts xxi. 17. mentions a trance, which he had in the temple. But St. Luke has no where told us the exact time of it. Nor has he otherwise mentioned it.

19. I do not think, that these things were omitted by St. Luke, because St. Paul concealed them from him: or because by some other means he was unacquainted with the time and place of them. But it was a regard to brevity, that induced him to pass them over. They were not necessarie to be inſerted in his historie. Without them he has recorded sufficient attestations of Paul's apostolical authority, and of the truth, and divine original of the doctrine taught by him.

20. Says St. Paul, unwillingly, and constrained by the disadvantageous infinuations and charges of self-interested and designing men. 2 Cor. xi. 23. Are they ministers of Christ? [I speak as a fool:] I am more. In labours more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, in de bts oft.

In prisons more frequent. Therefore before writing this epistle, in the year 57. Paul had been imprifoned several times: though St. Luke has mentioned before this time one imprifonment only, which was at Philippi. Acts xvi. 23. 40. Upon which Eflius (b) observes, that Paul did and suffered many things, not mentioned in the Acts. And Rom. xi. 7. Salute Andronicus and Junia, my kinsmen, and my fellow-prisoners ... who also were in Christ before me. Paul was not a prisoner, when he wrote the epistle to the Romans, in the beginning of the year 58. But (i) he had been in prison before with those two early Christians, his relations. But where, or when, we cannot exactly say.

21. Ver. 24. of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Nevertheless St. Luke has not mentioned one of those times. Eflius conjectures, that (k) Luke omitted thefe, and many other things, because he was not with the Apostle, when they happened, and Paul out of modellie

(b) De Paulo autem incarcerato ante hanc epistolam, in Actis Apostolorum non legimus quidem, nisi cap. xvi. ubi a Philippenibus in carcerem missus legitur. Sed permuta Paulus et fecit et passus est, quae in Actis non scribuntur. Efl. ad 2 Cor. xi. 23.

(i) Porro conceptivos intellige, quod aliquando communia cum Paulo vincula pro Christo passi fuissent. Ubi tamen, aut quando factum sit, ignoratur. Efl. ad Rom. xvi. 7.

(k) Sed cur Lucas in Actis ne unius quidem flagellationis ex quinque meminit? Ideo videlicet, quod de Paulo pene ea sola, quibus ipse praefens fuit, flagillatim recenset: alia vero vel silentio pertranfesit, vel summatim ac breviter referat. ... Qua in re notanda humiliatas Pauli, qui suas tot et tam graves pro Christo passiones Lucce comiti fuo non aperuerit, ne hic quidem recitaturus, nisi coeigiffet cum amor salutis Corinthiorum. Id. ib. ad cor. 24.
defte forbore to tell him of them. I rather think, that Luke was fully acquainted with Paul's historie. But he aimed at brevity, and judged the things mentioned by him to be sufficient.

22. Ver. 25. Thrice was I beaten with rods: meaning, I suppose, by Roman Magistrates. But St. Luke has mentioned one infa stance of this: which was at Philippi, when Paul and Silas both underwent this hard usage. Acts xvi. 19... 40. Of this (l) likewise Eflius has taken notice in his Commentarie.

Once was I stoned: undoubtedly meaning at Lystra in Lycaonia, as related by St. Luke Acts xiv. 19. 20.

Thrice I have suffered shipwreck. St. Luke has recorded but one in fa stance, which was not untill after this time, in the Apostle's voyage from Judea to Rome. Acts xxvii. Which therefore must have been the fourth.

A night and a day have I been in the deep. At one of those times I escaped with the utmost difficulty, by getting on a plank, and floating in the sea a night and a day, or a whole day of four and twenty hours.

23. Ver. 26. In journeyings, often, in perils of waters, or rather rivers. Which (m) are sometimes very dangerous. But St. Luke has not recorded any dangers of the Apostle upon rivers, either in crossing them, or falling upon them.

24. Says Tillemont in his life of St. Paul: "The (n) greatest part of "interpreters think, that St. Paul made no voyages, but thofe, which are "taken notice of in the Acts... . Nevertheless we muft necessarily acknowledge, that beside what St. Luke informs us of the sufferings of "St. Paul, this Apostle was five times scourged by the Jews, twice beaten "with rods, and thrice shipwrecked. All this happened, before he "wrote his second epiftle to the Corinthians: that is, in the time of "which St. Luke has writ the historie. Nevertheless St. Luke says no-th "ing of all this. It is certain therefore, that either he has omitted "the circumstances of the moft remarkable events, which he relates, "or that St. Paul made several voyages, of which he has taken no "notice."

25. The reason of St. Luke's silence here I take to be the fame that has been already assigned of his silence upon other occasions. It was not necellarity, that these things should be related. To have writ an account of all the Apostle's journeys, and dangers, would have rendered the work more voluminous and prolix, than was judged proper. When St. Luke let about composing and publishing this book, he had all the materials before him, and his plan was formed. Agreeably to which, he determined to write at large the historie of St. Paul's voyage from Judea to Rome, in which are many remarkable incidents, and to omit some other

(l) Ter virgis cæsus sum: a Gentilibus. Erat enim Romanis consueundo, virgis cedere nocentes. ... Porro Lucas tantum semem meminit hujus contumelie Paulo illatae: seicet Act. xvi. ubi scribit eum una cum Sila virgis cæsum a Philippinibus. Æst. in loc.

(m) Periculis fluminum: quae interdum non minus periculofo sunt naviganti-bus, quam mare. Æst. in loc.

of the Apostles journeys and voyages: though divers of them likewise were attended with affecting circumstancies.

26. The chapter, from which I have just now transcripted several things, concludes in this manner. ver. 31 ... 33. The God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who is blessed for evermore, knows that I lie not. In Damascus the Governor under Aretas, the King, kept the city of the Damascens with a garrison, defirous to apprehend me. And through a window in a basket was I let down by the wall, and escaped his hands.

I have often reflected with great satisfaction on St. Luke's not omitting this dangerous attempt upon the Apostle's liberty, and life: with which himself was so much affected, and which he has here mentioned with such solemnity. The historie of it may be seen in Acts ix.

23 ... 25.

I now proceed to some other things.

27. St. Paul assures us Gal. ii. 1 ... 3. that when he went up to Jerusalem upon occasion of the debate concerning the manner of receiving Gentil converts, he took Titus with him. Which is not said by St. Luke Acts xv. though he gives a particular account of Paul's going from Antioch to Jerusalem upon that occasion. Nor indeed has St. Luke once mentioned Titus in his historie: though St. Paul wrote an epistle to him, and has mentioned him several times in his epistles, sent to others.

28. Gal. ii. II ... 21. St. Paul speaks of Peter's being at Antioch, before he and Barnabas had separated. But St. Luke says nothing of it. Jerome, in his Commentarie upon the epistle to the Galatians, says: "We (o) are not to wonder, that Luke has taken no notice of this. For by the usual privilege of historians he has omitted many things performed by Paul, and which we know from himself."

29. Rom. xvi. 3; 4. St. Paul applauds an action of great generosity in Aquila and Prisilla. But St. Luke has not informed us of the place, or occasion of it. Doubtless he did not omit it, for want of respect to those excellent Christians, whom he has mentioned more than once. ch. xviii. 18. and 26. But that particular did not come within the compass of his design.

30. Many things, not expressly mentioned by St. Luke, may be argued, and concluded to have been done, from those which he has recorded.

1.) In Acts iv. 23 ... 30. is recorded a prayer of the Apostles, in which they request, that they may be enabled to work miracles for farther confirming the doctrine taught by them. And unquestionably, their prayer was heard, and their request granted, and they did work many miracles in the name of Christ, more than are related by St. Luke.

2.) Acts v. 12. And by the hand of the Apostles were many signs and wonders done among the people. And what follows. Whence it may be concluded, concluded, that (p) many miracles were wrought, not only by Peter and John, but also by the other Apostles also, beside those, which are particularly recorded. See also ch. ii. 43.

3.) Says Mr. Biscoe: "Many (q) and great miracles are related in 'the historie of the Acts to be wrought by St. Paul, and his fellow-laborers, in their preaching the gospel to the Gentiles. And agreeably 'hereto St. Paul lays, 2 Cor. xii. 12. Truly the signs of an Apostle were 'wrought amongst you in all patience, in signs, and wonders, and mighty 'deeds. And to the Romans, ch. xv. 18. 19... I make no doubt, says 'that learned writer, but the Apostles wrought miracles in every city, 'where they came with a view to preach the gospel, and make converts. 'St. Luke is so very succinct in his historie of the Acts, that he often 'omits them. He gives an account of only a miracle or two wrought 'at Philippi in his whole relation of St. Paul's journey from Antioch to 'the West, when he converted a great part of Macedonia and Achaia: 'though it is evident from St. Paul's own epistle, already quoted, that 'he at that time did many signs and wonders at Corinth. And that he 'did the same at Thessalonica, is not obscurely intimated in his first e- 'pistle to the Thessalonians. ch. i. 5. We read nothing in the Acts of 'the Apostles of what St. Paul did in Galatia the first time, more than 'that he went through it. Acts xvi. 6. And all that is added the se- 'cond time he was there is, that he went over all the country of Galatia, 'strengthening all the disciples. ch. xviii. 23. Which indeed is an inti- 'mation, that the first time he was there he preached the gospel among 'them, and made converts. But from his epistle to the Galatian 'churches it is fully evident, that he wrought miracles among them, 'and conferred on them gifts of the Holy Spirit. For he asks them: 'He that ministreth to you the Spirit, and worketh miracles among you, doth 'be it by the works of the law, or by the hearing of faith? Gal. iii. 25. 'That he means himself, is manifest from the whole tenour of the epistle. 'See ch. i. 6. iv. 11. 13. 14. 19."

There follow other like observations, which I may not transcribe.

4.) Mr. Biscoe, as above, makes no doubt, but the Apostles wrought mi- 'racles in every city, where they came, with a view to preach the gospel, and 'make converts. I am of opinion, that this may be truly suppos'd of Paul, 'particularly, and that it may be concluded from what St. Luke has writ. 'For, according to him, Paul wrought miracles in Cyprus. Acts xiii. 11. 'at Lystra. xiv. 10. at Philippi xvi. 16... 18. See also 25. 26. and very 'many at Ephesus. xix. 11... 17. And at Troas he raised Eutychus to 'life. xix. 9... 12. In his voyage from Judea to Rome he wrought man- 'y miracles. xxviii. 3... 6. and 7... 10. From these miracles, re- 'corded by St. Luke, it may be well argued, that St. Paul wrought mi- 'racles racles in all, or most other places, where he went, and made any stay, preaching the gospel. In particular, it may be argued, that Paul wrought miracles at Athens, and at Rome. What they were, we cannot say, because they have not been recorded by St. Luke, nor by any other credible writer. But that miracles were performed by the Apostle in those cities appears to me very probable.

(p) Oecumenius says, that Luke omitted many miracles wrought by the A- 'postles for avoiding ostentation. Πολλοί θεωράτων επιτηλωμένων ύπό τῶν ά- 'πότολων, διό καὶ δινέοντο εἰνεῖθι θεωράτων γάρ θαύτα γεγράφων λύκης, [cap. ii. 43.] ἔτηνες ἐκκλησίαν ὑποκάθισεν, ἀλλὰ ἐκκλησίαν γεγράφων μισοῦν ἀφ' ἀντιλότας ἱκεσιάθων... ὅτι καὶ ἐν 'κόσμῳ δι' ἱστορία καὶ συγγραφήν αὐτῷ αὐτήν ἰσοποδάτην. Oecum. in Λα. Cap. iii. Τομ. 'i. p. 25. A. B.

(q) The History of the AAs confirmed. ch. xi. §. 8. p. 407. 408.

5.) St. Luke (r) has not given any account of St. Paul's appearing before the Emperour Nero at Rome, when he was sent thither by Fesius. Nevertheles, that Paul was brought before Nero soon after his arrival at Rome, is highly probable. And though St. Luke has not expressly said so, it may be concluded from what he has said. For he has again and again sufficiently intimated, that Paul was certainly to appear before the Emperour, to whom he had appealed. See Acts xxv. 10. 11. 12. 21. xxvi. 32. xxvii. 24. xxviii. 9. The Apostle therefore was brought before Nero, and pleaded before him. But St. Luke forbore to give a distinct account of it, because he had already given a particular account of Paul's pleadings before Felix, and Fesius, and Agrippa. And from them may be concluded, what was the tenour of his apologie before the Emperour himself.

6.) St. Paul, in his epistle to the Chriftians at Rome, says, ch. i. 11. I long to see you, that I may impart unto you some spiritual gift, to the end ye may be established. And ch. xv. 29. I am sure, that when I come unto you, I shall come unto you in the fulneffe of the blessing of the gospel of Chrift. And unquestionably, the event was agreeable to these wishes and expectations.

7.) St. Luke has not particularly recorded those things in his historic. But from what he has said they may be inferred. Says our historian. Acts xxviii. 13. 16. And we came the next day to Puteoli. Where we found brethren, and were desired to tarry with them seven days. And so we went toward Rome. And from thence, when the brethren heard of us, they came to meet us, as far as Appii Forum, and the Three Taverns. Whom when Paul saw, he thanked God, and took courage. And when he came to Rome, the Centurion delivered the prisoners to the Captain of the Guard. But Paul was suffered to dwell by himself, with a soldier that kept him. And ver. 30. Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house.

8.) From the things here said it may be fairly concluded, that during the Apostle's stay at Rome, there was a very delightful communication of civil and religious offices between him and the believers there, according to the abilities, and the exigences of each. Before he left Rome, the Philippians seem to have sent him a supplie by Epaphroditus. Philip, iv. 10. 18. But it may be well supposed, that the price of his lodging, and the expenses of his maintenance, were provided for, chiefly, by the Chriftians, whom he found at Rome, when he came thither, and by the converts, which he made afterwards. The soldiers likewise, who by turns attended upon him, would expect to be considered, if they carried it it civilly toward their prisoner. All which, we may suppose, was taken care of by the good Christians at Rome: who, as St. Luke assures us, went out to meet him, and conducted him into the City.

CHAP. IX.

ST. JOHN, APOSTLE, and EVANGELIST.

I. His Historie from the N. T. II. His Age. III. When he left Judea, to go to Ephesus. IV. His Historie from ecclesiastical Writers. V. The Time, when he was banished into Patmos. VI. How long he was there. VII. Testimonies of ancient Writers to his Gospel. VIII. Opinions of learned Moderns concerning the Time, when this Gospel was writ. IX. An Argument, to prove, that it was writ before the destruction of Jerusalem. X. Objections considered. XI. Observations upon this Gospel.

I. O H N was the son of Zebedee, a fisherman upon the sea of Galilee, probably (a) of the town of Bethsaida, and (b) Salome. John was the younger brother. For James is always (c) mentioned first, except in Luke ix. 28. And John is generally reckoned the youngest of all Christ's disciples.

Though Zebedee was by trade a fisherman, he needs not be reckoned poor. For, as St. Mark has particularly observed, he was not only master of a boat, and nets, but had hired servants. ch. i. 20. Moreover, we may recollect what Peter said to Christ, who also had been a fisherman upon the same sea. We have left all, and followed thee. Matt. xix. 27. They left their employments, by which they gained a subsistence: and for the present there was self-denial in their attendance upon Jesus.

It is not unlikely, that Zebedee died not long after these two brothers were called to be Apostles. However, the circumstances of the familie may be collected from what is said of their mother, who is mentioned, Matt. xxvii. 55. and Mark xv. 41. among those women, who followed Jesus out of Galilee, and ministered unto him. That ministerie is described Luke

(b) Compare Matt. xxvii. 55. with Mark xv. 40. and xvi. 1.

Luke viii. 3. To which might be added, that she is mentioned among those women that bought sweet spices to embalm the body of Jesus. Mark xvi. 1. Luke xxiii. 55. And our Lord, having recommended his mother to this disciple, it is said, that he took her to his own home. John xix. 27.

If Salome was related to our Lord in the manner supposed by (d) Theophylact, or some other way, with which we are not distinctly acquainted; that may have been, in part, the ground and reason of several things mentioned in the Gospels: as the petition of these two brothers, disciples, for the two first places in Christ's kingdom: John's being the beloved disciple, and friend of Jesus, and being admitted to some freedoms, denied to the rest: and, possibly, (e) performing some offices about his person: and, finally, our Lord's committing to him the care of his mother, so long as she should survive him.

In Acts iv. 13. It is said of Peter and John, that they were ignorant, and unlearned men. Which, indeed, is nothing else, but that they were neither (f) Doctors, nor Magistrates, but men of private stations, who had not been educated in the schools of the Rabbies: or, as Dr. Dodridge has happily translated this text, illiterate men, and in private stations of life. So Oecumenius says, that (g) St. John in sending a letter to Caius had Paul for an example, who wrote to Timotheus, and Titus, and to Philemon, an idiot: that is, a man of a private station: whereas Timotheus and Titus had a public character in the Church, as they were Evangelists.

There can be no doubt, that Zebedee's sons, as the children of all pious Jews at that time, were well acquainted with the scriptures of the Old Testament. They had read them, and had heard them read and explained in the synagogues. They had also been accustomed to go to Jerusalem, at the feasts, and had discoursed with many upon the things of religion. They now were in expectation of the appearing of the Messiah, foretold in the Law and the Prophets. But, undoubtedly, were in the common prejudice of the nation, that it would be, in part, at least, a worldly kingdom. And it is very likely, that they had heard John preach: though they did not attend statedly upon him, as his disciples.

(e) Opus scilicet erat ipsi aliquo, quem interdum ad matrem mitteteret, (quod non ita raro factum esse, facile intelligitur,) quo uteretur ad lavandos sibi pedes, ad induendos sibi et exuendos calceos. [vid. Matt. iii. 11. Marc. i 8. Luc. iii. 16. Joan. i. 27.] qui sibi prælato effet ad mandata subita, qui in cubiculo sibi adiaceret dormienti, qui alia sibi præfaret minuta officiola domestica, qui prœpteræ perpetuæ sibi effe pediefqueus, nec nisi füffus ab ipso recederet, Heuaman. Diff. Syll. Tom. 2. p. 338.

(g) Πρὸς δὲ γάλιον ἐκα γεάφων ἰχθυα παῦλου τίτω γεάφουτα καὶ τιμοδιειχ. καὶ πρὸς ἐφίπρονα διὶ ἰδιότητος. Oecum. T. 2. p. 666. C.
ciples. For all the people of Judea in general went to John's baptism.

Says St. John i. 35. 36. Again, the next day after John stood, and two of his disciples. And looking upon Jesus, as he walked, he faith: Behold the lamb of God. . . From ver. 40. we learn, that one of these two, which heard John speak, was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother. And (b) some have supposed, that our Evangelist, who writes this, was the other. Which I do not look upon as certain, though I do not deny it.

Whether the other was John, or not, it ought to be reckoned unquestioned, that before he was called to be an Apostle, he had seen and heard the Lord Jesus, and had been witness of some miracles wrought by him. It appears to me very probable, that (i) he was one of the disciples, who were present at the wedding in Cana of Galilee, where water was made wine. John ii. 1. . . .

The call of James and John, to attend upon Jesus statedly, is related Matt. iv. 21. 22. Mark i. 19. 20. Luke v. i. . . .

St. Mark, putting down the names of the twelve Apostles, when he mentions James and John, says, that our Lord surnamed them Boanerges, which is sons of thunder. ch. iii. 17. By which it seems unreasonable to suppose, that our Lord intended to reproach them with some fault in their natural temper, as if they were fierce and furious: though (k) a learned writer has intimated so much. That (l) name must have been very honourable, prophetically representing the resolution and courage, with which they would openly and boldly declare the great truths of the gospel, when fully acquainted with them. How John answered this character, we know from what is said of him in the book of the Acts, and from his own writings, and from things recorded of him in ecclesiastical historie. How well James, the other brother, answered that character, may be concluded from his being beheaded by Herod Agrippa at Jerusalem, not many years after our Lord's ascension. Which, we cannot doubt, was owing to an open and steadfast testimonie to the resurrection of Jesus, and to other services for the Church: whereby he had greatly signalized himself in the short period of his life after our Lord's ascension. Possibly (m) he had, with a freedom, not a little offensive,

(b) Duorum alter ver. 41. nominatur. Alter videtur ipse Evangelista nofter fuiffe, uti viuminum vita ejus. Lib. i. cap. 2. Lampe in Job. cap. i. ver. 35. 36.

(i) However, Bagnage disputes this. Neque probabile admodum, Ioannis his interfuisse nuptiis. Quod si concederetur, &c. Bafn. Ann. 30. num. xxxviii.

(k) “However it was, our Lord, I doubt not, herein had respect to the “furious and resolute disposition of those two brothers, who seem to have “been of a more fierce and fiery temper, than the rest of the Apostles.” Cave's Life of St. James the Great. num. 5. p. 142.

(l) Vid. Fr. Lamp. Prolegom. l. i. cap. 2. num. vii. . . xiv.

(m) Accedit altera ratio, quae eos adhuc priscus spectabant, nempe quod in scopo ministerii sui prae ceteris Apostolis Baptista similes futuri. Nempe fuit Baptista in ea totus erat, ut per tonitru praecognitione sui judicium jam tum Judæis fenlive, spoke of the calamities coming upon the Jewish people, if they did not repent, and believe in Jesus as the Christ: as also John the Baptist had declared in his preaching. Matt. iii. 7. . . 12. Luke iii. 17. and Stephen in his Acts vi. 13. 14. James (A) was the first Martyr for Christ among the Apostles. And bids fair for obtaining his petition, in a higher sense, than it was at first intended: of sitting on the right hand, or the left hand of Christ in his kingdom. And the other brother, surviving all the other Apostles, bore the longest testimony to the truth of the gospel.

This account of that name is agreeable to (n) what Grotius says in his Annotations. But Dr. Heumann (o) has another thought. He observes, that Simon, to whom Jesus gave the name of Peter, is often so called. But we do not read, that the two sons of Zebedee were any where else spoken of by the name Boanerges, either by themselves or others. He thinks, that the words should be thus rendered: And he had famed them Boanerges: that is, upon a particular occasion he so called them. That occasion (q) he supposes to be the historic related Luke ix.

52. . . 56.

Judaeis imminens indicaret et averret; ita ad ministerium fratrum horum potissimum ad Judaeos spectaturum erat. Jacobus quidem ea fini post ascensionem Domini nunquam, quod feimus, ab Hierofolyma dicscessit, donec pro fide martyrium subiret. Hoc vero ei evenisse, quam maxime probable est, quia invidiosa praefecturis ejus concio fuit, periculum infanti incredulorum ex Judaeis omnium data occasione ingeminiatus. &c. Lamp. ib. i. 1. cap. 2. num. xvi.

(a) It has long been the general opinion of the people of Spain, that this James, the son of Zebedee, planted the gospel in that country. Gafpar Sacriotus, a learned Spaniard Jesuit, wrote a treatise in defence of it, besides what he says in his Commentarie upon the Acts of the Apostles. But it is inconsistent with the historic in the Acts. None of the Apostles left Judaea so soon. Nor is this opinion founded on the testimony of any ancient writers, of good credit. And it is now generally given up, even by Popish writers. Vid. Baron. A. D. 41. num. i. Tillmont S. Jacques Le Majeur, et note vi. Mem. Ec. Tom. i. I transcribe here the Judgment of Elijus. Deinde, quando occidit eft, viximum cogerit evangelium gentibus prædicari, ut ex præcedentibus et sequentibus patet. Nec dum Apostoli dispersi erant in remotas gentes: sed ejus rei commodum tempus exspectabant. Denique nullus scriptor antiquus certe fideli referit, Jacobum Hispánias vidisse, Est. in An. Ap. Cap. xii. ver. 2.—Vid. et Bosnag. Ann. 44. num. iv. w. et Dictionnaire de Moreri. S. Jacques le Majeur.

(o) Nova Syllage Dissert. Part. i. p. 254. . . 259.

(q) Legimus, et adversus Petrum indigne se gerentem, in hæc verba eru- pisse Christum: Apage, Satana. Jam uti Satanæs non fæculum est ordinarium Petti
52...56. That is an ingenious conjecture. But if this name had been given them in the way of reproof and censure, as Christ once called Peter Satan. Matt. xvi. 23. Mark viii. 33. one would scarcely expect to see it here. The place, as seems to me, leads us to think, the name honorable, as well as Peter. Which has been the general opinion of all times.

In Suicer's Thesaurus, at the word Peter may be seen the observations of many ancient writers upon this name. I take Theepbylaei's only. Who says, that (r) when Christ called these two disciples sons of thunder, he intimated, that they would be great preachers, and eminent divines.

From the time they were called by Christ, they statedly attended upon him. They heard his discourses, and saw his miracles.

They were two of the Twelve, whom (s) Christ sent forth upon a commission, to preach in the land of Israël. Which was of great use to them. Thereby (t) they learned to trust in God, and were prepared for the greater difficulties of their Apostleship afterwards.

John addressed himself to Christ, saying: Master, we saw one casting out demons in thy name. And we forbad him, because he followeth not with us... So in Luke ix. 49. 50. And more at large in Mark ix. 38...41.

But it was a thing, in which several were concerned. For John says: We saw one casting out demons, in thy name. And we forbad him. The historie, as recorded by the Evangelists, led me to think so. And Mr. Lampe (u) was of the same mind. Moreover, it might be done some while before.

Our Lord was going from Galilee, to Jerusalem before the feast of Tabernacles, as some think, or before the feast of the Dedication, as (x) Dr. Doddridge argues. And, as he was to pass through the country of Samaria, he sent messengers before his face. And they went, and entered into a village of the Samaritans, to make ready for him. But they did not receive him, because his face was, as though he would go unto Jerusalem. When his disciples, James and John, saw this, they said: Lord, wilt thou, that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did. But he turned, and rebuked them, and said: Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of. And they went to another village. Luke ix. 51...56. Some have been of opinion, that the messengers sent by our Lord, to prepare entertainment for him, were these two disciples. If so, this proposal might be suspected to proceed as much from resentment

(r) Τις δὲ βηστως δυομαζει του τε ζεβεδαϊων τως μεγαλουχυκας θεολογιτατες. In Marc. Tom. i. p. 205. C.

(t) See Luke xxii. 35.

(u) Ubi supr. l. i. cap. 2. num. 18.

ment of an injurious treatment of themselves, as of their master. But to me that is not certain. I rather think, that those messengers were different persons. So (y) likewise argues Mr. Lampe.

The two brothers, James and John, were ambitious of high posts of honour and dignity in Christ's kingdom: which, with others, they esteem'd to be of a worldly nature. The petition was presented by their mother, but at their instigation. And they seem to have been present at the same time. For our Lord's answer is directed to them. Matt. xx. 20. 23. Mark x. 35. 40.

The two brothers, James and John, and Peter, were the only disciples that were admitted to be present with our Lord at the raising of the daughter of Jairus. Mark v. 37. Luke viii. 51. The same three disciples were taken up by Christ into the mount, when he was transformed in a glorious manner, and Moses and Elias appeared, talking with him. Matt. xvii. 1. Mark ix. 2. Luke ix. 28. The same three were admitted to be present at our Lord's devotions in the garden, when he retired from the rest. But they all failed to watch with their Lord, as he had directed. Matt. xxvi. 36. 45. Mark xiv. 32. 42.

Says St. Mark xiii. 1. 2. And as he went out of the temple, one of his disciples faith unto him: Master, see what manner of stones, and what buildings are here. And Jesus answering said unto him: See sthou these great buildings! There shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down. Compare Matt. xxiv. 1. 2. It follows in Mark xiii. 3. 4. And as he sat on the mount of olives, over against the temple, Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, asked him privately: Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign, when all these things shall be fulfilled? Whereby we perceive, that to those four disciples, especially, our Lord addressed himself, when he delivered the predictions concerning the great desolation, coming upon the Jewish People, recorded in that chapter, and in Matt. xxiv. and Luke xxii.

This Apostle and Peter were the two disciples, whom Jesus sent to prepare for eating his last passover. Luke xxii. 8. Compare Matt. xxvi. 17. 19. Mark xiv. 13. 16.

Our Lord, sitting at supper with his disciples, said: One of you will betray me. Peter beckoned to John, who leaned on the bosom of Jesus, that he would ask, who it should be, of whom he spake. Which he did. And our Lord gave him a sign, by which he might know, whom he intended, John xiii. 21. 26. This is an instance of the freedom, which John might take, as the beloved disciple, and friend of Jesus.

When our Lord was apprehended by the Jewish officers, we are informed by St. Mark xiv. 51. 52. And there followed him a certain young man, having a linen cloth cast about his naked body. And the young men laid hold hold of him. And he left the linen cloth, and fled from them. Some have thought, that this young man was John. Cave (z) gives a good deal of countenance to that supposition. Others (a) have thought him to be James, the Lord’s brother. But Grotius, and justly, wonders, that (b) any should have been of opinion, that he was one of the Apostles.

(y) Cui tamen in eo non accedimus, quod filios Zebedæi ipsos illos legatos putat fuiffe, quos Iesus in vicum Samaritanorum hospitium rogatos miserat. Unde ob illatam fibi injuriam videntur exacerbari efe, sed textus legatos illos a filiis Zebedæi fatis clare dixistit. Accedit, quod Iesus ad illos τέκνους convertus fuerit. Quod indicat, illos, cum Domino consilium proponerent, non fuiffæ Domino obvios, sed pone eum sequentes. Lampe Proleg. l. 1. cap. 2. n. xix. not. (b).

That Peter followed our Lord at a distance, and was admitted into the Hall of the Jewifh High-Priest, we are asurled from all the Gofpels. It has been fuppofed by many, that John f讳ed the like testimonie of affection and reflect for his Lord. For he fays ch. xviii. 15. And Si- mon Peter followed Jefus. And f0 did another disciple. That disciple was known to the High-Priest. And fpoke to her that kept the door, and brought in Peter.

Nevertheless it may be questioned, whether St. John hereby intends himself. Chryfifiom (c) fuppofeth him to be meant, and that St. John concealed his name out of humility and modestie. To the like purpole also (d) Theophylac?. Nor (e) had Jerome any doubt here. But Au- gufijn (f) was cautious in faying, who it was: though he thought it might be John.

Let us now obferve the fentiments of moderons. Whitby upon the place fays: “He feems not to be John. For he being a Galilean, as “well as Peter, they might equally have fuspected him upon that ac- “count.” However, to this it might be anwered, that John being known to the High-Priest, he was safe. But then another difficulty will arise. For it may be faid: How came John to be so well known to the High-Priest, and his familie, as to be able to direct the fervant to admit a stranger, as Peter was, and at that time of night?

Grotius,

(z) “Indeed upon our Lord’s firft apprehenfion, he fled after the other Apostles: it not being without fome probabilities of reafon, that the ancients conceive him to have been that young man, that followed after Chrift, having a linen cloth cast about his naked body: whom when the officers laid hold upon, he left the linen cloth, and fled naked away.” Cave’s Life of St. John, num. ii. p. 151.

(a) See Whitby upon Mark xiv. 51.

(b) Non de Apostolorum grege. Quod miror, veteribus in mentem venire potuisse. Nec e domo, in quam Chriftus in urbe diverterat, fed ex villa ali- qua horto proxima, firepitu militum excitatus, et fubito occurrrens, ut confi- ceret, quid agerent. Grot. ad Marc. xiv. 51.

(c) Tis in f $\alpha$ $\lambda$ $\alpha$ $\upsilon$ $\mu$ $\alpha$ $\beta$ $\upsilon$ $\tau$ $\nu$ $\alpha$ $\tau$ $\upsilon$ $\alpha$ $\pi$ $\upsilon$, x. l. Chr. in Joan. hom. 82. al. 82. T. 8. p. 491.

(d) Tis in f $\alpha$ $\lambda$ $\alpha$ $\upsilon$ $\mu$ $\alpha$ $\beta$ $\upsilon$ $\tau$ $\nu$ $\alpha$ $\tau$ $\upsilon$ $\alpha$ $\pi$ $\upsilon$, $\alpha$ $\pi$ $\omega$ $\kappa$ $\epsilon$ $\iota$ $\tau$ $\iota$ $\nu$ $\alpha$ $\tau$ $\upsilon$ $\tau$ $\iota$ $\nu$ $\alpha$ $\tau$ $\upsilon$ $\nu$. x. l. Theoph. in Job. xviii. p. 809.

Grotius, likewise thought, that (g) this other disciple could not be John, or any one of the Twelve, but rather some believer, an inhabitant of Jerusalem, and, possibly, the person, at whose house our Lord had eat the paschal supper.

Lampe (b) hesitates. And at length allegeth the sentiment of a learned writer, who conjectured, that this other disciple was Judas, the traitor. For Judas, he thinks, was soon touched with remorse for what he had done. And he might follow Jesus to the High-Priest's hoping, that by some means he might escape out of the hands of thofe, to whom he had betrayed him. Judas being there himself, might be very willing to let in Peter. Whether this conjecture be specious, or not, I cannot say. But it does not seem to me very likely, that St. John should characterife Judas, by the title of another disciple, after he had betrayed his Lord and Master.

After all, I am not able to determine this point. At first reading this place of St. John, we are naturally enough led to think, that by the other disciple should be meant himself. But upon farther consideration there arise difficulties, that may induce us to hesitate.

Whether he followed Jesus to the Hall of Caiaphas, or not, we are assured, that he attended the crucifixion, and seems to have been the only one of the Twelve, that did so.

John xix. 25...27. Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother. . . . When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by, whom he loved, he saith unto his mother: Woman, behold thy fon. Then saith he to the disciple: Behold thy mother. And from that hour that disciple took her unto his own home. There might be several reafons for that determination: as John's being a relation, the sweetness of his temper, and his having somewhat of his own. He had been the beloved disciple, or friend of Jesus. And therefore was the most proper to be thus trusted.

(g) Et sane non est probabile, aut ipsum Johannem hic intelligi: (cur enim Calileus cum effet, minus interrogaretur ab adfiantibus, quam Petrus?) aut aliquaem ex Duodecim, sed alium quendam Hierofolyminum, non aequa manifestum autorem Iefu: quales multi crant in urbe, ut supra didicimus. xii. 42. Valde mihi fe probat conjectura exiftimantium, hunc efe eum, in cius domo Iefus cenaverat, ob id quod legitur. Matt. xxvi. 18. Grot. ad Job. xvii. 15.

ed. And doubtles this designation was perfectly agreeable to our Lord's mother.

John saw his Lord expire on the cross. And still farther. One of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side. And forthwith came thereout blood and water. And he that saw it bore witness. And his record is true. ch. xix. 34. 35.

And undoubtedly he also staid afterwards, and saw the body of Jesus laid in the sepulchre, and the stone placed at the mouth of it: as related by himself. xix. 38. . . . 42. Comp. Matt. xxvii. 53. . . . 60. Mark xv. 45. . . . 47. Luke xxiii. 50. . . . 56.

Early in the morning, on which our Lord rose from the dead, Marie Magdalen, and other women, came to the sepulchre, and saw that it was open, the stone having been taken away. Marie Magdalen knowing where she could find the two Apostles, Peter and John, went back to the city, and told them, that they had taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre: and, says she, we know not where they have laid him. So they ran both together, to the sepulchre. And by what they saw there, they were led to the persuasion, that Jesus was risen from the dead. As related John xx. 1. . . . 10.

John was present with the other disciples, when Jesus shewed himself to them in the evening of the day, on which he arose, and likewise eight days after. ch. xx. 19. . . . 29.

He has also particularly related the historie of our Lord's shewing himself to several disciples at the sea of Tiberias: when they had an extraordinary draught of fishes, in number one hundred and fifty three. There were present at that time Simon Peter, Thomas, Nathanael, the sons of Zebedee, and two other disciples. ch. xxi. 1. . . . 23. Beside other things, which I omit, our Lord having had discourse with Peter, and having foretold his martyrdom: Peter put to him a question, concerning John, saying: Lord, what shall this man do? Jesus saith unto him: If I will, that he tarry, till I come, what is that to thee? Follow thou me. Then went this saying abroad among the brethren, that that disciple should not die. Yet Jesus said not unto him: He shall not die. But if I will, that he tarry, till I come, what is that to thee? Thus checking, as I apprehend, Peter's curiosity. However, it has been suppos'd by judicious Commentators, that here is an intimation, that John should not die before the destruction of Jerusalem. Nor is there any doubt, but he survived that event, which few or none of the other Apostles did. Though (i) our Lord's words may be understood to contain only an obscure intimation, that whereas Peter's days would be shorten'd by martyrdom, this disciple should be preserved, till he died in the ordinarie course of nature.

From all which we perceive, that (k) St. John was present at most of the

(i) Ita obscure significat, Johannem, non, ut Petrum morte violenta moritum, sed tali, quâ fine hominem vi solveretur, ubi Chriifus tempus idoneum judicaret. Quod et contigit, ut Veterum plures consentiunt. Grat. ad Joan. xxii. 22.

(k) Ex ipha historia evangelica Joannis probabilis fit, omnibus eventibus, itineribus, miraculis, concionibus servatoris nostri ipsum interfuisse. . . . cum probabilis fit, illum fuiffe inter discipulos duos Joannis Baptifae, a quibus collectionis
the things related by him in his Gospel: and that he was an eye and ear-witness of our Lord's labours, journeyings, discourses, miracles, his low abasement even to an ignominious death, and his being alive again, and then ascending to heaven.

Having (l) been present with the rest of the Apostles at the Lord's ascension, he (m) returned with them from mount Olivet to Jerusalem, and continued with them, joying with them in their devotions, and in the choice of another, to supply the place, of Judas: and (n) partook in the plentiful effusion of the Holy Ghost upon the Apostles and their companion on the day of Pentecost next ensuing.

Peter and John, who often accompanied each other, healed the lame man at the temple, and upon that occasion preached to the people, who assembled about them. For which they were brought before the Jewifh Council, and after some debates were dismissed with orders, not to preach any more in the name of Jesus. Acts iii. and iv. 1. . . . 22.

Some while after this, the number of believers still encreasing at Jerusalem, John and the rest of the Apostles were apprehended, and put into the common prison. But they were the same night delivered by an angel, who commanded them to go and speak in the temple to the people. Which they did early in the morning. Whereupon they were again taken up, and brought before the Council, who consulted how they might put them to death. But by the advice of Gamaliel that design was laid aside. And when they had beaten them, they commanded, that they should not speak in the name of Jesus, and let them go. Whereupon the Apostles departed from the presence of the Council, rejoicing. . . . And daily in the temple, and from house to house, they ceased not to teach and preach Jesus Christ.

Afterwards, there being a violent persecution at Jerusalem, many were scattered abroad. Philip, one of the seven, went down to Samaria, and preached to them, and wrought many miracles, insomuch that great numbers believed. When the Apostles, who were at Jerusalem, heard of this, they sent unto them Peter and John, that they might receive the Holy Ghost. Having performed that service, they returned to Jerusalem. And in their way preached the gospel in many villages of the Samaritans. Acts viii. 5. . . . 25.

From lectionis discipulorum initium Jesus fecit, uti L. i. cap. 2. §. ii. ostendimus, inde colligimus, Evangeliftam nostrum statim ab initio rebus, que scribit, interiusse, et hanc esse veram rationem, cur non altius filum historiae sua inciperat. Ex omnibus quoque sequentibus narrationibus nulla est, in qua absen tem Evangelistam nostrum statuamus iusse, nisi forte excipere velis illa, quae in palatio Annae et Caiaphae acciderunt. Cap. xviii. 13. . . . 17. De quibus tamen res est dubia, quia definiri accurate nequit, annon discipulis, qui Petrum in Palatium Caiaphae introduxerit, ipse Evangelista noSter fuerit. Sed licet illa praefens non percepisset, a Petro tamen, focio intimo, statim procudibuo audiretur. Et forte per ejus relationem excitatus est, ut ad Praetorium Pilati summo mane advolaret, atque ita cum reliquis mulieribus Jesum ad crucem sequeretur. . . . Ex quo patet, quanta cum emphafi praetereris Apostolis et Evangelis diceretur potuit: Quae audivimus, quae vidimus. 1 Jo. i. 1. 2. Lamp. Proleg. l. 2. cap. 4. num. vii.

(n) Acts ii. 1. . . . 13.
From what St. Paul says in the second chapter of the epistle to the Galatians we perceive, that John was present at the Council of Jerusalem: of which an account is given Acts xv. Which Council was held in the year 49. or 50. or thereabout. And it may be reckoned probable, that till that time John had staid in the land of Israel, and had not been abroad in any Gentil countreys.

I would add, that though no miracles are related to be done by St. John, beside those, which have been here taken notice of; I reckon it very probable, that many miracles, beside those particularly mentioned by the historian, were wrought by him, and other Apostles, during their stay in Judea. This may be inferred from general expressions of St. Luke in several places. And many signs and wonders were done by the Apostles. Acts ii. 43. And with great power gave the Apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus. ch. iv. 33. And by the hands of the Apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people. ch. v. 12. Comp. iv. 29. 30.

From the book of the Revelation, ch. i. 9. we learn, that St. John was for a while in the island called Patmos, where he was favored with visions and revelations. Thus far we have endeavored to collect the historie of this Apostle from the New Testament.

II. From eccleiaistical historie we learn, that St. John lived to a great Age, and that in the later part of his life he refided in Asia, particularly at Ephesus, the chief city of that countrey.

Concerning his abode in Asia we have divers testimonies of good credit. Irenæus in (o) two places of his work against Herefies, both (p) cited by Eusebe, says, that John the Apostle lived in Asia till the time of Trajan. [Who succeeded Neros in the year of Christ 98.] Eusebe (q) understands Clement of Alexandria to speak to the like purpose. Origen also says, that (r) John having lived long in Asia, died at Ephesus. Polycrates, Bishop of Ephesus about 196. is an unexceptionable witness, that (s) John was buried in that city. Jerome (t) in his book of Illustrious Men, and in his books against Jovinin, says, "that the Apostle John lived in Asia, to the time of Trajan. And dying at a great age, in the sixty-eighth year after our Lord's passion, was buried near the city of Ephesus." Supposing our Lord to have been crucified in the year 32. of the vulgar era, which (u) seems to have been Jerome's opinion, sixty eight years will reach to the year 100. or the third of Trajan. At which year of that Emperor the death of St. John is placed by Jerome in his (x) Chronicle.

What was John's age, when called by Christ, we are not informed.

Baronius

(p) Euseb. H. E. l. 3. cap. 23. in.
(q) Vid. Euseb. l. 2. iiid.
(s) Ab. Euseb. l. v. cap. 24. in.
(x) P. 165, et ed. Scalig.
Baronius (y) thought he might then be about 22 years of age. Having been with Christ three years, he was about 25 years of age when our Lord was crucified. Tillemont (z) supposes St. John to have been about 25 or 26 years of age when called to be an Apostle. Lampe (a) thinks, that he was about the same age with our Saviour. For my part, I cannot persuade myself, that any of Christ’s Apostles, when called to attend upon him, that they might be his witnesses to the world, were much under the age of thirty. If it hence follows, that John was a hundred years of age, or thereabout, when he died, it is not at all incredible, nor unlikely.

III. As it is an allowed point, that John dwelt in Asia in the later part of his life; we may be reasonably desirous to know, when he settled in that country. And for determining this, the books of the New Testament may afford good hints. For (b) in all St. Luke’s historie of the preaching and travels of Paul, particularly in Asia, no mention is made of John. Which may induce us to think, that he was not there at that time. Nor are there any salutations sent to John in any of St. Paul’s epistles, writ at Rome: several of which were sent to Ephesus, or other places, not very remote from it: as the epistle to the Ephesians, the second epistle to Timothy, probably, at Ephesus, the epistle to the Colossians, and the epistle to Philemon, at Colosse.

I will now observe the opinions of some learned moderns. Baronius thought, that (c) this Apostle did not come to reside in Asia, until after the death of St. Peter, and St. Paul. Du Pin says: We (d) do not exactly know, when he came into Asia. Perhaps it was about the year 70. Tillemont was of opinion, that (e) St. John did not come to reside in Asia, till about the year 66. But he supposeth, that upon some occasion, he had before that been in that country, without making a stay there. Which last, as I apprehend, is said without any good authority. Mr. Lampe was of opinion, that (f) John did not leave Judea, till after the death of James, called the Less, and but a short time only, before the destruction of Jerusalem.

To me it seems not unlikely, that St. John came into Asia, about the time that the war broke out in Judea, in the year 66. or a short time before,

(a) Quare nihil impeduit, quo minus ejusdem ferme ætatis cum servatore nostro fuerit. Prolegom. in Jo. l. i. cap. 2. num. i. not. (a).
(b) “In the division of provinces, which the Apostles made among themselves, Asia fell to his share, though he did not presently enter into his charge. Otherwise, we must have heard of him in the account, which St. Luke gives of St. Paul’s several journeys into, and residence in those parts.” Cave’s Life of St. John. §. iv.
(c) A. d. 97. num. ii.
(d) Du Pin Diff. Prel. l. 2. cb. 2. §. vi.
(e) S. Jean. art. iv.
(f) Post ejus (Jacobi Minoris) excellum neminem ex τῶν δύο διδακτῶν grege et constantius et diutius Hierofolymis subfistit nec nostrorum Apostolorum: ita ut vix exiguus ante exordium intervallo, inde se avelli pateretur. Proleg. l. i. cap. 2. n. xv. p. 29.
fore, when, probably, St. Peter and Paul had been before crowned with martyrdom.

As St. John said a good while in Palestine, it may be reasonably concluded, that the virgin Marie did not go with him to Ephesus, as (g) Baronius, and some others have thought, but died, before he went thither. Which was the opinion of (b) Cave, and (i) Bafnage.

IV. St. John having had a long life, many things have been said of him, some true, others false. Most of them have been already taken notice of in several chapters of this work. It may not be improper to recollect them here, with some remarks.

1. Apollonius, who wrote against the Montanists, and flourished about the year 211. says, in a fragment, preferred by Eusebe, "That (k) by the divine power John raised up a dead man to life at Ephesus.” Which miracle is also taken notice of by (l) Sozomen, and (m) Nicephorus, and may have been really done. But if we had had a more circumstantial history of it, and if it had been mentioned by some other early writers, beside Apollonius, it would have been more credible.

2. There was a book forged with the title of the Travels of Paul and Thecla by a Presbyter, who was deposed for so doing, as related by Tertullian. Jerome says, that he was a Presbyter in Asia, and that he was convicted before St. John of being the author of it, and for that reason was deposed. Of this matter we have already spoken distinctly already, and therefore refer to what was then (n) said.

3. It also related of our Apostle, that going to bathe at Ephesus, and perceiving, that Cerinthus, or, as others say, Ebion, was already in the bath, he came out again hastily, and would not make use of the bath. The probability of which account was examined (o) formerly.

4. It is said, that by order of the Emperour Domitian St. John was cast into a caldron of boiling oil at Rome, and came out again, without being hurt. The (p) truth of which ittorie likewise has been considered by us.

5. Polycrates, Bishop of Ephesus in the later part of the second century, says, that John was Christ's High-Priest, wearing on his forehead a golden plate. Which account (g) has been considered, and the judgements of divers learned men upon it alleged.

6. Eusebe has a ittorie, from a work of Clement of Alexandria, of a young man in a city of Asia, not far from Ephesus, who after having been instructed

(g) A. d. 44. n. xxix.
(b) "Probable therefore it is, that he dwelt in his own house at Jerusalem, at least till the death of the blessed Virgin.” Cave's Life of St. John, § iv.
(l) Soz. 1. 7. cap. 27. p. 752. (m) Niceph. 1. 4. cap. 25.
(n) See ch. 27. vol. ii. p. 641...643. and ch. 29. p. 698. &c.
(o) See ch. 6. vol. i. p. 190. 191. note (B) the second edition, and ch. 114. vol. x. p. 108.
(q) See ch. 114. vol. x. p. 104...107.
trusted in the Christian Religion took to evil courses, and became prostitute: but nevertheless was afterwards brought to repentance by our Apostle. This account is inserted at large by Eusebius (r) in his Ecclesiastical History. It has been repeated in like manner by Simeon Meta-phrases in his Life of St. John. Chrysostom (s) has referred to it. It is also briefly told in the (t) Paschal Chronicle. I have already taken some notice of this (u) story. S. Bajnaze (x) thinks it to be a fable, or feigned apologue, composed to convey useful instruction. Mr. Lampe (y) is favorable to this history. And, perhaps, it may be true, abating some circumstances. Which are not seldom added to such accounts, to render them the more entertaining.

7. Jerome has given an account of St. John's method of preaching, when he was of a great age, and was not able to make a long discoure.
This (z) was taken notice of by us in a proper place. Nor is the truth of it, though related by Jerome only, disputed, either by (a) Lampe, or
(b) Le Clerc.

8. It is generally supposed, that (c) John is one of those Apostles, who lived a single life. It is said by (d) Tertullian, and Jerome. Which last affirms, that (c) ecclesiastical history affures us of it. And he makes it the ground of all the peculiar privileges of this Apostle.

9. Another

(r) L. 3. cap. 23.
(t) Chr. Pasch. p. 251. D.
(x) Apologo quam historiae videtur esse proprior. Ac sane nescimus, si vera historia est, cur Clementis μωάκ, fabulae, nomen ipsi primum impofuerit.
Fabula sive ratione seignificantis, veritasque respectu seignificant, quae mentibus proponebatur, nempe eximii pafloris officium, ac vis penitentiae.
Non infolens erat antiquis, ut apologist ejusmodi ad infundantes mores.
Si cui tamen placet de Joanne Clementis narrationem veram historiam esse, quia hic Veteribus visum, de hac re quidem contendere nolimus. Befn. ann.
97. num. x.

(y) Prolegom. l. i. cap. v. num. iii. ix.
(z) Vol. x. p. 103.
(a) Licet enim Hieronymus solus hujus narrationis auctor sit, nihil tamen occurrir, quod non eum more Joannis, ut eum ratione Ecclesiæ ejus temporalis apprime convenit. Lamp. Proleg. l. i. cap. v. n. xi.

(b) H. E. ann. 99. num i.
(c) Vid. Lamp. Proleg. l. i. cap. i. num. xiii.

(e) Talem fuisse eunuchum, quem Jesu amavit plurimum, Evangelii Jeanne, ecclesiastica credunt historiam qui recubuit super pectus Jesu:
qu, Petro tardius ambulante, elatus virgininitatis alis eccevit ad Dominum:
qu in secreta divinae nati vitatis immaculatis, autus est dicere: In prin-

Joannes vero nofrer, quæ aquila, ad superna volat, et ad ipsum Patrem pervenit, dicens: In principio erat Verbum, &c. Expuluit virginitas, quod nuptiæ feire non potentat. Et ut brevi f remorse multa comprehendam, doceanque, ejus privilegium ei: Joannes, ino in Joanne virginitas: a Domino
9. Another thing, said of John, is, that he was banished into Patmos, an island of the Mediterranean Sea, not far from the coast of Asia. And, if he is the writer of the book of the Revelation, which we do not now dispute, the thing is unquestioned. But I have deferred the consideration of this particular, till now, because learned moderns are not agreed about the time of it.

V. I shall therefore first put down the accounts of ancient authors, and then observe the opinions of learned men of later times.

Irenæus says of the Revelation, "that (f) it was seen no long time ago, but almost in our age, at the end of the reign of Domitian." And though Irenæus does not say, that St. John was then in Patmos, yet since he supposeth him to be the person, who had the revelation, he must have believed him to be then in Patmos, as the book itself says, ch. i. 9.

Clement, of Alexandria, in his book, entitled, Who is the rich man that may be saved, as cited by Eusebe, speaks (g) of "John's returning from Patmos to Ephesus, after the death of the tyrant," By whom, it is probable, he means Domitian.

Tertullian, in his Apology, speaks of Domitian, as (h) having banished some Christians, and afterwards giving them leave to return home: probably intending St. John, and some others. In another work he says, "that (i) John having been sent for to Rome, was cast into a vessel of boiling oil, and then banished into an island:" in the time of Domitian, as is most probable.

Origen, explaining Matt. xx. 23, says: "James (k) the brother of John, was killed with a sword by Herod. And a Roman Emperour, as tradition teaches, banished John into the island Patmos for the testimonie, which he bore to the word of truth. And John himself bears witness to his banishment, omitting the name of the Emperour, by whom he was banished, saying in the Revelation: I John, who also am your brother and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ, was in the isle of Patmos, for the word of God, and for the testimonie of Jesus Christ. And (l) it seems, that the Revelation was seen in that island."

Victorin, Bishop of Pettau about 290. again and again says, that (m) John was banished by Domitian, and in his reign law the revelation.

Eusebe, giving an account of Domitian's persecution, says: "In (n) this persecution, as it is said, John, the Apostle and Evangelist, being still living, was banished into the island Patmos for the testimonie of the word of God."

Epiphanius, as formerly (p) shewn, says: "John prophesied in the isle of Patmos, in the reign of Claudius." And in another place, then only referred to, he says: "John wrote his Gospel in his old age, when he was more than ninety years old, after his return from Patmos, which in the time of Claudius Cesar."

Jerome, in his book of Illustrious Men, as (r) formerly cited, says: Domitian in the fourteenth year of his reign raising the second persecution after Nero, John was banished into the island Patmos, where he wrote the Revelation. And in another work, also cited (s) formerly, he says again: "John was a Prophet, as he saw the Revelation in the island Patmos, where he was banished by Domitian." And I shall now transcribe below (t) in his own words, without translating them, his comment upon Matt. xx. 23. where he speaks of St. John's having been banished into Patmos: but does not name the Emperour, by whom he was banished.

Sulpicius Severus says, "that (u) John, the Apostle and Evangelist, was banished by Domitian into the island Patmos: where he had visions, and where he wrote the book of the Revelation."

Aretbas, in his Commentarie upon the Revelation, supposed to be writ in the sixth centurie, says, upon the authority of Eusebius, that (x) John was banished into Patmos by Domitian.

Ifdore, of Seville, near the end of the sixth centurie, says: "Domitian (y) raised a persecution against the Christians. In his time the Apostle John having been banished into the island Patmos saw the Revelation."

We may now make a remark or two.

1. All these testimonies are of use, whether they name the island, where John was banished, or the Emperour, by whom he was banished, or not. They all agree, that St. John was sent thither by way of punishment, or restraint, for bearing witness to the truth. Which confutes

(q) ... την τινι ίλαυνις γενομενης ζαίσαςος. Haer. 51. num. xii.
(r) See Vol. x. p. 100. (s) P. 102.
(t) Queritur, quomodo calicem martyrii filii Zebedaei, Jacobus videlicet.

(u) See Vol. xi. p. 11.

(x) Εξόριζον δι’ αὐτὸν γνησιαίαν πάτμων τῇ νήσῳ ὑπὸ δομιτίαν, εὐσείες ὁ παραφίλων τῇ χρονικῇ αὐτῷ σφιξθῳ παρατίθεται. Andr. in Apoc. ap. Occum. Tom. 2. p. 654. D.

futes the opinion of Lightfoot, "that (z) John travelling in the ministrie of the gospel, up and down, from Asia westward, comes into the isle Patmos, in the Icarian see, an island about thirty miles compass. And there on the Lord's day he has these visions, and an angel interprets to him all he saw."

2. All these writers, who mention the time of the Revelation, and of the banishment, say, it was in the time of Domitian, and that he was the Emperour, by whom St. John was banished: except Epiphanius, who says, it was in the time of Claudius. As he is singular, it should seem, that he cannot be of any great weight against so many others.

Nevertheles, as some learned men, particularly Grotius, have paid great regard to Epiphanius in this point; it is fit, we should consider, what they say.

Says Grotius in a tract, entitled A Comment upon divers texts of the New Testament, relating to Antichrist: particularly, upon the tenth verse of the xvii. chapter of the Revelation: "John (a) began to be illuminated with divine visions in the island Patmos, in the time of Claudius. Which was the opinion of the most ancient Christians. See "Epiphanius in the Heresie of the Alogians. Claudius, as we learn from "Acts xviii. 2. commanded all the Jews to depart from Rome. Under the "name of Jews, Christians also were comprehended, as has been observ'd ed by many learned men. And it cannot be doubted, but many Governours of the Roman provinces followed that example. So therefore John was driven from Ephesus."

That argument was long ago examined by (b) David Blondel, who says 1. It is not true, that the most ancient writers said, that St. John was sent into Patmos by Claudius. It is Epiphanius only, who says so. He is altogether singular. There are no ancients, either before, or after him, who have said this. 2. As Epiphanius is singular, he ought not to be regarded. 3. There was no persecution of the Christians in the reign of Claudius. There is no proof from any ancient monuments, that Christians, as such, suffered banishment under that Emperour. It is allowed, that (c) Nero was the first Roman Emperour, who persecuted

(a) Harmonie of the N. T. Vol. i. p. 341.
(b) Des Sibylls. l. 2. cb. iii. p. 145...148. à Charenten. 1649.

Nam primus Romae Christianos supplicios et mortibus affecit. P. Orso l. 7. cap. 7.

Vid. et Euseb. H. E. l. 2. cap. 25. p. 67.
ed the Christians. 4. The edict of Claudius only banished the Jews from Rome. It did not affect the Jews in the provinces, as appears from the New Testament itself, particularly, Acts xviii. and xix. It is manifest from the history in the Acts, that in the reign of Claudius, in other parts of the Empire, out of Rome, the Jews enjoyed as full liberty, as they did before. Paul and Silas, Aquila and Priscilla, dwelled quietly at Corinth: where the men of their nation had their synagogue, and assembled in it according to custom, without molestation. 5. Nor could the Governors of provinces banish either Jews or Christians out of their governments, without order from the Emperor. And that they had no such order, is apparent. Neither Jews nor Christians were molested by them at Ephesus, as may be perceived from the history in the nineteenth chapter of the Acts. That they were not molested by them at Corinth, appears from the preceding chapter. 6. St. John could not be banished from Ephesus by Claudius, or the Governors under him. For he was not in that city during the reign of that Emperor, nor in the former part of the reign of Nero, as has been shewn. He did not come thither, till near the end of the reign of the last mentioned Emperor. Therefore he could not be sooner banished from Ephesus.

These observations, if I am not mistaken, are sufficient to confute the opinion of Grotius.

Sir Isaac Newton was of opinion, that (b) St. John was banished into Patmos, and that the Revelation was seen in the reign of Nero, before the destruction of Jerusalem.

"Eusebius, says (d) he, in his Chronicle, and Ecclesiastical Historie "fellows Irenæus: (who said, the Apocalypse was writ in the time of "Domitian:) But afterwards in his Evangelical Demonstration he con-
"joins the banishment of John into Patmos, with the deaths of Peter and "Paul."

To which I answer, first, that (e) the Ecclesiastical Historie was not writ before the Evangelical Demonstration, but after it. For the Demonstration

(b) Sir Isaac Newton's opinion is much the same with that of John Hentenius of Mecklin, confuted by David Blondel in the same work, and in the next chapter to that, in which he confuted Grotius. Hentenius and Newton argue much alike. It may be suspected, that Newton incautiously borrowed some of his weak arguments. Says Blondel: "Jean Hentenius en la preface sur le Commentaire d'Arethas... a le discours, qui suit: Il ne semble, que Jean... a été rejeté par Neron en Patmos, au meme temps que celui là a tué dans Rome... Pierre et Paul. Tertullien, consis des temps des memes Apotre, offure cela meme en deux lieux. Eusebe aussi trace la meme chose au livre de la Demonstration Evangelique, combien qu'en ses Chroniques, et en l'Histore Ecclesiastique il dit que cela est arrivé sous Domition; ce que aussi Saint Higrome et plusieurs autres suivent. Mais a ces lieures cy, comme ecris es années precedentes, je grande autorité n'est pas attribuée, qu'à celui de la Demonstration Evangelique, neu qu'il a été depuis, et plus correcement elaborate. Blondel des Sibylles. l. 2. ch. iv. p. 148. 149.

(d) Newton's Observations upon the Apocalypse of St. John. ch. i. p. 236.

monstration is referred to at the end of the second chapter of the first book of the Ecclesiastical Historie. Secondly, Eusebius in his Demonstration is not different from himself in his Ecclesiastical Historie. In his Demonstration, having spoken of the imprisonments of all the Apohtles at Jerusalem, and of their being beaten, and of the stoning of Stephen, the beheading of James the son of Zebedee, and the imprisonments of Peter, he adds: "James (f) the Lord’s brother, was stoned, Peter was crucified at Rome with his head downward, and Paul was beheaded, and John banished into an island." But he does not say, that all these things happened in the time of one and the same Emperor. It is plain, that it is not his design to mention exactly the time of the sufferings of all these persons. Nothing hinders our supposing, that the Apohtles Peter and Paul were put to death by order of Nero, and John banished by Domitian, many years afterwards, agreeably to what himself writes in his Chronicle and Historie.

It follows in Sir Isaac Newton. "And (g) to do Tertullian, and Pseudo-Prochorus, as well as the first author, whoever he was, of that very "ancient fable, that St. John was put by Nero into a vessel of hot "oil."

I place below (h) the words of Tertullian, to which Sir Isaac refers. And I answer: It is true, that Tertullian speaks of the death of Peter and Paul, and of John’s being cast into boiling oyl, and then banished, all together. But he does not say, that all happened in the same reign. St. John’s banishment is the last thing mentioned by him. And, probably, it happened not, till after the death of Peter and Paul. It is likely, that Tertullian supposed it to have been done by the order of Domitian. For in another place he speaks of the persecution of that Emperor, as (i) consisting chiefly in banishments. "... and Pseudo-Prochorus. What place of Prochorus, who pretended to be one of the seven deacons, and is called by Baronius (k) himself a great liar, Sir Isaac Newton refers to, I do not know. But in his historie of St. John he is entirely against him. For (l) he particularly relates the sufferings, which St. John underwent in the second persecution of the Christians, which was rained by Domitian. That Emperor sent orders to the Proconsul at Ephesus,

(f) ... κύπερ υπ’ ἐν δυνάμει κατακεφαλίς ταυεταί παῦλος τι ἀποτίμηται, ἰωάννης τι νῆον παράδιδοτα. Dem. Ev. l. 3. p. 116.

(g) As before, p. 236.

(i) Tentaverat et Domitianus... sed quâ et homo, facile ceptum repræsit, restitutis etiam quos relegaverat. Apol. cap. 5.

(k) —in multis mendacissimus hic auctor sullisse convincitur. An. 92. num. i.

Ephesus, to apprehend the Apostle. When the Proconsul had got St. John in his power, he informed Domitian of it. Who then commanded the Proconsul to bring him to Rome. When (m) he was come, the Emperor would not fee him, but ordered him to be cast into a vessel of scalding oyl, and he came out unhurt. Then Domitian commanded the Proconsul to have St. John back again to Ephesus. Some time (n) after that, by order of the same Domitian, John, and others at Ephesus, were banished into Patmos. Domitian (o) being dead, they returned to Ephesus with the leave of his successor, who did not persecute the Christians. So Pseudo-Prochorus.

Since the great Newton has been pleased to refer to such a writer, I shall take notice of another, of the like fort. I mean Abdias, who allumcd the character of the first bishop of Babylon. What he says, is to this purpose: that (p) John, who survived the other Apostles, lived to the time of Domitian, preaching the word to the people in Asia. When Domitian's edict for persecuting the Christians was brought to Ephesus, and John refused to deny Christ, or to give over preaching, the Proconsul ordered, that he should be drowned in a vessel of boiling oyl. But John presently leaped out unhurt. The Proconsul would then have fet him at liberty, if he had not feared to transgress the Emperour's edict. He therefore banished John into Patmos, where he saw and wrote the Revelation. After the death of Domitian, his edicts having been abrogated by the Senate, they who had been banished, returned to their homes. And John came to Ephesus, where he had a dwelling, and many friends.

Then follows an account of St. John's visiting the churches in the neighborhood of Ephesus. Where is inserted also the story, formerly taken

(m) Audiens autem Domitianus de adventu ejus, noluit impius Cæsar videre faciem Apostoli. Et jussit, ut Proconsul duceret ad Portam Latinam, et in ferventis olei dolum illum vivum dimitti. &c. Ib. cap. 10.

(n) Ibid cap. 14.

(o) Mortuo autem Domitiano, qui nos tranfunerat, in exilium, succellor ejus non prohibebat Christianos. Et cum audisset de bonitate et sanctimoniam Joannis, quodque fuisset injufla a preceedentore suo exilio relegatus, per litteras nos revocavit ab exilio. Ib. cap. 45.

taken notice of, concerning the young man, as related by Eusebius from Clement of Alexandria: and as happening, not after the death of Nero, but of Domitian.

Newton proceeds: "as well as the first author, whoever he was, of that very ancient fable, that John was put by Nero into a vefsel of hot oyl, and coming out unhurt, was banifhed by him into Patmos. "Though this story be no more than a fiction, yet it was founded on a tradition of the firft Churches, that John was banifhed into Patmos in the days of Nero."

Who was the first author of that fable, I do not know. But it does not appear, that Tertullian, the firft writer who has mentioned it, thought it to be in the time of Nero. He might mean, and probably did mean, Domitian, the fame, who banifhed John into an ifland. As did also, the two writers just taken notice of, Præchorus and Abdias, to whom we were led by Sir Izaac. Jerome, who (q) in his books againft Jovinian, mentions this ftorie, as from Tertullian, according to some copies, fays, it was done at Rome, according to others, in the time of Nero. However in the fame place, as well as elfewhere, Jerome expressly fays, that John was banifhed into Patmos by Domitian. And (r) in the other place, where he mentions the cafting St. John into boylaing oyl, he fays: "And prefently afterwards he was banifhed into the ifland Patmos." Therefore that other trial, which St. John met with, was in the fame reign, that is, Domitian's. And indeed Jerome always fuppofes St. John's banifhment to have been in that reign: as he particularly relates in the ninth chapter of his book of Illuftrious Men. Let me add, that if the ftorie of St. John's being put into a vefsel of fcalding oyl be a fable, and a fiction, it must be hazardous to build an argument upon it.

It follows in Newton: "Epiphanius reprefents the Gospel of John as written in the time of Domitian, and the Apocalypfe even before that of Nero." I have already faid enough of Epiphanius in considering the opinion of Grotius. However, as one would think, Sir Izaac Newton had little reafon to mention Epiphanius, when he does not follow him. He fays, that St. John was banifhed into Patmos in the time of Claudius: Sir Izaac, not till near the end of the reign of Nero.

"Arethas, fays (s) Sir Izaac, in the beginning of his Commentaries quotes the opinion of Irenæus from Eusebius, but does not follow it. "For he afterwards affirms, that the Apocalypfe was written before the deftruction of Jerusalem, and that former Commentators had expounded ed the fithfeal of that deftruction."

To

(s) As before, p. 236.
To which I answer. Arethas does indeed say, that (t) some interpreters had explained things under the sixth seal, as relating to the destruction of Jerusalem by Vespasian. But they were some only, not the most. Yea, he presently afterwards says, that the most interpreted it otherwise. Nor does he say, that any of those Commentators were of opinion, that the Apocalypse was writ before the destruction of Jerusalem. Arethas seems to have been of opinion, that things, which had come to pass long before, might be represented in the Revelation. Therefore immediately before that passage, explaining Rev. vi. 12. 13. he says: "What (w) is the opening of the sixth seal? It is the cross and death of the Lord, followed by his resurrection, desirable to all faithful and understanding men. And lo, there was a great earthquake, manifestly denoting, says he, the signs that happened during the crucifixion, the shaking of the earth, the darkness of the sun, the turning the moon into blood. For when it is full moon, being the fourteenth day, how was it possible, that the sun should be eclipsed by it’s interposition?"

However, I must not conceal what he says afterwards, in another chapter of his (x) Commentarie. He is explaining Rev. vii. 4. 8. These, says he, who instructs the Evangelist, will not partake in the calamities inflicted by the Romans. For the destruction caused by the Romans had not fallen upon the Jews, when the Evangelist received these instructions. Nor was he at Jerusalem, but in Ionia, where is Ephesus. For he said at Jerusalem no more than fourteen years. And after the death of our Lord’s mother, he left Judea, and went to Ephesus, as (y) tradition says: where also, as is said, he had the revelation of future things.” But how can we rely upon a writer of the sixth century for the particulars? that John did not stay at Jerusalem more than fourteen years: that he left Judea upon the death of our Lord’s mother, and then went to Ephesus: when we can evidently perceive from the historie in the Acts, that in the fourteenth year after our Lord’s ascension, there were no Christian converts at Ephesus? and that the church at Ephesus was not founded by St. Paul, till several years afterwards. What avails it, to refer to such passages as these? Which when looked into, and examined, contain no certain assurances of any thing. And Sir Isaac Newton himself says: “It (z) seems to me, that Peter and John stayed with their churches in Judea and Syria: till the Romans made war upon their nation, that is, till the twelfth year of Nero.” or A. D. 66.

We

(t) Τοις δὲ τάυτα εἰς τῷ ὑπὸ οὐσισταιαν γενομένην πολιορκίαν ἵξιλαθον πάντα τὰ εἰρήματα τεχνόλογικατες. Οι δὲ πλισοὶ τῶν ἑπισκεπτῶν. κ. λ. Areth. cap. 18. p. 709. A.

(u) Τες δὲ ἡ λόγια τῆς ἐκκλησίας ὁφειλόντος; ὁ σάρξες τῷ κυρίῳ καὶ τιμηθοῦσιν ἡ ἐκκλησία πᾶσιν πιστοῖς τῇ ἁισθητοῖς ἀνάγασις. κ. λ. Cap. 18. p. 708. C. D.

(x) Cap. xix. 713. 714.

(y) ... ἀλλὰ ἠμαρτία ἡ ἐφισον μετατίθεναι αὐτὸν λόγον. καί ἂν, ὡς ἐστηται. κ. λ. Ibid. p. 714. in.

(z) As before, p. 243.
We proceed with this great man’s arguments, who adds: “With (a) the opinion of the first commentators agrees the tradition of the churches of Syria, preferred to this day in the title of the Syriac version of the Apocalypse, which title is this: The Revelation, which was made to John the Evangelist by God in the island Patmos, into which he was banished by Nero Caesar.” But how comes it to pass, that the tradition of the churches of Syria is alleged here, when the Apocalypse was not generally received by them? Moreover in the titles of the books of the New Testament received by them, there are manifest errors. Nor (b) can we say, when the Syriac version of the Apocalypse was made. Nor (c) is it impossible, that the authors of that title might mean Domitian by Nero. It is not a greater error, than that of supposing the epistle of James to have been writ by James the son of Zebedee.

Again, says the celebrated Newton: “The (d) same is confirmed by a story told by Eusebius out of Clemens Alexandrinus, and other ancient authors, concerning a youth, whom St. John some time after his return from Patmos committed to the care of the Bishop of a certain city. This is a story of many years, and requires, that John should have returned from Patmos rather at the death of Nero, than at that of Domitian.”

But, first, if this be only a feigned storie, or apologue, as some have thought, contrived to convey moral instruction; circumstances ought not to be strained, nor the truth of storie be founded upon it. Secondly, we must take the storie, as it is related by Clement, and other ancient authors. Clement placeth it after the death of the tyrant, by whom John had been banished. And Eusebe (e) supposeth him to mean Domitian. Thirdly, if St. John lived in Asia two, or three, or four years, after his return from Patmos, that is time enough for the events of this storie.

Sir Isaac adds in the same place: “And John in his old age was so infirm, as to be carried to church, dying, above ninety years old: and therefore could not be then suppos’d able to ride after the thief. Nevertheless

(a) P. 236. 237.
(b) Ad Neronis imperium hoc exilium Syrus refert. Verum incerta est quam maxime hujus versionis ætas, nulloque gaudet soció. Lamp. Proleg. t. i. cap. 4. §. vii.

Quapropter nihil in hisce est, quod Syrum ab erroris culpa liberare posset: quemadmodum nec supra erat, quod Epiphanium in nomine Claudii tueretur. Illud tantummodo adnotatum volo, Syriacam Apocalypses versionem haud æqualem ceterorum librorum interpretationi videri, uti nec primi codices in Europam adlati apposita habuerunt, quam demum Ludovicus de Dieu MDCCXXVII. in lucem primum prodixit. &c. Ch. Cellarius de septem ecleesis After num. xvii. p. 428.
(d) As above. p. 237.
(e) H. E. l. 3. cap. 23.
Nevertheless in the original account, which we have of this affair, St. John is expressly called (f) an old man. Sir Izaac therefore has no right to make him young. For that would be making a new storie. If a man allows himself so to do, and argues upon it; the necessarie consequence is, that he deceives himself, and others.

Upon the whole, I see not much weight in any of these arguments of Sir Izaac Newton. And must adhere to the common opinion, that St. John was banished into Patmos, in the reign of Domitian, and by virtue of his edicts for percuting the Christians, in the later part of his reign. Says Mr. Lampe: “All (g) Antiquity is agreed, that St. John’s banishment was by order of Domitian.”

How long he was there. ed, or how long his banishment lasted.

According to Tertullian, Domitian’s persecution (h) was very short, and the Emperour himself, before he died, recalled thofe, whom he had banished. Hefefippus likewise, that (i) Domitian by an edict put an end to the persecution, which he had ordered.

Eufebe says, “that (k) after the death of Domitian, John returned from his banishment.” And before, in another chapter of the same book, he said, more largely: “After (l) Domitian had reigned fifteen years, Nerva succeeded him, and the Roman Senate decreed, that the honourable titles bestowed upon Domitian should be abrogated, and moreover, that they who had been banished by him might return to their homes, and repoffefs their goods, of which they had been unjustly deprived. This we learn from such as have writ the hist: torie of thofe times. Then therefore, as our ancestors say, the Apofle John returned from his banishment, and again took up his abode at Ephesus.”

Jerome, in his book of Illuftrious Men, says: “When (m) Domitian had been killed, and his edicts had been repealed, by the Senate, because of their excessive cruelty, John returned to Ephesus in the time of the Emperour Nerva.”

I place below a paffage of (n) the Martyrdom of Timothie in Photius, and another (o) of Suidas, saying, that after Domitian’s death, when Nerva was Emperour, St. John returned from his banishment.

This

(f) ... ετιλαθόμενος τις οικίας αὐτῷ ... τι με φίλωνι ... τὸν γιορταν, τὸν γιορταν; προσελήφθη δε τὸν γιορταν περιλαζει. κ. λ. Clem. ap. Eusub. H. E. l. 3. c. 23. p. 93.

(g) Tota antiquitas in eo abunde consentit, quod Domitianus exiili Joannis auctor fuerit. Lamp. Proleg. l. i. cap. 4. §. viii.

(k) ... ceptum repreffit, reftitutis etiam quos relegaverat. Apel. cap. u. vid. Supr. p. 355. note (b).

This is also agreeable to the general accounts in (p) Dion Cassius, and (q) the Author of the Deaths of Persecutors.

Indeed, Hegesippus and Tertullian, as before observed, intimate, that the persecution of Domitian ended before his death. But it is very remarkable, that Eusebius, (r) having quoted both of them, gives a different account, as we saw just now. And, as learned men have observed, it is a great prejudice to their authority in this point, that Eusebius does not follow them, but presently afterwards differs from them.

It seems probable therefore, that St. John and other exils, did not return from their banishment, until after the death of Domitian. Which (s) is the opinion of Bajnag, and likewise of (t) Cellarius.

Domitian (u) is computed to have died Sept. 18. A. D 96. after having reigned fifteen years, and some days. Nerva (x) died the 27, day of Jan. 98. after having reigned one year four months, and nine days. Therefore Trajan began his reign Jan. 27. A. D. 98.

If the persecution of Domitian began in the fourteenth year of his reign, and St. John was sent to Patmos that year, and restored in the beginning of the reign of Nerva, his (y) exile could not last more than two years, perhaps not much above a year.

If St. John's life reached to the third year of the reign of Trajan, which is the opinion of Cave (z) and many others, he lived three years after his return from Patmos: if it reached to the fourth year of Trajan, as (a) Bajnag thought, he must have lived four years after his return.

Or, in other words: if St. John returned about the end of the year 96.

"(o) Vid. Suid. voce Nigeas."

"(p) Kαὶ τὸν τέλος τῆς τε κεφαλής Ιωάννου αὐτῆς αὐτῆς, καὶ τὸς ἐνυγματὸς κατήγγειλεν."

"(q) De M. P. cap. 3."

"(r) H. E. l. 3. cap. 20."

"(s) Utrum Domitianus decretem revocavit, difficilis quaedam est. Sic enim antiquorum nonnullis vitam. Hegesippus ... Hegesippus affertur et Tertullianus ... Contra vero nobilis historicus Dio, qui rerum Romanarum Hegesippus peritior erat, et Tertulliano, discretissime teftatur, Nerva indulgentia revovatos suiffe Christianos: Nerva autem eos qui damnati erant impietatis absolvit, exulque refituit. Neque alia mens Laëntianio de Mort. Perf. cap. 3."

"(t) Bajnag. de Septem. ecclesiis Afric. cap. xvii. ... xx."

"(u) Bajnag. ann. 96. n. xiii."

"(v) Bajnag. A. D. 98. i. Pagi ann. 98. ii."

"(w) In alteram tantum annum ad sumnum duravit, quando Nerva succedens Domitianus exules revocavit, et cum eis Ioannem, uti ex vetustiorum fide refert Eusebius. I. 3. H. E. cap. 20. ... Quae quidem eo majorem fidem merentur, quia ipse Dio, fecus ex eo Xiphilinus, revocationem exulum Christianorum Nerve tribuit. Lampe Eiol. l. 1. cap. 4. §. ix. Vide et Cellar. ubi supra cap. xvii.

"(x) Interfecto Domitiano Ephefum redidit ann. chr. 97. in qua, ut in regionibus circumvicinis, reliquum vitae transegit, et ... anno Chr. 100. Trajani 3. juxta Euebium et Hierosynum, anno uno aut altero centenario major. ... in Domino placide obdormivit. Cons. H. L. T. i. p. 16."

or the beginning of 97. and did not die, till the year 101. he lived four years in Asia, after his return from Patmos. If he died in the year 100. he lived three years after his return.

VII. Having now said of St. John all that is needful by way of historie, we come to his writings, of which there are five generally ascribed to him: a Gospel, three Epistles, and the Revelation: two of which, the Gospel, and the first Epistle, are universally received as genuine.

Now I speak of the Gospel only. And here in the first place I shall recite the accounts of the ancients, but chiefly such, as concern the time when it was writ. Omitting many other testimonies, as not necessarie to be mentioned now, though very valuable in themselves. After which we will observe the judgements of learned moderns concerning the same point: I mean, the time, when it was writ.

Irenaeus having spoken of the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke, adds: "Afterwards (b) John the disciple of the Lord, who also leaned "upon his breast, he likewise published a Gospel, whilst he dwelled at "Ephefus in Asia."

In another place he says: "John (c) the disciple of the Lord declar-"ing this faith, and by the publication of the Gospel designing to root "out the errour, which had been sown among men by Cerinthus, and long "before by thofe who are called Nicolaitans ... thus began in the "doctrine, which is according to the gospel: In the beginning was the "Word."

In another place of the fame ancien writer are these expressions: "As "(d) John the disciple of the Lord affures us, saying: But these are writ-"ten, that ye might believe, that Jesus is the Chrift, the Son of God, and that "believing ye might have life through his name. [ch. xx. 30.] Foreseeing "these blasphemies notions, that divide the Lord, fo far as it is in "their power."

In the preceding paflage Irenaeus speaks, as if St. John's Gospel was writ after the rife of Cerinthus, and other heresies. But here he feems to fay, that it was writ before them, and foreseeing them. In like manner afterwards, in the fame chapter, he fays of Paul: "as (e) "he

(b) See Vol. i. p. 354.
(c) Hanc fidelem annuntians Joannes Domini discipulus, volens per Evangelii annuntiationem auferre eum, qui a Cerintho infeminatus erat hominibus errorem, et multo prius ab his qui dicuntur Nicolaitae, qui sunt vultfo ejus, que fallio cognominatur scientia ... Sic inchoavit in ea quae est fecundum evan- gelium doctrina. In principio erat verbum. Sc. Adv. Haer. l. 3. cap. xii. p. 188. B acne.
(d) ... quemadmodum Joannes Domini discipulus confirmat, dicens: Hæc autem scripta sunt, ut credatis, quoniam Jesus est Filius Dei, et ut credentes attin- tant aeternam habeatis in nomine ejus: providens has blasphemas regulas, que dividant Dominum, quantum ex ipfis attinet, ex altera et altera subsan- tia dicentes eum factum. Adv. Haer. l. 3. cap. 16. n. 5. p. 206.
(e) ... quemadmodum ipse ait: Simul autem Chriftus mortuus est, immo et refurrexit ... Et iterum: Scientes quoniam Chriftus refurgens a mortuis, jam non moritur. Prævidens enim et ipse per Spiritum subdivisiones malorum magi- florum, et omnes ipfforum occafionem diffusionis volens abscindere, ait que praedicta sunt, Ibid. n. 9. p. 207.
"he says: It is Christ that died, yea rather that is risen, who is at the "right hand of God." Rom. viii. 34. And again, Knowing that Christ "being raised from the dead, dies no more. vi. 9. For he also fore-"seeing by the Spirit the divisions of evil teachers, and being diligent to "cut off from them all occasion of division, says what has been just: "quoted.

Clement, of Alexandria, speaking of the order of the Gospels, according to what he had received from Presbyters of more ancient times, says: "Laft (f) of all John observing, that in the other Gospels those things "were related, which concern the humanity of Christ, and being per-"suaded by his friends, and also moved by the spirit of God, he wrote a "spiritual Gospel." Here it is supposed, not only, that St. John wrote "the laft of the four, but likewise, that he had seen the Gospels of the "other three Evangelists.

Origen (g) speaks of all the four Gospels in our present order, that is, "Matthew's first, and John's laft.

A long passage of Eusebe concerning St. John's Gospel may be seen vol. viii. p. 90... 96. It cannot be omitted here. But it shall be abridged. "And that it has been justly placed by the ancients the fourth "in order, and after the other three, may be made evident. . . For Mat-"thew delivered his Gospel to the Hebrews. . . And when Mark and "Luke also had published the Gospels according to them, it is said, that "John who all this while had preached by word of mouth, was at "length induced to write for this reason. The three first written Gos-"pels being now delivered to all men, and to John himself, it is said, "that he approved them, and confirmed the truth of their narration by "his own testimonie, saying: There was only wanting a written account "of the things done by Christ, in the former part, and near the be-"ginning of his preaching. . . And, certainly, that observation is "true. . . ."

Epiphanius (h) speaks of St. John's Gospel, as the laft of the four. He also says, that St. John wrote it, after he had long declined so doing through humility, when he was ninety years of age, and when he had lived in Asia many years, after his return thither from Patmos, in the time of the Emperor Claudius. He moreover says in several places, that this Gospel was occasioned by the errors of the Ebionites, the Cer-"inthians, and other heretics.

According to (i) the Syrian churches, St. John wrote his Gospel at "Ephesus.

My readers are again referred to the noble passage (k) of Theodore, "Bishop of Mopsuestia, concerning the four Gospels, and to the remarks upon it.

Jerome, in his book of Illustrious Men, says: "John (l) the Apostle "wrote a Gospel at the desire of the Bishops of Asia, against Cerinthus, "and other heretics, and especially the doctrine of the Ebionites, then "springing

Vol. II.
"Springing up, who say, that Christ did not exist before his birth of "Marie. For which reason he was obliged to declare his Divine nativity. Another reason of his writing is also mentioned. Which is, "that after having read the volumes of Matthew, Mark, and Luke, he "expressed his approbation of their historie, as true: but observed, that "they had recorded an account of but one year of our Lord's ministrie, "even the last, after the imprisoment of John, in which also he suffered. "Omitting therefore [very much] that year, the historie of which had "been writ by the other three, he related the Acts of the preceding "time, before John was shut up in prision. As may appear to those, "who read the four Evangelizts. Which may be of use, to account for "the seeming difference between John and the rest."

According to (m) Augustin, St. John is the last of the four Evangelizts.

Chryfostom (n) assigning the reasons of St. John's writing his Gospel, supposeth, that he did not write till after the destruction of Jerusalem.

Paulinus says: "it (o) had been handed down by tradition, that John "survived all the other Apostles, and wrote the last of the four Evangelizts, and so as to confirm their most certain historie." And he observes, "that (p) in the beginning of St. John's Gospel all heretics are confuted, particularly, Arians, Sabellius, Marcion and the Manicheans.

Cesnas of Alexandria, says, "that (q) when John dwelt at Ephesus, "there were delivered to him by the faithfull the writings of the other "three Evangelists. Receiving them he said, that what they had writ "was well writ: but some things were omitted by them, which were "needful to be related. And being desired by the faithfull, he also publisht his writing, as a kind of supplement to the rest, containing such "things as these: the wedding at Cana, the historie of Nicodemos, the "woman of Samaria, the nobleman, [or Courtier, John iv. 46. 54.] "the man blind from his birth, Lazarus, the indignation of Judas, at "the woman that anointed the Lord with ointment, the Greeks that "came to Jesus, his washing the discipiles feet, and suitable instructions "upon several occasions, and the promie of the Comforter, and concern ing the Deity of Christ, expressly, and clearly, at the beginning, and "premissing that, as the foundation of his work. All which things had "been omitted by the rest."

Ifidore of Seville, says, that (r) John wrote the last in Asia.

Theophylact computed, that (s) St. John wrote about two and thirty years after Christ's ascension.

Euthymius, that (t) it was not writ, untill many years after the de struction of Jerusalem.

Nicephorus Callisti says, that (u) John wrote last of all, about six and thirty years after the Lord's ascension to heaven.

VIII. Having

(m) Vol. x. p. 228.
(o) Vol. xi. p. 43.
(q) Vol. xi. p. 268. 269.
(s) P. 424.
(u) P. 438.
(p) P. 44.
(r) Vol. xi. p. 367.
(u) P. 442.
VIII. Having seen these testimonies of the ancients to St. John’s Gospel, and the time of it, I would now observe the judgements of learned moderns.

According to (x) Mill’s computation St. John wrote his Gospel at Ephesus, in the year of Christ 97, about one year before his death. Fabricius (y) speaks to the like purpose. Le Clerc (z) likewise placeth the writing of this Gospel in the year 97.

Mr. Jones argues, that (a) it was writ about the year 98 and not before 97.

The late Mr. Wetstein thought, that (b) this Gospel might be writ about the year 32. after our Lord’s ascension: and dislikes the supposition, that it was writ by St. John in decrepit old age.

Basnage (c) was inclined to think, that this Gospel was writ before the destruction of Jerusalem. His reasons will be alleged, and considered by and by.

Mr. Lampe was of opinion, that (d) this Gospel was writ in the later part of the reign of Nero, before the destruction of Jerusalem.

IX. I shall now propose an argument concerning the date of this Gospel.

There are two considerations, principally, which lead me to think, that St. John’s Gospel was writ before the destruction of Jerusalem, or about the time of that event. These I shall first mention, and then take notice of divers others, observable in learned moderns.

1. It is likely, that St. John wrote in a short time after the other Evangelists. Their Gospels were soon brought to him. And if he thought fit to confirm them, or to write any thing by way of supplement, he would do it in a short time. The first three Gospels, very probably, were writ and published before the end of the year 64. or in 65. at the farthest. If they were brought to St. John in 65. or 66. he would not defer more, or not much more, than a year, or two, to publish his historic of Jesus, and make the account compleat.

I do

(z) Hist. E. An. 97. num. i.
(a) New and Full Method, Vol. 3. p. 139.
(c) Ann. 97. num. xii.
(d) Putem ergo non contemnandas esse rationes, quae ante excidium Hierofolymitanum Evangelium nosterum sub extremis forte Neronis temporibus conscriptum esse persuadent. Proleg. l. 2. cap. 2. num. ix.
I do not presume to say exactly the year, in which this Gospel was writ. But I think, it might be writ, and published, in the year 68.

This argument offered itself to Mr. Whiston's thoughts, and is thus expressed by him: "That (c) occasion of John's writing his Gospel, "mentioned by the ancients, viz. the bringing the other three Gospels "to him, and his observing their deficiency, as to the acts of Christ be- "fore the Baptist's imprisonment, does much better agree with this "time, just after the publication of those Gospels, than with that above "thirty years later, to which it's writing is now ordinarily ascribed."

And is it not a strange supposition, that all the other three Gospels should have been writ by the year 60. or thereabout, and St. John's not till the year 97. or 98. that is, more than thirty years after the others? When likewile he must have been of a very great age, and scarcely fit for such a work as this.

2. The second consideration is the suitablenesse of St. John's Gospel to the circumstances of things before the overthrow of the Jews, or about that time.

Mr. Lampe has observed, that (f) the great design of St. John in writing his Gospel seems to have been, to shew, how inexcusable the Jews were in not receiving Jesus as the Chrifi, and to vindicate the Providence of God in the calamities already befallen, or now coming upon them. If that appear to be the design of St. John in writing his Gospel, it will very much strengthen the supposition, that it was writ, before the destruction of Jerusalem was compleate.

St. John says ch. xx. 31. These things are written, that ye might believe, that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing ye might have life through his name. That is, "This historie has been writ, that they "who believe, may be confirmed in their faith, and that all others, who "yet believe not, may believe in Jesus, as the Christ, the Son of God, "and obtain that life, which he promiseth to them, who believe in him, "and obey him."

That is the design of all the Evangelists. And their histories are a sufficient ground-and-reason of this belief. But St. John's Gospel contains an ample confirmation of all that they have said, with valuable additions, and more plain and frequent assurances, that Jesus is not only a Prophet, and meffenger of God, but the Chrifi, the Son of God, or that great Prophet, that should come into the world: whereby all are rendred inexcusable in rejecting him, and especially the Jews, among whom he preached, and wrought many miracles, and whom he often called

(c) Effjoy on the Apostolical Constitutions, p. 38. 39.

(f) Totam porro oeconomiam hujus Evangelii ita esse digestam, ut ad con- vincendos ac auctorietae maxime opportunam conscri- bendo libro dabat, in quo Ioannis animus erat hujus ipfus judicii imminen- tis aqutatem defendere, et tentare, an Judaei ex hoc Reipublicae naufragio magno agmine in Afinam enantates, ad recipiendum unicum mundi Salvato- rem hoc medio pernoveri pollunt. Ibid. l. 2. cap. 2. §. xv. Vid. et l. 2. cap. 3. num. iii. vet. (b).
called to receive him, as the Chrift. This (g) runs through St. John’s Gospel from the beginning to the end, or near the end, of the twelfth chapter.

Even in the introduction he says, ch. i. 7. John came for a witness, to bear witness of the light, that all men through him might believe. 8. He was not that light. But was sent to bear witness of that light. 9. That was the true light, which lighteth every man, that cometh into the world.

That is, he was designed to be an universal blessing: And he has done “all that was fit to be done, to enlighten all men in the knowledge of “God, and true religion.” Ver. 14. And we beheld his glory, we his disciples, and all who impartially attended, beheld his glory, the glory, as of the only begotten of the Father: that is, the glory, peculiar to the promised Messiah. Again, at ver. 18. he fliles him the only begotten Son. Here St. John may be supposed to declare his present faith, or to make a profession of the faith, which he had at the time of his writing. Having so done, he proceeds in the historic. Ver. 19. 20. And this is the record of John, when the Jesus sent Priests and Levites from Jerusalem, to ask him, Who art thou? He anfwered, that he was not the Chrift, but his harbinger, or fore-runner, the person spoken of by Isaiah. And he declares the transcendent greatness of him, who was about to appear, and was already among them. ver. 21...28. Then at ver. 29. The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and faid: Behold the lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world. Undoubtedly, by that character meaning the Messiah, and understood by all, fo to mean. See also ver. 30. 31. 32. 33. Then at ver. 34. And I saw, and bare record, that this is the Son of God: or the Chrift. And ver. 35. 36. Again, the next day after John ftood, and two of his disciples. And looking upon Jesus, as he walked, he faid: Behold the lambs of God. He tells every body, that Jesus is the Chrift, though not always in the same terms. And, to finish our account of John the Baptist. In ch. iii. 25...36. is the laft testimonie, bore by him to Jesus. And it is very strong, and full. He declares, he was not himself the Chrift, but was sent before him. To him, fays he, God giveth not the Spirit by meafure. The Father loveth the Son, and hath put all things into his hands. He that believeth on the Son, hath everlasting life. And he that believeoth not the Son, shall not see life. But the wrath of God abideth on him.

Having

(g) Priora duodecim capita evidentissime ea commemorant, quæ severum et tremendum illud Del in Judaæos judicium defendunt. Talia enim facia et dicta continuo ordine proponunt, quæ non in obfcuro angulo, sed coram tota gente Judaica edita sunt, nullamque exceptionem patiuntur... Atque haec est ratio, cur Joannes secundum fella Judæorum historiam evangelicam digerat. Inde enim innotecit, Iesum ea diligenter frequentasse, atque in ilis publice coram toto populo Judaico fo fatis superque manifestasse. Iitud enim Evangelitae nostro plane privum est, ut ea potissimum narrat, quæ a Domino nostro Hierofolymis, quin in ipfo templo gefta atque dicta sunt: paucis tan-tum interjectis, quæ eum etiam Judæam, Samariam, Galileam, radiis glo-ræs suæ celestis abunde illüstrate, atque ita nullam partem regionis Judæo-rum vacant reliquisse, probant. Lampe. Ibid. l. 2. cap. 4. num. xxxiii. xxxiv.
Having gone through the Baptist’s testimonie, as here recorded, we look back to ch. i. 4...42. where Andrew finds his brother Simon, and says to him: We have found the Messiah. Then ver. 45...51. Philip findeth Nathanael, and faith to him: We have found him, of whom Moses in the Law, and the Prophets did write, Jesus of Nazareth. Nathanael likewise is convinced, and says: Rabbi, Thou art the Son of God. Thou art the King of Israel. So writes St. John, shewing, that the pious, and well disposed among the Jews, readily received Jesus as the Christ. And thereby shewing likewise the great unreasonableness, and extreme perfumption of those who did not believe in him after all the proofs, which he set before them in the course of his most powerful ministration. As the Evangelist most justly says, near the conclusion of this part of his Gospel, ch. xii. 37. But though he had done so many miracles among them, yet they believed not on him. And fee what follows there.

Ch. ii. 11. After the account of the miracle at Cana. This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory: that is, the glory of the Messiah. And his disciples believed on him: or were confirmed in their belief, that he was the Christ.

Soon after this Jesus went up to Jerusalem, at a Passover, and cleansed the temple, saying: Make not my Father’s house an house of merchandize. ch. ii. 13...17. By the work itself, and by his words, manifesting himself to be the Messiah. I omit other things in the remaining part of that chapter, which an attentive reader will take notice of.

Then, ch. iii. 1...21. is the historie of Nicodemus, who, whilst Jesus was this time at Jerusalem, made him a private visit. He immediately professeth faith in him, as a Prophet. But our Lord tells him plainly, that he was the Messiah, and demands a suitable regard from him. He likewise sets before Nicodemus the nature of his design, for preventing, or for removing all worldly expectations from him. He likewise intimates the call of the Gentils, and the judgements coming upon the Jewish People, if they should persist in unbelief. For, says he, as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wildernesse, so must the Son of man Be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in him might not perish, but have everlasting life. ... For God sent not his Son, the Messiah, into the world, to condemn the world: but that through him the world, Gentils as well as Jews, might be saved. And what there follows.

Jesus going through Samaria from Jerusalem, in his way to Galilee, meets with a woman of that country. ch. iv. 19. The woman faith unto him: Sir, I perceive, that thou art a Prophet.... And ver. 25. 26. The woman faith unto him: I know, that the Messiah cometh, or is soon to appear.... Jesus faith unto her: I that speak unto thee am he.... The woman left him, and went into the city, and faith unto the men: Come, see a man that has told me all things that ever I did. Is not this the Christ? Afterwards, ver. 42. Many of that place said unto the woman: Now we believe, not because of thy saying. For we have seen him ourselves, and know, that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world. Here is another instance of our Lord’s freely declaring himself to be the Christ, and of his accepting a profecution of faith in himself, as such. And the ready faith of these Samaritans aggravates the continued unbelief of the Jews, on whom more culture had been bestowed.

Ch. v. 1.
Ch. IX.

St. John.

151

Ch. v. 1. After this there was a feast of the Jews. And Jesus went up to Jerusalem. By many this is thought to be the Passover. By others it is reckoned some other feast between the last mentioned and the next Passover of our Lord's ministrie. However that may be, at this season our Lord healed the lame man at the pool of Bethesda, on the Sabbath-day, and bid him carry his bed, and go home. Therefore did the Jews persecute Jesus, and sought to slay him, because he had done these things on the Sabbath Day. But Jesus answered them: My Father worketh hitherto. And I work. ver. 16. 17. The Jews charge him with blasphemy. Our Lord vindicates himself, and claims the character of the Messiah in high terms. And affures them, that all judgment had been committed unto the Son, meaning himself, the Messiah: that all men might honor the Son, even as they honor the Father. ver. 21. 22. And, for proof, he refers to their scriptures, the testimonie of John, and the works, which he had wrought among them, in the Father's name. ver. 24. 27.

Ch. vi. 1. 3. We perceive, our Lord to be in Galilee, whither he had gone from Judea. Then at ver. 4. And the Passover, a feast of the Jews, was nigh. After which follows the miracle of the five loaves and two fishes, for feeding five thousand. Then, those men, when they had seen the miracle, which Jesus did, said: This is of a truth that Prophet, which should come into the world: or the expected Messiah. Their notion of the kingdom, belonging to that character, being worldly and carnal, and they looking for worldly advantages, would have come, and taken him by force, to make him a King. So that our Lord found it needful to depart into a mountain himself alone. The disciples in the mean time took shipping, and he came to them walking upon the sea. When they had received him, immediately the ship was at the land, whither they were going. ver. 14. 21. The people having been disappointed, came to him as soon as they could at Capernaum. Where our Lord takes an opportunity to reprove their carnal temper, and instructs them in the design of the Messiah, and the nature of his kingdom. And still taking upon himself that character, and requiring faith in him as such, he says: I am the bread of life... And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one whichareth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life... I am the living bread, which came down from heaven. If any man eat this bread, he shall live for ever. And the bread that I will give him is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world. Many therefore of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him. But Peter, in the name of the Twelve, and possibly, in the name also of some others, followers of Jesus, said: To whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life. And we believe, and are sure, that thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. ver. 22. 69.

Ch. vii. 1. 2. After these things Jesus walked in Galilee. For he would not walk in Judea, because the Jews sought to kill him. Now the Jews feast of Tabernacles was at hand... 14. Now about the midst of the feast, Jesus went up into the temple, and taught. Ver. 25. 26. Then said some of them of Jerusalem... Do the rulers know indeed, that this is the very Christ? Ver. 31. And many of the people believed on him, and said: When Christ cometh, will he do more miracles than these, which this man has done? Ver. 37. 38. In
In the last day, the great day of the feast, Jesus stood, and cried: If any man thirst, let him come to me, and drink. He speaks of himself in the character of the Messiah, and calls on all men to come to him, as such, and receive the great blessings, which he is able to bestow. And at ver. 40. 41. Many of the people therefore, when they heard this saying, said: This is the Prophet. Others said: This is the Christ.

Ch. viii. 12. 23. Our Lord is still at Jerusalem. And at ver. 12. Then spake Jesus unto them, saying: I am the light of the world: claiming the character of the Messiah, and declaring also the advantages of believing in him, and the sad consequence of not receiving him. Ver. 21. Then said Jesus again unto them. I go my way, and ye shall seek me, and shall die in your sins. Ver. 24. I said therefore unto you, that ye shall die in your sins. For, if ye believe not, that I am he, the Messiah, ye shall die in your sins: that is, ye will bring upon yourselves heavy judgements and calamities. Ver. 47. He that is of God, heareth God's words. Ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God. Ver. 56. your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day. . . Does not our Lord in all this propose himself to them, as the Messiah, require their faith in him, as such, and plainly intimate the calamities, that would befall them, if they should continue to reject him?

Nor is there any inconsistence in what is here observed, and the accounts of the other Evangelists. After Peter had made a profession of his faith, it is said Matt. xvi. 20. Then charged he his disciples, that they should tell no man, that he was the Christ. And compare Mark viii. 30. and Luke ix. 21. Nevertheless, he was not unwilling to be thought of in that character. When Simon Peter had said by way of answer to the question that he had been put to the disciples, thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God: our Lord was greatly pleased, and pronounced him blessed upon that account. And he was desirous, that all should receive him, as the Messiah. It was the design of his own, and his forerunner's preaching, as recorded in all the Evangelists, the first three, as well as St. John. They called upon all men to repent, for the kingdom of heaven, or of God, by the Messiah, is at hand. So Mark i. 14. 15. And himself says: Matt. xii. 28. If I cast out demons by the Spirit of God, then is the kingdom of God come unto you. And Luke xvii. 21. Behold, the kingdom of God is among you, or in the midst of you, not within you, as we render it. But he tells them, that the kingdom of the Messiah was already begun to be set up among them. When our Lord was baptized, there came a voice from heaven, saying: This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. Or, this is the Messiah. As recorded by all the first three Evangelists. Matt. iii. 17. Mark i. 11. Luke iii. 22. And in them our Lord accepts applications to him, and confessions of faith in him, in the character of the Son of David, and the Son of God, both which are the same as the Messiah. Of the former there are many instances. Of the later I mention one. Matt. xiv. 33. Then they that were in the ship, came, and worshipped him, saying: Thou art the Son of God. And when he entered into Jerusalem, he accepted the acclamations of the multitude, which cried: Hosanna to the Son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: Blessed is the King that cometh in the name of the Lord. Matth. xxi. 1. 16. Mark xi. 1. 11. Luke xix. 28. 40: He
He sometimes laments the small success of his preaching, and that so few received him. But acquiesce in the event. As in Luke vii. 31. ... 35. Matth. xi. 16. ... 26. Luke x. 21. ... 24. And he even expressed a surprise, that the Pharisees, and others, did not discern the signs of the time. Matt. xvi. 1. ... 4. Mark viii. ii. ... 13. Luke xii. 54. ... 57. And every one may easily perceive the reason, why he did not allow the disciples, or some others, to say publicly, that he was the Messiah. For considering that the Jewish People in general, and the disciples, themselves, expected a worldly kingdom and worldly advantages from the Messiah; there needed some discretion, left men should have been led to make tumults and disturbances, which might have been offensive to the magistracy. But when our Lord spoke of himself, as the Messiah, he always inculcated the true design of his coming, and gave assurances of spiritual and heavenly blessings, and such only.

Our Lord still continues at Jerusalem. Ch. ix. 1. ... 41. is the history of the man blind from his birth, whom our Lord healed, anointing his eyes with clay, moistened with his spittle. And it was the Sabbath-day, when Jesus made the clay, and opened his eyes. The man being brought before the Pharisees, and examined by them, said, that he who had opened his eyes was a Prophet. And they cast him out. Jesus heard, that they had cast him out. And when he had found him, he said unto him: Doest thou believe on the Son of God? He answered, and said: Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him? Jesus said unto him: Thou hast both seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee. And he said: Lord, I believe, and he worshipped him. All this needs no comment. Afterwards at ver. 39. ... 41. are intimations given to the Pharisees of the sad consequences of rejecting him. And indeed in this history the bad temper of the Jewish Rulers is very manifest.

Ch. x. Our Lord speaks of himself as the true shepherd, or the Messiah. Ver. 11. I am the good shepherd. The good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. Ver. 16. And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold. Ver. 22. ... 24. And it was at Jerusalem the feast of the Dedication. And it was winter. And Jesus walked in the temple, in Solomon's porch. Then came the Jews round about him, and said unto him: How long dost thou make us to doubt? If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly. Jesus answered them: I told you, and ye believed not. The works that I do in my Father's name bear witness of me. A very proper answer, certainly. And what follows to ver. 38. deserves to be consulted.

Ch. x. 39. ... 42. Therefore they sought again to take him, but he escaped out of their hand. And went away beyond Jordan, unto the place, where John at first baptized. And there abode. And many reported unto him, and said: John did no miracles. But all things, that John spake of this man, were true. And many believed on him there.

I suppose this retreat of our Lord to a place beyond Jordan, to be the same that is mentioned Matth. xix. 1. and Mark x. 1. upon which some remarks were made (b) many years ago. What passed during that interval in that country, is recorded Matth. xix. 1. ... to xx. 1. ... 16. and Mark x. 1. ... 31. Nor was St. Luke acquainted with this retreat.

(b) See the Vindication of our Saviour's three Miracles of raising the dead. Ch. i. p. 18. ... 22. first ed. p. 32. ... 37. 2d edit.
treat. For he has inserted in his Gospel at ch. xviii, 15...30. some of the same discourses, which are in the other two Evangelists, whilst our Lord was there. I say, I suppose, that St. John and the other Evangelists speak of one and the same rec tor. But St. John seems to mention more particularly the occasion of it, in the verses just recited.

In this place, and interval, our Lord lived somewhat more privately, than he had done before. He received all who came to him, either for instruction, or to be healed by him. But he did not go about the cities and villages of Judea, preaching publicly, as he had done for some while before.

I always supposed, that our Lord's living thus, in that place, at no great distance from Jerusalem, had in it a kind design. He intended thereby to afford to the Jewish People, especially, their Priests and Rulers at Jerusalem, an opportunity to consider, and calmly reflect upon all the wonderful things that had happened among them in the space of a few years, the preaching and baptism of John, and all the things said and done by himself in the course of his ministry, particularly, the miracles which he had wrought among them, the claims, which he had made of being the promised Messiah, whom all ought to receive, and the intimations that had been given of impending ruin and misery.

Here our Lord waited, willing to rest the proof of his mission upon the testimonies, that had been given to it. And if the Rulers of the Jewish People had now come, and solemnly owned him in the character, he bore, and with which God had clothed him, how joyfully would they have been received! But they were not so disposed. Great multitudes of the people came to him there, and he healed them. The Pharisees also came unto him. But it was tempting him. Matth. xix. 2. 3. Mark x. 1. 2.

But beside what is recorded by the other Evangelists, St. John affures us, that in this interval our Lord came to Bethanie, about fifteen furlongs, or two miles, from Jerusalem, and there raised Lazarus to life. ch. xi. 1...44. Then many of the Jews, which came to Marie, and had seen the things which Jesus did, believed on him: that is, that he was the Christ. But some of them went their way to the Pharisees, and told them, what things Jesus had done. ver. 45. 46. Then gathered they a Council. ... Then from that day forth, they took counsel together, for to put him to death. ver. 47...53. This shews, that they were inflexible, and not to be gained by any considerations.

It follows in ver. 54. Jesus therefore walked no more openly among the Jews: but went thence into a country near the wilderness, into a city called Ephraim. And there continued with his disciples. Which (*) I suppose, was not far from the place, from which our Lord came last. And from this city, called Ephraim, our Lord came to Bethanie again, by the way of Jericho, a short time before the next Passover, as related by the other Evangelists. We proceed.

Says St. John ch. xi. 55...57. And the Jews Passover was now at hand.

hand... Now both the Chief-Priests and the Pharisees had given a command-ment, that if any knew where he was, he should shew it, that they might take him. That is a proof of a determined purpose to accomplish their evil designs against Jesus.

The whole following xii. chapter of this Gospel deserves attentive regard. I must transcribe a part, though it adds to the length of these extracts. Then Jesus, six days before the Passover, came to Bethanie, where Lazarus was, who had been dead, whom he raised from the dead. xii. 1. Much people of the Jews therefore knew, that he was there. And they came, not for Jesus sake only, but that they might see Lazarus also, whom he had raised from the dead. But the Chief-Priests consulted, that they might put Lazarus also to death: because that by reason of him many of the Jews went away, and believed on Jesus. ver. 9... 11. And here is an account of some Greeks, or Gentils, who were desirous to see Jesus. ver. 20... 22. Whole readiness, accompanied with humility, may be reasonably understood to cast a reflection upon the pride and obstinacy of those, who were unmoved by the most powerful arguments, and the most gracious invitations. The remainder of that chapter, from ver. 35. to 50. is a most proper conclusion of this part of the Gospel, in which are these things very observable. Then Jesus said unto them: Yet a little while the light is with you. Walk while ye have the light, lest darkness come upon you... While ye have the light, believe in the light, that ye may be the children of light... But though he had done so many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him: that the saying of Isaiah might be fulfilled... Jesus cried, and said: He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that sent me. I am come a light into the world, that whosoever believeth on me, should not abide in darkness... I have not spoken of myself. But the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should speak. And I know, that his commandment, is life everlasting. Whatsoever I speak therefore, even as the Father said unto me, so I speak.

Then in the xiii. xiv. xv. xvi. and xvii. chapters our Lord instructs and comforts, prays with and for his disciples: shewing (i) tokens of the tenderest affection, and the most faithful concern for those, who had paid a due regard to the evidences of his mission, and adhered to him under difficulties and discouragements. So begins the next, that is, the thirteenth chapter: Now before the feast of the Passover, when Jesus knew, that his hour was come, that he should depart out of the world unto the Father: having loved his own, which were in the world, he loved them unto the end.

And indeed it was very natural for the Evangelist, who had largely shewn the unreasonable obstinacy, and the aggravated guilt of the Jews, who did not believe in Jesus, but rejected him, to give also a particular account of our Lord's kind acceptance of those who believed in him, and persevered in their faith.

So that the design of shewing, how inexcusable the Jewish People were,

(i) Sic vero haœtenus severitatem Domini in Judæos defendit Evangelista, ita in sequentibus a capite xiii. ad finem usque fidelitatem Christi illibatam, quam discipulis suis addixit, ex ultimis verbis adserit. Hae intentio haud obficre addidicitur ex nova, que alteri hujs Evangelii parti praefigitur, pro-fatianuncula. cap. xiii. 1... Lamp. ProI. l. 2. c. 4. num. xxxvi.
were, in rejecting Jesus, and of vindicating Divine Providence in the calamities brought upon them, is what produced the whole order and economic of this Gospel.

The two following chapters, the xviii. and xix. contain the account of our Lord's prosecution, condemnation, death, and interment. In the two last chapters the xx. and the xxi. are the accounts of our Lord's resurrection, and the evidences of it, with many tokens of kind regard for his disciples, who had followed him in the time of his abode on this earth, and were now to be his witnesses in the world, and to preach, under many difficulties, the same doctrine, which he had taught.

There is another thing, which may induce us to think, that one great design of St. John in writing his Gospel was to shew the unreasonablenesse, and the great guilt of the Jews, in rejecting Jesus: that in his Gospel are inserted more instances of their attempts upon our Lord's life, than in the other Gospels. Some such things there are in them.
 Accounts of the Pharisees consulting, how they might destroy Jesus, may be seen in Matt. xii. 14. Mark iii. 6. Luke vi. 11. Befide their last attempt: when they were permitted to accomplish their evil design. But there are more such instances in St. John's, than in any of the other Gospels. As John vii. 1. After these things Jesus walked in Galilee.
 For he would not walk in Judea, because the Jews sought to kill him. However, he came up to Jerusalem at the next feast of Tabernacles. ver. 2.
 And their designs were renewed. Ch. vii. 25. Then said some of them at Jerusalem: Is not this he, whom they seek to kill? . . . Ver. 31. 32.
 And many of the people believed on him, and said: When the Christ cometh, will he do more miracles, than these, which this man has done? The Pharisees heard, that they murmured such things concerning him. And the Pharisees and Chief-Priest sent officers to take him. But the officers, overcome by the excellence of his discourses, could not persuade themselves to apprehend him. For which they were reproached by the Council in a most outrageous manner. But Nicodemus strove to alyay their relentment. ver. 45 . . . 52. And ch. viii. 20. These words spake Jesus, in the treasuries, as he taught in the temple. And no man laid bands on him, because his time was not yet come . . . Ver. 37. I know, that ye are Abraham's seed. But ye seek to kill me, a man which has told you the truth, which I have heard of God. This did not Abraham. Ver. 59. Then took they up stones to cast at him . . . And ch. x. 39. 40. Therefore they sought again to take him: but he escaped out of their hand. And went away beyond Jordan.
 And when our Lord proposed to go to Bethanie, upon occasion of the sickness and death of Lazarus, the disciples go unwillingly, and would have dissuaded him from that journey, being apprehensive of the imminent danger therein both to him and themselves. ch. xi. 7 . . . 16. See likewise ver. 45 . . . 57. All these are things quite omitted by the other Evangelists. As is all also what is said. ch. xii. 10. 11. And in their last persecution of Jesus before Pilate there are some very aggravating particulars mentioned by St. John, which the other Evangelists have not taken notice of. See ch. xviii. 29 . . . 32. xix. 1 . . . 15.

Our blessed Lord, preparing his disciples for afflictions, reconciling their minds to them, and encouraging them to endure them patiently, says, ch. xv. 21 . . . 24. All these things will they do unto you for my name's.
name's sake, because they know not him that sent me. If I had not come, and spoken unto them, they had not had sin. But now they have no excuse for their sin. He that hateth me, hateth my Father also. If I had not done among them the works, which no other man did, they had not had sin. But now have they both sin, and hated both me and my Father. That is a strong, but just and true representation of the heinousness of the guilt of the Jewish People. For which reason I could not forbear to allege it here, though it should be thought out of place.

And now having, as I suppose, shewn this design of the Evangelist, let me mention an observation, or two, by way of corollarie.

Firstly. We see the reason of St. John's recording the miracle of raising Lazarus, omitted by the other Evangelists. There was no necessity, that they should mention it. For without it they have recorded sufficient evidences of our Lord's mission and character. Nor was it possible, without an improper proximity to record all our Saviour's discourses and miracles, as St. John himself has observed. Moreover the first three Evangelists have chiefly insisted upon the most public part of our Lord's ministrie. For which reason this miracle did not come so directly in their way. But St. John could not omit it. His design necessarily led him to relate this great miracle, done so near Jerusalem, and with all it's circumstances. For it manifestly shews the perverse and incorrigible temper of the Jewish Priests and Rulers.

Secondly. None ought any more to make a question, whether our Lord twice cleansed the temple, or once only. It was cleansed by him at the time of his last Passover, as related by the first three Evangelists. But it was very proper for St. John to record that done at the first Passover of our Lord's ministrie: it affording an alarming evidence of his being the expected Messiah, which should have been taken notice of by the Jewish Rulers at Jerusalem. It was an early and open claim of the character of the Messiah. And their neglecting that, and so many other claims and evidences of the same great truth afterwards, manifests the obiniance of their unbelief. Which was finily shewn by this Evangelist.

I now proceed to some other arguments.

3. One argument, that St. John's Gospel was writ before the destruction of Jerusalem, is taken from ch. v. 2. Now there is at Jerusalem, by the sheep-market, or Sheep-Gate, a pool, which is called in the Hebrew tongue Bethesida, having five porches.

On this passage inlike both (k) Basnage and (l) Lampe. St. John does not

(l) Habetur igitur hic non tantum mentio portæ ovium, tanquam tunc adhuc exitantis, cum scriberet Evangelista, sed etiam adhicci ex quinque porticibus constantis, quales structurae post dirutam a Romanis Hierosolymam illic frustra essent quaestae. Licet enim pilicanam superesse velint itinaria, portæ tamen ac muri folo apicatae erant. Inde igitur colligimus, stetisse urbem sanctam, Joanne
not say, as they observe, There was, but there is. And though the pool might remain, it could not be said after the ruin of the city, that the five porches still subsisted.

Mr. Whiston argues in this manner. “St. John (m) speaking of the Pool of Bethesda in the present tense better agrees to the time here aligned, A. D. 63. before the destruction of Jerusalem, when that Pool and Porch were certainly in being, than to the time afterwards, when probably both were destroyed.”

Dr. Whitby likewise was somewhat affected by this text, and says: “If there is be the true reading, as the consent of almost all the Greek copies argues, it seems to intimate, that Jerusalem and this Pool were standing, when St. John wrote his Gospel: and therefore, that it was written, as Theophylact, and others say, before the destruction of Jerusalem, and not, as the more ancient Fathers thought, long after.”

But Mr. Jones, beside other things, says, “that (n) in all probability the Pool was not filled up, but was still in the same state, after the destruction of Jerusalem, as before.” To which, however, it might be answered, that supposing the Pool not to have been filled up, it would not be reasonable to think, that the porches and the gate still subsisted, after the destruction of the city. But then Mr. Jones adds: “Supposing the Pool was destroyed, and St. John to have known it, there is no impropriety in using the verb is: nothing being more common among writers, than to use verbs in the present tense, to denote thepreterperfect.”

Having reprented this argument, as it has appeared to divers learned men, I leave every one to judge of it.

4. In ch. xxi. 18. 19. Christ foretells, that Peter would die by martyrdom. Then it is added; This spake he, signifying, by what death he should glorify God. Some may hence argue, that (o) Peter was not yet dead, when this was writ: or that St. John did not then know of it. But others may be of opinion, that (p) though Peter had suffered martyrdom a good while before, and St. John knew it very well; yet he was not obliged to take notice of it, but might write as he does.

Indeed, I am of opinion, that St. John could not take notice of Peter’s death. It was not a thing within his province. As an Evangelist, he wrote the historie of our Saviour, not of his Apostles.

5. A

Joanne ea verba scribent. Secus non praesens est, sed præteritum adhibuisset.

Lamp. Prot. l. 2. cap. 2. num. xi.

(m) Essay on the Constitutions. ch. i. p. 38.

(n) New and Full Method. vol. 3. p. 141.

(p) Locus ex Joh. xxi. 18. non magni in hac causâ momenti est. Nullam enim video necessitatem, cur mortem Petri commemorât, si vel actu notitiam ejus habuisset. quia sic per se fatis veritas praedictionis Iesu innotuisset. &c. Lamp. ib. l. 2. c. 2. §. xiii.
5. A like argument may be taken from the following verses. 20. 21. 22. Peter seeing John, saith to Jesus: Lord, and what shall this man do? Jesus saith unto him: If I will, that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? Follow thou me. Then went this saying abroad, that this disciple should not die. Yet Jesus said not unto him, he shall not die; but if I will, that he tarry, till I come, what is that to thee? If by Christ's coming be here intended the overthrow of Jerusalem, as many think, it may be supposed reasonable by some to expect, that St. John should have taken some notice of it here, if he wrote after that event. Nevertheless, I humbly apprehend, that this is not an argument of much weight. I do not think, that as an Evangelist he was obliged to give an account of the fulfilment of Christ's prediction, though he had been a witness of it.

6. This is the disciple, that testified these things, and wrote these things. And we know, that his testimonie is true. By these last words Mr. Lampe (g) supposeth, to be meant some Jews, then living in Asia, who were eye-witnesses of our Lord, and his ministrie: which might well be, if St. John's Gospel was writ before the destruction of Jerusalem: but would not be reckoned likely, if it was writ not before the year of the vulgar epoch 97. or 98. They who confirm the testimonie of another, ought to have the same certain knowledge of the thing testified, as he who speaks, or writes. But after the destruction of Jerusalem, it is not reasonable to think, there were many to bear witnesse to things done forty or fifty years before. These Jews, eye-witnesses of our Lord, Mr. Lampe supposeth to have been believers of that nation, who accompanied John into Asia, when he left Judea.

I have thought it proper, not to omit this argument of that learned writer. But it depends upon his interpretation of this verse. Which is not certain. For some have supposed, that (r) it is the church of Ephesus, which here speaks. And others think it be (s) St. John himself. The change of number and person, of we for I, is no valid objection. So 1. John i. 5. That which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes. 3. ep. 12. Ye, and we also bear record. And ye know, that our record is true. And St. Paul 1. Theff. ii. 18. Wherefore we would have come unto you, even I Paul, once and again. But Satan hindered us. Chryfosten (t) and Theophylact (u) underfood St. John to speak here of himself,

(g) Ibid. 1. 2. cap. 2. num ix.
(r) Et scimus.] Loquitur ecclesia Ephesina. Scimus, iunt, vide dignum, ex viva secilict puritate, et miraculis ab eo editis. Grat. in loc.
(s) "The Evangelist had said before ch. xix. 35. He knoweth, that he saith true. Here in this place he changeth the person, saying: We know, that his testimonie is true." Lightfoot upon John xxi. 24. vol. 2. p. 627. See likewise Whitby, Lensfart, and Dodridge upon the place.

(t) Καὶ διδάσκετε, φησίν, ὅτι ἀληθῆ ἐστὶν ἡ λέγει... Καὶ σάης δὲ σαιρὶ, κη ὅτι ταυτομικὸν ἀπολιθιστό, κη τῷ μυστῆσ της ἑκκλησίας. Chrys. hom. 88. al. 87. T. 8. p. 588. C. D. E.
(u) Καὶ διδάσκετε, φησίν, ὅτι ἀληθῆ λέγει, τιτετί. πλησιοφορεῖτο ἐγγεγραμένο, ἐγγεγραμένο, ἀτε σάης σαιρὶ, κη τοίς ἐγγονοις, κη τοῖς λογοις, κη τοῖς σαιριοις, κη τοῖς μετὰ της ἀνάγοναν ἀγαπητὲ γὰρ ἐγγονοις, κη ὅτι ἅνετο προφητεύουσιν, κη πειρίματο ἐγγονοις, ἐγγονοις. Theophyl. in Jo. Torn. i. p. 847.
self, as an eye-witnesse, who had been present at almost every thing, related by him in his historie.

7. It is said: "The three epistles of St. John do ever suppose, the "Gospel of St. John to have been written long before, and to be well "known by thole to whom he wrote. And they are written with a "conflant view and regard to the contents of the fame Gospel." That "is an argument (x) of Mr. Whiffon, which, with what he adds by way of confirmation, is referred to the reader's consideration.

8. Some have argued for an early date of this Gospel, or at leaft, that it was writ before the Revelation which was seen in Patmos, becaufe (y) it is said at the begining of that book, ch. i. 1. 2. . . . Who bare record of the word of God, and of the testimonie of Jesus Christ, and of all things, which he saw. They suppose, that therein St. John refers to his Gospel, and what he had writ in it. But to me the moft reasonable account of those words appears to be that, which (z) was given formerly: That they are moft properly understood of that very book, the Revelation, and the things contained in it. The writer there says, very pertinently, in his introduction, that in that book he had discharged the office, assigned him: having therein faithfully recorded the word of God, received from Jesus Christ, and all the visions, which he had seen.

9. Once more, it is argued from inscriptions, at the end of this Gospel, in divers manuscripts, that it was writ before the deftruction of Jerusalem: it being there said, that this Gospel was writ in the time of Nero, at thirty years, or about two and thirty years after our Saviour's ascension. Upon thefe insifted (a) Mr. Wetfein in a paffage quoted from him some while ago. Upon them likewise insifts (b) Mr. Lamp.

For my own part, I lay not any ftreffe at all upon these inscriptions, at the end of Greek, or Arabic, or other manuscripts of the New Testament, writ in the ninth, or tenth centurie, or later. They (c) are of no

(x) See his Commentarie upon St. John's three Catholic Epifles. p. 8. &c.
(y) Ipsum porro audiamus Evangeliftam idem non obfcure, uti nobis videtur, subindicantem, quando Apoc. i. 2. fe ita circumcribit: &c. &c. &c.
(z) See Vol. i. o. p. 703.
(a) See before p. 387.
(b) Accedit multarum glossarum et versionum in id confenfus, quod sub Nerone Evangelium fit exaratum. Licet enim authoritates haec sequioris avi sint, ob earum tamen frequentiam et harmoniam valde est credibile, quod in antiquiori traditione fundatae fint. . . . Id tamen obseruavi diffcrimen, ut quaedam numero rotundo XXX poft Chrifi adfcesionem, aliae XXXII nominent. Lamp. ibid. i. 2. cap. 2. num. xii. Vid. et num. xiv.
(c) Neque ordo, qui nunc receptus effe epiftolarum, fequitor ordinem temporis, neque antiqua sunt illa, quae sub finem sunt addita, ad fignificandum, unde et per quos missae funt . . . et illae in fine annotationulce fere funt, ex conjectura, aut tenui fama. Grot. Comm. in loca quaedam. N. F. sub in. Tom. 3. p. 457.
no authority. For there is no proof, that this account was derived from the testimonie, or tradition of ancient authors. The early date of the Gospels was popular. Some having without reason determined the time of writing the other Gospels at eight, or ten, or fifteen years after our Lord's ascension, pitched upon the year 30. or 32. for the time of St. John's Gospel. But it was done upon no other ground and foundation, but mere fanfie and conjecture.

X. It is upon the two first mentioned arguments, that I chiefly relye. However, there are objections, which deserve to be considered.

I. Obj. Chryfathom was of opinion, that St. John did not write, till after the destruction of Jerusalem. For in a homilie upon Matth. xxiv, he says: "John (d) writes not of any of these things, left it should be thought, that he took an advantage from the event. For he was living a good while after the destruction of Jerusalem. But the other Evangelists, who died before the destruction of Jerusalem, and law none of those things, record those predictions."

To which I anfwer, that St. John's omitting our Saviour's predictions concerning the destruction of Jerusalem, which are recorded by the other Evangelists, is no proof, that he did not write, until after they were fulfilled. For if he wrote at the time supposed by us, when that event was near; it is very likely, that he would omit those predictions: especially, having observed, that they were sufficiently recorded already. And we plainly see, that it is not St. John's method, to repeat what had been recorded before. However, he has inserted in his Gospel divers expressions, containing warnings and intimations of the miseries coming upon the Jewifh People, if they did not receive the Lord Jesus as the Messiah. John the Baptist may be supposed to intend this in words, recorded John iii. 36. Our Lord intimates it in his discourse with Nicodemus. iii. 18. 19. and upon divers other occasions, already taken notice of by us, in this Gospel. ch. viii. 12. 21. 24. ix. 39.

2. Obj. Mr. Whiston in (e) his Short View of the Harmonie of the Evangelists, says, "that St. John useth the Roman or Julian beginning of the day in his Gospel, the fame that we ufe at present, and reckons the hours from midnight and noon. He refers to John i. 39. xix. 14. and xx. 19. Which he reckons an argument, that St. John wrote his Gospel long after the destruction of Jerusalem, and the period of the Jewish polity, at Ephefus, a place remote from Judea, and under the Roman government."

To which I anfwer 1. It does not appear to me, that St. John computes the hours of the day after the Roman, but after the Jewish manner. 2. Supposing St. John to have used the Roman method of computation, it does not follow, that he wrote after the destruction of Jerusalem, and the period of the Jewish polity. We allow, that St. John's Gospel was writ at Ephefus, at a distance from Judea. And, if he thought fit, he might ufe the Roman way of reckoning, especially, when the period period of the Jewish commonwealth was near, though not quite accomplished.

(d) See Vol. x. p. 321.
(e) P. 115. 116.

Thus I have endeavoured to solve this objection. What was Mr. Whiston's own solution, I do not know. But I suppose, that he afterwards overcame this difficulty. For in his later writings he maintains a very different sentiment concerning the date of St. John's Gospel, pleading, that it was writ about the year of Chrif 63. a good while before the destruction of Jerusalem. So he argues in his Essay upon the Apostolical Constitutions, published, in 1711. and in his Commentarie upon St. John's Epiftles, published in 1719. His Harmonie of the four Evangelifts was printed at Cambridge in the year 1702.

3. Obj. It is farther objected, that many ancient writers speak of a late date of St. John's Gospel, and that he wrote with a design to confute divers heretics: who cannot be supposed to have appeared, till after the destruction of Jerusalem, and the overthrow of the Jewish People.

To which I answer, that this may have been owing to a mistaken apprehenion. Many heretics, they faw, might be confuted by St. John's Gospel. Therefore they concluded, that he did not write, till after they had appeared in the world: whilst the truth might be no more than this, that such and such heretics might be confuted out of his Gospel: though they had not appeared in the world, till long after. Paulinus says, "that (f) in the beginning of St. John's Gospel all heretics are confuted, particularly, Arius, Sabellius, Photinus, Marchion, and the Manicheans." And in Mr. Wetstein's preface to St. John's Gospel, writ not long ago, in our time, are these expressions. Having before quoted Irenæus, he adds: "Which (g) if they be compared with those things, which Carpocrates, Menander, Cerdo, Saturninus, Bafilides, Valentius, and Marchion, have said of angels, and æons: among whom were Charis Grace, Alethea Truth, Monogenes Only begotten, Logos Word, Zoe Life: it must be manifest, that John to opposed his doctrine to them, as to use the forms of expression, received by them." Surely, this is very incalculious, and inaccurate. Must it not be so, to fay, that St. John opposed those heretics, most of which are heretics of the second centurie? If St. John's gospel be genuine, it must have been writ before the end of the first centurie. Yea, Mr. Wetstein says, it was writ at about two and thirty years after Chrif's ascension. How then could St. John oppose them, or write against them, but in the way of prophecie, or prevention? But to fay, he opposed his doctrine to them, or wrote against them, does not seem very proper. And if the ancient writers speake not more accuratly, than this learned modern; an argument taken from them, upon this head, cannot be of much weight. It

(f) See Vol. xi. p. 44.
It is the testimonie of Irenaeus, which ought principally to be regarded by us, upon account of his antiquity, and his having been acquainted with Polycarp in the early part of his life. He says, as before transcribed, "that by the publication of his Gospel John designed to root "out the error that had been sown among men by Cerinthus." But it is observable, that in another place, also transcribed above, he says:
"John foreseeing those blasphemous notions, that divide the Lord, so "far as it is in their powers." wrote his Gospel. For this passage I am indebted to Mr. Whiston, who argues, that St. John's Gospel was writ about the year 63, and before this Apostle's three epistles. "Nor,
"says (b) he, shall I need to support this observation from any other "argument, than that from Irenaeus, who supposeth this Gospel, and
"St. Paul's epistle to the Romans, ancicnter, and these epistles later, "than the rise of the heresie of Cerinthus." Referring to the passage of Irenaeus, before taken notice of by us.

If then we put together the several passages of Irenaeus, he does not contradict the supposition of an early date of St. John's Gospel: or, that it was writ before the rife of those heresies, which may be confuted by it.

It may be judged presumptuous to oppose the prevailing opinion of learned men, who have supposed, that some heretics were particularly struck at in the beginning of this Gospel. Nevertheless Mr. Lampe (i) whom I have often quoted, has presumed to oppose this opinion, and has largely argued, that St. John did not write against Cerinthus, or other heretics in his Gospel. And though another learned German (k) has since writ against Mr. Lampe, I cannot say, that he has confuted him.

I shall therefore take the liberty of mentioning some thoughts relating to this matter, which offer themselves to my mind.

First: To me it seems below an Evangelist, to write against heretics in the historie of his Lord and Master. Nor do any of the Evangelists enter into a particular account of things after our Lord's ascension. St.
John proceeds no farther than his resurrection, and the evidences of it, without particularly mentioning his ascension. Nor has St. Matthew proceeded any farther. However, undoubtedly, it is implied in what they write, that our Lord was raised up to an endless life, and to uni-

(b) Commentarie upon St. John's epistles. p. 8.
(i) Nos ut salva, quam viris magnis, ... debemus, exiiimatione, libere animi sanna proferamus, an Evangelio suo Joannes controversiam traetare, hereticoque in Ecclesia sui avi ullos refutare voluerit, dubitamus admodum.
Neque enim id titulus generalis Evangelii libro praefixus admittit, neque id commode per librum ad methodum historiae compotum fieri potuit, neque illius rei vel vula vel vestigium ullam apparat: quod tamen et scriptoribus e-lencheticis in more conflanti poftium est, et e re admodum erat, ut eo certius tela ferirent, et eo evidentiis argumentorum patisceret robur. Lampe Prolegem. in Joann. I. 2. cap. 3. num. xiii. Vid. ib. num. xiv. xv. xvi. et feq.

(k) G. L. Oedevus de scope Evangelii S. Jo. Ap. certissime Hareui Cerinthi et E-

This has oftentimes appeared to me exceeding remarkable, that none of the Evangelists should in their Gospels give an account of the preaching of the Apostles after our Lord's ascension, and the descent of the Holy Ghost upon them. Take the earliest date of the Gospels, that can be thought of, or assignd by any: all must allow, that before any of them were writ, many miracles had been performed by the Apostles, and many converts must have been made from among Jews, if not also from among Gentils: and many promises of our Lord must have been accomplished. And we can perceive from their Gospels, that they had a knowledge of such things. Nevertheless there is no particular account of them in any of the Gospels. St. Mark is the only Evangelist, that has laid any thing in his Gospel of the ministrfie of the Apostles. And he enters not into any detail. His whole account is in a few words only, the last verse of his Gospel.

Considering this method of all the Evangelists in their histories of our Lord and Saviour, it appears to me probable, that though St. John had not writ his Gospel before the year 96. or 97. as some have supposed; he would not have taken notice of heretics, or vouchsafed to argue with them. St. John did not write the historie of the Apostles, as is evident. How then could he take notice of heretics.

Secondly. Another thing of no small moment is this. I see nothing of this kind in the rest of St. John's Gospel. Why (l) then should we imagine, that there is any such thing in the introduction? If St. John's Gospel is not writ against heretics, why should the beginning of it be so? What St. John says in the introduction, appears to me agreeable to the main design of his Gospel, as it has been before largely represented. He therein shews, that Jesus came, and acted by the authority of God, the Creator of the world, the God, and supreme Lawgiver of the Jewifh People. The (m) eternal word, reason, wisdom, power of God, which is God himself, by which the world had been made, by which he dwelled among the Jews in the tabernacle, and the temple,

(l) Ex quibus claret, ut putamus, patet, in proloco compendio contineri rerum, quas Evangelifìa toto Evangelio demonstrare volebat, nempe Iefum non tantum esse Filium Dei et redemptorem mundi. Ver. 1 . . 4. Sed etiam qua talem ita plene in mundo demonstratum esse, ut ab una parte Judei plane rediti fuerint áματολογγιαν. ver. 4 . . 11. ab altera autem fideles sufficientes fidei firmamentum acceperint. ver. 12 . . 18. Lamp. Prot. l. 2. cap. 4. num. xxv.

(n) dwelled, and resided in Jefus, in the fullest manner: so (o) that we his disciples, and others who believed in him, saw, and clearly discerned him to be the promised Messiah, the great Prophet, that should come into the world.

The Apostles in their addresses to the Jewish People never fail to give assurances, that Jefus Christ had acted by the authority of the one true God, the God of their ancestors. So Acts ii. 22. Ye men of Israel, hear these words: Jefus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles . . . which God did by him in the midst of you. And iii. 13. The God of Abraham, of Isaac, and Jacob, the God of our fathers, has glorified his Son, Jefus. . . . See also ver. 22. . . . 25. ch. v. 30. The God of our fathers has raised up Jefus. . . . The epistle to the Hebrews begins in this manner: God, who at sundry times, and in divers manners, spake in time past unto the fathers by the Prophets, has in these last days spoken unto us by his Son.

Indeed, this is necessarie for the satisfaction of all men, both Jews and Gentils. For there is no other God, but one, even the God of the Patriarchs and Prophets. Nor can any true revelation come from any, but him.

In all the Gospels our Lord ascribes all his miracles, and all his authority, to the one God, his Father, who is in heaven. Matt. xii. 28. If I cast out demons by the Spirit of God, then is the kingdom of God come unto you. Luke xi. 20. If I by the finger of God cast out demons, no doubt the kingdom of God is come unto you. Matt. xi. 27. All things are delivered unto me by my Father. . . . Comp. Luke x. 22. Matt. xii. 13. Every plant, which my heavenly Father has not planted, shall be rooted up. Matt. xvi. 27. For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father. . . . Comp. Mark viii. 38. And the like in many other places.

But in none of the Gospels does our Lord so frequently, and expressly, ascribe all his authority to God the Father, as in St. John's Gospel: thereby plainly shewing the guilt of those, who did not receive him. John v. 19. The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do. . . . Ver. 30. I seek not my own will, but the will of the Father, who hath sent me. Ver. 36. 37. But I have greater witness, than that of John. For the works, which the Father hath given me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me. . . . I am come in my Father's name. And ye receive me not. . . . And at ver. 45. . . . 47. our Lord appeals to Moses and his writings, which were allowed to be of divine original, as bearing testimony to him. Then ch. vi. 27. . . . him hath God the Father sealed. vii. 16. I am not alone. But I, and the

(o) "We saw his glorie, as what became the only begotten Son of God. He did not glitter in any worldly pomp and grandeur, according to what the Jewih nation fondly dreamed their Messiah would do: but he was decked with the glorie of holineffe, grace, truth, and the power of miracles." Lightfoot's Exercitations upon St. John vol. 2. p. 521.
the Father, that sent me. x. 36. Say ye of him, whom the Father hath sanctified, and sent into the world: Thou blasphemest: because I said, I am the Son of God? And, to add no more. Ch. xi. 41. 42. When he wrought that great miracle of raising Lazarus from the dead, Jesus lift up his eyes, and said: Father, I thank thee, that thou hast heard me. And I knew, that thou hearest me always. But because of the people which stand by, I said it, that they may believe, that thou hast sent me.

Agreeable to all this is the introduction, where, beside other, are these expressions: He came to his own. And his own received him not. The Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us. And we saw his glory, the glory, as of the only begotten of the Father. The law was given by Moses. But grace and truth came by Jesus Christ. No man hath seen God at any time. The only begotten Son, who is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him. So ends the introduction. And it is what St. John has largely and fully shewn in his Gospel.

But it will be asked: Whence came it to pass, that St. John made use of that term, the Word?

I answer: I am of opinion, that it was not out of regard to Philo, or any Platonic writers. But I suppose, this (p) way of speaking having been very common with the Jewish People, and, perhaps, more especially with those of them, who were most zealous for the law, and most exempt from foreign, and philosophical speculations. Who by the Word, or the Word of God, understood, not a spirit, separate from God, and inferior to him, but God himself, as St. John (q) does.

Numb. xxiii. 8.

(q) Omnia igitur talia conscribere volens discipulus Domini, et regulam veritatis constituere in Ecclesia quia est unus Deus Omnipotens, qui per verbum suum omnia fecit, et viibilum, et invisibilium: significans quoque, quoniam per Verbum, per quod Deus perfecl conditionem, in hoc et salutem his qui in conditione sunt, praeceptit hominibus: sic inchoavit in ea, quae est secondum Evangelium, doctrina: In principio erat Verbum. Iren. i. 3. cap. xi. in Maffuet.

Et Cerinthus autem quidam in Asia, non a primo Deo factum esse mundum docuit, sed a Virtute quadam valde separata, et diisante ab ea Principalitate, quae est superior omnium. Id. i. 1. cap. xxv. al. 26. in.
Numb. xxiii. 8. How shall I curse, whom God hath not cursed? or, how shall I defy, whom the Lord has not defied? Upon which verfe Patrick says: "In the Jerusalem Targum this verfe is thus paraphrased: How "shall I curse the house of Israel, when the Word of the Lord has blessed them? Or, how shall I diminish the familie of Israel, when the Word of "the Lord has multiplied them?"

It is well known, that in the Chaldee Paraphrafes, it is very com- mon, to put Mimra Jehovah, the Word of the Lord, for Jehovah, or God. When thefe Paraphrafes were made, is not certain; whether before, or after the time of our Saviour. But their great antiquity is generally al- lowed. And it is very probable, that this way of speaking was com- mon, and much used before. "It is likely, says a learned friend, that "Mimra Jehovah was used before the Paraphrafes were committed to "writing, because it would be an unreasonable thing to use a phrase, "which the common people did not understand. For it is suppo- sed, "that the Paraphrafes were chiefly made for them."

Let me add, that the ufe of this phrase, the Word of God, or the Word of the Lord, as equivalent to God himself, seems to be founded in the original language of the Old Teftament. In behalf of which I would allege the following texts. Gen. i. 1. In the begining God created the heavens and the earth. Ver. 3. God faid: Let there be light. And there was light. Comp. Pf. xxxiii. 6. By the word of the Lord were the heav- ens made, and all the hoft of them by the breath of his mouth. And Pf. cv. 19. Untill the time that his word came: the Word of the Lord tried him.

When St. John fays ch. i. 1. 2. 3. In the begining was the Word, and the Word was with God. And the Word was God. The same was in the begining with God. All things were made by him. And without him was not any thing made that was made. He seems to allude to (r) what Solo- mon fays of Wisdom in the book of Proverbs, particularly, the eighth chapter. And how Wisdom ought to be underftood, as fpoken of by Solomon, was fhewn formerly, if I may be allowed to fay fo, in (s) a dif- course upon Prov. viii. 17. Moreover the begining of St. John's Gos- pel fhould be compared with the begining of his firft Epiftle, particu- larly, ch. i. ver. 1. 2.

According to the account now given, what St. John fays at the be- ginning, is a very proper introduction of his Gospel: where he largely fhews the guilt of thofe, who rejected the manifeftation (t) of the Wil- dom, the Word, the Will of God, in the perfon of Jesus.

Upon the whole, I fee no reason to think, that, in the introduction to his Gospel, St. John oppofed any Christian herefies, or had any re- gard to them.

Confequently,

(r) See the passage of Vitringa quoted juft now, at note (m) p. 164.

(t) See Sermons upon various fubj ects, p. 113. ¶.

(s) See ch. xliii. vol. 4. p. 602. . 604.
Consequently, the foregoing argument, that St. John's Gospel was writ before the destruction of Jerusalem, or about the time of that event, remains entire.

Observations upon XI. I shall now mention some observations upon this Gospel.

1. There is no need to shew here, particularly, from the Gospel itself, as we did of the former Evangelists, that St. John did not write his Gospel, till after converts had been made from among Gentils: because it is allowed by all, that St. John did not write, till after the other Evangelists, about the time of the destruction of Jerusalem, or afterwards: before which time the Apostles must have left Judea, to go abroad, and preach to Gentils. Neverthelies one signal passage may be here taken notice of, which is not far from the begining of this Gospel. Ch. i. 11. 12. 13. He came to his own, and his own received him not: but as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name. Which were born not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God. That is, "he came to the Jews, and first appeared, and taught among them, and they generally rejected him." But upon all who believed in him, whether Jews or Gentils, of whatever countrey, or nation, or people, they were, he bestowed the privilege of being the people of God, and all the blessings appertaining to them."

2. Eusebe says: "The (i) other three Evangelists have recorded the actions of our Saviour for one year only, after the imprisonment of John the Baptist." Jerome speaks to the like purpose in his book of Illustrious Men, just now (u) transcribed. But it shoud have been said "one year, and somewhat more:" meaning the time and actions of our Lord's most publick miniftrie. For it seems to me, that the ancients supposed our Lord's miniftrie, to have lasted, in the whole, somewhat more than two years. As was shewn Vol. iii. p. 136...138. Eusebe indeed computed (x) our Lord's miniftrie to have consisted of three years and a half: and supposed St. John's Gospel to have in it four Passovers. He seems to have been the first Christian, who advanced that opinion. And he is now generally followed by harmonizers of the Gospels, and by ecclesiatical historians. Sir Isaac Newton (y) however computes five Passovers in our Saviour's miniftrie: as does likewise Dr. Edward Wells in his Historical Geographie of the New Testament. And others may be of the same opinion, or make more. But none of these opinions appear to me, to have any foundation in the Gospels. The opinion of Eusebe, and those who follow him, is much more probable, than theirs, who yet farther enlarge the number of the Passovers of our Saviour's miniftrie. The first Passover in St. John is that mentioned by him ch. ii. 13. At ch. v. 1. it is said: After this there was a feast of the Jews. And Jesus went up to Jerusalem. They who follow Eusebe, and make four Passovers in our Lord's miniftrie, reckon this feast to be a Passover. But they who compute his miniftrie to have lasted only two years, and somewhat more, suppose this to be some other feast, possibly, the feast of Tabernacles, next succeeding the Passover, mentioned

(i) See vol. viii. p. 93.
(x) See before p. 145.
mentioned ch. ii. 13. At ch. vi. 4. And the Passover, a feast of the Jews was nigh. This, according to different computations, is either the second, or the third Passover in our Lord's ministrerie. The third, or, according to others, the fourth, is that mentioned by all the Evangelists, at which our Lord suffered. It is mentioned by St. John ch. xi. 55. and xii. 1.

3. St. John has omitted the greatest part of those things, which are recorded by the other Evangelists. Which much confirms the testimonie of ancient writers, that the first three Gospels were written, and published among the faithful, before St. John wrote: that they were brought to him, and that he affirmed the truth of their relations, but said, that some discourses and miracles of our Saviour were omitted by them, which might be usefully recorded.

Indeed, there is little or nothing in his Gospel, which is not new and additional, except the account of our Saviour's prosecution, death, and resurrection, where all four coincide in many particulars: though even here also St. John has divers things peculiar to himself. In St. John's Gospel is no account of our Saviour's nativity, nor of his baptism by John: though, undoubtedly, it is there suppos'd, and referred to. He takes no notice of our Saviour's temptation in the wilderness, nor of the call, or names of the twelve Apostles, nor of their mission, in our Saviour's life time, nor of our Lord's parables, or other discourses of his, recorded by them, nor of our Saviour's journeys, of which they give an account, nor any of those predictions, relating to the defolations of Jerusalem, which are in Matthew, Mark, and Luke. Nor has he any miracles recorded by them, excepting only, that one of the multiplication of small provision for feeding five thousand, with the extraordinary circumstances of the return to Capernaum from the country, where that miracle had been wrought. ch. vi. 4... 21. And it is likely, that this miracle was recorded by him, for the sake of the discourses, to which it gave occasion, and which follow there. ver. 22... 71.

However, it should be observed, that he has one thing recorded by all the Evangelists, Peter's striking a servant of the High-Priest, and cutting off his ear. ch. xviii. 10. Then Simon Peter having a sword, drew it, and smote the High-Priest's servant, and cut off his right ear. The servant's name was Malchus. Which, as St. Luke informs us, Jesus touched, and healed. ch. xxii. 51 Peter's action is mentioned by all the three Evangelists. Matt. xxvi. 51. Mark xiii. 47. Luke xxii. 51. But St. John alone mentions Peter by name, and the name of the servant. I thought proper to take notice of this, though St. John does not particularly mention the miracle of healing.

St. John likewhile ch. ii. 14... 22. gives an account of our Lord's cleansing the temple at his first Passover, when he went to Jerusalem. All the other Evangelists have a like account of our Lord's cleansing the temple at his last Passover. Matt. xxi. 12. 13. Mark xi. 15. 16. Luke xix. 45. 46. But I suppose them to be quite different actions, and that our blessed Lord twice cleansed the temple, as already shewn.

4. Though the first three Evangelists have not particularly recorded our Saviour's several journeys to Jerusalem, as St. John has done, but have only given a particular account of his preaching there at his last Passover, they were not unacquainted with them.

This may be concluded from divers things in their histories. To thole, who came to apprehend him, our Lord said: I sat daily with you teaching in the temple, and ye laid no hold on me. Matth. xxvi. 55. And compare Mark xiv. 49. Luke xxii. 53. And among the accusations brought against him by the Jewish Rulers before Pilate, they say: He stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Judea, beginning from Galilee to this place. Luke xxiii. 5. Peter preaching at Jerusalem, soon after our Lord's ascension, says: Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you by miracles, wonders, and signs: which God did by him in the midst of you, as yourselves also know. Acts ii. 32. And at the house of Cornelius, in Cesarea: That word, you know, which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee. Acts x. 37... And we are witnesses of all things, which he did, both in the land of the Jews, and at Jerusalem. ver. 39. And it appears from their histories, that our Lord's name had early reached Jerusalem. Many attended him in Galilee, from thence, and from other parts. Says St. Matthew: And there followed him great multitudes of people from Galilee, and from Decapolis, and from Judea, and from beyond Jordan. iv. 25. Comp. Mark iii. 7. 8. Again: And the Scribes, which came from Jerusalem, said: He has Belzebub... Mark iii. 22... 30. Compare Matt. ix. 34. Luke xi. 14... 26. Then came to Jesus Scribes and Pharisees, which were of Jerusalem. Matt. xv. 1. Compare Mark vii. 1. And says St. Luke ch. v. 17. And it came to pass on a certain day, as he was teaching, that there were Pharisees, and Doctors of the Law sitting by, which were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judea, and Jerusalem. And the power of the Lord was present to heal them. And in every one of the Evangelists we may meet with Scribes and Pharisees, opposing our Lord, watching his words and actions, cavilling with him, and reflecting upon him, and his disciples.

Moreover in St. Luke ch. ix. 51... 56. is an account of a remarkable incident, when our Lord was going from Galilee through Samaria, to Jerusalem, at one of their feasts: supposed by (z) some to be the feast of Tabernacles, by others (a) the feast of Dedication, preceding his last Passover. See likewise Luke xiii. 22. and xvii. 11.

However, after all, I do not think it was needful, that our Lord should go often to Jerusalem, or that all his journeys thither, and discourses there, should be recorded. It was indeed highly expedient, that his ministrations should be public. So it might be, without going often to Jerusalem. John the Baptist was a man of great reputation, though he never went up to Jerusalem during the time of his foretelling himself unto Israel, that we know of. And it is manifest from the first three Evangelists, as well as from St. John, that our Lord's ministrations were very public, and well known in all parts of Judea, and the regions round about, and to men of all ranks therein. In them we find our Lord to have been notified before-hand by John the Baptist. He sent out once his twelve Apostles, and then seventy other other disciples, two by two, to go before him, and prepare men for him, in every city and place, where he should come. In them we find him teaching in synagogues, in cities, and villages, and desert places, crowded by throngs, attended by multitudes of people, and miraculously feeding at one time five thousand, at another four thousand men, beside women and children.

It was fit, that our Lord's ministrie should be very public. It is manifeft from all the four Evangelists, that it was so. Which cannot but be the ground of great satisfaction to us.

5. The genuineffe of the xxi. or last chapter of St. John's Gospell ought not to be contested.

Grotius indeed was of opinion, that (b) St. John concluded his Gospel with the words, which are at the end of the xx. chapter: and that what is in the xxi. chapter was added after St. John's death by the church of Ephesus.

Against that opinion the general, or (c) even universal consent of manuscripts and versions is a great objection. For it is very probable, that this Gospel was published before St. John's death. And if there had been an edition without this chapter, it is very likely, that it would have been wanting in some copies. To which may be added, that we do not find, that any of the ancient Christian writers ever made a question, whether this chapter was composed by St. John, or by another. Finally, (d) the title is St. John's. In chapter. xix. 35. And he that saw it bare record. And his record is true. And he knoweth, that he saith true. Here xxi. 24. This is the disciple, which testifieth of these things, and wrote these things. And we know, that his testimonie is true. Compare likewise ver. 7. and 20. The last words of the chapter, at ver. 25. are these: And there are also many other things, which Jesus did: the which if they should be

(b) Omnino arbitrator, quæ hic sequuntur conclusionem esse totius operis, et ibi nifi Johannem librum, quem edidit. At sicut caput ultimum Pontatuechi, et caput ultimum Josuæ potœ Mosis et Josuæ mortem additum est a Syncrideo Hebraœorum: ita et caput quod sequitur potœ mortem Johannis additum ab Ecclesia Ephesina, hoc maxime fine, ut offenderetur impletum quod de longavitate ac non violenta morte Johannis Dominus præixerat. &c. Grot. ad Job. xxi. 30.

(c) Ceterum in tanto codicum et versionum confenfus, eoque profusius universalis, cogitari non debebat, caput hoc ab Ecclesia demum Ephesina accèfse. Quis enim negare tuto potest, Evangelium Johannis ante ipsius obitum, adeoque ante additum hoc, quod creditur, supplementum accèffæ? Et quis crediderit, vel sic omnes codices in exhibendo illo capite tam confianter contentire potuisse? Wolf. in Job. cap. xxi. in.

Whether any of the first three Evangelists

be written every one, I suppose, that even the world itself could not contain the books that should be written. Which clause evidently is from the same person, who wrote ver. 30. and 31. of ch. xx. Here the Evangelist seems to check himself, and to determine, not to proceed any farther. For if he should attempt to commit to writing every thing which Jesus had said and done, he should never come to an end.

Says Dr. Whitby upon ch. xx. 31. "Some think, that St. John here ended his Gospel, and that the following chapter was written by some other hands. But these words give no ground for that imagination: "since other Apostles, after they seem to have concluded their epistles, "add some new matter: as may be seen in the conclusions of the "epistles to the Romans, and to the Hebrews." See Rom. ch. xv. "and xvi. Hebr. xiii. 21. ... 25. I would likewise refer to Mr. Len-fot's note upon ch. xxi. 24. Who also afferts the genuineesse of "this last chapter.

CHAP. X.

The Question considered, whether any one of the first three Evangelists had seen the Gospels of the others, before he wrote.

ERE I shall in the first place mention the different sentiments of learned moderns concerning this point. And then I intend to consider the merits of the question.

Calvin (a) in the preface to his Harmonie of the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke, declares it to be his opinion, that S. Mark was so far from having abridged St. Matthew's Gospel, that he thinks he had never seen it. Which he also supposeth to have been St. Luke's cafe.

This likewise must have been the opinion of Bajnage. For he supposeth (b) St. Luke's to have been the first written of all the Gospels. Consequently this Evangelist could not borrow either from St. Matthew, or St. Mark.

Mr. Whiston in (c) his Harmonie of the four Evangelists called St. Mark the epitomizer of St. Matthew. Mr. Jones, in his Vindication of St. Matthew's Gospel, well, and largely argued against that opinion.

Mr. Doddwell declared his opinion upon this subjeft after this manner. "That (d) none of the first three Evangelists had seen the others Gof-

(a) Mihi certe magis probabile est, et ex ipfa conjicere licet, numquam librum Matthaei fuifbe ab eo infpeftum, cum ipse fuum scriberet: tantum abeft, ut in compendium ex profeffo redigere voluerit. Idem et de Luca judiciwm facio. Calvin. argum. in Evangel. &c.
(b) Bajn. Ann. 60. num. xxxi. (c) P. 102.
(d) Sic latuenter in illis terrarum angulis, in quibus scripta fuerant, Evangelia, ut ne quidem recellerint recentiores Evangeliffae, quid scriptiffent de iisdem rebus antiquiores. Aliter foret ne tot effent inartopauit que fere a prima ufque canones constitutione eruditorum hominum ingenia exercuerint. Certe S. Lucas fi genealogiam illum Domini in Matthaeo vidisset, non aliem ipfam, nihilque fere habentem commune, produxiffet, ne quidem minima confilii tam diversa edita ratione. S. Matthaeus, qui folus e noftris Luca erat had seen each others Gospels? 173

"pels. Otherwise there could not have been in them so many seeming
"contradictions, which have exercised the thoughts of inquisitive men
"almoft ever since the forming of the canon of the New Testament.
"Certainly, if St. Luke had seen the genealogie of our Lord, which is "in St. Matthew, he would not have publifhed another so very differ"ent, without assigning any reafon for it... St. Matthew is the only "one of our Evangelifts, who wrote before St. Luke... St. John did "not write till long after St. Luke. Nor did Mark write till after St.
"Luke, if he wrote his Gospel in the fame year that he finifhed the Acts "of the Apostles. Which seems to me very probable. For the Acts "are the second book of the fame work. As is evident from what "himelf fays Acts i. i. St. Luke's Gospel therefore was writ in the
"the second year of the Apostle Paul's imprifonment at Rome. For "so far the historie of the Acts reaches. But St. Mark feems not "to have writ untill after the death of St. Peter, or not long before
"it." This then is the order of the four Evangelifts, according to Mr.

How Mr. Le Clerc argued on the fame fide, was seen (e) formerly.
On the other hand, Grotius fays, it (f) is manifeft from comparing their Gofpels, that Mark made ufe of Matthew.

Mill has spoken largely to this point in his Prolegomena. "He fays,
"it (g) was not the design of St. Mark, to make an abridgement of "St. Matthew's Gofpel, as fome have fuppoled. For he does not al"ways follow St. Matthew's order, as an abridger would have done.
"And he is oftentimes more prolix in his histories of the fame thing
"than St. Matthew, and has inferted many additional things, and fome "of great moment for illustrating the evangelical historie. Nay (h)
"so far was Mark from intending to abbreviate St. Matthew's Gofpel,
"that
Whether any of the first three Evangelists

CH. X.

"that there have been men of great fame, as Calvin, and our Dodwell, " who were of opinion, that St. Mark and Luke had never seen Matthew's Gospel. However, Grotius was of a different opinion. And " indeed the great resemblance of the style and composition of these two " Evangelists manifests the truth of it."

Of St. Luke Mill says: "Nothing (i) is more evident, than that he " made use of the Gospels of Matthew and Mark. For he has borrow- " ed from them many phrazes and expressions, and even whole para- " graphs word for word."

But there is not sufficient foundation for such strong assertions, in the account, which Mill himself gives of the time of writing the first three Gospels. For, according to him, St. Matthew's Gospel was published in (k) the year 61. St. Mark's (l) in 63. St. Luke's (m) in 64. Which is but one year later. Nor has Mill made it out, that St. Mark's was published so soon as the year 63. For he owns, that it was not writ, till after Peter's and Paul's departure from Rome. Which could not be, till after the year 63. How then could St. Luke make so much use of St. Mark's Gospel, as is pretended?

I allege but one author more, relating to this point. Mr. Wetstein says, that (n) Mark made use of Matthew. And of St. Luke he says, "that (o) he transcribed many things from Matthew, and yet more from Mark."

But may I not say, that before Mr. Wetstein asserted such things, he should have given at least some tolerable account of the times, when the Evangelists wrote, and that St. Mark was prior in time to Luke? Which I do not perceive him to have done. St. Matthew's Gospel, indeed, he supposes to have been writ (p) in the eighth year after our Lord's ascension. But of St. Luke he observes, that (q) ecclesiastical writers say, he published his Gospel at about fifteen, or as others about two and twenty years after our Saviour's ascension. His account of St. Mark is, "that (r) he was with Peter at Babylon. Thence he came " to Rome, and was with St. Paul during his captivity there. Col. iv. " 10. Philem. 23. Then he went to Colosse. Afterwards at the desire of

(k) Proleg. num. 61.

(l) Ibid. num. 101.

(m) Ibid. num. 112.

(n) De Marco ap. T. Gr. T. i. p. 552.

(o) Lucam multa ex Matthaeo, ex Marco plura descriptisse, ex collatione patet. De Luca ibid. p. 643.

(p) Ibid. p. 223.

(q) Ibid. p. 643.

the Apostle he came to him thence to Rome. 2 Tim. iv. 11. Where he is said to have writ his Gospel, abridging St. Matthew, and adding some things, which he had heard from Peter." A very fine character of our Evangelist, truly! But according to this account of St. Mark's travels, and of the place, where his Gospel was writ, it could not be publish'd before the year 64. or 65. How then could St. Luke make use of it, if he wrote so soon as fifteen or two and twenty years after Christ's ascension?

I proceed now to speak more distinctly to the merits of the question,
1. It does not appear, that any of the learned ancient Christian writers had a suspicion, that any of the first three Evangelists had seen the others histories, before they wrote.

They say indeed, "that when the three first written Gospels had been delivered to all men, they were also brought to St. John, and that he confirm'd the truth of their narration: but said, there were some things omitted by them, which might be profitably related:" or, "that he wrote last, supplying some things, which had been omitted by the former Evangelists." After this manner speak (s) Eusebius of Cæarea, (t) Epiphanius, (u) Theodore of Mopsuestia, and (x) Jerome. Not now to mention any others. Augustin indeed about the end of the fourth centurie, or the beginning of the fifth, supposeth (y) the first three Evangelists not to have been totally ignorant of each others labours, and coniders Mark's Gospel as an abridgement of St. Matthew's. But, as (z) formerly observed, so far as I know, he is the first, in which that opinion is found. Nor does it appear, that he was followed by succeeding writers.

2. It is not suitable to the character of any of the Evangelists, that they should abridge, or transcribe another historian.

St. Matthew was an Apostle, and eye-witnesse. Consequentely, he was able to write of his own knowledge. Or, if there were any parts of our Lord's ministrsie, at which he was not present, he might obtain information from his fellow-apostles, or other eye-witneses. And as for other things, which happened before the Apostles, were called to follow him, concerning his nativity, infancy, and youth: as Augustin (a) says, thefe the Apostles might know from Christ himself, or from his parents, or his friends and acquaintance, who were to be depended upon.

St. Mark, if he was not one of Christ's seventy disciples, was an early Jewish believer, acquainted with all the Apostles, Peter in particular, and with many other eye-witneses. Consequentely, well qualified to write a Gospel. Mill (b) himself has been so good, as to acknowledge this.

St. Luke,

(s) See Vol. viii. p. 92.
(x) Vol. x. p. 98. 99.
(a) See Vol. x. p. 227.
(b) Marcus ille, qui quis fuerit, ad Evangelium conscribendum abunde instructus accedebat. Si enim filius fuit Mariae, civis Ithi Hierofolymitaæ, . . . ei fane jam a tempore conversionis tam frequens intercesserat, ac plane familiare
St. Luke, if he was not one of Christ's seventy disciples, nor an eye-witness, was a disciple, and companion of the Apostles, especially, of Paul, as is universally allowed. And he must therefore have been well qualified to write a Gospel. Moreover, as (c) has been shewn, it is manifest from his introduction, that he knew not of any authentic historie of Jesus Christ, that had been yet written. And he expressly says of himself, that he had perfect understanding of all things from the very firft, and he professeth to write of them to Theophilus in order. After all this to say, that he transferred many things from one historian, and yet more from another, so far as I am able to judge, is no less than a contradifition of the Evangelift himself.

3. The nature and defign of the firft three Gosпеls manifestly shew, that the Evangelists had not seen any authentic written historie of Jesus Christ.

This is one of the observations of Le Clerc relating to this point: "We (d) can scarcely doubt, whether St. John had seen the other three "Gospelps. For as he is said to have lived to a great age, so it appears "from his Gospel itself, that he took care not to repeat things related "by them, except a few only, and those necessary things. But I do "not see, how it can be reckoned certain, that Mark knew of Matthew's "having writ a Gospel before him: or that Luke knew, that they two "had writ GosРels before him. If Mark had seen the work of Mat- "thew, it is likely, that he would have remained satisfied with it, as "being the work of an Apostle of Christ, that is, an eye-witness, "which he was not." And what there follows.

I must enlarge upon this observation. I forbear to insist now on the genealogies, which are in St. Matthew and St. Luke only. But I say, that the writings of all and each one of these three Evangelists contain an entire Gospel, or a compleat historie of the miniftrie of Jesus Christ: or, to borrow St. Luke's expressifions, Acts i. 1. 2. a historie of all that Jesus both did and taught, untill the day, in the which he was taken up to heaven. For in all and every one of them is the historie of our Lord's forerunner, his baptism, preaching, and death, and of our Lord's being baptized by him: when by a voice from heaven he was proclaimed to be the Messiah. Then follows our Lord's temptation in the wilderness. After which is an account of our Lord's preaching, and his beginning to gather disciples, the choice of the twelve Apostles, and their names: and our Lord's going over the land of Israel, preaching the doctrine of the kingdom, attended by his twelve Apostles, in synagogues, and in cities and villages, working all kinds of healing and saving miracles, upon all sorts of persons, in all places, in the presence of multitudes, and familiare cum ipsis Apostolis commercium, ut vix aliqua &etatis sua pars ip- forum confortio vacaret: ita ut quotidiem ab illis petere liceret de dictis ac factis Domini παραδοσις, quas conferret in commentarium. Sane, quiquis fuerit hic Marcus, apud Vetrices plane conventit, fuisset cum D. Petri comi- tem et intrepertem: ipsumque comitatum fuisset Romam usque ... adeo ut ex Apostoli καισοιομουναι acceperit necessit fit plenissimam et exactissimam historie totius evangelicae cognitionem. Mill Proleg. n. 102.

(c) See before, p. 31. 32.
(d) See Vol. x. p. 233, 234.
and before Scribes, and Pharisees, as well as others. A particular mission of his Apostles, in the land of Israel. Our Lord's transfiguration on the mount, when there appeared Moses and Elias talking with him, and there came a voice from heaven, saying: This is my beloved Son. Hear him. His going up to Jerusalem, and making a public entrance into the city, then cleansing the temple, where he often taught the people, and preached the gospel, and openly asserted his authority and character: keeping the passover with his disciples, and instituting a memorial of himself: his last sufferings, and death, with the behaviour of Judas, the traitor, Peter, and the rest of the disciples: his burial, resurrection, with the evidences of it, and the general commission to his Apostles, to preach the Gospel in all the world, and to all sorts of persons therein.

Here are all the integrals of a Gospel. And they are properly filled up. And all these things are in all and every one of the first three Evangelists. Which shews, that they did not know of each others writings. For it cannot be thought, that they should be disposed to say the same things over and over, or to repeat what had been well said already. St. John, who had seen the other three Gospels, has little in common with them. Almost every thing in his Gospel is new and additional. So it would have been with every other writer in the like circumstance.

And if St. Matthew's Gospel had been writ at about eight, or fifteen, or twenty years after our Lord's ascension, and had become generally known among the faithful: (as it certainly would, soon after it was writ:) it is not improbable, that we should have had but two Gospels, his and St. John's. Or if there had been several, they would all, except the first, have been in the manner of supplements, like St. John's, not entire Gospels, like those of the first three Evangelists.

This consideration appears to me of great moment, for shewing that our first three Evangelists are all independent witnesses. Indeed it seems to me to be quite satisfactory, and decisive.

4. There are in these three Gospels, as was observed just now by Mr. Dodwell, many seeming contradictions: which have exercised the skill of thoughtful men to reconcile them. This is another argument, that these Evangelists did not write by concert, or after having seen each others Gospels.

5. In some histories, which are in all these three Evangelists, there are small varieties and differences, which plainly shew the same thing. I shall allege two or three instances only.

1.) In Matth. viii. 28. ... 34. Mark v. 1. ... 20. Luke viii. 26. ... 40. is the account of the cure of the demoniac, or demoniacs, in the country of the Gadarens. It is plainly the same historic, as appears from many agreeing circumstances. Nevertheless there are several differences. St. Matthew speaks of two men. St. Mark and St. Luke of one only. In Mark alone it is said, that the man was always night and day in the mountains, crying, and cutting himself with stones. And he alone mentions the number of the swine that were drowned. He likewise says, that the man besought our Lord much, that he would not send them away out of the country. St. Luke says: the demon besought him, that he would would not command them to go out into the deep, or abyffe. Surely these Evangelists did not abridge, or transcribe each others writings.

2.) In Matt. xvi. i... 13. Mark ix. i... 13. Luke ix. 28... 36. are the accounts of our Lord’s transfiguration on the mount. Where St. Matthew says: his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light. St. Mark: And his raiment became shinin, exceeding white as snow, so as no fuller on earth can whiten them. St. Luke: And as he prayed, the fashion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was white and glittering. It is plain, I think, that none had seen what the other had writ. In the description of the splendour of our Lord’s person, and garments, each one follows his own phanie. In St. Matthew and St. Mark are comparisons. But they are different. In St. Luke there is no comparison at all.

3.) The third instance shall be what follows next in all the three Evangelists, after our Lord was come down from the mount. Matt. xvii. 14... 21. Mark ix. 14... 29. Luke ix. 37... 42. In this historie of the healing the young man, who had the epilepsie, where St. Mark is more particular and prolix, than the other Evangelists, there are many differences. I take notice of a very few only. In St. Matthew the father of the child says: Lord, have mercy on my Son. For he is lunatic, and fire vexed. And the healing him is thus related. And Jesus rebuked the demon. And he departed out of him. And the child was cured from that very hour. In St. Mark the father of the child says to our Lord: Master, I have brought unto thee my son, who has a dumb spirit. And when our Lord healed him, he rebuked the foul spirit, saying unto him: Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee, come out of him, and enter no more into him. And what follows. In St. Luke the father says: Master, I beseech thee, look upon my son. For he is my only child.

Certainly, he who observes these things, must be sensible, that these historians did not borrow from each other. There are many other like instances. To mention them all would be endless.

I shall add a consideration or two more, which must be allowed to be of some weight in this question.

6. There are some things in St. Matthew’s Gospel, very remarkable, of which no notice is taken either by St. Mark, or St. Luke.

I intend, particularly, the visit of the Magians, with the causes of it, and it’s circumstances, and then the conquences of it, our Saviour’s flight into Egypt, and the slaughter of the infants at Bethlehem, and near it. Matt. ii. The dream of Pilate’s wife. ch. xxvii. 19. the affair of the Roman guard at the sepulchre. xxviii. 11... 15. an earthquake, rending of rocks; and the resurrection of many saints, who came out of their graves, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many. ch. xxvii.

51... 53.

These are as extraordinarie things, as any in the Gospels. And if St. Mark, or St. Luke, had writ with a view of abridging, or confirming St. Matthew’s historie, some, or all of these things, would have been taken notice of by them. It is also very observible, that St. Luke has no account of the miracle of feeding four thousand with seven loaves and a few little fishes, which is in Matt. xv. 32... 39. Mark viii.

1... 9.

And
And what has been just now said of St. Matthew, particularly, may be also applied to St. Luke, supposing his to have been the first written Gospel. For in him also are many remarkable things, not to be found in the other Gospels. And if St. Matthew, or St. Mark had writ with a view of abridging or confirming St. Luke's historie, those things would not have been passed over by them without any notice.

7. All the first three Evangelists have many things peculiar to themselves. Which shew, that they did not borrow from each other, and that they were all well acquainted with the things, of which they undertook to write a historie.

Many such things are in Matthew, as is well known to all. I therefore need not enlarge on them. And a few of them were just now taken notice of.

St. Mark likewise has many things peculiar to himself, not mentioned by any other Evangelist. A catalogue of them was made by us (e) formerly, though far from being compleat.

The same is true of St. Luke. As much was observed by Irenæus, who says, "there are many, and those necessarie parts of the Gospel, which we know from Luke only." His brief enumeration of those things was transcribed by us into this Work (f) long ago. Let me also rehearse them here somewhat differently. His general introduction, the birth of John the Baptist, and many extraordinarie things, attending it. The Roman census made in Judea, by Cyrenius, or before that made by Cyrenius, which brought Joseph and Marie from Nazareth to Bethlehem, the mean circumstances of our Lord's nativity, the notification of it to shepherds by an angel, his circumcision, Marie's purification at the temple, the prophecies of Simeon, and Anna there, our Lord's going up to Jerusalem at the age of twelve years. Ch. ii. The names of the Emperor and other Princes, in whole time John the Baptist and our Lord began to preach, and our Lord's age at that time, a genealogical different from Matthew. Ch. iii. In St. Luke are also divers miracles, not recorded elsewhere. A numerous draught of fishes. ch. v. 4...9. The cures of Marie Magdalen, Joanna, wife of Chusza, Herod's steward, and Susanna, ch. vii. 2. 3. giving speech to a dumb man. ch. xi. 14. a woman healed in a synagogue of an infirmity, under which she had labored eighteen years. ch. xiii. 10...17. a man cured of the dropsie on a sabbath day, in the house of a Pharifee. ch. xiv. 1...4. Ten lepers cured at once. ch. xvii. 12...19. the ear of Malechus healed. ch. xxii. 50...5. the son of a widow of Naim raised to life, in the sight of multitudes, when he was carried out to burial. ch. vii. 11...17. a miracle of resurrection, related by no other Evangelist. In him alone is the mission of the seventy disciples. ch. x. 1...20. Divers beautiful parables spoken by our Lord, which are not to be found elsewhere: the parable of the good Samaritan. ch. x. 25...37. the parable of the lost piece of silver, and the prodigal son. ch. xv. 8...32. of the unjust steward. xvi. 1...12. the rich man and Lazarus. 19...31. the importunate widow. xviii. 1...8. the Pharisee and Publican, that went up to the temple to pray. ver. 9...14. To St. Luke also are peculiar

(e) See before p. 74;
(f) Vol. ii. p. 357...360.
Whether any of the three first Evangelists, &c.  CH. X.

our Lord's entertainment at the house of a Pharisee, where came in the woman that was a sinner. ch. vii. 36... 50. his entertainment at the house of Martha. x. 38... 42. the historie of Zaccheus. xix. 1... 10. our Lord's agonie in the garden. xxii. 43. 44. the penitent thief on the croffe. xxiii. 39... 43. and a particular account of the two discipiles going to Emmaus. xxiv. 13... 35.

All these, and many other things, which I omit, are peculiar to St. Luke. And did he transcribe many things from St. Matthew, and yet more from St. Mark?

Mill's argument, taken from the similitude of ftilo and composition, to prove, that these Evangelists had seen each others writings, appears to be insufficient. And himself allows, that (g) two authors writing upon the same subject in the Greek language may easily agree very much in expressio.

I have insisted the more upon this point, because I think, that to say, the Evangelists abridged, and transcribed each other, without giving any hint of their fo doing, is a great disparagement to them. And it likewise diminisheth the value and importance of their testimonie. Said Mr. Le Clerc, before quoted, "They (b) seem to think more justly, "who say, that the first three Evangelists were unacquainted with each "others design. In that way greater weight accrueth to their testi-monie. When witnesses agree, who have first laid their heads "together, they are suspected. But witnesses, who testify the same "thing separatly, without knowing what others have said, are justly "credited."

This is not a new opinion, lately thought of. Nor has it been taken up by me, out of opposition to any. I have all my days read, and admired the first three Evangelists, as independent, and harmonious witnesses. And I know not how to forbear ranking the other opinion among those bold, as well as groundlesse assertions, in which critics too often indulge themselves, without considering the consequences.

(g) Verum quidem est, eum esse linguæ hujus, quæ Evangelistis in usu erat, Hellenisticæ genium eam indolem, ut in unum ferme eundemque dicendi charæferem, quoties de una eademque materia agitur, fæc efformet: ita ut diversi in hoc genere scriptores, unum idemque aliquod argumentum particulare tradantes, filio ac sermonis tenore haud absimili ufuri essent. &c. Prol. num. 168.

(b) See Vol. x. p. 235.
St. Paul

I. His Historie before his Conversion, and his general Character. II. The Time of his Conversion. III. Observations upon his Conversion, and the Circumstances of things at that time in Judea. IV. His Age at the Time of his Conversion. V. When he was made an Apostle. VI. The Historie of his Travels, and Preaching: particularly, from the Time of his Conversion and Apotheosis to his coming from Damascus to Jerusalem, the first time, after his Conversion. VII. From his coming first to Jerusalem to his being brought to Antioch by Barnabas. VIII. to his coming up to Jerusalem with the Contributions of the Christians at Antioch. IX. to his coming to the Council at Jerusalem about the year 49. X. to his coming to Jerusalem with Contributions of divers Gentile Churches, in the year 58, when he was apprehended, and imprisoned. XI. to the End of his imprisonment at Rome. XII. to the time of his death.

AUL, called also Paul, by which name he was generally called, after his preaching in Gentile countrreys, and, particularly, (a) among Greeks and Romans, a descendent of the Patriarch Abraham, one of God’s ancient chosen people of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, was (b) a native of Tarfus, then the chief city of Cilicia. He was also by birth a (c) Citizen of Rome. How he became entitled to that privilege, has been distinctly shewn (d) in another place. His father (e) was a Pharisee, and himself was of the same sect. He had a sister, whose son was a Christian, and a discreet person, who (f) was of great service to

(a) Acts xiii. 9. [Then Saul, who also is called Paul.] Σαυλος δε δι της Παλαιας, id est, qui ex quo sum Romanis converfari cepit, hoc nomine, a suo non abludente, cepit a Romanis appellari. Sic qui iefus Judaeus, Graecis Jason: Hillel, Pollio: apud Romanos Silas, Silvanus, ut notavit Hieronymus. Grot. in Ad. xiii. 9.

Hoc primum loco cepit Apostolus a Lucâ Paulus dici, quem ubique antea Saulum vocavit. Nec deinceps alio, quam Pauli nomine usquam vocavit... Alli igitur Apostolum jam inde ab initio binominem fuifse putant, ut ex altero nomine Judaeus, ex altero Romanus civis esse intelligeretur. Alli cum religione nomen eum mutasse putant, cum ex Pharisaœ fereat Christianus... Sunt demum qui a Sergio Paulo Proconfule ad Chrif tum converso hoc cognomen adeptum esse putent... Ac facile mihi quidem persuadeo, primum a Proconfulis Romani familiâ ita vocari cepisse. Bez. Annot. in Ad. xiii. 9.

See likewise Dr. Doddridge’s Family-Expositor. Vo’. 3. p. 198. note (k), or upon Acts xiii. 9.

(b) Acts. xxi. 39. xxi. 3.

(c) Acts. xxi. 37. 38. xxi. 25. 29. xxiii. 27.

(d) See the Credibility &c. P. 1. B. 1. cb. x. §. vii.

(e) Acts. xxiii. 6. xxi. 5. Philip. iii. 5.

(f) Acts. xxiii. 16. 22.
to his uncle Paul, when a prisoner at Jerusalem. His conduct cannot be thought of without admiration and gratitude. Some other of his relations are mentioned by him in his epistle to the Romans, who also were believers in Jesus, and several of them had been so before himself. Which may be reckoned a proof of the virtue and piety of this family. Their names are Andronicus, and Junia, whom he calls his kinsmen. Some of them were regarded as women of influence. By (g) which he must mean something more, than their being his countrymen. He speaks in the like manner of Herodion, ver. 11. and also of Lucius, Jason, and Sospater, ver. 21. It may be reckoned very probable, that (a) he was educated in Greek literature in his early life at Tarsus. It is certain, that (b) he was for a while under the instructions of Gamaliel, at Jerusalem, a celebrated Jewish Rabbi, and that (f) he made great proficiency in the study of the law, and the traditions, much esteemed by that people. He seems to have been (k) a person of great natural abilities, of a quick apprehension, strong passions, and firm resolution, and thereby qualified for signal service, as a teacher of such principles, as he should embrace, whatever they were. He appears likewise to have been always unblamable in his life, and strictly faithful to the dictates of his conscience, according to the knowledge, which he had. Of this all must be persuaded, who observe (l) his appeals to the Jews, upon this head, when they were greatly offended with him: and from (m) the undissimulated satisfaction, which he expresseth upon a serious recollection of his former and later conduct. For some while, after the first appearance of Christianity in the world, he was a bitter enemy, and furious opposer of all who made profession of it. Nevertheless he persisted not long in that course: but was in a very extraordinary manner converted to that faith himself: and ever after he was a steady friend, and zealous advocate for

(g) Cognatos suis, id est ejusdem secum generis vocat, ut multi exponunt, quia Judæi erant, quemadmodum supra ix. 3. de Judæis in universum dixit, qui sunt cognati mei secundum carmen: et sic eum Joqui, ut Judæorum qui Romæ erant gratiam fibi conciliet. Verum quia multi Romæ erant Judæi Christiani, et proinde hac generali ratione Paulo cognati: idcirco putant alii, cognatos hic dici magis proprie, ut qui fuerint Paulo contribuere, id est. de tribu Benjamin: aut forte etiam propriore fanguis vinculo conjuncti. Epl. in Rom. xvi. 7.

(a) This may be argued from the place of his nativity, Tarsus, which was celebrated for polite literature, and from St. Paul's quotations of several Greek Poets. Acts xviii. 28. 1 Cor. xv. 33. Tit. i. 12. Dr. Bently begins his third sermon at Boyle's Lecture, which is the second upon Acts xvii. 27. 28. in this manner: "I have said enough in my last, to shew the fitness and pertinence of the Apostle's discourse ... and that he did not talk at random, but was thoroughly acquainted with the several humours and opinions of his auditors. And, as Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, so it is manifest from this chapter alone, if nothing else had been now extant, that St. Paul was a great master in all the learning of the Greeks.

(b) Acts xxii. 3.

(c) Acts xxii. 3. xxvi. 5. Gal. i. 14.

(k) ... secta Pharisiæm, excellenti magnoque ingenio præditum, literarum Judæarum inprimis peritum, nec Graecarum expertem. J. L. Mosheim. de R. Christian. ante Constantin. Sec. i. n. xv. p. 80.

(l) Acts xxiii. 1. xxvii. 4. 5

(m) Philip. iii. 6. 1. Tim. i. 13. 2. Tim. i. 3.
for it, and very successful in defending, and propagating it, diligently improving the gifts and qualifications, extraordinarily vouchsafed him for that purpose. These things are recorded in those writings, which are in the highest esteem, and reckoned sacred among Christians, and indeed are well known to all the world.

II. I am desirous to do my best to settle the time of St. Paul's conversion. If we can do that with some good degree of probability, we shall attain to a near knowledge of the time of St. Stephen's martyrdom: concerning both which events there have been very different opinions in former and later ages. Valesius, in his Annotations upon Eusebe's Ecclesiastical History, mentions divers opinions of ancient writers (n) about the time of St. Stephen's death. As the passage may be acceptable to some, I have placed it below.

Among moderns, Cave thought, that (o) Stephen was stoned, and Paul converted in the very year of our Lord's ascension, the year 33. or the beginning of the year following. Pearson supposeth, that (p) Stephen was stoned in 34. and Paul converted in 35. near the end of the year. Having been three years in Arabia, and at Damascus, he came to Jerusalem, near the end of 38. in which year, or the beginning of the following, he went to Tarfus: where, and in Syria, he was four years, that is, 39. 40. 41. 42. Which appears to me a long space of time. In 43. he came to Antioch. And having spent a year there, he came to Jerusalem, in 44. So Pearson.

Frederic Spanheim, who also has bestowed great pains in examining this point, placeth (q) the conversion of Paul in the year 40. the last of Caius Caligula; and was inclined to defer it to the first of Claudius, the year 41. Him (r) Witius follows. And J. A. Fabricius (s) declares his assent to the same opinion.

The Time of his Conversion.

(o) . . . ad fidem Christi conversus, discipulus fit et Apollos A. C. 33. eexeunte, vel saltem ineunte proximo. Hist. Lit. T. i. in S. Paulo.

(r) De Vita Pauli. Sec. ii. n. 22. ap. Miletum. Leyd. p. 34.

Lenfant and Beaufobre, in their general preface to St. Paul's Epistles, place his conversion in the year 36. and his first coming to Jerusalem after it, in 39. Which opinion I believe to be nearer the truth, than any of the foregoing.

There is an event mentioned in the Acts, about which we may receive light from external history. I mean the rest of the churches throughout all Judea, and Galilee, and Samaria. Acts ix. 31.

In the former Part of this work (t) it was shewn to be very probable, that this rest of the churches of Christ was owing to the flate of things in Judea, when Petronius, President of Syria, published the orders, which he had received from Caius, to erect his statue in the temple of Jerusalem, in the year of Christ 39. or 40. Which account was afterwards followed by Dr. Benson in his (u) Historie of the first planting the Christian Religion. Dr. Doddridge (x) likewise declared his approbation of it.

When I formerly argued, that this rest of the churches was occasioned by the above mentioned order of the Emperor Caius; I did not know, that any one had assigned that, as the occasion of it. But since, I have perceived, that (y) S. Bashnage had thought of it, and spoke to it very well. I was lead to my observations by reading Philo, and Josephus: from whom I formed the argument, and overlooked the just mentioned ecclesiastical historian.

I suppos'd, that (z) Petronius published his order in the year 39. or 40. Bashnage (a) and Tillemont (b) say, in the year 40. By whom I am not unwilling to be determined.

It is allowed, that Petronius was sent Governor into Syria by Caius in the third year of his reign, A.D. 39. And it is suppos'd by some, that (c) Petronius came into the province about autumn in the year 39. And Josephus says, "that (d) Caius, greatly incensed against the Jews "... for

(t) See Credio, P. i. B. i. ch. 2. §. xii. especially near the end of that section.
(u) See of that work B. i. ch. 9. sec. iii. at the end.
(y) Mira hæc, et præter omnium expectationem exorta rerum vicissitudo fuit. Cui non minimum contulit infelix Judæorum statum, quibus a Caligula vexatis, timentibusque templi violationem Petronii mandatum, Christi dicipulorum perfecutione vacare non licuit. Cum enim constituendæ ecclesiæarum paci sepemero Dei fapientia occationibus utatur atque humanis auxiliis; probabilis utique affecture conjectura, eo sopitum fuiffe Judæorum furorem, quæ propriis profili miferiis ab inferendæ Ecclesiæ calamitate prohibebantur... Nec inopinææ tranquillitatis aptior ualla ratio reddi potest. Ann. 40. num. xvi.
(z) See the place referred to at note (t)
(a) Ubi juxta. num. v.
(b) Ruaie des Juifs. art. xviii. xix. His. des Emp. Tom. i.
(d) Ταλης δὲ ἐν δευτέρῃ φιλοσοφίᾳ, εἰς τόσον δὲ ὡς ἤδη τῶν σαρκῶν οὐκ ἑλπίζεται μᾶλλον, περιτοιχιζόμενος ἐκ νομίσματι καὶ στρατηγῶν... κιλίους χωρίς σολλα, εἰς κάλλας ἱεράς καὶ τῷ μνημείῳ τῶν ἀνθρώπων, ἀνθρώπων ἡμῶν ἤκομαν ἐν τῷ παραγωγοῦ τοῦ τόπου τῷ ναῷ τῷ χρόνῳ τού τοῦ τοῦ Χριστοῦ. Antig. l. 18. cap. ix. us. 2. al. cap. xii.
"for not paying him the same respect that others did, sent Petronius " Governor into Syria, commanding him to set up his statue in the " temple: and if the Jews opposed it, to march into the country with " a numerous army, and effect it by force."

Whenever Petronius published that order, whether in the year 39. or 40. I think, it was the occasion of the tranquillity of the churches of Christ, spoken of by St. Luke. And I persuade myself, that most peo- ple will readily be of the same opinion.

We will now take a paragraph or two in the Acts, ch. ix. 26. . . .

31. And when Saul was come to Jerusalem, he assayed to join himself to the disciples. . . . And he was with them, coming in, and going out, at Jerusalem. And he spake boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus, and disputed against the Grecians. But they went about to slay him. Which when the brethren knew, they brought him down to Cesarea, and sent him forth to Tarsus. Then had the churches rest throughout all Judea, and Galilee, and Samaria, and were edified.

This rest, we may suppose, was not compleat, or made extensive and universal, till the year 40. perhaps, not till near the middle of it. But when did Paul come to Jerusalem? Before this rest? or, not till after it was commenced? Bajusage (e) thinks, that Paul came to Jerusalem in the year 40. Let us however make a few remarks.

The peace, of which we are speaking, seems not to have commenced, nor the perfection to have ceased, when Paul arrived at Jerusalem from Damascus. For when he spake boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus, and disputed with the Grecians, they went about to slay him: as we have seen in the paragraph, just transcribed. And the brethren found it needful to conduct him with care to Cesarea, and send him thence to Tarsus. Moreover, Peter was at Jerusalem, when Paul arrived there, and he abode with him fifteen days. Gal. i. 18. But when the peace of the churches was established, Peter left Jerusalem, and visited the saints in the several parts of Judea: as we learn from the historie, immediately following. Acts ix. 31. . . . 43. Once more, it appears from the above cited paragraph, and the course of St. Luke's narration, that this rest of the churches in Judea did not begin, untill after Paul had been sent thence. And if it had commenced sooner, in all probability, he would have been induced to stay longer there among the Jews, for whose conversion he was ardently concerned. St. Luke's words are, as above: Which when the brethren knew, they brought him down to Cesarea, and sent him forth to Tarsus. Then had the churches rest throughout all Judea, and Ga- linee, and Samaria, and were edified.

I apprehend it to be probable, then, that Paul came to Jerusalem, at this season, near the end of the year 39. or in the beginning of the year 40. We now proceed.

St. Paul says Gal. i. 15. . . . 18. that when it pleased God by his grace to reveal his Son in him, . . . he went into Arabia, and returned again unto Damascus. Then after three years I went up to Jerusalem, to see Peter. For the time of Paul's conversion therefore, we must look back three years. And if those three years are to be understood compleat, and he came to Jerusalem in the year 40, he was converted not long after the beginning

(e) Ann. 40. num. xv.
beginning of the year 37, where it is placed by (f) Basilage. If he came to Jerusalem before the end of the year 39, he might be converted near the end of the year 36.

Let me add. Paul says: after (g) three years I went up to Jerusalem. Which may be well understood to mean somewhat more than three years. And then, though Paul should be supposed, not to have returned to Jerusalem, till the beginning of the year 40, he may have been converted before the end of the year 36.

Shall we now look somewhat farther back, and inquire, how long this may be after the death of Stephen? Lewis Capell (b) and Fr. Spanheim (i) supposed, that two years passed between the death of Stephen and Paul’s conversion. And for certain there was some good space of time between Stephen’s martyrdom, and Paul’s journey to Damascus. This appears from St. Luke’s historie, who says Acts vii. 58. And they cast Stephen out of the city, and stoned him. And the witnesses laid down their clothes at a young man’s feet, whose name was Saul... It follows in ch. viii. 1... 4. And Saul was consenting unto his death. At that time there was a great persecution against the church, which was at Jerusalem. And they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the Apostles... As for Saul, he made havoc of the church, entering into every house, and haling men and women, committed them to prison. After which at ver. 5... 40. is an account of the preaching of those who were scattered abroad, particularly, of Philip’s going to the city Samaria, and preaching there with great success, and of the Apostles, who were at Jerusalem, hearing of this, and sending to Samaria Peter and John: and then, how Philip taught and baptized the Chamberlain of Candace, Queen of Ethiopia. After which Philip preached in all the cities from Azotus, till he came to Cæarea by the sea side. Still Saul was a persecutor. For it follows ch. ix. 1. 2. And Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the High-Priest. And desired of him letters to Damascus, to the synagogues: that if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them bound to Jerusalem. To all which might be added, that Paul’s ill treatment of the disciples at Jerusalem was well known at Damascus, before he arrived there, as appears from Acts ix. 13.

Nevertheles I do not think, that there is sufficient reason to protract this space so long as two years; but would hope, it might be reduced within the compass of a year, and perhaps to little more than half a year. So thought Basilage. Who (k) therefore placeth the martyrdom of Stephen and the baptism of Paul in one and the same year.

I am the more inclined to think, that Paul’s course of opposition against

(f) Ann. 37. n. 48.

(g) μία ἡ τελεία.

(b) Porro interim... Saulus, qui Stephani morti conterferat, cum per biennium Ecclesiam Dei Jerofolymis valtaeet... Lud. Capp. Hist. Apost. p. 7.

(i) Ex dictis conflare arbitramur... tursum anni minimum unius decursum, si non verius biennii (quale et Lud. Cappellus post Danæum nostrum, aliquo tempore statuit:) a cæde hujus ad Sauli professionem Damascnam supponendum esse. Spanb. Diff. de convert. Paulin. Epoch. n. xx.

(k) A. D. 37. num. 48.
against the believers did not exceed the space of a year, at the utmost: because it seems to have been confined to the city of Jerusalem, untill he undertook to go to Damascus, and did not reach into the cities of Judea and Samaria. This will lead us to place the martyrdom of Stephen in the year 36, and not far from the beginning of it, or else near the end of the year 35.

Indeed that is a very likely season, and much confirmed by the state of things in Judea about this time, as distinctly represented by us long ago in the first Part of this work, when we treated of affairs and persons, occasionally mentioned in the books of the New Testament. It was then shewn, that (l) Pontius Pilate was removed from his government in Judea, before the Passover of the year 36, probably, five or six months before that Passover, in September or October, A. D. 35, about a year and half before the death of Tiberius. It was also shewn, that (m) after the removal of Pilate, no Governour, or Procurator, with the right of the sword, or the power of life and death, was sent into Judea, neither in the remaining part of the reign of Tiberius, nor in the reign of Caius. Which (n) afforded the Jews an opportunity to be licentious, and to do many things, which otherwise they could not have done, and to be extremely troublesome to the disciples of Jesus.

Thus then Paul was converted in 37. or possibily, before the end of the year 36. And Stephen was stoned in the beginning of the same year, or, at the soonest, near the end of the year 35.

III. Having distinctly considered these things, and produced such probable evidence, as offers, I beg leave, to mention several observations.

1. The persecution, which began at the death of Stephen, continued four years.

The disciples of Jesus, as appears from the first chapters of the book of the Acts, were much harassed by the Jewish Council from the beginning. But now, after Stephen was stoned, a more open and violent persecution came on, which \( \dagger \) lasted a good while. I am not able to assign a more likely time for the commencement of it, than the beginning of the year 36, or the later part of the year 35, about which time Pilate was removed, after his government had been for some good while very feeble among the Jews. The same persecution reached into the year of our Lord 40. the fourth and last year of the reign of Caius: when Petronius published the orders, which he had received, to set up the Emperor's statue in the temple at Jerusalem. Which threw the Jewish People,

(l) See Part i. B. 2. c. 3. §. iii. p. 848. the third edition.
(m) See P. i. B. i. ch. 2. §. xii. p. 177... 185. the third edition.
(n) See there p. 199. the third edition.

\( \dagger \) Here I trancribe a passage from Lightfoot's Commentarie upon the Acts ch. ix. 27. of his Works vol. i. p. 815. "And thus, says he, that persecution, that began about Stephen, had lasted till this very same time of Paul's coming to Jerusalem, for, so it is apparent, both by the fear and suppliciousness of the disciples at Jerusalem, as also by the clauature of the text ver 31. Then had the churches rest. The length of this persecution, by the computation of the times, as they have been cast up before, seemeth to have been about three years and a half."
People, throughout all that country, into a general consternation, and fully employed them about their own affairs.

It seems to me therefore, from this calculation, that the persecution lasted, at least, four years. To which might be added, that it must have begun about a year before Paul's conversion, after which he was three years in Arabia. And when he returned to Jerusalem, the persecution was not at an end. Nor did the peace of the churches come on, till after he had been sent away from Judea to Tarsus.

2. Notwithstanding the violence, and the length of this persecution, the Church of Christ was not diminished, but increased, during that period.

This may be argued from the description of the peace, which succeeded it. Acts ix. 31, 32. Then had the churches rest, throughout all Judea, and Galilee, and Samaria, and were edified... And it came to pass, as Peter passed through all quarters, he came to the saints, which dwelt at Lydda. Now therefore there were churches in Judea, and Galilee, and Samaria. And I make no question, but most, or all of them, were planted during those troublesome times. For before that period we read not of any churches out of Jerusalem. And St. Paul, speaking of some things, after his conversion, and his return to Jerusalem, says Gal. i. 22. he was unknown by face to the churches of Judea, which were in Christ.

This increase of converts in those countries might be owing to several things: the patience and fortitude of the disciples: their discretion in avoiding needless offenses, and in declining dangers: their zeal and intrepidity in asserting the resurrection of Jesus, and other articles of the doctrine of the gospel: the miraculous powers, with which they were endowed, and their exerting them on all fit occasions.

It might be also, in part, owing to the circumstances of things. For a while, as it seems, this persecution was confined to Jerusalem, and did not extend to other parts of Judea. So says St. Luke Acts viii. 1. At that time there was a great persecution against the church, which was at Jerusalem: Paul's injuries were confined there, till he went to Damascus. He speaks not of any thing done by him against the disciples of Jesus any where else. Acts xxvi. 10. 11. Which thing I also did in Jerusalem... and being exceedingly mad against them, I persecuted them even unto strange cities. Whereupon as I went to Damascus.

The persecution became more extensive afterwards. As may be gathered from those words of St. Luke, just cited: Then had the churches rest throughout all Judea, and Galilee, and Samaria. Wherein it is implied, that the believers in those countries had been disturbed: though, perhaps, the persecution was not there so violent, as in Jerusalem, and near it.

But so long as Paul continued in his course of opposition, the persecution either was confined to Jerusalem, or was not very violent in many other parts, if in any. This may be evidently concluded from Acts viii. 1. And they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea, and Samaria, except the Apostles. Many of the disciples therefore, who left Jerusalem, found shelter in Judea, and Samaria. This was soon after the death of Stephen, and before Paul went to Damascus.
Yea it is added ver. 4. 5. Therefore they that were scattered abroad, went every where, preaching the word. Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them. And what follows to ver. 40, clearly shewing the truth of what we are now arguing.

Moreover, it should be remembered, that the Jewish Council had not the power of life and death. The death of Stephen therefore was irregular and tumultuous. That no others suffered in a like manner during this period, I would not say: considering the great conciseness of St. Luke’s historie, and what St. Paul says Acts xxvi. 10. And when they were put to death, I gave my voice against them. But if any, beside Stephen, were put to death, I apprehend, not many, and those of lower rank only, none of a station in the Church, equal to that of Stephen. The Roman Officers in Judea did not join in any part of this persecution. They had no orders so to do. And if the Jewish Council had assumed authority to put men to death, it would have been complained of, and they would soon have been checked.

If the Jewish Council had had the power of life and death for these four years, it would indeed have gone very hard with the Christian interest, throughout the whole countrey of Judea: the number of believers would have been much lessened: nor could any new converts have been made. Such a persecution the Church was not able to endure in its very infancy.

In like manner, a four years persecution by Herod Agrippa would have extirpated it. All the believers in general must have perished, throughout the whole extent of his dominions, without safety to any, but those who escaped into other countreys. When therefore that proud and bigoted Prince, (whom we allow to have had supreme power throughout all the land of Israel,) began to persecute the Church, and had slain James, and imprisoned Peter; Providence interposed, and miraculously delivered Peter out of prison. And that Prince not observing the hand of God therein, nor being intimidated thereby: as appears from his ordering the innocent guards to be immediately executed: and growing still more and more proud and arrogant, he fell under the hand of God himself. Of whose death, soon after, St. Luke has left an affecting historie, ch. xii. 19... 23. confirmed also by (o) Josephus.

3. The first notice, which we have of Paul, is in the account of Stephen’s martyrdom. And it seems likely, that he had not long before made his appearance in the world.

And, if we consider Paul’s situation and circumstances, we shall discern the proper vindication of his moral character. It may be reckoned probable, that he had not seen Jesus in the time of his abode on this earth. Possibly, he did not come to Judea from Tarus, till after the period of our Lord’s ministry. It may be likewise supposed, that he had not a personal acquaintance with any of Christ’s Apostles, nor seen any miracles done by them, before he became a perecutor. And after that, he would not admit of instruction from the followers of Jesus. However, it is not improbable, that he saw the splendour of Stephen’s countenance before the Jewish Council. Acts vi. 15. as well as was witness of the wonderful patience and meekness of his death. ch. vii.

(o) See the first Part of this work. B. i. ch. i. § vi.
55. But then, as may be well supposed, he was not only prejudiced, but enraged. See ver. 54. 57. and ch. xxvi. 11.

How long he had been in Judea, and under the tuition of Gamaliel, cannot be certainly said. But it is well known, that students, whilst under the government of tutors, are strictly guarded, and much restrained. None less acquainted with what is done in the world than they. Among the ancients, especially, students of the Law and Philotended to the prophecies concerning the Messiah, which they alleged, for shewing, that the character of Jesus was answerable to them, and that they were fulfilled in him; he might have received satisfaction, and might have been prevented from acting that part against Jesus, and his disciples, which he afterwards bewailed.

But prejudices are very strong in some. They were so in this young man. Persuaded of the divine original of the law, and of the importance of the traditions of the Elders, in which he had been lately instructed, and which he had received, and held, as a most valuable branch of science, he had a sovereign contempt for this new sect, and was of opinion, that nothing could be said by them, which deserved consideration.

Such were his prejudices, that they were not to be overcome in an ordinary way. Without something more than common, to awaken his attention, he was in danger to have proceeded much farther in the wrong course, which he was in.

But though Paul was greatly prejudiced, he was not obstinate. The Lord Jesus saw this. He knew Paul to be tractable, and open to conviction. Otherwise, he would not have met him in the way to Damascus, as he did: nor would he have called to him: Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? But he well knew, that those words, together with the glorie of the appearance surrounding him, would change his heart, and melt him down to ready obedience.

Openness to conviction is a most necessary disposition in such weak, ignorant, fallible, sinful creatures, as we are. Without it there can be no alteration for the better: no change of error for truth, or vice for virtue. Of the conceited and obstinate there is no hope. But they who are attentive to reason and argument, and are willing to be determined by evidence, may do great things. Of ignorant they may become knowing. Instead of being erroneous, they may have just sentiments. And they will proceed from one measure of knowledge and virtue to another, till they attain to great perfection in both.

This was Paul's disposition. It is very manifest in him. With what enmity against the disciples of Jesus he set out for Damascus, and how soon he was changed, the historie shews. And as he journeyed, he came near to Damascus. And suddenly there shined round about a light from heaven. And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him: Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? Acts ix. 3...6. Whereupon he trembles, and acquiesces. All his rage is subdued, and he becomes a disciple of Jesus.

Upon occasion of an abuse, which he received from the High-Priest, before whom he stood, he expressed himself with rather too much warmth and resentment. But having been admonished of it by those who stood by, he answers with great mildness: I wist not, I did not consider, brethren, that it was the High-Priest. For it is written: Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people. Acts xxiii. 1...5.

He was once offended with John Mark, because he declined a service, which he thought reasonable to be performed. Acts xiii. 13. xv. 38. But he was afterwards reconciled to him, and desired his company:
St. Paul.

Ch. XI.

nie: persuaded, that he would be profitable to him for the ministry. 2. Tim. iv. ii.

So much did this temper prevail in him, and so reasonable and beneficent did it appear to him, that he thought, no men could be definite of it, and that all men must be willing to hearken, and to yield to evidence. This we perceive from what he says, Acts xxii. 17... 21. When I was come again to Jerusalem, I was in a trance, and saw him saying unto me: Make haste, and get thee quickly out of Jerusalem. For they will not receive thy testimony concerning me. And I said: Lord, they know, that I imprisoned, and beat in every synagogue them that believed on thee. ... And be said unto me: Depart. For I will send thee far hence unto the Gentils. He imagined, that an account of his conversion, who once was so opposite, and the reasons of it, if fairly laid before them, might persuade them. But Jesus, who knew the hearts of all men, saw, that the people of Judea were so hardened, that nothing would work upon them. Instead therefore of labouring unprofitably among them, the Lord renewed his orders to Paul, without delay, to proceed in the work of preaching to Gentils, as he had already begun to do.

4. It was very gracious in the Lord Jesus, to call to Paul at the time he did, and not to suffer him to continue any longer in his career of rash, and inconsiderate, and injurious zeal, without control. As yet he was tender, and tractable. Afterwards he might have been hardened: or, upon conviction, he might have sunk into despair.

5. We have reason to think, that there was an over-ruling providence in disposing the person and concerns of Paul about this time, as well as in the other parts of his life.

He reflects with gratitude, that God had separated him from his mother's womb, and called him by his grace. Gal. i. 15. There was great wisdom, as well as goodness, in the season of his call, as just shewn.

It was likewise a very happy and favorable circumstance, that he did not return into Judea, precipitately after his conversion: forasmuch as the violent persecution, which began about the time of Stephen's death, had continued at least three years after Paul left Judea to go to Damascus.

It was also well for him, that he was out of Judea, during the three or four years reign of Herod Agrippa, when he was King of all Israel. It was, indeed, owing to a violent onset of the Grecians, as they are called, that the disciples were induced to convey him to Cesarea, and send him forth to Tarsus. Acts ix. 29. 30. But it was over-ruled for his good. By this means he was out of Judea, during the reign of that proud and cruel Prince: which appears to have been a troublesome time to the followers of Jesus in that country, till near the end it broke out into the greatest violence. As we learn from the historic in the twelfth chapter of the Acts.

IV. What was Paul's age at the time of his conversion, is not certain. Wisius supposeth, that (q) he was born near the end of Herod's reign, about the same time with our Saviour. It is observable, that in the epistle to to Philemon ver. 9. writ about the year of the vulgar æra 62. he calls himself Paul the aged. Which, I think, must lead us to suppose, that he was then sixty years of age, or not much less.

(q) At in neutram valitationem incidit pueritia Pauli, quem natum esse oportet.

In the account of the martyrdom of Stephen he is called a young man. Acts vii. 58. But it is well known, that among the ancients the word youth is used with latitude. Some things said of him about that time may induce us to think him arrived to years of maturity, or discretion. For he seems to have been one of the principal agents in the perfecution of the believers after the death of Stephen; and to have been entrusted by the Jewish rulers in carrying it on. As he says to King Agrippa. Acts xxvi. 10. Which thing I also did in Jerusalem. And many of the saints did I put up in prison, having received authority from the Chief Priests. And it is well known, being (r) again and again related, that he had a commission from the High-Priest, when he went to Damascus. And it is also mentioned afterwards in the farther account of himself to Agrippa. ver. 12. Whereupon, as I went to Damascus with authority and commission from the Chief Priests. . . And there were several others with him at the same time, who may be supposed to have been officers under him. All which shews the regard, that was paid to him.

Mr. Bishop (s) thinks, that before his conversion Paul had been ordained Elder, or Rabbi, or Doctor. And he supposeth, that this may enable us to account for Paul's being never excommunicated by the Jews. " It may seem strange to some, says he, that St. Paul was not " excommunicated by the Jews, after he turned Christian. For St. " John tells us ch. ix. 22. the Jews had agreed, that if any man did con- " fess, that Jesus was the Christ, he should be put out of the synagogue. - St. " Paul, notwithstanding, entred boldly into their synagogues, where- " ever he came, and preached, that Jesus was the Christ. He was of- " ten scourged by them. 2 Cor. xi. 24. But we no where read of his " being excommunicated. The Talmud explains this to us: foral- " much as thence it is abundantly evident, that they were very back- " ward to excommunicate the disciples of the Wife, the Doctors and " Teachers of the law."

Whether that be certain, or not, I think it may be inferred from what was before said, that at the time of his conversion Paul was of an age, when men are able to judge of the evidence of things, and to form a reasonable determination concerning their future conduct.

V. It may be now fit for us, before we proceed any farther, to consider, when Paul became an Apostle.

It has generally been the opinion of learned men, that Paul was called to the apostleship, at the time that he was converted, or very soon after:

(s) The History of the Acts confirmed. p. 269. 270.

Vol. II.
after. So says (t) Spanheim, and (u) Whitfus, who follows him. So-like-wise say divers others, who also have carefully considered this point, particularly (x) Cave, (y) Pearfon, (z) Bafnage. To whom I must add my late much valued friend (a) Mr. Hallett. Who in his Discours on Ordination had occasion to confider Acts xiii. 2. 3. as well as some other texts.

That Paul was now made an Apostle, and fully inftucted for preaching the gospel, is evident from the account of his conversion given by the Evangelift (b) Luke, and from all the accounts, which he gives of himself in his difcourses in Judea, to (c) the Jewifh People, and (d) to Fejus, and Agrippa and from his epiftle to the Galatians, and from the manner of his speaking of himself at the beginning of divers of his epiftles.

What he says of himself to the Galatians, in particular, implies his having had a full knowledge of the gospel revelation, and his being invested in the apoftolical character, before the time of his firft coming to Jerusalem, after his conversion. Gal. i. 11. 12. But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel, which was preached of me, is not after men. For I neither received it of men, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus

(t) Id vero ante omnia in disquisitionis hujus limine supponimus: idem omnino effe tempus vocationis Paulinae ad apostolatum, quod fuit ad Chrif- tum, annum adeo eundem utriusque ac menem. Spanb. ubi. fupra. §. iv. p. 314.

(x) See before note (o) p. 183.

(y) Tiberii 22. A. D. 36. Saulus in Arabia moratur, ubi per Revelationem accepti plenam a Deo notitiam evangelii, ad quod praecipendum immediate vocatus est.

(z) His peraefis, Paulus reliçta Damasco, in vicina loca aliquantipfer fcelefi, ut ab ipfo Chrifto apsiowes inftituereut, quod et ipse tradit. Gal. i. 15. 17. In eoigitur recefiu non ab hominibus edoctus est, sed ab ipfo Chrifto per revelationem didicit evangelium, et creatas eft Apostolus. &c. Bafngag. Ann. 37. num. lxii.

(a) From this view of the history of St. Paul's life after his conversion "to Christianity, it is plain, that many years (thought to have been ten,) "had paffed, during which he had been a preacher, and an Apostle, before "the time mentioned Acts xiii. At the beginning of those ten years, just af- Ter his conversion, Chrifl made him a Miniftcr and an Apostle, and parti- cularly gave him a commission to preach to the Gentils, when he appeared "to him from heaven, and faid, as in Acts xxvi. 16. 17. 18... When there- "fore, ten years after this, the Prophets at Antioch separated Paul for the "work to which he was called, by prayer, and faying, and imposition of "hands, it is evident, they did not give him any authority. He had received "the full apoftolical authority, and that, as the Apostle of the Gentils too, "long before this, immediately from Chrift himfelf." Hallett's Notes and Discurfe. Vol. 2. p. 321. 322.

(b) Acts ix. 15. 22.

(c) Ch. xxii. 6. 16.
St. Paul.

Jesus Christ... ver. 15... 18. But when it pleased God, (who separated me from my mother's womb, and called me by his grace,) to reveal his Son in me, that I might preach him among the Heathen, immediately I conferred not with flesh and blood: neither went I up to Jerusalem, to them which were Apostles before me. But I went into Arabia, and returned again unto Damascus. Then after three years I went up to Jerusalem, to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days.

Paul must have been an Apostle, and qualified to preach the gospel, before he came to Jerusalem, and saw Peter: or what he says here cannot be reckoned material, and to the purpose, about which he is speaking.

Undoubtedly, for some good while Paul preached to Jews only. And when he began to preach to Gentils also, he may have had some farther revelations from Christ. But it does not follow, that he was not an Apostle before that. Peter, and the rest, had been Apostles several years, before they were required, or qualified to preach to Gentils.

Paul seldom speaks of his being an Apostle, or called to be an Apostle, as he often does at the beginning of his epistles, but he seems to refer to, and intend his early call, when he was converted, and put into the ministr. Rom. i. 1. Paul, a servant of Jesus Christ, separated unto the gospel of God. 1 Cor. i. 1. Paul, called to be an Apostle of Jesus Christ, through the will of God. See also 2 Cor. i. 1. but especially Gal. i. 1. Paul, an Apostle, not of men, neither by men, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father, who raised him from the dead. See likewise 1 Tim. i. 12. ii. 7. 2 Tim. i. 11.

One requisite qualification of an Apostle appears to have been, that he should see Christ in person, and that after his resurrection. This was manifestly one privilege of the first twelve Apostles, and of Matthias, chosen in the room of Judas. Acts i. 21. 22. Accordingly, we find, that Paul also, claiming the character of an Apostle, speaks of his having seen Christ, and as of a well known, and uncontested thing. 1 Cor. ix. 1. Have I not seen Jesus Christ, our Lord? And largely in the xv. chapter of the same epistle, rehearsing divers appearances of our Lord, after his resurrection, to the Apostles, and others, he says ver. 8. 9. And last of all he was seen of me also, as of one born out of due time. For I am the least of the Apostles, who am not worthy to be called an Apostle, because I persecuted the church of God.

It is plain, then, that Paul had seen Christ, and after he was risen from the dead, as the other Apostles had done. But where did he see him? It is generally (e) said, and, I think, rightly, in the way to Damascus.

Jam quod ad hanc apparitionem Dominicam Paulo factam attinet, quæ fine dubio post ascensionem Domini contigit, illud etiam indubitatum tenendum
mofius. Then, as seems to me, Christ personally appeared to him. It is evident from St. Luke’s account of Paul’s conversion. &c. ix. 3... 6. And as he journeyed, he came near to Damascus. And suddenly there joined round about him a light from heaven. And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice, saying unto him: Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? And he said: Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said: I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest. ... And be trembling, and astonisbed, said: Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? And the Lord said unto him: Arise, and go into the city. And it shall be told thee, what thou must do. When Ananias, by special order, entered into the house, where Paul was, and put his hands upon him, he said: ver. 17. Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, who appeared to thee in the way, as thou camest, &c. cap. xi. 27, hath sent me. Compare ch. xxii. And ch. ix. 27. Barnabas brought him to the Apostles, and declared unto them, how he had seen the Lord in the way, and that he had spoken unto him. Paul likewise in his own accounts of his conversion ues words expressive of a personal appearance to him. So Acts xxii. 6... 8. in his speech to the people of Jerusalem, where truth and exactness were very requisite. And it came to pass, that when I was come near to Jerusalem, about noon, suddenly, there shone from heaven a light round about me. And I fell to the ground, and heard a voice saying unto me: Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? And I answered, Who art thou, Lord? And he said unto me: I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest. So likewise Acts xxvi. 12... 19. very strong and expressive, indeed. To which the reader is referred. If Paul did not see Jesus in person at the time of his conversion, when did he so see him? Some may say, at the time mentioned Acts xxii. 17... 21. ... And it came to pass, that when I was come again to Jerusalem, even when I prayed in the temple, I was in a trance, and saw him saying unto me: Make haste, and get thee quickly out of Jerusalem. For they will not receive thy testimony concerning me.

Some think, that (f) Paul had this trance when he first came to Jerusalem, at the end of three years after his conversion. Others rather think, think, that (g) it happened, when he and Barnabas came to Jerusalem from Antioch, with the contributions of the Chriftians there for the support of the believers in Judea, in the time of the dearth in the reign of Claudius, and in the year of Christ 44. Of which an account is given Acts xi. 27... 30. xii. 25. Others (b) hesitate.

See likewise Dr. Doddridge upon the same place, in his Family-Expositor. Vol. 3. p. 355. Sed. L.

But I cannot persuade myself, that this is what Paul intended, when he said to the Corinthians: Am I not an Apostle? ... Have I not seen Jesus Christ, our Lord? nor when he says afterwards in the same epistle: And last of all he was seen of me also, as of one born out of due time. For (i) there, as I apprehend, he must mean seeing Jesus Christ in person, walking, and with eyes open. Which is quite different from what happens in a dream, vision, trance, or extase.

The (k) same answer will suffice for the season of his being taken up into paradise, and into the third heaven. For such things are visionarie. Nor did Paul himself certainly know, whether it was in the body, or out of the body. 2 Cor. xii. 1... 3. that is, whether he was then personally transported into paradise, or whether the representation was made in his mind, without any local removal. And the things, which he then saw and heard, were not to be revealed. He seldom speaks of such matters. When he does, it is not without an apologie. For, as it seems, they were, chiefly, for his own encouragement under the many many and great difficulties, which he met with. This rapture into the third heaven and paradise had been concealed by him above fourteen years, and not mentioned at all, till now in this his second epistle to the Corinthians: as has been observed both by (l) ancients, and (m) moderns. But the seeing Christ, for qualifying him to be an Apostle, had been often, and openly mentioned by him.

(b) Wifius, De Vita Pauli. Sec. iii. num. xi. is in doubt, at which of those times Paul had this trance, or vision.

But it may be objected, that long after his conversion Paul is numbered among Prophets. Acts xiii. 1. Now there were in the church that was at Antioch certain Prophets and Teachers: as Barnabas, and Simeon that was called Niger, and Lucius of Cyrene, and Manaen... and Saul.

To which I answer. 1. If Paul should be allowed to be here ranked among Prophets, it will not follow, that he was not more than a Prophet, even an Apostle. St. Peter files himself an Elder, though, undoubtedly, he was also an Apostle. 1. Pet. v. 1. Mr. Le Clerc has a fine observation, relating to this matter in his Ecclesiastical Historie: That (n) though Paul is mentioned last, he was superior to the rest in point of gifts. But, says he, the first Christians were not solicitous about titles and pre-eminence.

2. It is not clear, that Paul is here reckoned among Prophets. He seems rather to be distinguished from them. For, very probably, it is not without some reason, that Paul is not put first, nor next to Barnabas, but last of all. The meaning appears to be this. “Now there were in the church at Antioch certain Prophets, and Teachers, as Barnabas, and Simeon, and Lucius, and Manaen, and also Saul, whose character, and station in the Church is well known from the preceding historie of him in this book.” Whereby indeed, he evidently appears to be an Apostle.

3. I add one thing more, that I may fully clear up this point. The designation, mentioned ch. xiii. ver. 2. 3. could not be to the Apostleship. For Paul was not an Apostle of men, neither by man, but by Jesus Christ, and God the Father. Gal. i. 1. Moreover, it is here expressly said, that this ordination, or appointment, at Antioch, was to a particular work, or service. As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said: Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work, whercunto I have called them. And when they had fasted, and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away. And it might be said, that (o) here is no consecration to an office, but rather a benediction for the particular work, upon which they were now sent.

As

(l) Διὰ τὸ τοῦ χριστοῦ εὐχερείς τῶν διανομισμάτων ἐτών· εἶ δὲ γὰρ αὐτοῖς αὐτῷ μετανοια, ἀλλὰ δικαιοτεροτεροτεράτους ἐποιεῖν, ἵνα καὶ ὃς ἐπιτεθείης χριστοῦ, νῦν ἄν εὐφέρεται, εἴ τι πολλάκις ἐν ἀνάγνωσι. Chrysost. in 2. Cor. hom. 26. F. x. p. 681. D.

(m) See Dr. Doddridge’s Family-Expositor, Vol. 4. p. 522.

(n) Ceterum, si ex Spiritus Sancti donis, sublimibusque revelationibus, Prophetarum, Doctrorumque, qui memorantur, ordo conceptus esset, sine dubio, primum omnium Saulum collocari opportuisset. Sed ipsis temporibus nondum de prima fede, dignitateque contentionis erat inter Christianos: et qui meritis in rem Christianam omnium erant primi, ii se, ex Domini praecepto, quasi minimos gerebant, nec ultimos appellari refugiebant. Chri. H. E. A. D. 45. num. i.

(o) Porro, vere ut dicamus, nil ordinationis est in Antiochenium Prophatarum χαρίσματα... Eam ergo Paulus Barnabasque manuum supeerunt
As Mr. Hallett says, in the place before quoted: “They (p) were not now separated for the work of the ministry, in general, but were separated from the other teachers at Antioch, to go abroad, and pro-pagate the gospel in other countries. When they went out upon this important work, nothing could be more agreeable, than for the church at Antioch, to pray God to give Barnabas, and Paul, good success. Which accordingly they did. They now recommended them to the grace, or favour of God: as St. Luke says concerning this solemn transaction. ch. xiv. 26. And after this again, when Paul was sent abroad another time, to preach the gospel, where he had preached it before, he was in the same manner recommended to the grace of God, as it is written ch. xv. 40. Paul chose Silas, and departed, being recommended by the brethren to the grace, or favour of God. Since therefore both times, when Paul went out from Antioch, to preach the gospel to the same people, the Evangelist says, in the same words, that he was recommended to the grace of God; we cannot suppose, that he was any more first made an Apostle of the Gentils, at the former, than at the later time of his being recommended.”

Upon the whole it appears to me highly probable, from all the accounts, which we have of Paul’s wonderful conversion, in Acts ix. xxii. and xxvi. that he received his apostolical commission from the mouth of Christ in person, when he called to him from heaven, and spoke to him in the way to Damascus. And especially does this appear from Acts xxvi. 15...20. where Paul expressly relates his commission, and the time of it, and declares, as seems to me, that all which had been hitherto done by him, in preaching the gospel, to the very time when he was imprisoned, had been done in virtue of that commission. And he said: I am Jesus, whom thou perseugeth. But arise, and stand upon thy feet. For I have appeared to thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister, and a witness, both of those things, which thou hast seen, and of those things, in which I will appear unto thee: delivering thee from the People, and from the Gentiles, unto whom I now send thee, to open their eyes, and to turn them from darkness to light... Whereupon, O king Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision: but shewed first unto them of Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coasts of Judea, and then to the Gentils: that they should repent, and turn to God, and do works meet for repentance.

This also exactly suits the manner, in which the other Apostles were appointed. They were Apostles from the time that Jesus Christ called them to attend upon him. See Matth. iv. 18...22. Luke vi. 13. And he often discoursed to them concerning their commission in its full extent, and the difficulties they would meet with in the discharge of it: giving them also various directions, relating to their conduct, when they should come abroad in the world. See Matth. x. throughout, and xvi. 18. 19. and many like places in the other Gospels. And before he left them, he expressly said: Go ye therefore, and teach all nations. Matt. xxviii. 19. But they did not at first understand the full extent run impostionem, quae benedictionis est, non consecrationis. S. Bofnag. Ann. 45. num. iii.

(p) Vol. 2. p. 323.
extent of their commission, nor presently execute it. At the first they preached to Jews only. And it was several years, after Christ's ascension, before they preached to Gentiles. So Paul was from the beginning called, and appointed to be an Apostle: and by degrees he was qualified for it, as his commission opened. And in time he was called out by Divine Providence to the full execution of it. But all along he was an Apostle, and acted, and taught, as such: first preaching to Jews at Damascus, and Jerusalem, and Judea, and other parts, and then to Gentiles. So he plainly says to Agrippa in the place recited just now.

VI. Having thus settled the time of Paul's conversion, and apostleship, according to the best of my ability, I now intend to give an account of his travels in the service of the gospel. This I do for the sake of shewing the date of his writings. And it would be shorter, and more agreeable, on divers accounts, to take in his epistles, as we go along. But there being debates about the time of several of them, I think it will be preferable, to write his historie, without interruption, as briefly as we can, and then observe the order of his epistles.

Paul, having been baptized by Ananias at Damascus, stayed a short time with the disciples there, and then went into Arabia: where, it is very likely, he might meet with some believers. For Arabians are expressly mentioned Acts ii. 11. among the Jews and prolelytes, who heard the Apostle Peter's first sermon at Jerusalem after the descent of the Holy Ghost. At which time many were converted to a faith in Jesus Christ. Acts ii. 41.

Whilst Paul was in Arabia, it is reasonable to think, that he was fully instructed, by special revelation, in the doctrine preached by Jesus Christ, when here on earth, and all the things said and done by him, and his sufferings, crucifixion, resurrection, and ascension, the fulfilment of the ancient prophecies in Jesus, the Christ, the son of David, and the son of Abraham, and received also the Holy Ghost, in a measure equal to that of other Apostles. Whereby he was qualified to preach the gospel, and to testify the resurrection of Jesus, and to prove him to be the Christ, without receiving either instruction, or gifts from other Apostles.

Having been some time in Arabia, he returned to Damascus. And straightway he preached in the synagogues, that Jesus is the Christ, or the Son of God. This he did with such strength and cogency of argument, as to confound the Jews, which dwelt at Damascus. They being greatly provoked, and forming a design upon his life, the disciples found means to provide for his escape. Whereupon he went to Jerusalem. Acts ix. 20. . . 25.

Some think, that Paul preached at Damascus, soon after he had been baptized by Ananias, and that he also preached in Arabia, and that (q) he had preached three years, before he came to Jerusalem, after his conversion.

†† Concerning the manner of the revelations now vouchsafed to Paul, may be seen Lightfoot, in his Comm. upon Acts ix. 1. in the first volume of his works. p. 791.

(q) Il veut montrer, qu'il avoir prêché l'évangile trois ans avant que d'avoir vu aucun Apôtre, &c. Beaus. sur Galat. i. 18.
version. Pearson () supposeth, that Paul, whilst in Arabia, received by revelation, a full knowledge of the gospel. And says, that when he returned from Arabia to Damascus, he preached there. But I do not perceive him to say, that Paul preached in Arabia, or at Damascus, presently after his conversion.

To me it seems, that Paul did not preach at Damascus, presently after he had been baptized, but first went into Arabia, and then returned to Damascus. And being now qualified by divine revelation, and by diligent reading the scriptures of the Old Testament, during his recessee in Arabia, and being fully determined, after a competent time of humiliation for past conduct, and serious meditation, in which he had well weighed the difficulties of the work he was entering upon, he began to preach Christ in the synagogues of Damascus. I am confirmed in this opinion by the interpretation of an author, whose words I place (r) below. Nor does St. Paul, that I remember, any where say, that he preached in Arabia. He makes a large, and, seemingly, very particular enumeration of places and people, to whom he had preached, in his discourse before Agrippa, without taking any notice of Arabia. Acts xxvi. 20. I shewed first unto them of Damascus, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all the coasts of Judea, and then to the Gentiles, that they should repent, and turn to God.

Jerome observing, that St. Luke had said nothing of Paul's being in Arabia, is inclined to think, that (s) he did not discharge any part of his apostolical office in that country. But then, if Paul was silent there, he thinks, it was not owing to the Apostle's backwardness to speak: But the divine wisdom appointed, that it should be so.

Theophylact observes, that (t) the design of the Jews at Damascus, to destroy

(*) Saulus in Arabiâ moratur, ubi per revelationem acceptit plenam Deo notitiam evangelii, ad quod praecidandum immediate vocatus est.

(r) "St. Paul being restored to his fight by Ananias, said not long at "Damascus, but retired forthwith into Arabia, as he himself tells us. Gal. "i. 16. 17. Whereas it is said Acts ix. 19. 20. And when he had received "meat, he was strengthened. Then was Saul certain days with the discipiles at "Damascus, and straightway he preached Christ in the synagogues. Here the word, "straightway, does not relate to Saul's first coming to Damascus, but to his re- "turn thither, after he had been in Arabia. For Acts ix. 19. 20. are to be "rendered and paraphrased thus: And when he had received meat, he was "strengthened. Prefently after which, according to Gal. i. 16. he went into "Arabia, and having been there instructed in the gospel by the revelation of "Jews Christ, according to Gal. i. 12. he returned again to Damascus.

(t) ... det ā in ijsepāri in damāsaw ēi inidēs miātā to πρεσβυτήριον ailā miātā to anēbitho aytōn aytō arābiās miātā ēi tēn. Kai ουτως γέγονεν ἡ προν τα ἱεροσόλυμα άνωθες. Theoph. in Ad., Ap. p. 94.
destroy Paul, was not formed presently after his conversion to the faith: but after his return thither from Arabia, at the end of three years, just before his going to Jerusalem.

Indeed, it is very likely, that if Paul had preached at Damascus, soon after his first arrival there, he would have met with a most violent on-set. And as nothing of that kind is particularly taken notice of, it may be concluded, that he did not then publicly preach in any synagogues. Nor was it fit, or becoming, that he should. It was highly proper, that some time should be allotted for retirement, after such a course, as he had been in, before he began to preach and teach publicly in the name of Jesus.

Though St. Luke has not mentioned the journey into Arabia, nor the time of Paul's absence from Damascus, he knew it very well, and has hinted it, saying: And after many days were fulfilled, the Jews took counsel to slay him. Acts ix. 23.

Mr. Beaufobre says, that (u) Paul's journey into Arabia should be placed between ver. 22. and 23. of the ix. chapter of the Acts. I should rather place it between ver. 19. and 20. of that chapter.

This period of three years, or three years and somewhat more, from Paul's conversion to his coming to Jerusalem, reaches, according to our computation, from near the end of the year 36. to near the end of 39. or the beginning of the year 40. or from the beginning of the year 37. to the former part of the year 40.

I cannot allow myself to speak positively, where there is not the evidence of certainty. I do not know, in what month Paul was converted, or came to Jerusalem. Of such things as these it is sufficient to say, that they happened in such a year, or thereabout.

From his coming first VII. Paul having been full three years at Damascus, and in it's neighborhood, and in Arabia, to Jerusalem after his conversion to his being brought to Antioch by Barnabas: but they were all afraid of him, and believed not, that he was a disciple. Acts ix. 26.

This may seem strange to some. But now we discern the reason of it from the account, that has been lately given of the continuance of the persecution in Judea after the death of Stephen, and also of Paul's retired way of life, for some while, in Arabia. Paul had but lately begun to preach openly in the name of Jesus, in the synagogues of Damascus. And the believers in Judea being much harassed by the persecution

(u) Comment. sur Gal. i. 17.

* Some cannot conceive, how it should be possible, that he should have been a convert three years, and yet his conversion and present abilities should be unknown to the church at Jerusalem. But these two or three considerations may help the scruple. 1. The distance between Damascus and Jerusalem. 2. The persecution, that continued still upon the church of Judea, which would keep the disciples of Damascus from going thither. And 3. The just fear, that might posses the disciples at Jerusalem, in the very time of persecution. For though it was said before, that the church of Jerusalem, and fection which they met with at home, had not received any intelligence about what had passed at Damasus, and in the way thither. Nor were the Jewish rulers forward to publish the losse of so active a servant as Paul had been.

Acts ix. 27...30. But Barnabas took him, and brought him to the Apostles, and declared unto them, how he had seen the Lord in the way, and how he had preached boldly at Damasus.

There have been different conjectures concerning the reasons, why Barnabas, in particular, brought Paul to the Apostles. Some have imagined, that he and Barnabas had studied together under Gamaliel; or at least, that they had been acquainted formerly. But I see no ground for such a supposition in the historie. If that had been the case, there would have been some intimation of it. Which there is not. I therefore rather think, that it was entirely owing to the circumstances of things. When Paul came to Jerusalem, it was a time of persecution, as before observed, and the Apostles lived privately. Paul endeavored to joyn himself to the disciples, and be acquainted with them. But they were all shy of him. And possibly they were desirous, that he should be approved by some of the Apostles, before they took notice of him. However, he met with Barnabas, and gave him an account of his conversion, and of every thing that had happened to him, since he went from Jerusalem. And Barnabas gave credit to his account. Nor is it impossible, but that some believers might come from Damascus, and confirm the truth of it. Whereupon Barnabas was willing to introduce him to the Apostles. Unquestionably, they placed full confidence in Barnabas, and he might know where they were. However it is evident, he had access to James. To him he brought Paul. And James brought him to Peter. So Paul had communion with all the Apostles. After which he was readily received by the disciples, or believers in general. And he was with them, coming in, and going out at Jerusalem. And he spake boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus, and disputed with the Greeks, or Greeks: meaning profytes to the Jewish religion, in whom we see the true spirit of the Jewish profytes about this time, as declared by our Saviour himself. Matt. xxiii. 15. But they went about to slay him. Which when the brethren knew, they brought him down to Cephera, and sent him forth to Tarsus.

By Cesarea I should be apt to understand Cephera by the sea side, mentioned before, ch. viii. 40. But some learned men, particularly, (x) Wittpus, of Judea, enjoyed a great deal of rest and tranquillity after the conversion of Paul, their great persecutor, in comparison of what they had done before, yet was not the persecution of the Church utterly extinct to the very time of Paul's coming up to Jerusalem, but continued still. And therefore it is the less wonder, if the disciples there be the more fearfull and cautious."

* On pretend, qu'il avoit étudié avec Saul fous Gamaliel. Lenfant sur Acts. ix. 27. See also Pool's English Annotations upon the place.

* Forte Barnabas Saulum ante conversionem novaret, credebantque ei ut minime mendaci. Grot. ad loc.

(x) Hierofolyum reliquit, et a fratibus Cesareae deductus est, non maritimam illam, quae est Turris Stratonis dicta, de qua supra cap. viii. 40.
Witsius, and (y) Dr. Doddridge, hereby suppose to be intended Cæsarea Philippi. If we could be assured of that interpretation, perhaps it might lead us to the meaning of that expression of Paul in his speech to Agrippa, cited not long ago: throughout all the coasts of Judea. And indeed it may be reckoned probable, that therein Paul refers to what was now done by him. For we cannot think of any more likely season for it, considering how short a stay he generally made in Judea, whenever he came thither after his conversion. It is very probable, that as he travelled with the disciples, who accompanied him, he was not silent. Though he made no long stay in any one place, he would embrace every opportunity that offered, to speak of the doctrine, which now lay with so much weight on his mind.

The brethren, as St. Luke says, brought him down to Cæsarea, and sent him forth to Tarfus. And St. Paul himself says Gal. i. 21. Afterwards I came into the regions of Syria and Cilicia. Tarfus was now the chief city of Cilicia, and Paul’s native place: where he had not been, since he first came up to Jerusalem, to study the law under Gamaliel. Possibly, Paul now found some of his relations, and likewise some others, who were disciples of Jesus before him. See Rom. xvi. 7. 11. Possibly also, while he travelled now in these countreys of Cilicia and Syria, he met with some of those dangers, and difficulties, which are entirely omitted by St. Luke, but are mentioned, or hinted by the Apostle, in his epistles, especially the eleventh chapter of the second epistle to the Corinthians.

In those countreys Paul was the remainder of the year 40. and all 41. and likewise all 42. or the greatest part of it, till about the beginning of the year 43. preaching, undoubtedly, in the name of Jesus, to native Jews, and to proselytes of the Jewish Religion.

Afterwards he went to Antioch, and began to preach to Gentils, as we shall see presently.

The churches having peace, and being no longer disturbed by a violent persecution, Peter visited the disciples in the several parts of Judea. Acts ix. 32. . . . 43. Before he returned to Jerusalem, whilst he was in the city of Joppa, where he tarried many days, he received an order from heaven to go to Cæsarea. And in ch. x. and xi. 1. . . . 18. St. Luke gives a distinct account of St. Peter’s going to the house of Cornelius at Cæsarea, and there preaching to Gentils, and of the defence, which he made of his conduct to the Apostles and brethren at Jerusalem, and their acquiescence therein, upon which I do not now enlarge.

Afterwards at ver. 19. 20. St. Luke says; Now they which were scattered abroad upon the persecution that arose about Stephen, travelled as far as Phoenice, and Cyprus, and Antioch, preaching the word to Jews only. And some fed Cæsaream Philippi, quæ sita erat circa montem Libanum, ad confluentem Jor et Dan, unde Jordannes originem ducit, quæ olim Lachis, deinde Dan appellata fuit, de qua Jud. xviii. Cujus pomæria quum Rex Agrippa pro pulsisset, mutato nomine in honorem Neronis vocavit Neroniada. Joseph. Antiq. 20. viii. Wits. de Vita Pauli Setl. 3. n. ii.

some of them were men of Cyprus and Cyrene: Who when they were come to Antioch, spake unto the Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus.

These men had preached the gospel to Jews, and the profligates to Judaism, in Phœnicia, and Cyprus, and Antioch. But some time after their arrival at Antioch, hearing of Peter’s having opened the door of the kingdom of heaven to Gentils at the house of Cornelius, they began to preach also to the Greeks at Antioch, that is, the people of the country: who, might, possibly, some few of them, be pious men, like Cornelius, who even before his conversion was a worshipper of the true God, the God of Israel: but the greatest part of them must have been Heathen idolaters, as all the people of the earth, except the Jews, generally were, till the coming of Christ, and the preaching of his gospel (z) among them.

Ver. 21. And the hand of the Lord was with them. God graciously accompanied their ministry with miraculous works, which he enabled them to perform in the name of Jesus. Whereby they who saw them were awakened and convinced. And those Evangelists likewise were greatly encouraged, being thereby fully satisfied, that what they did was approved by God himself. And a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord.

Ver. 22. . . 26. Then tidings of these things came unto the ears of the church, which was at Jerusalem. And they sent forth Barnabas, that he should go as far as Antioch. Who when he came, and had seen the grace of God, was glad, and exhorted them all, that with purpose of heart, they should cleave unto the Lord. . . Then departed Barnabas to Tarus, for to seek Saul. And when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch.

VIII. If Peter preached to Cornelius, in the year 41. and about the middle of that year, as is probable; it would be near the end of the year 42. or the beginning of the year 43. when Paul was brought by Barnabas to Antioch.

During this time of Paul’s being at Antioch, in the year of Christ 43. he might have the rapture, mentioned by him 2 Cor. xii. It seems to me

†† . . . that is, the people of the country. Acts xix. 10 . . . so that all they which dwelt in Asia, heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks, and ver. 17. And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Ephesus. It is common with all authors about that time, to call the people, who inhabited the cities of Asia and Syria, Greeks. Or, ος πρ. ἀντινος ταις εις ἀντικιας ἱδαιοις ἀπιθανοις . . . ις τοις άντικι λοις τοις ετεραις μεταξυ. Jos. de B. J. l. 7. cap. 3. n. 3. p. 1290. Hud. Iter igitur ita per Asiam feci. . . Nullo judicio, nullâ contumelia, auorititate et cohortatione perfeci, ut et Graeci, et cives Romani, qui frumentum comprehenderant, magnum numerum populis polliceruntur. Cic. ad Att. l. 5. ep. 21. et pasfim.

(z) Ut ut sit, Gentiles hic intelligi, res ipfis clamat. Atque hoc primum exemplum eft evangelii publice Gentibus prædicati. Nam alterum illo Cornelli non nisi domesticum fuit. Quum vero Dei favorem in fambo hoc opere insigniter experientur fideles illi Cypri ac Cyrenenses, multumque Graecorum numerus fide ipfis habita converteretur ad Christum, non potuit tanta rei fana Hierofolymitana ecclefiæ procres diu latere. Wis. de Vita Paul. Sect. 3. n. iii.
me to have happened soon after he came to Antioch, when he first began to preach to Gentils, who hitherto had preached to Jews only.

Ver. 46. And it came to pass, that a whole year they assembled themselves with the church, and taught much people. And the disciples were called Christians first at Antioch.

This whole year, I think, must be part of the years 43. and 44. according to the vulgar computation. It may have reached some way into the year 44. Indeed, I apprehend, the whole year, mentioned by Luke, to have expired not long before the time, that Paul and Barnabas went up to Jerusalem, with the contributions made at Antioch, for the relief of the believers in Judea, in the approaching famine. For that is what St. Luke immediately proceeds to relate in ver. 27... 30. that is, to the end of the chapter. And in this year, 44. I suppose the believers in Jesus to have obtained this denomination.

And the disciples were called Christians. Which (a) some think to have been done by a divine admonition. And they translate after this manner: And (b) the disciples were by divine appointment first named Christians at Antioch.

Witsius (c) does not discern any particular emphasis in the word, and readily admits the interpretation of Grotius, that the Greek word, according to it's usual meaning in the best Greek writers, and in the New Testament itself, signifies named, or called. And he inclines to the conjecture of Abp. Ufher, that this appellation was given to the believers by the Romans then at Antioch.

Suicer in his Thesaurus explains (d) the original word, and understands this text, exactly as Grotius did.

Dr. Heumann has (e) a Dissertation concerning the origin of the name of Christians. Wherein (f) he largely thews it to be very probable, that

(a) See Dr. Benson's History of the first planting the Christian Religion. v. i. ch. i. ed. vi. p. 241. first ed. p. 248. 2d ed.

(b) That is Dr. Doddridge's translation. Family Expositor. vol. 3. p. 178.

(c) Quod nomen Latinâ non Graecâ formât a Chrisufo defluxem, a Romanis Antiochiae degentibus impositum illis fuifse, conjectat in Annalibus fuis Ufserius. Nec defunt, quî emphahin quærant in voce χριστιανος, quà Lucas utitur. Scilicet talem volunt nominationem eo vocabulo defignari, quà publico edito, et jusfu Reipublice fit... Non invideo sacrò observationes istas docetissimis auctoris fuís: modo mihi dubitare licet, an tam solide quam subtiliores sint. Simplicior videtur annotation Grotii: χριστιανος, pro nominari, eft vox meliores Graecitatis, quam et Polybius non semel usurpat: et Paulus Rom. vii. 3. ἅπαξ διὸν ζητοτε ἀνδρῶν μοναξιας χριστιανοι. Ubi hæc jactata vocis emphahis? Wits. ubi supr. Seil. 3. num. iv.

(f) Satis nunc cognovimus, Christianorum appellationis auctores suisse non ipsos Christi cultores, sed Ethnics... Illud praeterea hinc dicimus, Latinum potius esse nomen Christianorum, quam Graecum. Ac proinde facile subseribimus fententiae Ufserii, in Annalibus suis prouinciantis: Nomen Christianorum that this name had not it's rise from the Jews. Nor did the disciples of Jesus take it to themselves. But, probably, they were first so called by Heathens, particularly the Romans: as Abp, Uther had argued, the name not having a Greek, but a Latin termination.

This will overthrow the observation of Chrysofom, formerly (g) mentioned, "That St. Paul gave us this name." And indeed Dr. Heumann shews, that both (b) St. Luke, and (i) St. Paul seem to have declined

(g) See Vol. x. p. 361.

(b) Nec vero solum non probari potest, primum usus esse Christianorum appellatione Chrifti discipulos: verum etiam gravibus id negari potest argumentis. . . Primum enim Lucam sequentibus in capitisbus hujus sui libri uti oportuisset hac appellatione, si Chriftiani Antiocheni hoc nomen ipsi fiji impofsuisse. Jam vero id ne femail quidem ab eo factum est, fed uti antea Christianae religionis professorum modo mabtrac vocavit. cap. i. 15. vi. 1. 2. 7. ix. 1. 10. 19. 25. 26. 36. modo adelfphes. ix. 30. x. 21. xi. 1. 12. femel etiam tus pisitivaiivas in. 32. ac semel thes agtis. ix. 32. sic poft mentionem de ortu nominis Christianorum eos semel appellavit thes pisifteukta. xxii. 25. ceteris in locis aut mabtrac. xi. 29. xiii. 52. xvi. 20. 28. xvii. 1. xviii. 23. 27. xxix. 1. 9. xx. 1. 7. 30. xxii. 4. 16. aut adelfphes. xi. 29. xii. 17. xv. 1. 32. 22. 23. 32. 33. 40. xvi. 2. 40. xvii. 6. 10. 14. xviii. 18. xx. 17. xviii. 14. 15. Ub. supr. num. vi. p. 137.

Nomine illo Christianorum nec Paulum usquam nec Lucam usum effe, cum supra observaverimus, nunc dicipiamus, age, cur hic Apostolus, una cum Miniftro suo fociou facri itineris id fecerit: cur item non ita multo poft in civitatem Christianam recepta fuerit ea appellatio. Abfìnuiiffe flisci cert hanc ob caufam videtur Paulus, ne Chriftus hoc pacto in ordinem redigeretur doctorum.
clined the use of it: possibly, left our Saviour should have been esteemed an ordinarie leader of a sect, like the Philosophers at that time much celebrated among the Greeks and Romans.

However, it was not long, before it obtained, and was very acceptable to the followers of Jesus. It is used by St. Peter i. iv. 16. And some (k) have thought it to be the worthie name, intended by St. James. ch. ii. 7. And it is certain, that afterwards it was much, and justly valued by those, who bore it. In the epistle of the churches of Vienne and Lyons, giving an account of their late sufferings, it is filed (l) an honourable, and glorious, and reviving appellation.

It may be hence concluded, that the believers at Antioch were now numerous. Otherwife, Heathen people had not taken so much notice of them. And indeed St. Luke had before said, that when the men of Cyprus and Cyrene were come to Antioch, and spoke to the Greeks, preaching the Lord Jesus, the band of the Lord was with them, and a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord; ver. 20. 21. and that upon the coming of Barnabas, and his preaching there, much people was added unto the Lord. ver. 24. It is reasonable to suppose, that after Paul came thither, farther additions were made, at which time they received this new name.

It follows Acts xi. 27...30. And in those days came Prophets from Jerusalem unto Antioch. And there stood up one of them, named Agabus, and signified in the Spirit, that there should be great dearth throughout all the world. [or all the land meaning Judea.] Which came to pass in the days of Claudius Caesar. Then the disciples, every man according to his ability, determined to send relief to the brethren, who dwelt in Judea. Which also they did. And sent it to the Elders by the bands of Barnabas and Saul.

Then follows in the xii. chapter an account of the persecution, and death of Herod Agrippa: in the last verse of which chapter it is said: And Barnabas and Saul returned from Jerusalem when they had fulfilled their ministration. And they took with them John, whose surname was Mark.

Of this famine we spoke (m) formerly. And as Agrippa died in 44. and Barnabas and Paul seem not to have performed this service, nor to have returned to Antioch, untill after his death; it was argued, that this commission of the church of Antioch was not finished by them till near the end of that year.

At this time of Paul's being at Jerusalem, in the year 44. I suppose, he had the transe mentioned by him in his speech to the Jewish people, Acts xxii. 17...21. For it was in that city, and in the temple, as he expressly doctorum sapientiae τῶν φιλανθρώπων, cum fit ἑαυτής ὁ τροπός. &c. ib. num. xi. p. 142.

Ad ultimum non dubitabant ipsi met Chriftiani pervulgato uti hoc nomine Cujus rei efi unum duntaxat exemplum in N. T. codice, in prioris vi delictet Petri epiftolae capite quarto, unum tamen illud exemplum eft infla fexcentorum. Ib. num. xii. p. 142. 143.

(m) See Part i. B. i. ch. xi. § ii.
expressly says: And it came to pass, that when I was come again to Jerusalem, even while I was praying in the temple: I was in a trance. . . . And he said unto me: Depart. For I will send thee far hence unto the Gentils. And we shall presently see, that soon after this, Paul and Barnabas left Antioch, and made a farther progress in preaching the gospel to Gentil people.

I suppose this period to be about two years, from the time of Paul's coming first to Antioch, and beginning to preach there to Gentils, to his return thither again, after he had been at Jerusalem upon the commission above-mentioned: that is, from near the end of the year 42, or from the beginning of the year 43, to the end of the year 44.

IX. I now intend to take in the historie of Paul and Barnabas from that time to their coming again to Jerusalem, and returning thence to Antioch.

Says St. Luke Acts xiii. 1. . . 3. Now there were in the church that is at Antioch certain Prophets, and Teachers, as Barnabas, and Simeon, and Lucius, and Manaen, and Saul. And as they ministered unto the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said: Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work, whereunto I have called them. And when they had fasted, and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away.

Pearson supposeth, that (n) at this time, which, according to his computation, was the year 44. Paul had the rapture mentioned by him 2 Cor. xii. 1. . . 4. But first, I suppose it to have been now the year 45, where also this mission is placed by (o) Bасnage. Secondly, that rapture must have happened before the year 44. The second epistle to the Corinthians was writ, according (p) to Pearson, in the year 57. St. Paul's expression, speaking of this rapture, is above fourteen years ago. Which † 4 will carry us back to the fifteenth year, consequently, to the year of Christ 43. for the soonest. At which time I suppose Paul was come to Antioch, and was beginning to preach the gospel there to Gentils, together with Barnabas. Bасnage (q) placeth this rapture in the year 41.

Acts xiii. 4. So they being sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto Seleucia, and thence failed to Cyprus.

(n) Dum ibi Prophetæ et Doctores ministrarent Domino, Saulus et Barnabas segregati ab illis sunt in opus, ad quod assumpti eos Spiritus Sanctus. Acts xiii.

† 4 "That rapture, or trance, was somewhat above fourteen years before he wrote his second epistle to Corinth. 2 Cor. xii. 2. Now in that he faith, it was σε και δω, before, or above fourteen years ago, he speaketh not of an indefinite time, . . . but that it was a little above that space, though it were somewhat exact fourteen years," &c. Lightfoot Vol. i. p. 792.

(q) Vid. Ann. 41. num. xxi. xxii.
Antioch upon the Orontes was the capital city of Syria. Seleucia was a city lying about twelve miles lower upon the same river, a port upon the mediterranean sea, a few miles above the mouth of the Orontes. There Paul and Barnabas took shipping, and failed to Cyprus, which lay westward. They went afoare at Salamis, a city at the east end of the island. Where finding Jewish synagogues, they preached the word of the Lord to them. After which they went through the island to Paphos, at the west end, where was the seat of the Proconsul. His name was Sergius Paulus. Who sent for Barnabas, and Saul, desiring to hear the word of God. He being a man well disposed, and seeing the miracle wrought by Saul upon Elymas the forcer, whom he smote with blindness for a season, believed, or embraced the doctrine of the gospel, taught by Saul and Barnabas. And hence-forward St. Luke writes the Apostle's name Paul, whom he had hitherto called Saul.

It may be thought, that the chief reason of their going now to Cyprus, was, that it was the native country of Barnabas, as we know from Acts iv. 36. But beside that, I imagine, there was another reason, and more influencing. For we perceive, that some of them who left Jerusalem upon account of the persecution, that followed the death of Stephen, were men of Cyprus, and had been there preaching to Jews only, as well as at Antioch. And it might be reckoned very proper, when the gospel was to be preached to Gentils, as well as to Jews, that these special messengers should go directly to a country, where an address had been already made to Jews: and where some of them, as may be reasonably supposed, had been converted to the faith of the gospel.

Leaving Paphos, they came back to the continent, and landed at Perga in Pamphylia. Where Mark, who hitherto had accompanied them, left them, and returned to Jerusalem.

From Perga they went to Antioch, the chief city of Pisidia, lying north of Pamphylia. St. Luke has given a large account of Paul's discourse in the Jewish synagogue there, and the success of it. Acts xiii. 14...52. From Antioch they went to Iconium, the chief city of Lycaonia. Where they also taught in the Jewish synagogue: so that a great multitude both of the Jews, and also of the Greeks believed. Many miracles likewise were wrought by their hands, during their stay in that city. xiv. 1...4. But at length a design being formed, both by Jews and Gentils, and their rulers, to stone them to death, and they receiving intelligence of it, when it was almost ripe for execution, went thence: and preached the gospel at Lystra and Derbe, cities of Lycaonia, and in the region round about: ver. 6. 7. meaning, perhaps, Irauria, sometimes reckoned a part of Lycaonia. At Lystra Paul healed a man lame from his birth. Which raised great admiration in the people. And, if not restrained, they would have offered a sacrifice to Paul and Barnabas. Nevertheless by artifices of unbelieving Jews, who came thither from Antioch, and Iconium, the minds of the people were soon changed, and they stoned Paul, and dragged him out of the city, supposing he had been dead. Howbeit, as the disciples, who had not left him,stood round about him, he rose up, and came into the city. And the next day he departed with Barnabas to Derbe. Where having preached the gospel, and taught many, they returned again to Lystra, Iconium, and Antioch, confirming the disciples there, and exhorting them.
them to continue in the faith, and letting them know, that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God. And when they had ordained them Elders in every city, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they had believed. From Antioch they went to Pamphylia. And when they had preached the word in Perga, where they had been before, but probably made no stay, they went down to Attalia, a maritime city of the same country. Thence they failed to Antioch, whence they had been recommended to the grace of God, for the work, which they had fulfilled. And when they were come, and had gathered the church together, they rehearsed all that God had done with them, and how he had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles. And there they abode long time with the disciples. ver. 8. 28.

For this journey Pearson (r) allots three years, that is, 45. 46. 47. and somewhat more. For he placeth their setting out, and going to Salamis in the year 44. Tillemont (s) thinks this journey might be performed in two years, that is, according to his computation, part of the year 44. all 45. and part of 46. From which time to the council at Jerusalem, next mentioned by St. Luke, might he, as he thinks, about five years. In which space of time, he supposeth Paul to have gone into Illyricum, and also to have preached throughout all Judea: as mentioned Acts xxvi. 20. and likewise in Cilicia.

I likewise am of opinion, that this journey of Paul and Barnabas in the several countreys, just mentioned, might be performed in two years. I think, they could not set out from Antioch, before the beginning of the year 45. And, probably, returned in the former part of the year 47. But if any are rather for three years, and think this journey was not compleated before the beginning of the year 48. I should not reckon it worth while to dispute about it.

But I do not see any reason to believe, that they undertook any more journeys, before they went up to the Council at Jerusalem. They might judge it very proper to make a long stay at Antioch, where was the first Gentil church: as the other Apostles made a long stay at Jerusalem, and in Judea. However, this church of Antioch, I suppose, with (t) Witibus, to have confinit partes of Jews, and partly of Gentils. Nor do I think, that Paul and Barnabas would, as yet, extend their ministratie farther than they had done, without an express divine appointment. What they had already done, was a great deal. And must have exceeded the most raised expectations, till they had seen the event. Their stay at Antioch must have been very useful, probably expedient. It was pro-er to secure what they had gained. And they might there receive ap-lications from the several countreys, in which they had been, and impact counsel and encouragement. If they had soon gone hence again, some might have arrived, that should unsettle the minds of new converts. We plainly perceive, that from Judea came several to see this new colonie at Antioch. Some might come with good views, to encourage and confirm the believers there: or to satisfy themselves concerning the truth of what they had heard with great pleasure. But others might come with a design to infill narrow principles, and disturb their minds: with different sentiments from those, which had been taught them by Paul and Barnabas. St. Luke, notwithstanding the concilienesse of his historie, has informed us of two visits made here from Judea: the first, in the year 43. or 44. when there came Prophets from Jerusalem to Antioch. xii. 27. Afterwards there came men from Judea, whom taught the brethren, that unless they were circumcised, they could not be saved. xv. 1. Of which more prefently.

(r) Annal. Paulin. p 67. (s) S. Paul. Art. xii. . . . xvi.
(t) Erat enim urbs Gentilis, et ecclesia ibidem collecta omnium prima, quae partim Judaev, partim conversis Gentilibus conftabat. Ubi sup. jact iii. num. v.

If Paul and Barnabas went any where, we might think of Cilicia: the rather, because we can perceive, that soon after this there were Gentil believers there: though, when Paul first preached in that country, we suppose him to have applied to Jews only. And it is well observed by Tillemont upon the case now before us: “it (u) is certain, that Christianity had been establisht among the Gentils in Cilicia, before the Council of Jerusalem.” Acts xv. 23. Nevertheles, I should rather think, that Paul and Barnabas did not now leave Antioch, after their return thither, before they went up to Jerusalem. For some of Cilicia might learn the doctrine of the gospel by coming to Antioch. Or some of the Prophets and Evangelists, of Antioch, may have gone to Cilicia, with the approbation, and by the direction of Paul and Barnabas.

In this way of arguing I am encouraged by those words of St. Luke, just cited: And there they abode a long time with the disciples. We now proceed.

Acts xv. 1... 5. And certain men, which came down from Judea, taught the brethren: Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved. When therefore Paul and Barnabas had no small division and dissputation with them, they determined, that Paul and Barnabas, and certain other of them, should go up to Jerusalem, unto the Apostles and Elders, about this question. . And when they were come to Jerusalem, they were received of the church, and of the Apostles, and Elders. And they declared all things, that God had done with them. But, (they said) there (b) had risen up certain

(u) As before Art. xv.

(b) Many have mistaken those words, as if they were St. Luke’s, who observed, that there were at Jerusalem some of the sect of the Pharisees, who insisted upon imposing the law upon the Gentils. So thought Dr. Doddridge, Family-Expositor. Vol. 3. p. 233. So likewise Tillemont, whose words are these: Ils furent bien receus à Jerusalem. Mais ils y trouuerent les memes troubles, qui agitoient l’église d’Antioche; et dont ils vnoient chercher le remedie. Car quelques Chretiens, qui avoient été Pharisiens, vouloient qu’on obligeast les Gentils à la circumcision, et à l’obervation de la loi. S. Paul. art. xvi. Grotius himself seems to have understood these words in the same manner. Sicut Antiochie quidam e Judaeis facti Christiani, ita et Hierosolymis quidam duriorem illam defendebant sententiam. Grot. in ver. 5. Whereas, upon due consideration, I think, all must be sensible, that they are not the words of the historian, but of the messengers of the church of Antioch, representing to the Apostles and Elders at Jerusalem the case, or state of
And the Apostles and Elders came together to consider of this matter. Having in that assembly, after many debates, formed some resolutions, they sent them in a letter to the brethren, which are of the Gentils, in Antioch, and Syria, and Cilicia. ver. 6. . . . 31.

Those determinations were intended for all believers in general from among the Gentils, containing, as it were, the terms, upon which all Gentils were to be admitted into the Church of Christ. But the epistle was directed, particularly, to the Gentils in Antioch, and Syria, and Cilicia, because among them the controversy had arisen, and they were the persons, who had sent a solemn deputation to the Apostles and Elders at Jerusalem, to have their opinion upon it.

This journey to Jerusalem, related by St. Luke Acts xv. I suppose to be the same with that mentioned by St. Paul himself, of which he gives an account to the Galatians. ii. 1. . . . 10. Indeed, he mentions some circumstances, wanting in Luke. But, as I apprehend, they are not such as need induce us to think, two different journeys to be spoken of.

From Paul therefore we shall endeavor to find out the time of it. Then fourteen years after, says he, I went up again to Jerusalem, with Barnabas, and took Titus with me also. And I went up by revelation. In the preceding chapter of the epistle to the Galatians Paul had related his conversion in the way to Damascus, and then his going up to Jerusalem, after three years, to see Peter, and abiding with him fifteen days. i. 18. Where are we to date the beginning of those fourteen years? At his conversion? or at his coming to Jerusalem, to see Peter? Pearson is clearly of opinion, that (x) the computation must be made from the time of his conversion. So likewise lay (y) Eutius, and (z) Bafnage.

Says of the question, about which they were sent, and which they desired to have now fully resolved and determined. This is the interpretation, which Beza preferred. Hunc locum video omnes perinde interpretati, ac si effent verba Luke, quasi cum fuam expeditionem narrarent Paulus ac Barnabas, infuror erexerint, qui circumcisi non ignerent. Quod mihi non sit admodum probabile. Sed poitus illos, exposita sua expeditione, subjecisse controversiam illam Antiochiae excitatum, cujus causa iphi Hierosolymaam venerant. Puto igitur esse illorum verba, non Luke. Beza. in loc. Lenfant follows Beza. And Whitby, if I do not mistake him, gives the same interpretation. And Dr. Doddridge, upon my telling him how I understood the place, readily acquiesced, as I well remember. For he was always open to conviction, therein giving a good example to all enquirers after truth.

(x) Anno xiv. a conversione S. Pauli congregatum. Hunc enim adventum suum narrat Apostolus Gal. ii. 1. 2. et tempus ipsum determinate exprimit. . . . Quod autem Apostolus ad epocham conversionis sua referat annos, quos ibi narrat, manifestum est ex scopo capitis i. et ii. . . . Deinde, post an-

(y) Efl. in Gal. ii. 1. 2.

(z) Ann. 50. num. iii.
Says St. Paul Gal. i. 17. Then after three years I went up to Jerusalem, to see Peter. Those three years cannot be computed from his return to Damascus, out of Arabia, though it be the thing mentioned immediately before in ver. 17. But must be reckoned from his conversion. In like manner must be understood those words in ch. ii. 1. then fourteen years after I went up to Jerusalem. We must take the same date or epoch for the three years, and for the fourteen years. They both begin from the same time, that is, St. Paul’s conversion.

The Council deputed with their epistle two chosen men of their own number, Judas and Silas, to go to Antioch, together with Paul and Barnabas. Acts xv. 22. 23. After they had tarried there a while, Judas returned to Jerusalem, but Silas abode there still. ver. 32. 33. 34.

This Council at Jerusalem, according to (a) Pearson, and, I suppose, many others, was held in the year of Christ 49. Boshage, supposing Paul to have been converted in 37. placeth (b) this Council in the year 50.

As I cannot say exactly, when Paul was converted, whether in 36. or 37. I am led to hesitate about the time of the Council. But if he was converted before the end of the year 36. the Council, as I apprehend, may be computed to have been held in the year 49. St. Paul says Gal. i. 18. then after three years I went up to Jerusalem. έπί τινα μιτά ἐν τοῖς. Which, I think, implies full three years, or somewhat more, as before observed. But the expression in Gal. ii. 1. is different. We translate: Then fourteen years after I went up again to Jerusalem. έπί τινα διά διακαινοσώμενοι πάλιν ἀνάκυκλος εἰς Ιερουσαλήμ. Which, I think, may be thus rendered: Then in about fourteen years I went up again to Jerusalem. The three years, above mentioned, are compleat: but the fourteen years need not be so understood. And, probably, were not compleat. If therefore Paul be supposed to have been converted in the year 36. this Council might be held, accordingly, in 49.

This period, from Paul’s setting out with Barnabas from Antioch, to go to Cyprus, in the beginning of the year 45. to their coming up to the Council at Jerusalem, and returning thence to Antioch, near the end of the year 49. or the beginning of 50. is the space of about five years.

... to his coming to X. The next period will reach from this time to Jerusalem when he was apprehended.

Soon after the return of Barnabas and Paul to Antioch, Peter, as it seems, came thither, as related by St. Paul. Gal. ii. 11. 21. Nevertheless that occasioned not their making any long stay at Antioch. For says St. Luke. Acts xv. 36. And some days after, that is, I think, after their being come back to Antioch, or after Judas had gone away to Jerusalem, and the controversy, which had been troublesome for some while before, was fully compoied, Paul said unto Barnabas: Let us go again, again, and visit our brethren, in every city, where we have preached the word of the Lord, and see how they do. And Barnabas determined to take with them John, whose surname was Mark. By which we perceive, that Mark, who before had left Paul and Barnabas, and gone to Jerusalem, was now come again into this country, and was willing to have again accompanied them. Possibly, he came hither with Peter. But Paul thought not good to take him with them, who departed from them from Pamphilus, and went not with them to the work. And the contention was so sharp, that they departed asunder one from the other. So Barnabas took Mark, and sailed into Cyprus. Paul chose Silas, and departed. ... and went through Syria and Cilicia, confirming the churches. Acts xv. 33. ... 41.

I am inclined to think, that it was in the beginning of the year 50. that St. Paul now set out from Antioch. Pearson (c) likewise, and (d) Bajnage, place it in the same year.

Witsius thinks, that (e) at this time Paul went from Cilicia to Crete: and that not being able to stay long there himself, he left Titus, that he might set in order the things that were wanting, and ordain Elders in every city. ch. i. 5. Pearson (f) placeth Paul's journey into Crete in the latter part of the Apostle's life, in 63. or 64. after the deliverance from his imprisonment at Rome. But Witsius says, it is not likely, that the preaching of the Gospel in Crete, should have been deferred so long: when all Achaia, Macedonia, Asia, Cyprus, Syria, had been already instructed in the doctrine of the gospel. And he observes, that not long after Paul was come from Cilicia, he took Timothie into his attendance, to supply, as he thinks, the want of Titus, lately left in Crete.

Though I cannot say, that Paul now went from Cilicia to Crete, I readily own myself to be of opinion, that the Apostle's journey into Crete was performed, and his letter to Titus writ, before his imprisonment at Jerusalem. But of this more hereafter.

Having gone through Syria and Cilicia, confirming the churches, Paul came to Derbe, and Lyftra: where they had been before. Here they found Timothie, who, as may be supposed, had been converted, when Paul and Barnabas were there together. Timothie having a good character, from the brethren at Lyftra and Iconium, Paul would have him to go forth with him. Acts xvi. i. 3.

Afterwards they came into Phrygia. And it may be reckoned very probable, (d) Ann. 50. num xlvi.

(e) Ex Cilicia videtur Paulus in Cretam navigasse, et pradicato ibi evangelio, quoniam alio properabat, Titum reliquisse, ut quæ de Dunt corrigere, atque, oppidatim presbyteros constitueret. Quæ Luæ omisit, ex epistola ad Titum supplenda esse, et huic temporì optime convenire, opinant L. Capellus. At Pearsonus ad postrema Pauli temporal refert, eaque ejus itinerà, quæ solutionem ex vinculis Romanis coniectura sunt. ... Cappelli tamen rationes potiores hic mihi videntur. Non enim verisimile est, ad illud utque tempus ignotum fuisse Christum in Creta, quam tota Achaia. ... perfonarent evangelii præconio. ... Deinde Derben et Lyftram venit. Ibi in Timotheon incidit, fidifimum fibi abhinc omnium itinerum fuorum futurum comitem. ... De Vita Paul. fept. 13. num. i.
probable, that now Paul preached in the chief cities of that country, Hierapolis, Laodicea, and Colossi. He also went into Galatia, and there founded many churches. But they were forbidden to preach in Asia, properly so called. St. Luke's words are ver. 6. 7. Now when they had gone through Phrygia, and the region of Galatia, and were forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia, after they were come to Mycia, they assayed to go into Bithynia. But the Spirit suffered them not.

Then it follows ver. 8. . . . 10. And they passing by Mycia, came to Troas. And a vision appeared to Paul in the night. There floop a man of Macedonia, and prayed him, saying: Come over into Macedonia, and help us. And after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering, that the Lord had called us to preach the gospel unto them.

By which manner of speaking we perceive, that Luke was now in Paul's company. It is likely, that he met them at Troas. Which seems to have been the name of a country, and of a city, the chief of the country, situate upon the sea-coast.

Ver. 11. 12. Therefore losing from Troas, we came with a straight course to Samothracia, and the next day to Neapolis: and thence to Philippi, which is the chief city of that part of Macedonia, and a colony. And we were in that city abiding certain days.

Samothracia was an island, over-against Thrace, bordering upon Macedonia. Neapolis was a town upon the sea-coast, on the Thracian side of the Strymonic Bay, which separated Macedonia and Thrace. Here, I suppose, they landed, but made no stay. Thence they went by land to Philippi. Here they stayed some while, and several remarkable occurrences in that city are related by St. Luke. Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira, in Asia, attended to the things that were spoken of Paul, and was baptized, both she and her household. She seems to have been a merchant, of no small dealings, and probably, had with her many servants, and other attendants. Here likewise Paul healed the young maiden, said to be possessed with a spirit of divination. After which Paul and Silas were apprehended, beaten, and imprisoned. But they were soon set at liberty. Whereupon they left that city. ver. 13. . . . 40.

From thence they passed through Amphipolis, and Apollonia, and came to Thessalonica, where was a synagogue of the Jews. Acts xvii. 1.

Amphipolis and Apollonia were cities of Macedonia. And Thessalonica was the chief city of that country. Here being a Jewish synagogue, Paul, as his manner was, went in unto them, and three sabbath-days reasoned with them out of the Scriptures. . . . And some of them believed, and conforted with Paul and Silas. Whilft he was here, believed also, of the devout Greeks, that is, of the people of the country, who were well disposed, a great multitude, and of the chief women of the city not a few. But the unbelieving Jews made a great disturbance. ver. 2. . . . 9.

The brethren therefore immediately sent away Paul and Silas by night unto Beroea, where many of the Jews, and many of the men, and honourable women of the place, believed. But some Jews came from Thessalonica, and stirr'd up the people there also. ver. 10. . . . 13.

The brethren therefore immediately sent away Paul, and conducted him to Athens, with Luke, it is likely, the writer of this historie. But Silas...
Silas and Timothy abode still at Beroea. St. Luke then gives an account of the Apostle’s preaching at Athens. The event was, that some mocked. Howbeit some adhered to Paul, and believed. Among which was Dionysius, the Areopagite, and a woman named Damaris, and others with them.

Acts xviii. 1, 2. After these things Paul departed from Athens, and came to Corinth: and found a certain Jew, named Aquila, born in Pontus, lately come from Italy, with his wife Priscilla, because that Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from Rome.

The Council of Jerusalem, as before said, was held in the year 49. or 50. And it was supposed by us, that Paul might set out from Antioch in the year 50. before it was far advanced. If so, he might come now to Corinth, before the end of the year 51. For as Basing computes, the Apostle’s journeyings, after leaving Antioch till his coming to Corinth, need not take up more than a year and a half. I put below (g) his brief enumeration of all the places, which have been lately taken notice of by us. But he did not think of the journey into Crete, mentioned by Witsius. Nor do I suppose it to have been then performed. This computation suits Paul’s finding Aquila and Priscilla at Corinth. For he thinks, that edict of Claudius to have been published in the eleventh year of his reign, which began on Jan. 24. in the year 51.

At Corinth Paul tarried a year and six months. ch. xviii. 11. that is, as I suppose, the remainder of the year 51. and all 52. and part of 53.

And then he took leave of the brethren, and sailed thence into Syria, and with him Priscilla, and Aquila, having born his head in Cenchrea. For he had a vow. And he came to Ephesus, and left them there. But he entered into the synagogue, and reasoned with the Jews. When they desired him to tarry longer time with them, he consented not: but bid them farewell, saying: I must by all means keep this feast at Jerusalem: meaning, as I apprehend, the feast of Pentecost in the year 53. But I will return again unto you, if God will. And he sailed from Ephesus. And when he had landed at Cesarea, and gone up, and saluted the church, namely, at Jerusalem, he went down to Antioch. And after he had spent some time there, he departed, and went over all the country of Galatia, and Phrygia, in order, that is, visiting the churches, formerly planted by him, in those countries, strengthening all the disciples. ver. 18. . . . 23.

In this space of time, after Paul had left Ephesus, came thither Apollos, los, born at Alexandria. Who received from Aquila and Priscilla farther instructions concerning the Christian Religion, beyond what he knew before, and then went away to Corinth. ver. 24. . . . 28.

Ch. xix. 1. And it came to pass, that while Apollos was at Corinth, Paul having passed through the upper coasts, meaning the countreys of Galatia and Phrygia, before mentioned, came to Ephesus: that is, as I apprehend, before the end of the year 53. possibly, in October, or November.

I hope, I have allowed time enough for all the journeys hitherto mentioned: and that I have not brought Paul to Ephesus too soon.

Ver. 8. . . . 10. Says St. Luke: And he went into the synagogue, and spake boldly for the space of three months, disputing, and persuading the things concerning the kingdom of God. But when divers were hardened, and believed not, but spake evil of that way before the multitude, he departed from them, and separated the disciples, disputing daily in the school of one Tyrannus. And this continued by the space of two years. So that all they which dwelt in Asia, strictly (b) so called, the countrey, of which Ephesus was the metropolis, heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks. St. Paul, afterwards, Acts xx. 31. in his discourse to the Elders of Ephesus, at Miletus, says, he had been with them the space of three years. Which may be a round number. Three months, at least, he had disputed in the Jewish synagogue, and two years in the school of Tyrannus, and, possibly, somewhat more, making, in the whole, a good deal above two, which St. Paul might call three years.

I think, that Paul might come to Ephesus, before the end of the year 53. in October, or November, as before said. There he continued the remainder of that year, and the whole of the years 54. and 55. till the year 56. about Pentecost. However, let us observe the historie.

From ver. 11. to 41. the end of the forecited xix. chapter of the Acts is St. Luke's account of the special miracles wrought by Paul at Ephesus, and divers remarkable events, and then of a tumult raised by Demetrius, a silversmith, and other work-men, of like occupation.

Then Acts xx. 1. . . . 6. And after the uproar had ceased, Paul called unto him the disciples, and embraced them, and departed for to go into Macedonia. And when he had gone over those parts, and had given them much exhortation, he came into Greece. And there abode three months. And when the Jews laid wait for him, as he was about to sail into Syria, he purposed to return through Macedonia. And there accompanied him into Asia Sopater of Berea, and of the Thessalonians Aristarchus and Secundus, and Gaius of Derbe, and Timothie, and of Asia, Tychicus and Trophimus. These going before tarried for us at Troas. And we sailed away from Philippi, after after the days of unleavened bread, and came unto them to Troas, in five days, where we abode seven days.

There is not perhaps, any part of St. Paul’s travels attended with more difficulties, than this period, of his leaving Ephesus, and setting out upon his voyage to Jerusalem, with the collections made in the churches of Greece and Macedonia, and some other places. St. Luke is very distinct and particular in the account of the journey from Troas to Jerusalem. But from Ephesus to Troas he has mentioned but one city only, which is Philippi. Otherwise, as we have seen in the passage just transcribed, he speaks only of the countries of Macedonia, and Greece.

We will therefore endeavor to settle the time, when Paul left Ephesus, and then consider, how long he might be in Macedonia, or other places, before he went to Troas.

After having related Paul’s preaching at Ephesus for a good while, and the succelle of it, St. Luke says in the forcite xix. 21. 22. 23. After these things were ended, Paul purposed in the spirit, when he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia, to go to Jerusalem, saying: After I have been there, I must see Rome. So he sent into Macedonia two of them that ministered to him, Timothie and Eras tus. But he himself slaid in Asia for a season. At the same time there arose no small stir about that way: meaning the tumult caused by Demetrius, as before mentioned.

Lightfoot has a happy thought upon this place. "Paul’s thoughts, says (i) he, of going to Rome argue the death of Claudius, who had "banished all the Jews from thence. Acts xviii. 2. and that by the "coming in of Nero, a new Emperour, that decree was extint, and "freedom of accele to Rome opened to them again. For it can be little "conceived, that Paul should think of going thither, when he could "neither find any of his nation there, nor himself come thither without "certain hazard of his life: as the case would have been, if Claudius and

"his decree were yet alive. It is therefore agreeable to all reason, that "the death of Claudius, and the sucession of Nero, were now divulged.

"And Paul thereupon knowing, that it was now lawful again for a Jew

"to go to Rome, intendeth to take a farewell journey and visit to Ma-

"cedonia, Achaia, and Jerusalem, and then to go and preach there."

Claudius died Oct. 13. in the year 54. It might be the beginning of

55. before the tidings of the death of Claudius and the acception of Nero reached Ephesus. Upon which, or soon after, the thought of going to Rome entered Paul’s mind. But he intended first to go to Macedonia, and Greece, and Jerusalem.

So, says St. Luke, he sent into Macedonia two of them that ministered unto him, Timothie and Eras tus. But he himself slaid in Asia for a season.

By which we are led to think, that those messengers were sent into Macedonia in the year 55. After they were gone, came to Paul at Ephesus, from Corinth, Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus. 1 Cor. xvi. 17. By them he sends his first epistle to the Corinthians, writ, as I suppose, in the beginning of the year 56. And it appears from 1 Cor. xvi. 10. 11. that Timothie, who, as before seen, had been sent into Macedonia, was also

(i) Hormone of the N. T. Vol. i. p. 299.
also to go to Corinth. For there the Apostle says: Now if Timothie come, see that he may be with you without fear. For he worketh the work of the Lord, as I also do. Let no man therefore despise him: but conduct him forth in peace, that he may come unto me. For I look for him with the brethren. Paul therefore was in expectation of Timothie's coming to him at Ephesus. Which I suppose he did, before Paul removed thence. Paul says. 1 Cor. xvi. 8. 9. But I will tarry at Ephesus, until Pentecost.

For a great door and effectual is opened unto me. And there are many adversaries. The Pentecost, there mentioned, I suppose to be that of the year 56.

Some time therefore in the year 56. before Pentecost, or about that season, Paul left Ephesus to go into Macedonia. So says St. Luke in his account of Paul's removal from Ephesus. He first mentions Macedonia, and then Greece. Acts xx. 1. 2. And from what Paul says 2 Cor. ii. 12. it is argued, that (k) he did not sail away directly from Ephesus to Macedonia: but travelled by land to Troas, and then went over to Macedonia by sea. If so, he went now into Macedonia, by the same way that he had done, when he was first there. Acts xvi. 11. 12.

But how long was Paul now in Macedonia and Achaia? or what space of time was there between his leaving Ephesus, and Troas, and his return to Troas, in his way to Jerusalem? If it was a year only, or somewhat less, the Passover mentioned Acts xx. 6. and the Pentecost, mentioned ver. 16. were in the year 57. But if Paul's journey from Ephesus, round about by Troas, Macedonia, and Achaia, and Macedonia again, to Troas, in the way to Jerusalem, took up two years, or thereabout, then the Pentecost mentioned Acts xx. 16. was in the year of Christ 58.

And, if I mistake not, there are several considerations, leading us to think, that those journeyings took up more, than the space of a year.

It need not to be doubted, that Timothie returned from Corinth to Paul, before the Apostle removed from Ephesus. And that Paul left him there, will be manifest from that, which is called the first epistle to Timothie. As I besought thee to abide still at Ephesus, when I went into Macedonia, that thou mightest charge some, that they teach no other doctrine. 1 Tim. i. 3. Paul therefore left Timothie at Ephesus, for weighty reasons: and some time after his coming into Macedonia, wrote him a letter, for his direction and assistance in the arduous work, lying before him. But Timothie was with Paul, at writing the second epistle to the Corinthians. For it begins thus: Paul an Apostle of Jesus Christ . . . and Timothie our brother unto the church of God, which is at Corinth, with all the saints in all Achaia. That letter was sent from Macedonia, a little before Paul went to Corinth. But some good while must have passed between

(4) Sed quid interea Paulus, postquam Ephefo propefus eft, ut iret in Macedoniam? Per Minorem Asiarn iter faciens, venit Troadem nobiliffimam civitatem, quaefit Helleponto : ubi querens Titum, cum non inveniet, transmiftit freto abitat in Macedoniam. 2 Cor. ii. Baron. ann. 57. num. cxxxv.

Paul ne s'embarqua pas à Ephefe, mais il vint à Troade dans le defsein d'y prêcher l'évangile. Tillen. S. Paul. art. 31.
between Paul’s leaving Timothy at Ephesus, and writing to him, and this second epistle to the Corinthians. Paul, it is very probable, did not send for Timothy to come to him from Ephesus presently after he had left him there. I might add, that there must have been some emergent occasions, that induced Paul to call Timothy to him from Ephesus, where his presence was of great importance. What those occasions were, Luke has not at all hinted. But they may be supposed. However, I do not now stay, to hint what they were.

Paul in his second epistle to the Corinthians. ch. i. and xiii. 1. apologized for his deferring so long to come to them. But there could have been no occasion for such apologies, if he had come to them in the same year that he wrote his first epistle.

Paul says 1 Cor. xvi. 5. 6. Now I will come unto you, when I shall pass through Macedonia. . . . And it may be, that I will abide, yea, and winter with you. But Paul did not abide, and winter with them, according to this proposal, as here intimated. If he had, there could have been no ground for such apologies, as are in the second epistle. Nevertheless the Apostle did spend three months with them, not very long before a pass-over. Which must have been partly in some winter. As they could not be in the year 56. when the first epistle to them was writ, they must have been in the year after, that is about the end of the year 57. and the beginning of the year 58. See again Acts xx. 1. . . . 6.

St. Paul says 2 Cor. ix. 2. For I know the forwardness of your mind. For which I boast of you to them of Macedonia, that Achaia was ready a year ago. And your zeal has provoked very many. Which plainly shews, that it was now above a year, since writing the first epistle to the Corinthians, which was sent from Ephesus. For there he says ch. xii. 1. 2. Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given directions to the churches of Galatia, so do ye. Upon the first day of the week, let every one of you lay by him in store, as God has prospered him: that there be no gatherings, when I come. These directions were then sent to the Corinthians. They therefore were not readie then. They could not be readie, till some while after. And yet, at the time of writing the second epistle to them, from Macedonia, they had been readie above a year.

This shews, that Paul was above a year in Macedonia, or near it. Moreover after sending away this second letter, Paul went to Corinth, and staid there three months. And afterwards went thence through Macedonia to Troas.

Consequently there was the space of two years, or almost two years, between Paul’s leaving Ephesus, and coming to Troas, in his way to Jerusalem.

As Paul did not winter at Corinth in the year 56. we are led to think of Nicopolis, mentioned Titus iii. 12.

Before I proceed, I must take some farther notice of the words of 2 Cor. i. 15. 16. And in this confidence I was minded to come unto you before, or first, that you might have a second benefit: and to pass by you into Macedonia, and to come again out of Macedonia to you, and of you to be brought on my way toward Judea. Hence it may be concluded, that in the beginning of the year 56. before Paul left Ephesus, he once had hopes of getting to Judea, in the year following, that is, in the year 57. probably at Pass-over, over, or Pentecost, and that he had been prevented. He then intended to go from Ephesus to Corinth, thence to Macedonia, and to return from Macedonia, to Corinth, that by the Christians there he might be brought on his way to Judea. But by some means he had been carried into a different course. He had not yet been in Judea. Nor was he yet come to Corinth, though he had been in Macedonia. And, probably, he did not get into Judea before the Pentecost in 58. These words therefore must induce us to think, that there was a longer space of time between Paul's leaving Ephesus, and coming to Corinth, and Jerusalem, than has been generally supposed of late.

Baronius says, that (l) during this period Paul was in Crete, as well as in Macedonia, and Æcabaia, as does (m) Lightfoot: who also supposeth
(n) Paul to have been now in Illyricum.

Dr. Benson (o) thinks, that Paul might say, as he does Rom. xv. 19, that he had preached the gospel from Jerusalem round about unto Illyricum, "upon account of his being, and that more than once, in Mac-donia, which bordered upon Illyricum, the Scardican mountains, and the "river Drina, being the boundaries between them." And after the like manner Wiseman, who thinks, that (p) Paul did not intend to say, that he had preached in Illyricum. For he only makes it the boundary of his labours. However, he says, that Appollonia was a city of Illyricum.

Wall upon Acts xx. 2. (q) says, "St. Paul did many great things in that nine months time. [So he computes.] It must have been during that space, I think, that he made an excursion into Illyricum, and preached the gospel there."

Mr. Bifcoe delivers his thoughts in this manner: "In (r) the same epistle he says: From Jerusalem round about unto Illyricum, I have fully preached the gospel of Christ. Which is a general confirmation of the whole history of his travels in the book of the Acts. For in that history he is said to have gone through Syria, Cilicia, and moft, if not all the countries in Peninsular Asia, to have gone over into Europe, and to "pafs

(l) Ann. 57. num. ccix.
(m) Lightfoot. Harm. of the N. T. Vol. i. p. 309.
(n) Ibid. p. 307.
(p) Deinde iter feuerent per Amphipolim urbem Philippis vicinam, et Appolloniam quæ est Corinthiorum et Corycraorum colonia, civitas Illyric.
Sic enim Stephanus. . . Verum id nonfæ nunc potissimum consideratis est, quod Apollonia urbs Illirica sit. Pertinet hoc ad illu<rationem illius quod Paulus Romanus scripsit. xv. 19. . . Multorum igitur locus ingenia fatigavit, non inueniunt, quo tempore Paulus evangelium, in Illirico, quod fupponunt, predicavit. . . Sed quid laboramus incaflum? Primo enim Illi-ricum non comprehendit Paulus suis itineribus, quafi id quoque evangelium præcindendo peragraverit: fed Illiricum statuit itinerum fuorum terminum. Venit enim ad limites Illirici, quando venit Apolloniam. Optime Grotius ad Rom. xv. 19. Macedonia, quam peragravit Paulus, Dal-matiam attingit, quæ pars Illirici, et ipsum mare Illiricum. In eo num. xi.
(q) Wall's Notes upon the N. T. p. 205.
"pas through Macedonia into Greece. Now Berea, the last city, in "which St. Paul is said to have preached in Macedonia, could not be far "from Daffaretia, which was part of the ancient Illyricum. At the same "time I must own, it does not seem at all improbable to me, that St. "Paul might in one of his journeys through Macedonia, (for St. Luke "relates his passing through Macedonia three times:) make an excursion "into some of the nearer parts of Illyricum, and plant the gospel among "them, though not taken notice of in the historie of the (s) Acts. It is "certain however, that during St. Paul's life the gospel was preached "even in the remoter parts of Illyricum, and not improbably by the Apof-
"tle himself, after his release from his first imprisonment at Rome. For in "his second epistle to Timothie, written when he was a second time pri"soner in that great city, he informs him, that he had sent Titus into "Dalmatia."

If I were to alter the later part of that paragraph, agreeably to my ap"prehensions, it would stand thus: "It is certain, that during St. Paul's "life the gospel was preached even in the remoter parts of Illyricum, and "more than probable by the Apostle himself, and that before his imprisonment at Rome, when he was sent thither from Judea by Festus. For "in his second epistle to Timothie, writ during that his imprisonment "at Rome, he informs him, that he had sent Titus into Dalmatia."

The second epistle to Timothie having been writ at that time, if any argument can be fetched from it, it must prove, that Paul had been in Illyricum, before he went to Jerusalem, and probably, at the time, which we are now speaking of.

It appears to me very probable, that at this time Paul was in Illyricum, and Crete. But I cannot digest the order of his journey, since St. Luke has not related them. St. Luke says nothing of Paul's going to Troas. He only says, that Paul went from Ephesus to Macedonia, and then came into Greece. Though Paul was preparing for his journey to Jerusalem, with contributions of Gentil churches, he was not in a hurry. Nor were those collections his only concern. Notwithstanding the tumult at Ephesus, he took leave of his friends there with a good deal of deh-
"ration. St. Luke's words are Acts xx. 1. And after the uproar was ceased, Paul called unto him the disciples, and embraced them, and departed for go into Macedonia. Nor does St. Luke represent the Apostle in great haste in that country. For he says: ver. 2. And when he had gone over those parts, and had given them much exhortation, he came into Greece.

It is now a common opinion, that (t) St. Paul did not go directly to Macedonia

(s) "All that St. Luke says of his second journey is this: And when he "had gone over those parts, and had given them much exhortation, he came "into Greece. Acts xx. 2. All that is said of the third journey is, that "whereas he intended to have sailed from Greece into Syria, knowing that the "Jews laid wait for him, he changed his mind, and paffed through Macedonia. "ver. 3...6. At either of these times he might make an excursion into "Illyricum, but most probably in his second journey." That is a note of Mr.
Biscoe at p. 425.

(t) "He did not go directly from Ephesus to Macedonia, that is, he did not "take shipping at Ephesus: (that was not safe:) but escaped by land to Troas,
Macedonia from Ephesus, but went by land to Troas, and there crossed over to Macedonia. It is evident, that before he wrote his second epistle to the Corinthians, from Macedonia, he had been at Troas. For 2 Cor. ii. 12. he says, he came to Troas, to preach Christ's gospel, and that a door was opened to him of the Lord. There is no absurdity in supposing, that St. Luke, who says nothing of Paul's having been then at Troas, and omitted the Apostle's journey into Arabia, and indeed many other things, has omitted an account of his going to Crete and Illyricum. Wall, and others, who compute no more than nine months between Paul's leaving Ephesus, and coming to Troas, in the way to Jerusalem, may find a difficulty in admitting what we contend for. But I think, I have shewn it to be a space of almost two years, or about a year and three quarters. This alone will render it probable, that somewhat was done by Paul, beside what is mentioned by St. Luke in Acts xx. 1... 6.

St. Paul's words in the epistle to the Romans, writ at Corinth, in this period, are very remarkable: so that from Jerusalem, and round about, unto Illyricum, I have fully preached the gospel of Christ... For which cause also I have been much hindered from coming unto you. But now having no more place in these parts, and having a great desire these many years to come unto you. ch. xv. 19. 22. 23. He seems now, as it were, at ease, knowing what he had done, and considering, that there was nothing more left to be done by him in those parts. And why should not Illyricum be understood in the same manner, as Jerusalem? He had been at Jerusalem? and consequently, I think, in Illyricum likewise. And I should apprehend, that now was the time, when Paul could first say so much, as he here does.

Jerome had no doubt, but that Paul was in Illyricum. "Christ, says (u) he, was with Peter at Rome, with Paul in Illyricum, with Titus in Crete." That opinion, it is likely, was built upon this text in the epistle to the Romans. Consequently, it is to be supposed, that Paul had been in Illyricum, before writing that epistle. Nor can any season be thought of more likely, than this period, between his leaving Ephesus, and coming to Troas, in the way to Jerusalem.

I suppose, Theodoret to be of the same mind with us, and to confirm what we are now saying, in his comment upon Rom. xv. 19. "He (x) "shews, to how many people he had preached: so that from Jerusalem, "and round about unto Illyricum, I have fully preached the gospel of Christ. "As if he had said: I have not cultivated the nations in a straight line "only: but going round about I have planted the doctrine of the "gospel in the Eastern countreys, and also in Pontus, and like- "wise

"as he says 2 Cor. ii. 12. and from thence took ship to Macedonia." Wall's critical notes upon the N. T. p. 205.

(x) οίπαρε οι κεκόμενοι υπέρ ημών ... εν γάρ τα κατά τον εὐθείας οδόν παρακέιμένα ένων εγεώργησα μένα, αλλά κη κύκλω περίτων, τατε ιώα, κη τα σποντικά μέση, κη περος τούτοις τα κατά άσιας, κη την δρακην, τις διακα- λιαν επίλειψα. Τώτο γαρ οξίοι το κύκλω. Theod. in loc. T. 3. p. 111. 112.
"wife in Asia, and Thrace. That is what he intends by round "about."

And Euthalius, in his prologue to St. Paul's fourteen epistles, reckons Illyricum among the countries, where Paul had preached, and says, that he converted a large part of it to the faith of Christ.

It may be not improper for us to give here some attention to the historie of Aquila and Priscilla. They were with Paul at Ephesus, when he wrote his first epistle to the Corinthians, in the spring of the year 56. For he sends their salutations in these words: The churches of Asia salute you, Aquila and Priscilla salute you much in the Lord, with the church that is in their house. 1 Cor. xvi. 19. The Jews having been banished from Rome by an edict of Claudius, they came to Corinth, a short time before Paul. Acts xviii. 1. . . . 3. When Paul went from Corinth to Ephesus, and Jerusalem, they went with him as far as Ephesus, and tarried there. 18. 19. When Paul wrote the epistle to the Romans, at the end of his second peregrination in Macedonia and Achaia, in the spring of the year 58. (as we suppose) they were at Rome. For Paul sends his salutations to them. Rom. xvi. 3. Afterwards they returned to Ephesus. For Paul sends his salutations to them in his second epistle to Timothy, then at Ephesus. 2 Tim. iv. 19. which epistle I think to have been writ in the summer of the year 61. soon after Paul's coming a prisoner to Rome. And it has been supposed, that they continued at Ephesus the remainder of their life. Which to me seems not improbable. It is likely, that soon after Paul went from Ephesus to Macedonia, which he did in April or May 56. they also went from Ephesus to Rome. They might return thither, with a view to settle some secular affairs, they having before left Rome in a hurry, in compliance with the edict of Claudius. Or they returned to Rome with a design to continue there. For they seem to have had their families with them. Says St. Paul, in the place before referred to, Rom. xvi. 3. . . . 5. Salute Priscilla and Aquila . . . and the church in their house. Mr. Biscoe (y) explaining these words, the church in their house, says, "they had, it is probable, a considerable number of "servants to carry on their trade. These, doubtless, were taught by "them the Christian faith: by which means they had a church in their "house, wherever they settled." And speaking of their being at Corinth he says: "they (x) came from Rome, and settled at Corinth: in whose "house at Corinth St. Paul took up his lodging, and wrought with them "at their trade of tent-making."

What I would observe is this: that there is nothing in the historie of these two excellent Christians, Paul's helpers, inconformity with the account, which we have just given of this peregrination of Paul. Which is to this purpose. Paul removed from Ephesus in the spring of the year 56. and went into Macedonia. But which way he went, I cannot tell, whether by the way of Troas, or some other course. He also was in Crete, and Illyricum about this time. Having spent the winter of 56. at Nicopolis

(z) The same p. 432.
Nicopolis, either in Thrace or Epirus, he came into Macedonia. Where he stayed some while. And near the end of the year 57. in November, or December, he came into Achaia, and particularly to Corinth, where he stayed three months. Hence Paul intended to have sailed to Syria. But understanding that the Jews laid wait for him, he returned again to Macedonia. And sailed away from Philippi, after the days of unleavened bread, and came to his friends at Troas in five days. Acts xx. 3...6. That Paffover, which Paul kept at Philippi, we suppose to have been in the year 58. At Troas Paul stayed seven days.

It is not needful for us to pursue distinctly Paul’s journey thence to Jerusalem, it being very clearly laid down by St. Luke, in the remaining part of ch. xx. and the beginning of xxi. I observe a few things only. xx. 13. And we went before by ship to Assos, [from Troas,] there intending to take in Paul. For so he had appointed, minding himself to go afoot. By which, I apprehend, we need not suppose, that Paul walked all that way: the original word, as seems to me, importing no more, than that Paul chose to go so far by land: whilst the rest of the company went by water.‡

Ch. xx. 16. For Paul had determined to sail by Ephesus, because he would not spend the time in Asia. For he hastened, if it were possible for him, to be at Jerusalem the day of Pentecost. As I suppose he was, though it is not particularly mentioned by St. Luke. So says (a) Lightfoot: “St. Paul cometh to Jerusalem at the feast of Pentecost, when the city was now full of a confluence to that festival.” Whereby we may be able to apprehend the greatness of the multitude of the people, as intimated by St. Luke xxi. 27...36. and the extremity of the Apostle’s danger, and the terrifying circumstances of it.

We have now gone through a period of about eight years, from Paul’s leaving Antioch, not far from the beginning of the year 50. to his coming to Jerusalem at the Pentecost in 58.

...to the End of his Imprisonment at Rome.

Paul was above two years in Judea. He came to Jerusalem, as just said, at the feast of Pentecost in the year 58. And he was sent away to Rome near the end of the year 60. St. Luke’s account of what happened to Paul in that space of time is in ch. xxi. 17...xxvi. 1...32. For when he had been a few days at Jerusalem, he was seized by a rude and enraged multitude, who would have killed him, if he had not been rescued out of their hands by Lyfias, a Tribune, and the chief officer at Jerusalem, under the Roman Governor: who secured him in the castle of Antonia, binding him with two chains to two soldiers. But before Paul was carried into the castle, he made a speech to the people, as he stood upon the stairs going up into it. But the people not being at all mollified, and still throwing great rage, the Chief Captain ordered, that Paul should be brought brought into the castle. The next day he loosed Paul from his bonds, and brought him before the Jewish Council. But a great diffension arising in the Council between the members of it, the Captain was obliged to take him by force from them, and bring him into the castle. The day after the Captain being informed of a conspiracie to assassinate Paul, prudently sent him from Jerusalem, under a strong guard, to Cesarea by the sea-side, where the Governor Felix refided. After two years imprisonment Porcius Festus came in the room of Felix, who, to gratifie the Jews, left Paul bound. In a short time Festus brought this prifoner's caufe to a hearing at Cesarea. And the Jews still prosecuting him with great earnestnesse, Paul appealed to Cefar. Then Festus, when he had confered with his council, anfwered: Haft thou appealed to Cefar? Unto Cefar thou shalt go. A while after which Paul, and other prifoners in that country, were delivered to Julius, a Centurion, to be conducted by sea to Italie.

(a) As before. Vol. i. p. 319.

Whilfit Paul was in Judea, he made a speech to the people at Jerusalem, already taken notice of, when he freely declared his principles and conduct. He was also brought by Lyfas before the whole Sanhedrim, or Jewish Council. He pleaded before Felix in anfwer to the accusations of Tertullus, and the Jews, who employed him. He preached before Felix and his wife Drusilla, and was several times in the presence of Felix. And before he was sent away to Rome, Festus gave him an opportunity to appear, and plead before himself, and King Agrippa, and Bernice, and the Tribunes, and principal men of Cesarea: when Paul gave that auguft assemblie an account of his doctrine, and of himself from his converion to that time. And it is manifeft, that Paul's discourse was well received. And both he and his doctrine were acquitted from all the charges and accusations of the Jews. For when the companie had withdrawn, they faid among themselves, where certainlly they could fpake with freedom: This man does nothing worthy of death, or of bonds.

Indeed, it must be owned, that Paul was civilly treated by all the Roman Officers, in Judea, Lyfas, Felix, Festus, Julius. They all behaved, as Magiftrates ought to do. They gave their prifoner and his accusers a fair hearing, that they might know the truth of the caufe. Felix was a bad man. Nevertheless, he commanded a centurion to keep Paul, and to let him have liberty, and that he should forbid none of his acquaintance to minifie, or to come to him. ch. xxiv. 23. And he left Paul bound, when he should have releafed him. But it was only out of complaifance to the Jews, of whom he was afraid. And if there was any other defect of juifice toward Paul, in the behaviour of the Roman Officers; it may be fitly imputed to the powerful influence of the Jews, the people of the country: to whom Governours, fent in from abroad, would be obliged to fhow a great regard from political considerations.

In ch. xxvii. and xxviii. 1... 16. is an account of Paul's voyage to Rome, which St. Luke has related very defirifely. As it was near winter, when they set out; they met with bad weather, and were wrecked on the ifland Melita, now called Malta, lying south of Sicilie. There they faid three months. xxviii. 11. and then failed for Italie in a ship of Alexandria. They landed at Putcoli, and fo went for Rome. Paul, and the other prifoners were delivered by the Centurion to the Captain of the Guard.
Guard. How the other prisoners were disposed of, is not particularly related. But Paul was suffered to dwell by himself with a soldier that kept him. ver. 16. And as Paul had appealed to the Emperour, I suppose, that he was soon brought before him, and that the method of his confinement was ordered by the Emperour himself. Of which I may say more hereafter, when we come to the second epistle to Timothie.

Says (b) Lightfoot: "His accusers, that were come from Judea to lay "in their charge against him (for we can hardly suppose otherwise, but "that some such were come:) would be urgent to get their bufinefle "dispatched, that they might be returning to their own home again. "And so would bring him to trial as soon as they could. . . . As he ap- "pealed to Nero himself, so Nero himself heard his caufe. Philip. i. 13.

"2 Tim. iv. 16."

So Lightfoot. And it appears to me very strange, that any fhould think Paul's caufe was not heard at all at Rome, during his two years lay there. And yet it has been the opinion of feveral learned men, particularly of (c) Jacob Cappell, and (d) Dr. Doddridge, whose words I have placed below. And Fr. Spanheim speaks to the like purpose. But his fentiments are rejected by his friend (e) Wisius, as no better than trifling.

Paul came to Rome in the spring of the year, as all will readily think. Some learned men place his arrival there in (f) February, others (g) in April. Here Paul dwelled two whole years in his own hired house. Therefore he was released from his confinement, in the spring, two years after.

I suppose, Paul to have come to Jerusalem at the Pentecost of the year 58, to Rome in the spring of the year 61, and to have been released in the former part of the year 63. This period is therefore about the space of five years.

. . . to the time of his death.

XII. We are now to write the historie of our Apostle from this time to his death. But in this period we have no affiftance from St. Luke, very little from the other books of

(b) As before, p. 322.

(d) "After this Paul continued two whole years at Rome in his own hired "houfe, before he was heard by Cefar, or his deputy, upon his appeal." Upon Acts xxviii. 30. Family-Expositor, Vol. 3. p. 434.

(e) Celeberrimus Spanheimius nofier ad Historiarum Christianarum feculum. . .

hac habet: Dimiufus nempe fuerat Paulus, ea lege, ut in Afta coram accufatoribus "fuis fifteterur, aut Romam turfs fe fifteter, quum ante nulli in ipsum Romam misfi a "Judeis effent. Ea occajione adit Cortium. . . . Sed apparentibus Hierofolyma "Judeis, Romam redire coaxius eft, anno, ut videtur, sequente: ubi conjeftus in "vulnula, ibidemque ultima Pauli certamina, &c. . . . Quam debi nilantur funda-mento, non puto mihi effe oftendendum. Wis. de Vit. Pauli. f. e. xii. num. x. 1.

Ita tandem Paulus, poft tot casus, poft tot rerum discrimina, Romam venit, anno vii. Neronis, mene Februario. Wis. ibid. f. e. xii. n. i. See likewise Tillemont. S. Paul. art. 42.

(g) Bajnag. ann. 60. num. n.
of the New Testament, nor very much from ancient authors, which can be depended upon, as certain.

Whither Paul went, after he had obtained his liberty, is debated. Some think, that (b) he went from Rome to Spain. Others see not sufficient reason for that supposition. Among these are (i) Lenfant and Beaufobre, (k) Bajnagre, and (l) Cellarius, and () Du Pin.

That Paul went into Spain, has been argued from an expression of Clement in his epistle to the Corinthians, who there says of Paul "that (m) "having taught the whole world righteousness, and having come to "the borders of the west, and having suffered martyrdom, he went to "the holy place" Which some have rendered the utmost bounds of the west, and argue, that (n) hereby is meant Spain. I rather think, that Clement only meant Italy, or Rome, where Clement was, and where Paul suffered. From a note of Le Clerc upon the place we learn, that (o) Bp. Fell so understood Clement. The word coming also leads to this sense. If Clement only had thought of Spain, or Britain, or any other places beyond that, in which himself was, he would not have said καλ ἄνωθεν, and having come, but προσφάτων, or some other equivalent word, and having gone to the bounds of the west. Lenfant and Beaufobre in their general preface to St. Paul's epistles say, (p) the bounds of the west signify nothing but the west. It is an expression, they say, borrowed from the Scriptures, in which the borders of a country denote the country itself. In like manner by those words Clement intended Italy.

However,

(b) Adveniente Timotheo, ex Italia profectus est in Hispaniam, quo iturum se dixerat in epistolâ ad Romanos. Pearson, ib. p. 20.

(i) Quelques anciens peres ont dit, que saint Paul ayant été mis en liberté, alla faire le voyage d'Espagne, dont il ait formé le defsein cinq ou six ans auparavant. Rom. xv. 24. Mais outre que ces temoignages sont du quatriéme ou du cinquiéme siecle, il femble que ces peres n'ont parlé de ce voyage, que sur ce qui S. Paul en a dit dans l'épître aux Romains. C'est au moins tout ce que S. Jerome allege... Aussi les épîtres, que S. Paul écrivit durant sa captivité, temoignent, qu'il ne pensoit qu'à retourner en Gréce et en Asie, des qu'il feroit delivré. Pouvoit il avoir dans l'esprit un voyage en Espagne, lorsqu'il mantoit à Philemon, de lui preparer un logement? Laïfant donc une tradition, au moins fort incertaine, &c. Leuf. et Beauf. Pref. generale sur les epîtres de S. Paul. §. liv. p. 33.

(k) Ann. 46. num. xi/oi. . . L.

(l) Eruditis placet, et admodum est probabile, Paulum prima captivitate, quam Lucas scriptit, liberatum in Graeciam et Asia revertisse, adeoque bis Romæ suiffic: in Hispianam autem penetrassisse, credibile non est. Chr. Cellar. de Imitribus S. Pauli Apolcoli. §. xxviii.

(m) δικαιωσιν διδάξας ὅλω τὸν κόσμον, κ' ἣπὶ τὸ τίμημα τῆς δύσεως ἀλθείαν, κ', μαρτυρίᾳ ἦπι τῶν ἡγεμόνων... κ. λ. Clem. cap. ν.

(n) Et certe eam regionem vidit, quam Clemens Romanus ejus itinera commemorans appellat τὸ τίμημα τῆς δύσεως. Pearson. ibid.

(o) Romæ, hoc eft in Hesperia, sive Italia. Fell.

(p) Num. liv. p. 33.
However, another ground of this opinion is what St. Paul himself says. Rom. xv. 24. Whenever I take my journey into Spain, I will come to you. For I trust to see you in my journey, and to be brought on my way thitherward by you, if first I be somewhat filled with your company. But Paul's measures had been broken by his imprisonment at Jerusalem, and the consequences of it. And it was now at least five years, since writing the epistle to the Romans. It is more likely that (q) when Paul left Rome, he went into the East, and Greece. For in his letters, writ near the end of his confinement there, he expresseth hopes of so doing. Philip. ii. 23. 24. speaking of Timotheus, he says: Him therefore I hope to send presently, so soon as I shall see, how it will go with me. But I trust in the Lord, that I also my self shall come shortly. Compare i. 20. 25. And he says to Philemon, an inhabitant of Colosse. ver. 22. But withall prepare me also a lodging. For I trust, that through your prayers, I shall be given unto you. And in the epistle to the Hebrews, probably, writ by Paul to the Jews of Judea, and Jerusalem, he says xiii. 18. 19. Pray for us. And I beseech you the rather to do this, that I may be restored to you the sooner. And lower, ver. 23. Know ye, that our brother Timotheus is set at liberty. With whom, if he come shortly, I will see you. Moreover, it is not impossible, but that Paul may have taken care of Spain by sending thither some of his fellow-labourers, whilst he was prisoner at Rome.

As I suppose the epistle to the Hebrews to have been writ after that to Philemon, I am apt to think, that Paul came from Rome to Jerusalem, as soon, and as directly, as he could. But he made there a short stay only. From Judea I think it likely that he went to Ephesus, and there left Timotheus: whom about two years before he had sent for to come to him from Ephesus to Rome. From Ephesus Paul might go to Laodicea and Colosse. And, possibly, he returned to Rome by Troas, Philippi, and Corinth.

Some have hesitated to allow, that Paul ever came again into this country, because he says, Acts xx. 25 And now, behold, I know, that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more. But Lewis Cappell (r) has well removed that difficulty. I therefore fore have placed below a part of his observations. And says Wall (s) upon the place: “Eγὼ δέ, ΙΑΔων, ινα ίαν, when spock of things future, does “not, (as it is used by St. Paul,) always signify a certain knowledge, “or a prophetic certainty: but often means only thus much: I take it for “granted: I am fully persuaded: I foresee it highly probable: I have no “other expectation. And the like.” See also what there follows.

(r) Sed responderi potest, Paulum non semel ex humana coniectura, atque ex humano spiritu, confilio, et proposito, multa ejusmodi cogitation, putuisse, propofuisse, ac dissidue. Quæ tamen poffea, Deo igitur dispontene, aliter ceciderunt. Itaque mirum videri non debet, si cum Spiritus Paulum oppidatim moneret vincula et afflictiones graves manere cum jerofoylimis, fentiretque se Spiritu ligatum, ut eo nihilominus proficisceretur, nec non quam essent illic fubi eventura, desperaverit de redivo suo ad eos, quos posset reliquerebat, licet Deo igitur dispontene, res aliquot post annis ceciderit aliter, quam ipsis tum credebat. Non est itaque tam validum adversus nos argumentum illud, ut

They who think that Paul did come again into this country, but nevertheless was not at Ephesus, seem not to attend to St. Paul’s expressions, who does not say to the elders of Ephesus: I know, that you will see me no more. But his words are these: And now, behold, I know, that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more. The apostle then thought, that he should never more come into those parts. Consequently, he might as well come to Ephesus, as to Colosse: which he probably did, and certainly hoped, and intended to do. See Philem. ver. 22.

Beseide Cappellus, and Wall, already alledged, I might refer to others, who hesitate not at all to allow, that Paul came again into this country, particularly Le Clerc, and Lenfant and Beauzobre, upon Acts xx. 25. and (t) Pearson. Not now to mention any more.

I said just now, that, probably, Paul went to Jerusalem, as soon as he could, after he was set at liberty. And say Lenfant and Beauzobre in their (u) general preface to St. Paul’s epistles: “We have seen, that the “apostle was accustomed to go from time to time to Jerusalem, and to “take the opportunity of solemn festivals. So long as the temple sub- “fitted, the Jewish Christians did not neglect the ordinances of the law. “St. Paul himself did not neglect them, that he might give no offense “to the Jews.” I readily adhent to what they say about the apostle’s going to Jerusalem. I could almost think, that Paul was desirous to go thither, to praise God in his temple for the favourable circumstances of his imprisonment at Rome, and for his deliverance from it. Paul’s cave at Rome very much resembled what had happened to him at Corinth. After (c) which, we find, he had a vow, and went from Corinth to Ephesus, and hastened to Jerusalem. Acts xviii. 9...22. In like manner, I imagine, that now Paul went to Jerusalem, as soon as he could. But he made no long stay there. It had not been his custom so to do, since his conversion.

Having been at Jerusalem, I suppose, as before said, that he visited divers churches, which had been planted by him, and then returned to Rome. St. Paul, though a prisoner, had lived very comfortably at Rome. And he there had great suceede in his services for the gospel. It seems to me, that he now considered that city, as the most proper place for him to reside in the remaining part of his life. It was the most conspicuous place in all the world, and the place of the greatest resort from all parts. There he hoped to be more useful, than in any other place.

But things do not always fall out exactly according to human expectations. For, as I suppose, the apostle had not been long returned to Rome, before he was called out to reign his life for the name of Christ.

In the year of Christ 64, as we learn from (x) Suetonius, and (y) Tacitus, Heathen historians, as well as from others, was a dreadful fire at Rome, which continued six or seven days. It was thought by many people, that the city had been set on fire by the Emperor's orders. But soon after the Christians were most cruelly treated by him, as if they had been the authors of the conflagration. So says Tacitus. The fire is said to have begun on the (z) the 19. of July. And the persecution of the Christians began, as is supposed by some, in (a) November following, by others (b) in August. Which to me seems not so likely.

It is the opinion of (c) Pagi, and (d) Bajnaghe, that Peter and Paul suffered martyrdom in the year of +4 Christ 65. They argue in this manner. Orosius (e) having given an account of Nero's persecution of the Christians, and of the death of the two Apostles in it, adds, that it was followed by a pestilence in the city, and other disasters. And Tacitus (f) speaking

(y) Sed non ope humana, non largitionibus Principis, aut Deum placamentis, dedecbat infamia, quin juftum incendium crederetur. Ergo abolendo rumorì Nero fubdidit reos, et quasitissimis peninis aecit, quos per flagitia invisos, vulgus Christianos appellabat. Igitur primo correpti qui fabeabantur deinde indicio eorum multitudo ingens, hauor perinde in criminincendii, quam odio humani generis convicti, &c. Tacit. Ann. 15. cap. 44.

(a) ... cujuis initium in medium mensem Novembrem A. 64. cadit. Moslem. de Reb. Christian. fic. 1. cap. 34.

(b) Vid. Toinard. ad lib. de Mort. Persecut. cap. ii.

(c) Vid. Pagi ann. 64, 65, 67.

(d) Inchoatam superiorem anno perfeccionem currentem continuavit Neronis furor, qui Petri Paulique sanguine reperkus eft. Bajn. ann. 65. n. ix.

†4 That also was the opinion of Du Pin, not now to mention any others. Quoiqu'il en soit, il est certain, qu'êtant revenu à Rome avec saint Pierre, il y eût la tête tranchée dans le temps de la persecution de Neron, et probablement la 65 année de Jesus Christ, comme nous l'avons fait voir en un autre endroit. Du Pin. Diff. Prel. 1. 2. eb. 2. §. viiiii.

(e) Nam primus Romae Christianos suppliciis et mortibus adfectit, ac per omnes provincias pari perfeccione excruciaris imperavit: ipfumque nomen exftirpare conatus, beatissimos Apostolos, Petrum cruce, Paulum gladio occidit. Mox acervatim miferam civitatem abortae undeque clades. Nam subf-quentes autunmo tanta urbi peftilentia incubuit, ut triginta millia funerum in rationem Libitiae venirent. Oros. l. 7. c. 7.

(f) Tacitus, lib. 16. cap. 13. loquens de iis quæ Nerva et Vestino Cof..
gella, sic narrationem suam concludit: Tot facinoribus fadum annum etiam Dii speaking of affairs, when Nerva and Vespasianus were Consuls, which was the year of Christ 65. mentions a pestilence in the city, violent storms in some parts of Italy, and other calamities. So Pag. And Balsane (g) argues in the like manner from that passage of Orosius.

The last mentioned learned chronologer likewise observes, that (b) Sulpicius Severus having given an account of the fire at Rome, and Nero's persecution of the Christians, and of the martyrdoms of Peter and Paul therein, adds: "Whilst these things are doing at Rome, the Jews being "uneafe under the oppressions of their Governor Gellius Florus, begin "to rebel." Upon which Balsane observes: the (i) Jewish war began in May 66. Therefore the martyrdoms of the Apostles happened in the year before, that is, 65. To which, perhaps, might be added, that (k) Suetonius, having spoken of the fire, the pestilence, and those calamities, which are mentioned by Tacitus, and Orosius, takes notice, that at the fame time Syria was difficultly kept from breaking out into a rebellion: intending, probably, the unafeines of the Jewish people in 65. and 66.

Balsane observes also, that (l) Epiphanius placteth the death of Peter and Paul in the 12. year of Nero: part (m) of which, as he says, fell in the year 65.

I am

Dum hæc Romæ geruntur, Judæi, praefidis sui Gelfii Flori injurias non ferentes, rebellabo coeperunt. ib. cap. 42.

(l) . . . meta τον τυ άγνε πτερνς κα τάυλε τελευν την ιτη τυ δεικατω ετε νεκρων χυσομπον. Haer. 27. num. vii.

I am the more inclined to this date, because we do not find in the epistles of the New Testament any notice taken of the persecution of the Christians at Rome, or of the devastations in Judea, after the commencement of the war. If Peter and Paul had been in any of the provinces, and had survived the terrible persecution at Rome in 64. and 65. we should have had some epistle, or epistles of theirs, concerning it, to the Romans, or to the Christians of some other place.

I do not presume to assign positively the year of the martyrdom of these two Apostles. I have mentioned the specious and probable arguments of two very eminent chronologers, in favour of the year 65. Nor do I think the Apostles survived that year. But I cannot say, whether their martyrdoms happened in the year 64. or 65. Pagi says, that (n) Peter and Paul were taken up and imprisoned in 64. and put to death in the year 65. But I know nothing of the imprisonment of the Apostles at this time. There may be in late and fabulous authors large and particular accounts of their imprisonment, just before their martyrdoms. But there is little or no notice taken of it by the most ancient writers. If Peter and Paul were come to Rome before the City was set on fire, and before the persecution of the Christians began, (which is not improbable,) they might be taken up, and soon put to death, before the end of the year 64.

CHAP. XII.

ST. PAUL'S EPISTLES.

I. The Introduction. II. The two Epistles to the Thessaloniens. III. The Epistle to the Galatians. IV. The first Epistle to the Corinthians. V. The first Epistle to Timothie. VI. The Epistle to Titus. VII. The second Epistle to the Corinthians. VIII. The Epistle to the Romans. IX. The Epistle to the Ephesians. X. The second Epistle to Timothie. XI. The Epistle to the Philippians. XII. The Epistle to the Colossians. XIII. The Epistle to Philemon. XIV. The Epistle to the Hebrews.

SECT. I.

The Introduction.

SHALL now endeavor to settle the time of St. Paul's Epistles of which Origen said: "If (a) any man reads them with attention, I am persuaded, he will admire the writer's abilities in expressing great things in vulgar language: or, if he does not admire them, himself will appear ridiculous."

It

(n) Præterquam quod, cum peræcution adversus Christianos anno lxiv. decreta fuerit, ac inæquenti continuata, non dubium, quin priori anno Petrus et Paulus in carcerem conægli sint, ac posteriori necati. Ann. 67. num. iii.

(a) See Vol. iii. p. 247.
It cannot but afford satisfaction, to know the order of time, in which they were writ. It will not only be attended with pleasure, but will also contribute to the right understanding of them. For wrong dates have been the occasion of many mistakes. Baronius observes, that some have imagined the shipwreck at Melita, related in Acts xxvii. to be one of the three, mentioned by St. Paul 2 Cor. xii. 25. not considering, that the second epistle to the Corinthians had been writ several years before.

I have put the passage (b) in the margin, as quoted by Lewis Cappell.

The Author of the Commentarie upon thirteen of St. Paul’s epistles, in the fourth century, made (c) the same mistake, and several others of a like kind, in explaining the paragraph of 2 Cor. xii. 25. 26.

Of St. Paul’s fourteen epistles thirteen have been generally received by Catholic Christians in all times. I therefore need not now allege the testimonies of ancient Christian writers, which may be seen in the preceding volumes of this work. But as the epistle to the Hebrews has been sometimes doubted of, I shall observe the evidences of it’s genuineness. With regard to the others, I shall do little more than shew the time, when they were writ. And I would take it for granted, that they who are disposed to examine the arguments in this chapter, have first read the historie of St. Paul, in the preceding Chapter. Which will be of great use, and prevent the trouble of numerous references.

S E C T. II.

The two Epistles to the Thessalonians.

the epistles themselves, and from the history of St. Paul's travels in the book of the Acts. Some have thought, that (d) the first at least, if not also the second, was writ at Athens. But I suppose it to be now generally allowed, that (e) both these epistles were writ at Corinth. Whereby we are also assured of their time. For it was formerly shewn to be probable, that (f) St. Paul came to Corinth before the end of the year 51. and staid there till the beginning of the year 53.

In the Synopis ascribed to Athanafius the (g) first epistle to the Thes- salonians is said to have been writ at Athens, and (h) the second, very abfurdy, at Rome.

Theodoret, as (i) before quoted, saw these to be the two first written epistles of the Apostle. The (k) first he supposed to have been writ at Athens, and the second not long after, either at Athens, or Corinth. For he does not seem to say distinctly, at which of these two cities the second was writ. Nevertheless I suppose it may be shewn, that they were both writ at Corinth. St. Paul came from Thes- salonica to Berea. Which place he left in haste, because of the violence of the Jews, who came thither from Thessalonica, and stirred up the peo- ple. Acts xvii. 10. . . . 13. And then, immediately, says St. Luke, the brethren sent away Paul, to go as it were to the sea. But Silas and Timo- thie abode there still. And they that conducted Paul, brought him unto Athens. And receiving a commandment unto Silas and Timothie to come to him with all speed, they departed. ver. 14. 15. Accordingly, as we may suppose, Silas and Timothie did soon come to him. And Paul, having great con- cern for the Thessalonians, whilst he was at Athens, sent Timothie to them. As he says, 1 Thess. iii. 1. 2. Wherefore, when we could no longer forbear, we thought it good to be left at Athens alone. And sent Timothie, our brother and minister of God, and our fellow-laborer in the gospel of Christ, to es- tablish you, and comfort you, concerning your faith. From Athens Paul went to Corinth, where he staid a year and six months. There Timothie came back to him from Thessalonica. Comp. Acts xviii. 5. and 1 Thess. iii. 6. And Silas, or Silvanus, and Timothie are joined with the Apostle in the inscription of the epistle.

Near the end of this epistle, ch. v. 27. are these remarkable words: I charge, or adjure, you by the Lord, ἐξ ἡμῶν ὑπὲρ τοῦ κυρίου, that this epistle be read unto all the holy brethren. It is likely, that from the beginning all Christian assemblies had readings of the scriptures of the Old Testament. Paul, knowing the plentitude of the apostolical commisision, now demands the same respect to be paid to his writings, with those of the ancient Prophets. This is a direction, fit to be inferred in the first epistle writ by him. And the manner, in which it is given, suggests an argument, that this was his first apostolical epistle.

The
The second epistle to the Theßallonians appears to have been writ soon after the first, and at the same place. And Silvanus and Timothie are joined together with the Apostle in the inscription of this epistle, as well as of the former.

These two epistles therefore I suppose to have been writ at Corinth, in the year of Christ 52. Which is also the opinion of (l) Mill, and others. But by whom these epistles were carried to the Theßallonians, we do not perceive.

Some objections have been made against the above mentioned date of these two epistles. But the point is so clear, that I do not think it worth the while to prolong this argument in examining them. They who are curious, may see those objections well answered by Dr. Benfon, in the second edition of (*) his History of the first planting the Christian Religion.

SECT. III.

The Epistle to the Galatians.

HE epistle to the Galatians is inscribed after this manner: Paul, an Apostle, . . . and all the brethren which A.D. 53, are with me, unto the churches of Galatia. Upon which Jerome observes: "In (m) other epistles Sothene and Silvanus, and sometimes also Timothie, are mentioned at the beginning: but in this, for adding the greater weight and authority, are put all the brethren: who, perhaps too, were believers of the circumcision, and not despised by the Galatians. And the consent of many is of great use to satisfy people. To the churches of Galatia. Here also, as he proceeds, it is to be observed, that in this place only Paul writes in general, not to the church of one city only, but to the churches of a whole province: and that he calls them churches, whom afterwards he reproves, as corrupted with error. Whence we learn, that a church may be understood in a two-fold manner: both of that which has no spot, or wrinkle, and is indeed the body of Christ: and of that, which is assembled in the name of Christ, without compleat and perfect virtues.*

Tertullian

(l) Prolegom. num. 4 . . . 7.

(*) Vol. 2. p. 119 . . . 122.

Tertullian (n) seems to have thought this one of St. Paul’s first written epistles: as has been observed by Grotius, (o) who transcribed the passage, though long, into his preface to the epistle to the Galatians. Fabricius (p) likewise has taken notice of it.

Theodoret (q) the (r) Synopsis of Sacred Scripture, ascribed to Athanasius, and (s) the Author of the Argument in Oecumenius, reckon this among the epistles writ at Rome, and consequently a late epistle. But I see no ground for that opinion, there not being in the epistle any notice taken of an imprisonment at the time of writing it.

However Lightfoot (t) was also of the same opinion. He supposeth this to have been the first epistle writ by St. Paul, after his arrival at Rome. He says, it was carried by Crescens, arguing from 2 Tim. iv. 10. Which epistle to Timothy he thinks was writ at Rome soon afterwards.

Chrysostom (u) says, this (x) epistle was writ before that to the Romans. And in like manner (y) Theophylact, probably, borrowing from him.

Divers learned moderns have thought, that this epistle was writ at Ephesus, after Paul’s arrival there from his journey, related in Acts xviii. 23. and xix. 1. consequently, after that the Apostle had been a second time in Galatia. To this purpose (z) Lewis Cappell, (a) Witius, and

(n) ... ab illo certe Paulo, qui adhuc in gratia rudis, tremidis denique, ne in vacuum cucurrisset, aut curreret, tunc primum cum antecessoribus Apostolis conferebatur. Igitur, si ferventer, ut adhuc neophytus, adverfus Judaifnum aliquid in confertatione reprehendendum exifitavit, postfum folicit convifitum, poftmodum et ipse usf omnibus omnia futurus, ut omnes lucaretur, Judaicus quaft Judaeus, et eis qui sub lege, tanquam sub legge: tu illam folius confervationis, placitum poftea acclamatoru suo, reprehensionem, suspextam vis haberi, etiam de praedicationis erga Deum praevaricatione. Tertull. adv. Marc. i. i. cap. 20. p. 445.

(o) Tertullianus in primo adverfus Marcionem, hanc epiftolam inter primas Pauli usfে exifitimat. &c. Grot. Pr. in ep. ad Gal.

(p) Scripfitiae hanc epiftolam adhuc neophitum, et in gratia rudem, adeoque inter primas non dubitat affirmare Tertullianus. ... Fabr. Bib. Gr. l. 4. cap. u. Tom. 3. p. 155.

(t) Vol. i. p. 323. (u) See of this work, Vol. x. p. 332.

(a) Epiftola ad Galatas temporis sui hos charâteres habet. Primum, quod non dix poft Pauli ab iis difceflum scripta esse videatur. Sic enim ipse cap. i. 6. ... Affuerat autem iis Paulus paullo antequam proficisceretur Ephesum. Act. xviii. 23. coll. cum cap. xix. 1. Unde probabiliter saltem infertur Epefì and (b) Wall. This likewise seems to have been the opinion of (c) Pearson. For he placeth this epistle in the year 57. after the first to the Corinthians, and before Paul left Ephesus. But I do not discern his reasons for so doing.

Grotius (d) thought it difficult to assign the time, when this epistle was writ: but conjectures, that it was writ about the same time with that to the Romans.

Fabricius says, "the (e) design of the epistle is to dissuade the Galatians from putting their neck under the yoke of the Mosaic law. And, "says he, to the like purpose the Apostle writes to the Romans. But "them he had never seen, and he treats them with respectful, and en- "large manner the doctrine of the gospel with greater probability. To the "Galatians he writes more briefly, and as their master, and not without "some severity in his reprehenisons. He adds, that he is inclined to "their opinion, who suppose this epistle to have been writ not long after "that to the Romans, and in the way to Jerusalem, in the year of "Christ 58."

Mill being a man of great judgment in these things, and what he says appearing at first sight plausible, I shall transcribe it below. He thinks, that (f) this epistle was not writ, until after that to the Romans, probably,

(b) "About this time, A. D. 55. when Paul had been at Ephesus a little while, he is supposed to have writ his epistle to the Galatians." Wall's Notes upon the N. T. p. 164.

(d) Tempus, quo scripta est hæc ad Gallogræcos epistolam, sicut designare indicare non possum, ita videre mihi videor, non longe abiuiffe ab eo tempore, quo ad Romanos scripta est epistola. Gr. Pr. in ep. ad Galat.

(f) Paulo posse diutissim hanc, quæ Romanis scripta ess, scripsit Paulus epistolam ad Galatas, ut appareat ex cap. ii. 10. δια τις τοιαύτα ἐν τῷ άληθίνῳ. His enim verbis aperte indicat Apollinare, epistolam hanc posse minifterium, seu studium, quod eleemosynis pro ecclesia Hierofolymitana colligendis impendat, scripsisse, dum norito utitur, τοιαύτα. In itinere itaque versus Hierofolymam versatus D. Paulus alipubi hanc epistolam exaraffid, et quidem Troade fortassì, ubi septem dies moratus est: postquam in Asia veniens comperìsit Galatas ad alium evangelium τω τροπεισις, translationem fuisse. Audita nempe, jam ut videtur ab appullu ejus in Asia, ita diu segeti, arrepto calamo, propria manu, contra quam factum in alia epi-stolis,

bably, at Troas, or some other place in Asia, as Paul was going to Jerusalem. And he thinks, that Paul refers to the collections lately made in Macedonia and Greece. Gal. ii. 10. And the Apostle writes not only in his own name, but also in the name of all the brethren, mentioned Acts xx. 4. who were with him at Troas, and accompanied him to Jerusalem. Moreover, this epistle was writ by the Apostle with his own hand, and the more easily, and readily, though in a journey, because he had just before treated the same argument in his epistle to the Romans. This epistle therefore is placed by Mill at the year 58.

Upon all which I beg leave to remark, as follows. First, that those words, all the brethren which are with me, need not to be understood of those who were with Paul at Troas, and were setting out with him for Jerusalem. Thereby may be intended the brethren of some other place, where Paul was. Secondly, the Apostle Paul was able at any time to represent the doctrine of the gospel to any churches, suitably to their particular case and circumstance: whether he had just before treated of it in an epistle, or not. So that the agreement between the epistles to the Romans and the Galatians is no proof, that they were written very soon one after another. Thirdly, when Paul says, ch. ii. 10. the same which I also was forward to do: he cannot intend the collections made in Macedonia and Greece, with which he was going to Jerusalem. If that had been his meaning, he would have expressed himself more particularly, like to what he says to the Romans. ch. xv. 25...27. What he says here, he might have said, when at Ephesus, before he set out for Macedonia, and indeed at any time, and in any place. For he had been always mindful of the poor in Judea. I apprehend, that the Apostle's words are to be interpreted in this manner. The same, which I also had endeavored to do, or had been careful to perform: referring to his conduct, even before that proposal of the three Apoatles at Jerusalem: and intending, probably, in particular, the contributions brought by himself and Barnabas from Antioch to Jerusalem, some while before, as related Acts xi. 27. Which contributions, as may be well supposed, had been promoted by our Apostle's exhortations. Fourthly, St. Paul says to the Galatians in this epistle. ch. i. 6. I marvel, that ye are so soon removed from him that called you unto the grace of Christ, unto another gospel. Those expressions cannot possibly suit the date assigned by Mill, that is, after the Paslovery of the year 58. Which must have been above four years after even Paul's second journey in the country of Galatia.

Another opinion has been proposed by the ingenious and thoughtful Author (g) of Miscellanea Sacra, and embraced by (b) Dr. Benson: that the Epistles, (except that to the Philemon) totam ilium Scriptum epistolam, a crem et objurgatoriam, nomine suo, omniumque, qui cum ipso erant fratrum jam Troade, Sophia, Aristarchi, Secundi, Gaii, Tychici, Trophimi, Titii, Silae, aliorum. Scriptum autem eo celerius, et feffinantius, quod idem argumentum in hac epistolā prosequetur, quod tractaverat paullo ante in epistolā ad Romanos, cujus fere fenfus in hanc transfundit... Scripta est flatim, ut dixi, potest epistolam ad Romanos, anno ære vulgaris lvi. Proleg. num. 30. 31.

(g) See there the Abstract of the Scripture History of the Apostles. p. 31. and the Postscript to the Preface p. 56...58.
the epistle to the Galatians was writ at Corinth, when the Apostle was first there, and made a long stay of a year and six months. Whilst Paul was there, he received tidings of the instability of his converts in Galatia, with which he was much affected. Whereupon he wrote this epistle, and sent it by one of his assistants. At that season he might well say at the beginning of his address to them: I marvel, that ye are so soon removed from him that called you unto the grace of Christ. Nor is there in the epistle any hint of his having been with them more than once. The epistle therefore was writ at Corinth, or perhaps, at Ephesus: when Paul was first there, in his way to Jerusalem, as mentioned Acts xviii. 19...21.

This opinion is propounded by the above mentioned Author, as his own. And I make no doubt, that it was so, and the fruit of his own inquiries and observations. Nevertheless it is not quite new. Say Lensfant and Beaufobre in their general preface to St. Paul’s Epistles: “We (i) find not in the epistle to the Galatians any mark, that can enable us to determine with certainty, at what time, or in what place, it was writ. “It is dated at Rome in some printed copies, and manuscripts. But there is nothing in the epistle itself, to confirm that date. Paul does not here make any mention of his bonds, as he does in all his epistles. “writ at Rome. He says indeed vi. 17. that he bears in his body the marks of the Lord Jesus. But he had often suffered, before he came to Rome. There are therefore (k) some learned chronologers, who place the epistle to the Galatians immediately after the two epistles to the Thessalonians. They think, it was written between the third and fourth journey of Paul to Jerusalem, and between his first and second journey into Galatia. This opinion appears to me very probable. For since the Apostle says, he wonders, that they were so soon turned unto another gospel, this epistle must have been written a short time, after he had preached in Galatia. Nor can we discern in the epistle any notice of the second journey, which St. Paul made into this country. For this reason it is thought, that the epistle to the Galatians was writ at Corinth, where the Apostle made a long stay, or else, in some city of Asia, particularly, Ephesus, where he stayed some days in his way to Jerusalem. Acts xviii. 19...21. Therefore, in all probability, the epistle to the Galatians was writ from Corinth, or from Ephesus, in the year 52. or 53.”

Nothing could be said more properly. And I think, this date may be farther confirmed by some other considerations. Paul says to the Corinthians. xvi. 1. Now concerning the collection for the saints, as I have given orders to the churches of Galatia, so do ye. Which shews, that at the writing of that epistle to the Corinthians, in 56. he had a good opinion of his converts in Galatia, and that he had no doubt of their respect to his

(i) §. xliii. p. 24. ... 26.
(k) Here, in the margin, are put the names of Usher and L. Cappell, without any references. Nor have I found the places, where this opinion is maintained by them.

Vol. II.
his directions. Which, probably, had been sent to them from Ephesus, during his long abode there, by some one or other of his afflictants. This good temper of the Galatians may be supposed owing to the letter sent to them some time before, and to his second visit to them, related Acts xviii. 23.

And now we shall be better able to account from what appears very remarkable. When Paul left Corinth, after his long stay there, he went to Jerusalem, having a vow. In his way he came to Ephesus. Acts xviii. 19. . . 21. And when they desired him to tarry longer with them, he consented not. But bid them farewell, saying: I must by all means keep this feast that cometh at Jerusalem. But I will return again unto you, if God will. When we read this, we might be apt to think, that Paul should return back to Ephesus, and return thither presently after he had been at Jerusalem. But instead of so doing, after he had been at Jerusalem, he went down to Antioch. And after he had spent some time there, he departed, and went over all the country of Galatia, and Phrygia, in order, strengthening the disciples. ver. 22. 23. We now seem to see the reason of this course. At Corinth he heard of the defection of many in Galatia. Whereupon he sent away a sharp letter to them. But considering the nature of the cafe, he judged it best to take the first opportunity to go to Galatia, and support the instructions of his letter. And both together had a very good effect. Gal. iv. 19. 20. My little children, of whom I travel in birth again . . . I desire to be present with you, and to change my voice. For I stand in doubt of you: or, I am perplexed for you. Now, then, we see the reason of the Apostle's not coming directly from Jerusalem to Ephesus. However, he was not unmindful of his promise, and came thither, after he had been in Galatia.

Upon the whole, the epistle to the Galatians is an early epistle. And, as seems to me most probable, was writ at Corinth, near the end of the year 52. or at the very beginning of the year 53. before St. Paul set out to go to Jerusalem by the way of Ephesus. But if any should rather think, that it was writ at Ephesus, during the Apostle's short stay there, in the way from Corinth to Jerusalem, that will make but very little difference. And still, according to our computation, this epistle was writ at the beginning of the year 53.

Ch. vi. 11. Ye (l) see how large a letter I have written unto you with my own hand.

Hereby some understand the Apostle to say, that this, with what follows to the end of the epistle, was writ with his own hand. So (m) Jerome, and (n) Grotius. Others understand St. Paul to speak of the whole epistle.

(l) Παντικεω ου ρεαμαση οιραβα τη εμε. (m) Hi qui circumcidi Galatas volebant, diffimina verant, alia Paulum facere, alia prædicare. . . Hanc opinionem quia non poterat Paulus apud omnes præfens ipse subvertere . . . feipsum per literas representat. Et ne aliqua supputatiæ epistolæ suipicio nacseretur, ab hoc ipso uifque ad finem manu fua ipse percriftit, otfendens superiora ab alio exarata. Hieron. in ep. ad Gal. T. 4. p. 314. (n) In aliarum epistolæm fign quædam fribebat fua manu. 1 Cor. xvi. 21. 2 Theff. iii. 17. et Col. iv. 18. cetera manu aliena, ut videre eft Rom. xvi. 22.
epistle. So thought (o) Chrysostom, and (p) Theophylact, and (q) Theodoret, and (r) the Author of the Commentarie upon thirteen of St. Paul's Epistles. Which interpretation is approved by (s) Wolfius.

... How long a letter I have written unto you. Which some interpret after this manner: in what large letters I have written unto you, intending the deformity, or inelegance of the character. Which sense is also found in (t) divers ancient authors.

But it is not approved of either by (u) Beza, or (x) Wolfius. They say, that this is as long as any of St. Paul's epistles, excepting the epistle to the Romans, the two epistles to the Corinthians, and that to the Hebrews.

(o) Entâvâ âiiv âiâo âนντεται, αλλ' ὁτι αυτὸς ἡγαφη την ἱπτιστλήν ἀπασάν, ὀ πολλίς γρηγοριστός τοιανίν ἃ, κ. λ. Chr. in loc. T. x. p. 727. B.

(p) In loc. T. 2. p. 492.

(q) Πάσαν, ὡς βοήσω, τὴν την ἱπτιστλήν αυτὸς ἡγαφή. Theod. in loc.

(r) Acutioratatem dat epistolae tuae... Ubi enim holographa manus est, faßnum clíci non poteft. In loc. ap. Ambros. in App. p. 230.

(i) Idem vero, [Grotius,] quanvis praevente Hieronymo, errat, quando hâc verba non ad totam hanc epistolam, sed ad ea tantum, quae inde usque ad finem leguntur vult referri. Reclusius Chrysostomus... Addit idem causam, cur totam epistolam sua manu exararit, ut nempe omnis vobias usurpicio ἱσογαφή hoc precideretur iis, qui dicere aliquion poterant, nonnulla illi insera, quae Apostoli sententiae non respondenter. Wolf. in loc.

(t) Τὸ δὲ τιτλικὸς, ἣς δοκεῖ η τὸ μίγεθος, ἀλλὰ τὰς ἀμορφίαν τῶν γραμμάτων ἵματον χείριν, μονογραφία λέγων ὑπὸ δος ἱμάτον ἔχουσιν, ὡς ἐναχάσθην δὲ ἤματο τὰ ἵματα, ὡς τοὺς συνοφράντων ἑιμάραζαι τὸ τύμφα. Chr. ubi supr. p. 727. C.

Τὸ δὲ τιτλικὸς γράμματα, τίνες, μὲν μεγάλοις, τίνες δὲ ἱμάτων ἑμπύκνωσαν. Ε- γὼ γὰρ φθονίν, ἡγαφή την ἱπτιστλήν, κατοι μὴ γράφων εἰς κάλλος. Theod. in loc.

(u) Quam longis, τιτλικοῖς. Ad verbum quantis. Vulgata qualibus. In quo explicando miror cur se tantopere torquente interpretet, dum alii—ad sublimitatem sententiarum referunt, ut Hilarius, alii ad ipfa literarum elementa, quae grandifieula fuerint, ... alii ad deformitatem caractierum, quafi Paulus imperitus fuerit pingendarum literarum, ut exponit Theophylactus, Chrysostoumum fecutus. ... Sunt autem fane longiores epistolae Romanis et Corinthiis inscriptae, sed aliena manu exaratae. Beza. ad loc.

(x) Exe quantis, i. e. quam multiis litteris vobis scripsi. Ita recte Grotius, addens, adjectiva magnitudinis pro adjectivis, ad numerum pertinentibus, poni solere, quemadmodum et Graecum τόσοι utroque sensu usurpatum... Longius autem a vero aberrat, qui τὸ τιτλικὸς ad designandum caractierum, quibus usus fit, magnitudinem, spectare putant, ut τιτλικά γράμματα sint literae majusculae... Addit, [Le Cene] Apostolium hanc epistolam non possidere appellare τιτλικοῖς respectu longitudinis, cum longiores scripserit alias. Imo vero scriptionem non tam multorum verborum, quam quod eam totam suâ manu scripserat, qui alias ceteris paucas quaedam subscrybere consueverit, longam appellat. Praeterea hæc ad Galatas, si tres priores, et unam ad Ἡβραοῖς exceperis, reliquas omnes longitudinum excidit. Wolf. in loc.
That is, (z) Beza's translation. Le Clerc (a) in his French Testament, and (b) Beaufobre translate in the like manner.

In Beaufobre's Remarks upon the New Testament, published after his death, is this note upon the text, we are considering: "How (c) large a letter, πανίκος γράμμασι. Some, says Theodore, explain this of the largeness of the letters, others, that the letter was ill writ: as if the Apostle had said: I have writ to you with my own hand, though I do not write well. St. Jerome, in his Commentarie upon this place, says, he had heard somewhat of the like kind from some body. But he does not seem to approve of it." I transcribe at length (d) below the passage, referred to. But Jerome, having mentioned that observation of some learned man of his time, does himself seem to trifle, when he adds, "That St. Paul's letter to the Galatians, was great for the sense. And so were all his letters, though short." However, this interpretation

(y) Ημώις ἐπὶ γράμματα στείλα τὸ ἰδείματα ἀπὸ τῆς ἰδιώματι.
(z) Videtis quam longis litteris vobis scripsim mea manu. Bex.
(a) Voyez quelle grande lettre je vous ai écrite de ma main. Le Clerc.
(b) Voyez quelle grande lettre je vous ai écrite de ma propre main. B.
(c) Quelle grande lettre. Quelques uns, dit Theodoret, expliquoient ce mot de la grandeur des lettres, et d'autres de ce que la lettre étoit mal écrite, les caracters mauvais: Je vous ai écrit de ma main, qu'elle s'écrit mal. St. Jerome, dans son Commentaire sur cet endroit, dit d'avoir oui dire quelque chose d'approchant, à quelqu'un dont il ne paroit pas approver la pensée. Beauf. Remarques sur le N. T. p. 466.
HE first epistle to the Corinthians was writ at Ephesus, as all may perceive. Says the Apostle 1 Cor. A. D. 56. xvi. 8. 9. But I will tarry at Ephesus, until Pentecost. For a great door and effectual is opened unto me. And there are many adversaries. And ver. 19. he says: The churches of Aia salute you. Aquila and Priscilla salute you much in the Lord. Those two good Christians had come with Paul from Corinth to Ephesus, when he was first there, and staid but a short time. As appears from Acts xviii. 18. 19. And there they continued, as we suppose, till after Paul left Ephesus, to go into Macedonia.

This epistle is placed by (e) Pearson in the year 57. Mill thinks (f) it was writ before the Passover of the year 57.

According to our computation (g) of St. Paul's times and travels, this epistle was writ at Ephesus, in the spring of the year 56. Which (h) was also the opinion of the French Commentators before named, Lenfant and Beaufobre. Some have argued from ch. v. 7. For Christ our Passover, is sacrificed for us, that it was now the time of the Jewish Passover, or that it was just over. But to me it seems, that the Apostle might make use of that expression, and build an argument, or exhortation, upon it in any part of the year. And when a year was begun, he might speak of tarrying where he was, till some distant feast. And supposing the epistle to have been writ early in the spring, he might think of continuing at Ephesus, till Pentecost. This letter was carried to Corinth by Stephanas, Fortunatus, and Achaicus, mentioned 1 Cor. xvi. 17. 18. who had come to the Apostle from the Corinthians, and are supposed to have brought a letter with them. See 1 Cor. vii. 1. It was after writing this epistle, that the tumult happened, which was caused by Demetrius. For as Lightfoot (i) says: "Between ver. 22. and 23. of this xix. chapter of the Acts falleth in the time of St. Paul's writing the first epistle to the Corinthians." Consequently, this epistle was sent away, before the tumult raised by Demetrius, and other silversmiths, related by St. Luke Acts xix. 23. . . . 41. nevertheless, after Paul had fought with beasts at Ephesus, as he says, 1 Cor. xv. 32. When that tumult of Demetrius

(*) See note (u) p. 243.
(f) Quando igitur? Haud diu fane antequam ex Aia abiret, anno ævæ vulgaris. lxxii. et quidem ante illius anni feitum paschale. Proleg. num. 9.
(g) See here p. 219.
(h) La 1. Épître aux Corinthiens fut écrite d'Ephèse au printemps de l'année 56. Pref. Gen. sur les ép. de S. Paul. §. 45. p. 27.
(i) Vol. i. p. 299.
Demetrius was appeased, Paul seems to have been at rest. And though he did not judge it prudent to stay any longer there, he took leave of his friends with deliberation. And after the uproar was ceased, Paul called unto him the disciples, and embraced them, and departed for to go into Macedonia. Acts xx. 1.

The first epistle to the Corinthians therefore, according to our account, was writ at Ephesus, in the beginning, or the spring, of the year 56.

S E C T. V.

The first Epistle to Timotheus.

A. D. 56. HE first epistle to Timotheus was writ, according to

(k) Pearson Annal. Paulin. An. 64. p. 22.
(l) Wh. in his preface to the epistle.
(m) Ann. 62. n. vii.
(n) Cave. H. L. in Paulo.
(p) Prolog. num 123.
(r) An. 57. num. 187.

(s) Scripta est autem hac epiftola, posteaquam Paulus, Ephesos reliquit, iscut habetur initio xx. cap. Actorum, profectus est in Macedoniam. Id quod ipsius epistolae verba flatim initio declarant. Unde cum Cardinale Baronio colligimus, in Macedonia scriptam esse. Est. arg. 1 ep. ad Timoth. p. 758.

(x) Non tamen aequo confat, scripitionem epistolae, differendam esse ad solutionem Pauli a Romanis vinculis. Neque enim omnia Pauli itinera descriptit Lucas, sed notabilius quaeram. . . Pronunciemus itaque, de tempore, quo scriptra est prior Pauli ad Timotheum epistolae, non liquere. Wis. de Vit. Paul. sect. 9. num. u.

(y) Posterior ad eodem Corinthios epistolae, et prior ad Timotheum, certante de proprietate, et sub judice lis est. Utraque autem scripta est paulo Corinthians, or the first epistle to Timotheus. However, he thinks, that both were writ not long after St. Paul had left Ephesus, to go into Macedonia. Consequentially his opinion was not very different from that of Lightfoot, Baronius, and Etsius, before recited.

According to Theodoret, in his general preface to St. Paul's epistles, the first four are the two epistles to the Thessalonians, and the first and second to the Corinthians. "The (2) fifth, says he, is the first epistle "to Timotheus. For after the introduction he says: As I besought thee to "abide still at Ephesus, when I went into Macedonia, that thou mightest "charge some, that they receive no other doctrine. 1 Tim. i. 3. It is "manifest therefore, that when Paul went the second time into Mac- "donia, he left the most excellent Timotheus at Ephesus, to take care of "those who had received the salutarie doctrine."

I shall now endeavor to shew at length the grounds of this opinion.

St. Luke expressly says Acts xx. 1. And after the uproar was ceased, Paul called unto him the disciples, and embraced them, and departed for to go into Macedonia. And St. Paul says, in the place just cited, 1 Tim. i. 3. As I besought thee to abide still at Ephesus, when I went into Macedonia. And St. Luke informs us. ch. xix. 21. 22. After these things were ended, Paul purposed in spirit, when he had passed through Macedonia and Achaia to go to Jerusaleem. . . So he sent into Macedonia two of them that ministred unto him, Timotheus and Erastus. But he himself stayed in Asia for some season. Then follows an account of the tumult at Ephesus. Some while after those messengers, Timotheus and Erastus, were gone to Macedonia, and Greece, Paul, as it seems, wrote, and sent away his first letter to the Corinthians. From which letter we plainly perceive, that Timotheus was in those parts. For so it is said in 1 Cor. iv. 17. For this cause have I sent unto you Timotheus. And ch. xvi. 10. 11. Now, if Timotheus come, see that he may be with you without fear. . . Let no man therefore despise him, but conduct him forth in peace, that he may come unto me. For I look for him with the brethren. Whence it appears, that at concluding that letter Paul was in expectation of Timotheus's return to Ephesus. And very probably he did return, before Paul went thence. Moreover St. Luke said just now, that after Timotheus and Erastus had been sent into Macedonia, Paul himself stayed in Asia for a season.

St. Paul in the place above cited says 1 Tim. i. 3. that he besought Timotheus to abide still at Ephesus, when he went into Macedonia. Does not that term, beseeching, or entreating Timotheus, imply some difficulty in the service required of him? And do we not see, what apprehensions hensions Timothie might be under upon being left at Ephesus, where Paul had met with much opposition, and some very lately? "A (a) soft word, says Beza upon the place, to be used by one of much superior authority." But if we consider the dangers of our supposed time, we may see the reason of Paul's speaking in that manner to Timothie.

Again. 1 Tim. iii. 14. 15. These things write I unto thee, hoping to come unto thee shortly. But if I tarry long, that thou mayest know, how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God. Words, which mightily suit the present time. St. Paul went into Macedonia, with a design to forward the collections for the poor saints in Judea, and then to go to Jerusalem. And it may be well supposed, that he had then hopes of calling in at Ephesus, in his way to Judea, and there seeing Timothie. However, he could not yet say the time. Which also is plainly agreeable to the Apostle's circumstances at this seafon. For we perceive from what St. Luke writes in the Acts, and from the second epistle to the Corinthians, writ some while afterwards in Macedonia, that Paul was not then able long before hand to fix resolutions about the time of journeys to be undertaken by him.

Farther, the time assigned by Pearson, and those who agree with him, must be wrong. It appears from Acts xx. 17.... that when Paul was going to Jerusalem in the former part of the year 58. there were Elders at Ephesus, and probably, in the neighbouring cities of Asia. But when Paul wrote this epistle, there seems to have been want of such officers at Ephesus, or thereabout. For a main design of it appears to be, to instruct Timothie in the proper qualifications of such men, and to admonish him to use great care and caution in the choice of them.

Once more, I am of opinion, that the second epistle to Timothie was writ, soon after Paul had been brought to Rome a prisoner from Judea. Therefore, if this epistle be prior to it, it must have been writ, before Paul went to Jerusalem, with the contributions of the Chriftians of Greece, and Macedonia, and other places.

There is, however, a difficulty attending our supposition. For Timothie is joined with Paul in the inscription at the begining of the second epistle to the Corinthians, generally allowed to have been writ in Macedonia. And in Acts xx. 4. Timothie is mentioned among those, who accompanied Paul into Asia, when he was going to Jerusalem with the above mentioned contributions. All which may induce some to think, that either Timothie did not return to Paul, before he left Ephesus: or that Paul took Timothie with him, when he went into Macedonia.

To which I anfwer: We have shewed it to be very probable, that Timothie returned to Ephesus, before Paul left it. The Apostle therefore might send Timothie this letter from Macedonia, and afterwards send for him, to come thither to him, having some special occasion for his affiftance. And though this was not entirely agreeable to the Apostle, he might might be the rather disposed to it, hoping, that as he went to Jerusalem, he should have an opportunity to leave Timothie at Ephesus. Which, as I apprehend, he did, when he came to Mile tus.

(a) Παρεναίλεσα. sum precatus, vel bortatus:] Blando vocabulo utitur, singulare modestiae exemplum relinquens quibusvis, in maxima etiam auctoritate constitutis. Beza. in. loc.

Farther, this difficulty is very much abated by the account formerly given of this period of our Apostle's historie. For it was then shewn, that there was a space of almost two years between St. Paul's going from Ephesus, when he went into Macedonia, and his coming to Troas, in the way to Jerusalem. Timothie therefore may have resided at Ephesus above a year, and yet be with the Apostle at the writing of the second epistle to the Corinthians, which was not sent to them till near the end of the year 57.

Dr. Benfon (b) supposeth this epistle to have been writ at Troas, soon after the Apostle was come from Ephesus. And indeed, many learned men think, that Paul now went into Macedonia by the way of Troas. This has been collected from 2 Cor. iv. 12. 13. But that appears to me a difficult text. And it may be disputed, whether Paul there refers to his journey from Ephesus. For it is difficult to conceive, how the Apostle could have reason to expect Titus at Troas, at that season: considering, that his removal from Ephesus had been sudden, or however, somewhat sooner than he had intended. How then was it possible for him to have made an appointment for Titus to meet him at Troas punctually at the time of his arrival there.

But allowing Paul to have gone from Ephesus to Macedonia by the way of Troas, it will not follow, that this epistle was writ there. It may be concluded from 1 Tim. i. 3. that the Apostle was now in Macedonia, or had been there, since he left Ephesus. Accordingly, Lightfoot, Bar- nius, and Estius, before named, suppose this epistle to have been writ in Macedonia. Says (c) Lightfoot: "It is apparent from 1 Tim. i. 3. that "this epistle was written after Paul's setting out from Ephesus for Ma- cedonia. . . . Now it cannot be conceived, to have been written, when "he was going toward Macedonia. For then he was but newly parted "from Timothie. And it is not likely, that he would so write to him, "when he was but newly come from him. . . . Therefore it cannot but "be concluded, that this epistle was written, whilst he was in Macedonia, "or the parts thereabout, at this time that we are upon." To which I readily assent.

I shall add only, what is also already hinted by Lightfoot, that it is very improbable, that the Apostle should use those expressions. 1 Tim. iii. 14. hoping to come and see thee shortly, before he had been in Macedonia. St. Paul was much more likely to say this, when he had been some months absent from Ephesus, than when he had been come away but a few days only.

I should now say more particularly, when this epistle was writ. And I think, it must have been writ in the year 56. In the beginning of that year, according to our account, Paul wrote the first epistle to the Corinthians. Before Pentecost in that year he left Ephesus. And before the end of that year, I suppose, he might write this epistle to Timothie. The place

(b) See his preface to the first epistle to Timothie. Sect. iii.
(c) Harmonie of N. T. Vol. i. p. 307.
place is not absolutely certain. Before writing this epistle the Apostle had been in Macedonia, since he left Ephesus. But whether he was now in that country, cannot, I apprehend, be fully determined by those expressions. 1 Tim. i. 3. However, this may be reckoned very likely, that the Apostle was either in Macedonia, or near it. Lewis Cappell, as before observed, was in doubt, which was first writ, this epistle, or the second to the Corinthians. About that I have no doubt. We shall soon see clear proof, that the second epistle to the Corinthians was writ not long before the end of the year 57. This first epistle to Titus was writ in the year 56. and probably, some good while before the end of it.

S E C T. VI.

The Epistle to Titus.

A. D. 56. [AYS Theodoret immediately after what was transcribed from him above concerning the first epistle to Titus: “After that, (d) as I think, was "write the epistle to Titus. For being still in those parts, he desired "Titus to come to him, saying: When I shall send unto thee Artemas, or "Tychicus, be diligent to come to me at Nicopolis. For I have determined "to winter there. Tit. iii. 12. They say, that Nicopolis is a city of "Thrace, nigh unto Macedonia.” So writes Theodoret in his general preface to St. Paul’s Epistles. And in his note upon Tit. iii. 12. he says, “Nicopolis (e) is a city of Thrace, nigh unto Macedonia. It is “manifest therefore, that he wrote this epistle, when he was in Mace-“donia, and Achaia.”

Following the opinion of this learned ancient, which I think to be very right, the epistle to Titus was writ in the year 56. and Paul spent the winter of that year at Nicopolis.

If it be asked, when was Paul in Crete? I answer, in general: a short time, before he wrote this epistle, as may appear from those words: For this cause left I thee in Crete, that thou shouldest set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city, as I appointed thee. ch. i. 5. More particularly, I suppose, that Paul had been in Crete in this year 56. since he came from Ephesus, to go into Macedonia. About this time, I think, he was in Crete, and Illyricum, as well as in Macedonia. But as I do not indulge myself in making conjectures, I do not attempt to describe the order of the Apostle’s voyages. It was before thewn to be probable, that (f) between Paul’s leaving Ephesus in the spring of the year 56. and his coming to Troas, after the Passover, in the year 58. in his

(d) Μετά ταύτης ὑπολαμβάνω τὴν σεβ. τίτον γεγόρθαιν ἐν οἰκίσκης γὰρ ὑπὶ διάγνω τοῖς μνήμοις, καταλαβοὺς αὐτῶν παραγγελίας. Αὐτήν ἦν ὑπὸ ὅτινες ἦτον ποίμαν ἀστερίσκον. ... Τὸν δὲ ἐνάπον ἔθεκεν ἐκεῖνος μὲν πᾶλιν εἰναι φασὶ, τῇ δὲ μακεδονίᾳ περιλαμβάνει. Thed. T. 3. p. 4. C.

(e) Τὴς ἑβακκας ἐς ἐν ἐκκόστοις, τῇ δὲ μακεδονίᾳ περιλαμβάνει. Αὐτὸν τόνον ὡς κατ᾿ ἑκεῖνα τὸν καιρὸν, καθ᾿ ὅτι ἐν τῇ μακεδονίᾳ κηκε ἑλληνιστείς, ἐγραφεὶ τὴν ἑπιστολὴν. Ibid. p. 515. A.

(f) See before p. 219... 221.
his way to Jerusalem, there was the space of about two years. In that time Paul might do, and probably did more than is particularly related by St. Luke. Few learned men, considering the conciseness of St. Luke's manner of writing, can make any difficulty to allow, that (g) he has not related all the Apostle's journeys. It is observable, that Titus was the person, who was sent by Paul into Dalmites, when he was come to Rome. As appears from 2 Tim. iv. 10. Which may be reckoned an argument, that he had been there before.

About this time the epistle to Titus was writ, according to the opinion of divers learned men, to whom I refer: as (h) Baronius, (i) Cappell, (k) Hammond, and (l) Lightfoot. Eftius (m) could not determine the time of this epistle exactly: but he thought, it was writ before the Apostle's imprisonment at Jerusalem, and Rome.

Cave in his (n) Historia Literaria placeth this epistle in the year 63. But, when he wrote the Lives of the Apostles, he (o) supposed it to have been writ soon after the first epistle to the Corinthians.

Mill (p) placeth this epistle in the year 64. Pearson (q) in 65. Paul having, as he supposed, been in Crete, and left Titus there the year before, that is, in 64. And many others may be of the same opinion.

But this appears to me too late a date. All that is said of Paul's going into Spain, and Crete, and some other places, after being released from his imprisonment at Rome, is mere conjecture, without any good authority, either from the books of the New Testament, or very early antiquity. It is not likely, that Paul, who in his epistle to Philemon calls himself aged, should after that undertake new work. It is more probable, that he went to such places, where he had been before, and where he had disciples already: as he intimates in his epistles to the Philippians, the Colossians, Philemon, the Hebrews. Nor is it at all likely, that (r) the Cretans should have been so long without being instructed in the doctrine of the gospel, as Pearson supposed.

I have

(g) Neque enim omnia Pauli itinera descripsit Lucas, sed notabiliora quae-

(h) Baron. Ann. 57. num. ccix.

apost. hist. Chronol. Tab.

(k) Preæf. in ep. ad Tit.

(m) Quando scripta fit hec epistola, non liquet, nec facilie ex Actis Apost.

colligi potest, quod in ilis non legatur Paulus Cretam ingressus sui esse. Verisimile est, ante captivitatem Apostoli, quia vinculum hic nulla mentio.

Imo, cum dicit cap. iii. ibi enim statuus hyemare, plane significat, non esse vincturn. Ebf. Argum. ep. ad Tit.

(n) Epistola ad Titum . . . data anno 63. e medio aliquo loco inter Macedo-

(r) Non verissimile est, ad illud utique tempus ignorant suisse Christum in

Creta: quem tota Achaia, Macedonia, Asia, Cyprus, Syria, persona sant

evangelii præconio. Wius de Vita Pauli. Sed. v num. i.
I have already shewn the most probable date of the first epistle to Timothy. It is likely, that the epistle to Titus was writ about the same time. For the state of things in both appears to be very similar. In both are instructions concerning the qualifications of Elders, or Bishops, and Deacons. So 1 Tim. iii. and Tit. i. Nor is it reasonable to think, that Paul should have occasion, so late as the year 64. or 65. to send to his assistants and fellow-laborers such particular directions concerning that matter, as are in these two epistles. It is probable, that instructions of that kind had been given sooner. Moreover, the like errors are guarded against in both these epistles. 1 Tim. i. 4. Neither give heed to fables, and endless genealogies. . . . ch. iv. 7. But refuse pro- fane and old wives fables. . . . vi. 10. avoiding proflane and vain babblings. . . . Tit. 3. 9. But avoid foolish questions, and genealogies, and contentions, and strivings about the law. For they are unprofitable, and vain. See also ch. i. 10. . . . 14. In both are like directions for paying a proper regard to civil magistrates. 1 Tim. ii. 1. . . . 6. and Tit. iii. 1. . . . 3. There are also like directions concerning relative duties, particularly, those of masters and servants. 1 Tim. vi. 1. 2. Tit. ii. 9. 10. Timothy and Titus are in a like manner exhorted, to take heed to themselves, and their doctrine, and to be examples of virtue. 1 Tim. i. 18. 19. iv. 6. 16. Tit. ii. 1. . . . 8. I might add, that near the conclusion of each epistle the practice of good works is in a very similar manner enjoined upon the converts to christianity.

It appears from many texts of the second epistle to the Corinthians, writ in Macedonia, that about this time Paul had the assistance of Titus in those parts. And Tychicus, mentioned Tit. iii. 12. was likewise with Paul at this time. For he was one of the company, that went with him into Asia. Acts xx. 4. And therefore, probably, not he, but Artemas, had been sent into Crete, to relieve Titus. Moreover, Apollos was at Ephesus, a little before Paul left that city, to go into Macedonia. That is manifest from 1 Cor. xvi. 12. And it may be reckoned very probable, that he did not stay long at Ephesus, after Paul: but either went with him into Macedonia, or came into those parts soon afterwards. So that Paul might now have occasion to recommend him to Titus, in Crete, together with Zenas. Tit. iii. 13.

There are not in this epistle any tokens of Paul's great Age, or of his being near the period of his ministr. He is plainly at liberty at the time of writing this epistle. Nor are there any intimations of his hav- ing as yet endured any long imprisonment.

This letter may be the shorter, because, probably, Paul had lately writ at length upon the same subject to Timothy. Moreover, Titus was older, and might have more experience. Chrysostom judged (s) the brevity of this epistle to be an argument of the ability of Titus.

"He did not need a long exhortation. A few hints were sufficient.

St. Paul says Tit. iii. 12. When I shall send Artemas unto thee, or Ty- chicus, chicus, be diligent to come to me at Nicopolis. For I have determined there to winter. Thereby Theodoret understood Nicopolis in Thrace, as seen above. So likewise (t) Chrysostam. But Jerome (u) supposed the Apostle to mean Nicopolis in Epirus. Neither of these interpretations is any prejudice to our argument. In which soever of those countreys Nicopolis was situate, the Apostle was as likely to be there at the time supposed by us, as at any other.

At Nicopolis the Apostle wintered, in the year 56. according to my computation. Consequentely, this letter was writ some time before, in the same year 56. When the winter was over, Paul came into Macedonia, where he had been before, since he came from Ephesus. From Macedonia he came into Greece.

S E C T. VII.

The second Epistle to the Corinthians.

HILST the Apostle was in Macedonia, at this time, he wrote the second epistle to the Corinthians. A. D. 57.

Concerning this there can be no doubt, if we attend to the epistle itself. From which it plainly appears, that the Apostle was then in Macedonia, and was going to Greece, particularly, to Corinth. So 2 Cor. ix. i...5. For as touching the ministration to the saint, it is superfluous for me to write unto You. For I know the forwardness of your mind. For which I boast of you to them of Macedonia: that Achaia was ready a year ago... Yet have I sent the brethren... lest haply, if they of Macedonia come with me, and find you unprepared, we (that we say not you) should be ashamed in this same confident boasting. Therefore I thought it necessary to exhort the brethren, that they would go before unto you, and make up beforehand your bounty. See also ch. viii. And ch. xiii. i. This is the third time, I am coming to you.

According to Pearson (x) this epistle was writ in Macedonia, in the year 57. according to (y) Mill, near the end of that year. I likewise think, that it was writ in the year 57. probably, in September, or October. For the Apostle, plainly, was soon to go to Corinth: where he might arrive, as I apprehend, in November.

I suppose, it was now above a year, since writing the first epistle to the Corinthians. The reasons of that supposition were mentioned (z) formerly. And need not to be repeated here.

Timothie

(t) Ἡ ἐν ἱκτόπολις τοῦ θεᾶς ἔστε. Chrys. in Tit. hom. 6. ib. p. 766. B.

Nicopolis ipfa eft, quæ ob victoriam Augusti, quod ibi Antonium et Cleopatram superarit, nomen accepit. Id. in Tit. cap. iii. ib. p. 439.

(y) ... sub finem, ut videtur, anni æ. vulgaris lvii. Proleg. num. 21.

(z) See before. p. 219.
Timothy was with Paul at writing this epistle. For his name is in the inscription. It is likely, that (a) he had come from Ephesus to the Apostle in Macedonia, either upon occasion of some affairs of that church, or at the desire of the Apostle, who needed his assistance. As before said.

S E C T. VIII.

The Epistle to the Romans.

The epistle to the Romans is dated by (b) Pearson A.D. 58. (c) in the year 57. by (e) Mill in the year 58. According to our computation of Paul's journeys there can be no reason to hesitate about either the time, or the place of this epistle. It was writ at Corinth in the beginning of the year 58. before Paul set out on his journey to Jerusalem.

As St. Luke's words in Acts xx. 1. 2. 3. afford great light, and are a sure guide, I recite them here. And after the upper was ceased, Paul called unto him the disciples, and embraced them, and departed [from Ephesus] for to go into Macedonia. And when he had gone over those parts, and given them much exhortation, he came into Greece. And there abide three months. In the space of these three months was writ the epistle to the Romans.

According to Theodoret the epistle to the Romans (d) is the seventh in order of time, having been writ by the Apostle after the two epistles to the Thessalonians, and to the Corinthians, the first to Timothy, and the epistle to Titus. He adds: "That (e) the epistle to the Romans was writ " from Corinth, is manifest from the conclusion. For there the Apostle " recommends Phœbe, calling her Deaconess of the church in Cenchrea, " which was a borough of the Corinthians. Rom. xvi. 1. Besides, he says: " Cæsus, my host, and of the whole church, saluteth you. ver. 23. By host he " means the person, who entertained him. And that Cæsus was a " Corinthians, we learn from the first epistle to the Corinthians. For thus " he writes to them: I thank God, that I baptized none of you, but " Crispus, and Cæsus. i Cor. i. 14. The epistle to the Romans therefore " is the last of the epistles writ from Asia, and Macedonia, and Achaia: " and is the seventh in order, as has been shewn. The rest were sent " from Rome." So Theodoret. Who might have added, as a proof, that this

(a) Pafteor, cum Paulus eftet in Macedonia, una cum illo fuifse Timotheum.
2 Cor. i. 1. et potiam quem transegit in Epiro. Tit. iii. 12. ac per tres menfes commoratus in Graecia. Act. xx. 2. 3. reverfque eftet in Macedonia, illi adfuiſſe Timotheum. Act. xx. 4. ac reſta cum illo iuvare Troadem. Quæ omnia contingere potuerunt, potiam Paulus reliquifcit Timotheum Ephesi: ex qua urbe tamen ierit ad Paulum, five propter negotia Ephesinæ ecclefia, de quibus Paulum confui ab eo oportet, vel ut pararet Paulo, quem, ut videmus, et poſſea invifit, longiore itinere, Romam ufque.
2 Tim. iv. 9. Hammond. Pref. in 1 ep. Timoth. ex versione Clerici.

(d) Ἑξῆχεν τὸν πρὸς θεόμοι ὑποτελεία. μὴ γὰρ ὃ ἄντις ἀνάργυρας τὰ τοῦ αὐτοῦ γεγραφαίναι διδάσκων, κ. λ. Theod. T. 3. p. 4. C.

(e) Ibid. p. 5.
this epistle was writ at Corinth, what follows in ver. 23. Eras tus, the chamberlain of the city, faulteth you. For by the city I suppose to be meant Corinth. But whether this Eras tus be the same, who is mentioned by St. Luke Acts xix. 22. as one of St. Paul's assistants, I cannot say certainly.

The time of writing this epistle is farther manifest hence. It was writ after that Paul had completed his collections in Macedonia, and Achacia, and when he was setting out for Jerusalem. For to he writes ch. xv. 25. 26. But now I go unto Jerusalem, to minister unto the saints. For it has pleased them in Macedonia, and Achacia, to make a certain contribution for the poor saints, which are at Jerusalem... ver. 30. 31. Now I beseech you, brethren, that ye strive together with me, in prayers to God for me: that I may be delivered from them that do not believe in Judea, and that my service, which I have for Jerusalem, may be accepted of the saints.

Consequently, it is probable, that it was now near the end of the three months, that the Apostle said in Greece. Whence he returned to Macedonia, and after the days of unleavened bread, sailed from Philippi, to Troas, upon the continent of Asia, Acts xx. 3... 6. And then went to Jerusalem, where he arrived about the time of Pentecost in the year 58.

If St. Paul came to Corinth in November 57. the epistle to the Romans might be sent thence in the month of Februaire, in the year 58.

S E C T. IX.

The Epistle to the Ephesians.

Concerning St. Paul's Epistles, writ during his imprisonment at Rome, particularly, the Epistle to the Ephesians.

Soon after writing the epistle to the Romans, as was before hinted, Paul set out from Corinth, on his journey to Jerusalem. In a short time after his arrival there, he was apprehended. And he was kept a prisoner in that country, till he was sent to Rome.

During his stay in Judea, we know not of his corresponding with any churches, or particular persons, by writing. But at Rome, though a prisoner, he wrote divers letters. Gratius says, that (f) though all St. Paul's epistles are excellent, he most admires those writ by him, when a prisoner at Rome. And of the epistle to the Ephesians he says, it (g) surpaseth all human eloquence.

It is generally supposed, that St. Paul wrote there four epistles: to the Ephesians, the Philippians, the Colossians, and Philemon. Jerome has twice (b) spoken of these four epistles, as writ at Rome. Theodoret having spoken of

(f) Omnes epistolæ Pauli egregiae sunt: sed omnium in primis, quæ Romæ ex vinculis misœ sunt. Gr. Pr. in ep. ad Col.

(g) ... rerum sublimitatem adequans verbis sublimioribus, quam ulla unquam habuit lingua humana. Grat. Pr. in ep. ad Eph.

(b) Quod Romæ in vincula conjectus, hane epistolam miserit eo tempore, quo ad Philemonem, et ad Colossenæ, et ad Philippenæ, in alio loco scriptus esse monstravimus. Hieron. in Eph. cap. iii. T. 4. p. 347.
of the epistle to the Romans, as the seventh in order, and the last of those that were sent from Asia, Macedonia, and Achaia, says: "The (r) rest were sent "from Rome: the first of which I take to be that, writ to the Galatians." Lightfoot (k) likewise supposed the epistle to the Galatians to have been writ at Rome, and the first of those that were writ there. That is a wrong computation, as must appear from what has been already said. But beside the four above mentioned, the second epistle to Timothy might be writ at this season. The epistle to the Hebrews likewise, if it be Paul’s, was, probably, writ about this time, either during the Apostle’s imprison- ment, or soon after it, before he left Rome, and Italy.

St. Paul’s imprisonment, from the time of his being apprehended at Jerusalem, to his coming to Rome, was the space of almost, or quite three years. For a short time he was confined in the castle of Antonia at Jerusalem. Thence he was sent to Cesarea by the sea side, the seat of the Roman Governour, who at that time was Felix. Where he was kept in Herod’s judgement hall. Acts xxviii. 15. And though afterwards there was an order for enlarging the first strictness of his custodie, and that his acquaintance should be permitted to come to him, and minister to him. ch. xxiv. 23. I suppose, he was still confined in the above mentioned prison. And, perhaps, this new order imported little more, than leave for his friends to bring him needful refreshments, and take care of his health. It does not appear, that during the space of two years, and several months, whilst he was in Judea, he wrote any letters, or received any, as before intimated. Says (l) Wall: “Those two years of imprisonment under Felix seem to have been the most unactive part of St. Paul’s life. There is no account of any preachings, or disputations, or of any epistles writ in this space.” Indeed, considering the violent opposition made by the Jews throughout the whole space of the Apostle’s being in that country: I apprehend, there was no attempt made by Paul, or his friends, to procure him intelligence from the Chriffian churches abroad: and that the Roman Governour could not allow of any such thing. He would rather have set Paul at liberty, and let him go quite away. But when Paul was brought to Rome, though he was under a guard, he was sufferd to dwell by himself, in his own hired house. Acts xxviii. 16. 30. where he was two years. Having such liberty, he wisely improved it, not only by discourging with all those who came to him, but also by writing several epistles.

Of all these epistles the first writ seems to me to be that to the Ephe-

A. D. 61. I think, it was drawn up by the Apostle, as soon as conveniently could be, after his friends at Rome had taken a lodging for him, and he was settled in it.

The epistle is inscribed to the saints which are at Ephesus, and to the faithful in Christ Jesus. But I apprehend, that the Apostle thought of the Chriffians throughout Asia, properly so called, whether living at Ephes-}

(i) Tacis spatii apò ἀλλας ἀπὸ τῆς ἔομος ἐπεισελένθη τῆς ἑκάστης ἡμέρας τῷ πρώτῳ μιᾷ ὕμνῳ τῶν ἑορτ.

(l) Notes upon the N. T. p. 267. 268.
after the salutation of these Christians, at the beginning of the epistle, he praiseth God for the gospel dispensation, now made known to all men, agreeably to the gracious purpose, long since formed in the divine counsels. Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who has blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ: according as he hath chosen us in him, before the foundation of the world. ver. 3. 4. to the 12. He then reminds them of their first faith in the gospel, and the circumstances of it. In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: in whom also, after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that holy Spirit of promise. Which is the earnest of our inheritance... ver. 13. 14. After which he lets them know, that in his confinement, since he came to Rome, he had heard of the continuance of their faith, and of their love for all Christians in general. Which had filled him with transports of joy and satisfaction. Wherefore I also having heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints, cease not to give thanks for you, making mention of you in my prayers: that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory, may give unto you the spirit of wisdom: or that they might be more and more illuminated, and established in the principles of true religion. ver. 15. 16. and to ver. 23.

The account, that had been brought him of the Christians at Ephesus, by Tychicus, as may be supposed, having been very agreeable, the Apostle does not censure them for any great irregularities in conduct, as he does the Corinthians, nor for any remarkable deviations from the simplicity of the gospel, or instability therein, as he does the Galatians. But he treats them with great mildness. However, he sends them a pathetic exhortation to persevere in a conversation, becoming their profession, and their privileges, and to guard against the temptations, which they might meet with either from Heathen idolaters, or corrupt and self-interested Christians.

At the end, he tells them, that he had sent Tychicus, who would give them information concerning his affairs, and comfort them. ch. vi. 21. 22. And then adds: Peace be to the brethren, and love, with faith, from

(m) Epheum fuisse primam Metropolim Lydiae, vel proconsularis Asiae, ostendimus in notis ad Coloss. iv. 16. Itaque epistola hae, Ephesios inscripta, non eft putanda ad eos folos pertinere, verum etiam ad alias urbes provincie, imo et totius Asiae. Hammond. Pref. in ep. ad Eph.
God the Father, and the Lord Jesus Christ. ver. 2, 3. Peace be to the brethren, that is, the brethren, with you, at Ephesus, to whom the epistle is directed. So 1 Thess. v. 27. I charge you by the Lord, that this epistle be read to all the holy brethren: meaning the brethren, or Christians at Thessalonica. So to the Philippians ch. iv. 21. Salute every saint in Christ Jesus, meaning, undoubtedly, the Christians at Philippi. And then at ver. 22. All the saints salute you: meaning all the Christians in general at Rome. It was not needful to say, of this place. The meaning is obvious.

The concluding words of this epistle are these at ver. 23. Grace be with all them that love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. Which, I think, may be understood, and paraphrased after this manner. "And grace be with all those, who, like you, love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity."

That is a brief and general account of the epistle itself. I must add somewhat in behalf of the early date of it, which is here affigned by me.

There might be many considerations, inducing the Apostle to write to the Ephesians, soon after his arrival at Rome. Ephesus was a place of great importance, being the chief city of Asia, where was a great resort of merchants, and all other people. Here the apostle chose to settle that eminent disciple of his, Timotheus. Here also St. John took up his residence, after he had left Judea. It was the place, where Paul had been longer, than in any other city, except Antioch. Here also he had wrought many, and special miracles, and had great success in his preaching. Acts xix. Moreover, he had intended them a visit. 1 Tim. iii. 4. But had been prevented. When he went to Jerusalem, it is likely, that it was earnestly desired, and confidently expected by the Christians at Ephesus. Such expectations are sufficiently intimated by St. Luke. Acts xx. 15.

... 17. The next day we came to Miletus. For Paul had determined to fail by Ephesus, because he would not spend the time in Asia. For he bated, if possible, to be at Jerusalem the day of Pentecost. And from Miletus he sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the church. Where having made a pathetic discourse, all present were much affected, and gave testimonies of a fervent affection, and high esteem. These things must have made impressions upon the Apostle, and have been well remembered by him: and may have induced him to think of writing first to this church upon his coming to Rome, and having liberty of correspondence.

There might be likewise some other reasons for this determination. The epistle is carried by Tychicus, who was of Asia, and, probably, an Ephesian. Mr. Biscoe (n) thought, that Tychicus accompanied the Apostle in his voyage to Rome. But for that I see no ground. I rather think, that like divers others of his fellow-labourers, Tychicus had come to Rome of his own accord, to meet Paul, and to attend upon him: or had been sent by the Ephesians, to pay their respects to him, and enquire into the state of his affairs. It seems to me, that Tychicus was one of the first, who came to the Apostle, and very soon after his arrival at Rome. Yea, possibly, Tychicus was got thither before him, as some other of the Apostle’s friends likewise might be. However, Tychicus being now at Rome, he was a very fit person to go with a letter from the Apostle to Ephesus.

(n) Upon the Acts, p. 435.
If we duly attend to the Apostle's situation, after having been above two years in a close confinement at Caæarea, we may be able to discern the reason of several things. Particularly, we may perceive, why this is a kind of general epistle, not much concerning itself with the affairs and circumstances of any church: but delivering, first, the doctrine of the gospel, and then the duties of it, with a fulness, scarcely equalled in any other of the apostolical epistles. As Theodoret saith: "The (a) former part of the epistle contains the doctrine of the gospel, the latter part a moral admonition." Or as a learned modern says: "Being somewhat in the manner of an institute." The Apostle might well judge it best to write thus in his first letter, writ after a long silence: and in this manner, to remind his friends and converts in Asia of the principles of the gospel, and their obligations, as Christians.

We are likewise hence led to discern the great beauty and propriety of the several places of this epistle, where the Apostle speaks of his bonds. ch. iii. 1. I Paul, the prisoner of Jesus Christ for you Gentils. That for their cause, he was now in bonds, appears from the historie of his imprisonment, as related by St. Luke in the Acts, and particularly, from what is said ch. xxii. 21. 22. and the following verses. There is an especial suitablenesse in that expression of the Apostle, in a letter writ soon after his arrival at Rome, and especially, if it be the first letter writ by him after his being apprehended, as I think it is. And having enlarged somewhat farther upon his having been appointed an Apostle by Christ, for forwarding the gospel among Gentils, he goes on, and endeavors to comfort these Christians, and all Gentil converts in general, with regard to the afflictive dispensation, which he was under, and which might appear very strange to many. ver. 13. Wherefore I desire, that ye faint not at my tribulations for you, which is your glory. Again: iv. 1. I therefore the prisoner of the Lord beseech you. And ch. vi. 20. he calls himself an Ambassador in bonds. How suitable is this to the Apostle's circumstances, if we consider him now lately arrived in the city of Rome, the capital of the Roman Empire, and the seat of the Emperor!

I cannot forbear transcribing that passage, ch. vi. 18...20. Praying for all saints... and for me, that utterance may be given to me, that I may open my mouth boldly, to make known the mystery of the gospel. For which I am an Ambassador in bonds: that I may speak boldly, as I ought to speak. Wherein I do not think, the Apostle so much desires these Christians to pray for his enlargement, as that he might discharge his commission aright: and speak with the freedom and boldness of an Ambassador from a great Prince: though he was chained as a prisoner, and had not the outward pomp and state, usual with men of that high character. This was very proper at the time of his arrival at Rome, where he was likely to continue some while.

There is a like passage in Col. iv. 3. 4. which, I think, ought not to be understood very differently.

It is also an argument, that this epistle was writ by the Apostle soon after his coming to Rome: that here are no expressions, denoting hopes of enlargement, as there are in the epistles to the Philippians, the Colossians, and Philemon: writ, as we suppose, not long before his deliverance.

(a) See Vol. xi. p. 86.
ance. Nor does he here take any notice of successfes obtained at Rome, or give any intimations of converts made by him there, as he does Philip. i. 12. 13. 14. iv. 22. He seems indeed to have pleased himself with a prospect of recommending the gospel in his present situation. ch. iii. 7. 10. like to what he says 2 Tim. iv. 17. an epifle writ about the same time. But he does not intamate any advantages, obtained as yet. Nor does he at the end of this epifle fend such falutations, as at the end of the epiftles to the Philippians, the Coloffians, and Philemon. All which must lead us to think, that the circumstances of the Apostle at writing this epifle were different from his circumstances at writing those epiftles: when his captivity, as is allowed, was near it's period.

Says St. Paul 2 Tim. iv. 12. And Tychicus have I sent to Ephefus. It is likely, that the Apostle there refers to the epifle, of which we are now fpeaking. He had juft fent, or was fending away Tychicus to Ephefus with this epifle. I think, I fhall prefently fhew, that the second epifle to Timothie was writ in the fift year of the Apostle's imprisonement at Rome, and not very long after his arrival there. Confequently, this epifle, being there referred to, muft have been fent about the fame time.

That the epifle to the Ephefians is here referred to, has been the opinion of many. So thought (p) Tillemont. Who supposing, that the femand of Timothie was writ in a femand imprisonement of the Apostle at Rome, placeth the writing of this to the Ephefians in the year 65. Whitby in his preface to the epifle to the Ephefians observes: "In his clofe of this epifle St. Paul fpeaks thus to them. ch. vi. 21. 22. That ye may know my affairs, and how I do. Tychicus fhall make known unto you all things. And in the second epifle to Timothie he fayth: Tychicus have I sent unto Ephefus. 2 Tim. iv. 12." So Whitby. But forgetting, as it feems, what he had faid in some other places. However, this fhews, how natural and cafe it is, to think the epifle to the Ephefians intended in that place of the femand to Timothie. And it is what moft would think, if not biased by fome prejudice.

Theodoret in his general preface to St. Paul's epiftles fays: "The (q) Apostle fent to the Ephefians and the Coloffians at the fame time, and fent them by the fame meffenger," meaning Tychicus. But in his preface to the epifle to the Ephefians, having quoted Eph. vi. 21. 22. he goes on: "And (r) that he fent Tychicus from Rome, he fhews in his femand epifle to Timothie, faying: Do thy diligence to come to me shortly. And Tychicus have I sent to Ephefus." 2 Tim. iv. 10. 12. So Theodoret, without confidering the confequence. For he supposed the femand to Timothie to have been writ but a short time before the Apostle's martyrdom. But if the epifle to the Ephefians was writ, when the Apostle was fift at Rome, (as Theodoret allows,) and if he refers to it in his femand epifle to Timothie; it will follow, that this was writ soon after that to the Ephefians, and when the Apostle was fift at Rome.

However,

(q) Καὶ μάν τις ἐφεσίως με κολοσσαμένω κατὰ τὸν ἀντι νέφασις, οἷς τῶν εἰσιολούμεν αἱμοκτένων διὰ τὸν κενόν Χριστήμος. Theod. Τ. 3. p. 5.

(r) Τὸν δὲ μακαρίων τυχικὸν ἀπὸ τὸς ἐφαρμ. ἀντίομελῆ, καὶ τοῦ ἐν τῇ πρὸς τιμίῳ θεοῦ διδάσκ. κ. λ. Th. p. 292. A.
However, there are difficulties attending this opinion, which must be considered.

Firstly, it is said, that the epistles to the Ephesians and the Colossians were sent by the same messenger. Comp. Eph. vi. 21. 22. Col. iv. 7. 8. The epistle to the Colossians was sent away from Rome, when the Apostle had hopes of enlargement. Consequently, the epistle to the Ephesians was sent about the same time.

I answer, that this is no proof. For Tychicus might be sent twice into the same country, in the time of the Apostle’s two years imprisonment. Tychicus might be sent to Ephesus, with this letter to the Ephesians, soon after the Apostle’s arrival at Rome, and come back to him, and be able to take another journey into those parts a year after, when the Apostle was about to be set at liberty.

Secondly, it is said, that there is a great agreement between the epistle to the Ephesians and that to the Colossians. This last, as is allowed, was writ in the second year of the Apostle’s confinement, and when it was near its end. Consequently, the epistle to the Ephesians was writ about the same time.

To which I answer: Undoubtedly, there is an agreement between these epistles in several things, taken notice of by (s) Grotius, and others. But it does not therefore follow, that they were sent away together. For, as has been observed by (t) Lightfoot, it is likely, that the Apostle kept copies of his letters. If so, it might be easy for him to write after the same manner at different times, to people not very remote from each other, and whose circumstances were much alike. Indeed, without keeping copies of his letters, I believe it would be no difficult matter for St. Paul to repeat the Christian principles, and exhortations to Christian virtues, at several times, in like expressions, if the circumstances of men required it.

And there are several things in the epistles themselves, which afford good reason for thinking, that they were not writ, and sent away at the same time: and that the epistle to the Colossians was sent some while after that to the Ephesians. From what is said in the second chapter of the epistle to the Colossians, concerning the worshipping of angels, and other matters, it may be concluded, that the Apostle had received from those parts some intelligence, which he had not, when he wrote the epistle to the Ephesians. For there those matters are not at all touched upon.

And though there is a resemblance between these two epistles, they are very different. For the epistle to the Ephesians is a good deal longer than

(s) Proxima huic et argumento, et verbis eiam, eft illa ad Colossenses, eodem, ni fallor, scripta tempore. Grot. Pref. in ep. ad Eph. vid. et ejusd. Pr. in ep. ad Coloss.

(t) "It may be, the parchments 2 Tim. iv. 13. were the originals of those epistles, that he had already written. For that he sent transcripts, and preserved the originals, may be collected from these passages. Tertius, who wrote out this epistle. Rom. xvi. 22. See also 1 Cor. xvi. 21. Col. iv. 18. 2 Theff. iii. 17. For all the epistle beside was written with another hand." Harmonie of the N. T. Vol. i. p. 316.
than that to the Colossians, though the fore-mentioned article in the second chapter to the Colossians is entirely wanting. And in those places, where there is an agreement, there are differences.

Nor is there in the epistle to the Ephesians any notice taken of Timotheus, or Epaphras, or Mark, so expressly mentioned in the epistle to the Colossians. Which must be reckoned a very strong, and even a demonstrative argument, that these two epistles were not writ, and sent away at the same time.

In this date of the epistle to the Ephesians I have (x) followed Lightfoot: from whom I have had great assistance in settling the time of St. Paul's epistles. I have likewise had, in this instance, assistance from (x) Baronius, (y) Estius, (z) Hammond, and (a) Witsius.

Baronius (b) and Lightfoot first speak of the second epistle to Timotheus: though they do not deny, the epistle to the Ephesians to have been writ before it. But as we are now inquiring into the order of time, I have judged it best to adhere to that strictly. A few weeks, yea a few days, might make a great alteration in the Apostle's circumstances at this time. And some of his friends and attendants might be daily coming to Rome from the provinces, and getting access to him in his apartment. By comparing these two epistles I am led to think, that when the Apostle wrote the second epistle to Timotheus, he had been longer at Rome, and was better acquainted with the world about him, that when he wrote the epistle to the Ephesians.

BASFAGE is singular in his sentiment concerning the time of this epistle. "That (c) it was writ at Rome, when Paul was prisoner there, he says, is manifest. But he thinks it to have been the last epistle, which was sent thence by the Apostle. He argues well enough, that it was not sent with the epistle to the Colossians. And he supposeth, that Tychicus was sent twice into these countreys by the Apostle from Rome." He should therefore have concluded, that this letter to the Ephesians was carried by Tychicus, not after those other epistles, but before them.

Says

(n) As before p. 325.
(y) Praef. in ep. ad Epb. (z) Praef. in ep. ad Ephes.
(b) Hæc cum ita finit, nos tamen primum egimus de ipsa ad Timotheum scripta epistolæ, eo quod multa in ea de rebus suis Romæ gestis ipse significet, ex quibus interexeret historia: quorum nulla est mentio in epistolæ ad Ephe- sios Baron. Ann. 59. num. xv.

Says St. Paul 2 Tim. iv. 12. And Tychicus have I sent to Ephesus. I suppose the Apostle here to refer to the epistle to the Ephesians, which was carried from Rome to Ephesus by Tychicus. But still, perhaps, it may be questioned, whether those two epistles, that to the Ephesians, and the second to Timothie were sent away together. Baronius (d) says, they were. He says, the Apostle puts the preterit for the present. So Eph. vi. 21. 22. . . . That ye may know my affairs, and how I do. . . . Tychicus . . . shall make known unto you all things, whom I have sent unto you for the same purpose. And unquestionably, that way of speaking is not uncommon. Instances are obvious. So Phil. 2. 12. Whom I have sent again. Which may be rendered: whom I am sending again to you. See also ver. 19. 21. and Philip. ii. 28. So here in 2 Tim. iv. 12. The words may be rendered: And Tychicus I am sending to Ephesus. Nevertheless, as that interpretation, in this place, is not certain, I would not be positive. The epistle to the Ephesians, I think, was carried from Rome by Tychicus, either at the same time with the second Timothie, or a short time only before it.

And according to my calculation, the epistle to the Ephesians was writ at Rome, soon after the Apostle’s arrival there in 61. and before the summer of that year. It was the first epistle writ by the Apostle in that city. And it was sent away a short time before the second epistle to Timothie, of which I shall speak next, or together with it.

S E C T. X.
The second Epistle to Timothie.

We come now to the second epistle to Timothie, which we suppose to have been sent away together with A. D. 61. that to the Ephesians, or soon after it.

Many learned men speak of a second imprisonment of Paul at Rome, and suppose, that this second epistle to Timothie was then writ, in 67. or 68. But I do not know, that we have any good account of a second imprisonment of Paul at Rome. He suffered martyrdom there, as some think, in 64. or 65. or as others, in 67. or 68. But that he might do, without a previous imprisonment of any duration. For he might be apprehended on a sudden, and be put to death presently. Which may be reckoned as likely, as not.

Before I proceed to the proofs, that this second epistle to Timothie was writ during Paul’s imprisonment at Rome, when he was sent thither from Judea by Festus, I would premife, that I suppose, with most learned moderns, that Timothie was now at Ephesus.

(d) Verum eidem Tabellario, nempe Tychico, dedit etiam tunc Paulus epistolam ad Ephesios. Licet in ea ad Timotheum dicat: Tychicum nifi Ephesum: tamen præteritum tempus pro praæfenti uffurpasse videtur, sicum cum ad Ephesios de eodem scribent ait: Ut autem et vos scientis, qua circa me sunt . . . nota faciet Tychicus . . quem nifi ad vos ad hoc ipsam . . Bar. ann. 59. num. xv.
It has been thought, that Timothie was not there, because it is said ch. iv. 12. Tychicus have I sent to Ephesus. But that argument is of no force. There was no need to say: I have sent Tychicus to you. There are many similar, or parallel ways of speaking in St. Paul’s epistles. 1 Cor. xvi. 32. He speaks of his having fought with beasts at Ephesus: where he certainly was at that time, as appears from xvi. 8. And 2 Tim. i. 17. he says: When Onesiphorus was at Rome, be fought me out very diligently. He does not say, when he was there. Lightfoot (c) observes, that from the epistle itself it may be concluded, that Timothie was at Ephesus. For 1. He directts him to salute the houshold of Onesiphorus. iv. 9. who was an Ephesian. i. 16. . . . 18. 2. He directts Timothie to take Troas in his way to him. ch. iv. 13. which was the way, that Paul had gone from Ephesus. 2 Cor. ii. 12. and to Ephesus again. Acts xx. 5. 3. He warns him of Alexander. iv. 14. who was an Ephesian. 1 Tim. i. 20. Acts xix. 33. So Lightfoot. To which, I think, may be added, 4. Paul’s salutation of Prisca and Aquila. ch. iv. 19. who, probably, were now returned to Ephesus, and settled there, where they had been formerly. Acts xviii. 18. 19. . . . 26. and 1 Cor. xvi. 19. For certain they were not now at Rome, where Paul himself was: though they were there, when he wrote the epistle to the Romans. xvi. 3. 4.

Here it may be asked: When did Timothie come to Ephesus? And how long had he been there? I answer, that by a very easie and probable conjecture, it may be concluded, that he was left there, when Paul was going up to Jerusalem, with the collections, which he had made among the Gentil Christians, for the poor saints in Judea. For Timothie is expressly mentioned by St. Luke among the Apostle’s companie in that journey. Acts xx. 3. 4. 5. And as he was about to sail into Syria, he purposed to return through Macedonia. And there accompanied him into Asia, Sopater of Beroea . . . and Timothie, and of Asia, Tychicus, and Tropheimus. Timothie therefore was in Paul’s companie, and went with him as far as Asia, in which Ephesus stood. And so far, I suppose, all, above mentioned, accompanied Paul, but not into Syria. I apprehend, that Timothie and Tychicus ftaid in Asia. For we have not any intimations from St. Luke, or St. Paul, or any way, that these two were with the Apostle at Jerusalem.

Every one is here able to recollect, that when Paul went into Macedonia in the year 56. about the time of Pentecost, he left Timothie at Ephesus. 1 Tim. i. 3. But for some reasons, which may be well supposed to have been good and sufficient, he came from thence to Paul in Macedonia. For he is joined with Paul in the salutation, at the beginning of the second epistle to the Corinthians. And, as has been just seen, he attended Paul, when he left Macedonia, to proceed to Jerusalem. But no man can doubt, that Paul would be willing to replace Timothie at Ephesus, where his presence was of great importance, if an opportunity should offer. Such an opportunity there now was: And, very probably, it was embraced. And Paul parted with him at Miletus, where he had sent for the Elders of the church of Ephesus to meet him.
Tillemont says: "It (f) is not said, what became of Timothie, during the two years that St. Paul was prisoner in Judea." I think, I may presume to say, he was all that time at Ephesus, and parts adjacent in Asia. Du Pin was of the same opinion, whole words I transcribe (g) below.

Tillemont adds presently afterwards: "It is however certain, that Timothie was at Rome, when the Apostle wrote to Philemon, the Phillipians, and the Colossians: forasmuch as he is named joyntly with him in the titles of those three epistles." How Timothie came to be then at Rome, we shall see presently.

Paul therefore parted with Timothie at Miletus, as just said. And I think, that when the Elders of Ephesus were come to Miletus, Timothie joyned himself with them, and stood at the head of them: and consequently was one of those, of whom it is said: And they all wept sore, and fell on Paul's neck, and kissed him: sorrowing most of all for the words which he spake, that they should see his face no more. And they accompanied him to the ship. Acts xx. 37. 38.

Of this Paul takes notice in the most affectionate manner. 2 Tim. i. 4. Greatly desirous to see thee, being mindful of thy tears, that I may be filled with joy. Doubtless Paul was much affected by the tears of all the rest, but especially Timothie's: and was now greatly desirous to see him, who had been so deeply struck with the thoughts of never seeing his face any more.

Timothie, then, was at Ephesus, when this epistle was sent to him. And he had been there from the time that Paul left Miletus, to go to Jerusalem, and during his imprisonment in Judea.

The observation, that Paul here refers to the tears shed by his friends at his parting with them at Miletus, appears to me very obvious: though it has been hitherto entirely overlooked, so far as I know. And it will directly lead us to the true date of this epistle. It is a most proper beginning of a letter sent by Paul to Timothie at Ephesus, soon after his arrival at Rome from Palestine, at the time we suppose: but it is very unlikely to be taken notice of in an epistle writ several years afterwards, and after there had been an interview: as there certainly was, when Paul was at Rome.

I shall now observe divers particulars, confirming the supposition, that St. Paul's second epistle to Timothie was writ, during the Apostle's imprisonment at Rome, and near the beginning of it.

1. The circumstances of the Apostle's imprisonment at Rome, when sent thither by Ephesus, and at the time of writing this epistle, are exactly the same.

(f) S. Timothée Mem. T. 2.
(g) On pourrait dire néanmoins, et je ne m'éloignerons de ce sentiment, que S. Paul le laissa à Ephèse, quand s'étant arrêté à Milet, il envoya querir les prêtres de l'église d'Ephèse. Act. xx. ver. 17. Car nous lisons, que comme S. Paul partoit pour aller en Asie par Macedoine, Timothée fut un de ceux qui l'accompagnèrent en Asie. ch. xx. 4. Et nous ne trouvons plus Timothée à sa compagnie, ni à Jérusalem, ni pendant sa prison de Césarée. Si cela est, Timothée aura été établi par S. Paul pour gouverner les églises d'Asie en 58. Du Pin. Diff. Prelim. l. 2. ch. 2. 9. viii.
St. Paul’s Epistles.

Ch. XII.

Says St. Luke, Acts xxviii. 16. Paul was suffered to dwell by himself, with a soldier that kept him. And ver. 30. Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him.

Here are two remarkable particulars. First, that Paul dwelt by himself, with a soldier that kept him: that is, after the manner of the Romans, by an iron chain of convenient length, he was fastened to a soldier, who had one end of the chain upon his left hand, and Paul the other end upon his right hand. As was largely fhewn (b) formerly. To this St. Paul refers in this his second epistle to Timothy i. 16. Speaking of Onesiphorus: He oft refreshed me, and was not ashamed of my chain. So exactly, Acts xxviii. 20. Because for the hope of Israel, I am bound with this chain.

Secondly. The other remarkable particular is, that when at Rome, Paul dwelled in his own hired house, and received all who came in unto him. Such also was his cafe at writing this epistle, as appears abundantly from ch. iv. 10. and other places. He had with him Demas, Crescens, Titus. The first was gone to Thessalonica, without his approbation: the others were gone, whither he had sent them, as it seems. And Luke was still with him. And at ver. 21. he sends salutations to Timothy from divers persons, and from the church at Rome in general, saying: Ebullia greeteth thee, and Pudens, and Linus, and Claudia, and all the brethren. Which fhews, that people had free access to the Apostle, when he wrote this epistle.

1. Obj. However, it has been objected, that (i) when Onesiphorus came to Rome, Paul was close shut up, and Onesiphorus had much difficulty in finding him. Which is different from the imprisonmenc of which St. Luke has given an account.

To which I answer, that Onesiphorus had no uncommon difficulty in his access to Paul, whose words are, 2 Tim. i. 16. 17. The Lord give mercie to the house of Onesiphorus. For he oft refreshed me, and was not ashamed of my chain. But when he was at Rome, he sought me out very diligently, and came unto me: that is, I think: “Onesiphorus has been often with me, and refreshed me, with presents, and with his conversation, without being at all ashamed of me, though I had a chain upon me.” Which fhews, that Onesiphorus might come to visit the Apostle, when he pleased: and might give him as much relief, as he saw good. “Yea, fabys the Apostle, as soon as he came to Rome, he made inquiries after me, and came to see me without delay.”

Here appear not any tokens of Paul’s being under a very strict confinement. But here are evidences of his being in such a condition, as that represented by St. Luke, when he had been brought from Judea to Rome. Onesiphorus seems to have come to Rome, soon after the Apostle’s arrival arrival there. In order to find him out, and know where he was, it was needfull to make some inquiries. How else should any man find a stranger in a great city? Whether he was quite at liberty, or in one of the prisons of it, some inquiries would be needfull. And when Onesiphorus had found the place, where Paul was, he came to it without any difficulty.

(b) See of this work Part i. B. i. ch x. § ix.

Witsius (k) speaks exactly to the like purpose. And supposeth, that after some inquiries (such as are needfull, when a man comes to a large city, and wants to see a stranger newly arrived,) Onesiphorus found Paul with the soldier in his own hired house.

The case I take to be this. Onesiphorus came to Rome upon his own secular business. He knew very well, that Paul had been carried thither, as a prisoner. But what was become of him, he did not know: whether he had been set at liberty, or was still a prisoner, or had been put to death. Upon coming to Rome therefore, not long after Paul had been brought thither, he made anxious inquiries after him. And hearing where Paul was, he readily came to him, notwithstanding his disgraceful circumstance, being chained to a solder. And so long as he staid in Rome, he made the Apostle frequent visits, and afforded him such refreshment, as was in his power.

2. Obj. But it is urged, that St. Paul says, 2 Tim. ii. 9. (l)—

Wherein I suffer, as an evil doer, even unto bonds.

To which I answer, that the word, here rendered bonds, is the same that is used in other epistles, writ during the Apostle’s imprisonment at Rome, when sent thither by Festus. Col. iv. 13. Remember my bonds. The same word is used at least four times in the epistle to the Philippians. ch. i. 7. 13. 14. 16. and in Phil. ver. 10. and 13. Hebr. x. 34. And to the Ephesians he says iii. 1. I Paul, the prisoner of Jesus Christ. i. διέμετασα. And ch. iv. 1. The prisoner of the Lord. Not to mention any other places. When Paul was so bound, he had reason to say, he suffered as an evil-doer, or malefactor, even unto bonds. He was not a malefactor, or notorious offender, nor a criminal: but was innocent in the view of the Roman laws, as well as in point of reason, justice, and equity. But he suffered, as an evil-doer. Had he not reason to say so, when he was sent bound from Judea to Rome? Had he not been prosecuted, as a malefactor? Did not the Jewish multitude, who first laid hold of him, intend to kill him? Acts xxii. 31. 36. xxiii. 27. xxiv. 6. Did not the multitude, who heard him with patience for a while, at length say: Away with such a fellow. For it is not fit, that he should live? xxii. 22. Does not Festus say to King Agrippa.

(k) Quando Onesiphorus Paulum Roma quae situm venit, non videtur invenisse in carcere conjunctum, arctaque custodia derentum, sed militi suo aligatum, in diversilo. Sic enim Paulus: Kai τὴν ἀνωτέρω με ὑπείκωσκόπθεν. Et fane quamvis vincula Pauli nota fuerint in toto Pretorio, non tamen inde coniunctur, Pauli domum ita notam omnibus suffise, ut homini peregre adventent. in urbe quae orbis comprobant em erat, ad captivi Judaei domum inveniendum diligentmente inquisitione non fuerit opus. Praefertim si adtemamus, facta haec esse initio vinculorum Pauli, antequam eum celebritatis gradum effecit nausus. Wits. ubi supra. sec. 12. num. vi.

(l) Et ὥς κανονισθήναι μίχαις διέμετασα, ὡς κανεγερος.
pa, and the large assembly at Cæsarea? Ye see this man, about whom all the multitude of the Jews have dealt with me, both at Jerusalem, and also here, crying, that he ought not to live any longer. xxv. 24. So that he was prosecuted as a malefactor all the while that he was in Judea. Nor does it appear, that there was any likelihood of his escape, but by appealing to the Emperor. And was he not after all sent bound to Rome, with many obnoxious persons under the command of a Centurion? Certainly, I think, these things afforded sufficient ground for Paul to say what he does in this place to Timotheus.

But to intaminate from these expressions, that Paul was now in some close confinement, his friends debarred access to him, and himself forbid the use of pen, ink, and paper, I humbly conceive, is altogether without foundation. It is inconsequent with the whole tenour of the epistle, and with the Apostle’s writing, or enditing, and sending such a letter as this to Timotheus. Wherein too he desires Timotheus to come unto him.

St. Paul’s imprisonment at Rome, when sent thither by Festus, was occasioned by his zeal for the liberty of the Gentils, as is manifest from Acts xxii. 21. 22. Of which he also takes notice, Eph. iii. 1. saying: I Paul, the prisoner of Jesus Christ, for you Gentils. His imprisonment at Rome, at the time of writing this epistle, was owing to the same thing.

For he says here, ch. i. 11. 12. Whereunto I am appointed a preacher, and an apostle, and a teacher of the Gentils. For which cause I also suffer these things. This is very observable. And indeed the twelve verses at the beginning of this epistle are a most proper introduction to an epistle, sent to Timotheus by Paul, at the time, for which we argue.

Thus the circumstances of Paul’s confinement at the time of writing this epistle, compared with the circumstances of that confinement at Rome, of which St. Luke has given a general account, and in which it is allowed, that St. Paul wrote epistles to the Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, Philemon, shew it to be one and the same imprisonment, and that this epistle also was writ about the same time with them.

2. St. Luke was with the Apostle at Rome, when he wrote this epistle. 2 Tim. iv. 11. And we know from the Acts, that he went with Paul from Judea to Rome, when he was sent thither by Festus. He is likewise mentioned in the epistles to the Colossians and Philemon, writ during this imprisonment. But it would be presumption to say, that St. Luke was with the Apostle at Rome, in another imprisonment, three, or four, or five years after this: especially, when we see, that his historie of St. Paul in the book of the Acts concludes with the account of his two years imprisonment at Rome, when sent thither by Festus.

3. Since the Apostle’s coming to Rome, he had with him, beside Luke, who accompanied him, Demas, Crefcens, Titus, Tychicus, four of his subalterns and fellow-laborers. Which might be likely enough to be expected, when Paul was sent from Judea to Rome. But it cannot be said to have been likely at any other season. But at this it was. For Paul’s imprisonment in Judea had lasted above two years. And it must have been known to all Gentil Christians throughout the world, and observed by them with astonishment, and grief. And his last appearance before Festus, and others at Cæsarea, was a very remarkable thing, and must have soon foon come to the knowledge of all Christians in Syria, Asia, Greece, and Italie. At that assemblie it was determined, that Paul should go to Rome.
He took shipping at Cesarea with others. He had a long and dangerous voyage. And after such an imprisnoment in Judea, as that related by St.
Luke, with all it's circumstances, it may be reckoned highly probable, that some good number of the Apostle's affectionate friends, especially his fellow-laborers, if not too much engaged, should form a design, and do their utmost, to meet him at Rome. It seems to me very likely, that some such persons shoul have this view get to Rome, before Paul himself.
Accordingly, we have seen four such persons mentioned by Paul in this epistle, It is a striking circumstance, and exceedingly favors our argument for the time of this epistle.

4. Says St. Paul 2 Tim. iv. 20. Erafus abode at Corinth. Which is agreeable to the account of St. Paul's journey to Jerusalem, as related by St. Luke. For Acts xix. 22. Erafus is expressly mentioned as one of those, who minifter to Paul, whom he fent from Ephesus to Macedonia.
Nor is Erafus among those, who went with Paul from Macedonia. Acts xx. 4. It (m) is therefore very likely, that he stayed at Corinth, and did not go with the Apostle to Jerusalem. This Timothie knew very well.
Nevertheless, it (n) is very properly mentioned together with other particulars, shewing Timothie the reasonableness of his coming to him, and the need, which the Apostle had of his presence.

We should here recollect what was formerly said of the Apostle's situatation at Rome, after a long and close confinement in Judea. And then we shall easily account for Paul's mentioning to Timothie divers things, which had happened some good while before. In a word, Paul may take the fame notice of several things, which had happened before parting with Timothie at Miletus, in the fame manner that he would have mentioned them, supposing him to have stayed but a few weeks at Jerusalem, and then failed from Cesarea to Rome, and soon after his arrival at Rome, had writ to Timothie, to come to him. For all the time of the Apostle's close confine ment in Judea had been sunk and annihilated in his computation.

5. In the fame verse. Tropinthus have I left at Miletus sick. Another particular, leading to that date of this epistle, for which we argue.

We know from Acts xxii. 29. that Tropinthus was with Paul at Jerusalem. It may be reckoned probable, that he set out with Paul from Cesarea to go to Rome. St. Luke indeed Acts xxvii. 2. mentions not expressly any companions of Paul in his voyage, beside himself, and A-riftarchus. Nevertheless Tropinthus likewise may have embarqked with him. The reason of not mentioning him may be, that he did not complete the voyage, having fallen sick, and therefore had been left at Miletus. This Timothie might know very well. Nevertheless it is fitly taken notice of by Paul, in a letter, writ soon after finishing the voyage, and when writing to Timothie, to come to him.

---

(m) Erafus remanfit Corinthi. Fuerat in Macedonianiam missus a Paulo. Acts
xix. 20. Deinde Corinthus redierat, ibique manferat, nec venerat Romam.
Gret. in 2 Tim. iv. 20.

(n) Quad Erafum Corinthis manfifte scribit, non tanquam rem novam in-cognitantamque Timotheo renunciat: refert tamen, uti attinentem ad fcopum
But when was Trophimus left at Miletus? Beza (o) was inclined to read here μελίτη, Melita, Miletus, instead of μελίτης, Miletus. Which conjecture, is approved by (p) Grotius. But if Miletus should be reckoned the true reading, Beza supposes, that Trophimus might be set on shore in the time of that how failing mentioned Acts xxvii. 7. Lightfoot (q) concludes from what is in Acts xxvii. 2. that Paul had a good opportunity to leave Trophimus at Miletus.

This will be farther confirmed, if we admit the interpretation given by Wall, without any view to the ufe, which we are about to make of it. "Acts xxvii. 2. meaning to fail by the coasts of Asia. Miλίοντις "σωλην τυς κατα τιν αοιν τόπως. The ship meant to call at some places "in Asia. This is a different phrase from that, ch. xx. 16. σαβαπτίσαντι «εφίσσων, to fail by Ephesus, that is, to leave it, to pass by, without calling." It is then, a very easy and natural supposition, that Paul might have an opportunity of setting Trophimus on shore at Miletus.

6. St. Paul defires Timothee to come to him shortly, ch. iv. 9. And unquestionably he did so. We find his name in the salutations at the beginning of the epiftles to the Philippians, the Coloffians, Philemon, writ during this imprisonment, and near it's period. Witfius (r) observes, that in the Acts there is no account of Timothee's accompanying Paul to Rome. Timothee therefore not being there at the beginning of the Apostle's captivity in that city, he might have occasion to fend a letter to him, at the time supposed by us. This particular is well enforced by Witfius at the beginning of his argument upon the date of this epiftle.

7. Ver.

(p) Omnino affentior doctissimo Bezae legenti est melitēs. In itinere Hierofolymis Paulus Meliten attiguit, non Miletum. Grot. in loc.

(q) "But when was he left? Not when Paul went toward Jerusalem, and sent for the Elders of Ephesus to Miletus. Acts xx. For Trophimus went, and was with Paul at Jerusalem. xxii. 19. But it was, when Paul returned from Jerusalem, as has been said, though it be not particularly mentioned, that he touched there... Luke says plainly, that at Paul's coming away from Judea in his voyage to Rome, it was their resolution to fail by the coasts of Asia. Acts xxvii. 2. Which would have been a fairer ground to have concluded upon, that Paul was at Miletus in this voyage, since that was a part of those Asian coasts, than to change Miletus into Melita, upon no ground at all. And certainly the very scope of the Apostle in that passage will not admit of that change. For he is not telling Timothee of Eразmus his abode at Corinth, or of Trophimus's sick-flay at Miletus, as things unknown to him, but as things very well known, yet mentioned to him, as making to the Apostle's purpose." Lightfoot's Harmonie of the N. T. Vol. i. p. 324.

Grotius, in (s) his notes upon 2 Tim. iv. 11. says the fame of Timothie, Luke, and Mark, that I have done. It is strange, that he did not discern the consequence, which is so obvious: that this second epistle to Timothie must have been writ, before the epistles to the Philippians, the Colossians, and Philemon. But that he discerned this consequence, does not appear clearly from his preface to this epistle. Whether he did, or not, he admits our interpretations. And the consequence is unavoidable.

It follows also from what he says upon ver. 20. of Trophimus having been left at Melita, in Paul's voyage from Judea to Rome, as before observed, and from some other things laid by him in his Annotations on this epistle. Which may be taken notice of hereafter.

8. Ver. 13. The cloak, that I left at Troas with Carpus, when thou comest, bring with thee, and the books, especially the parchments.

As St. Paul went to Jerusalem by the way of Troas, we are hereby led to the time of this imprisonment especially, when we consider, that Timothie accompanied the Apostle in that journey, as far as Asia. And Paul here seems to write to Timothie, as knowing Carpus, and that these things had been left with him.

If it be objected, that (t) Paul had at that time several friends with him, who might be willing to take care of these things: We (u) readily answer: It is true. Nor need it be supposed, that in any other journey Paul was without a sufficient number of friends, to perform for him any needful service of that kind. There might be other reasons for leaving those things behind him.

We need not inquire, what were those reasons, nor what were those things. However I shall observe here what Lightfoot lays of the word, rendred cloak, in his account of St. Paul's journey from Troas to Jerusalem:

Μάχικον ανακλάσω αγαμα μετά σιμμέτο... Et hoc desiderium Pauli impletum est. Vide Philem. 24. Coloff. iv. 10. Id. in ver. 11.

lem: "When (x) he goes now from thence, it is most likely, was the "time, when he left his cloak, and parchments with Carpus. 2 Tim. iv. "13. His cloak. For he was now going among his own nation in Judea, "and there he was to wear his Jewish habit. And he left his Roman "garb here, till he should come into those Roman quarters again."

9. The progress of the gospel at the time of writing this epistle, and the other epistles, confusedly writ in the time of St. Paul's imprisonment at Rome, when sent thither from Judea, appears to be the same, or very much alike.

To the Philippians he writes i. 12. 13. I would, ye should understand, brethren, that the things which have happened unto me, have fallen out rather to the furtherance of the gospel: so that my bonds in Christ are manifest in all the palace, and in all other places. See also ver. 14. . . . 18. In this second epistle to Timothie he says. ch. ii. 9.—that though he suffered unto bonds, the word of God was not bound. And see iv. 16. 17. And at ver. 11. he desires, that Mark would come to him: for, says he, he is profitable to me for the minifterie: supposing, that he should have employment for him, wherein he might promote the interest of the gospel. Paul could speak more distinctly of his successes, and of the oppositions, which he met with at Rome, in the epistles writ a short time before his enlargement. But even now he appears to have had in prospect those things, which were afterwards accomplished.

10. At ch. iii. 11. he reminds Timothie of the persecutions, and affilictions, which he had endured at Antioch, Iconium, Lyfira, all well known to Timothie. Which is very proper and seasonable, at our supposed time of writing this epistle: more seasonable, than it would have been several years afterwards.

Some, perhaps, may think it reasonable to expect more notice taken of the Apostle's imprisonment in Judea, and at Rome. But we suppose, that to be the very imprisonment, which he was now under, and of which he often speaks in this epistle, saying, that he suffered trouble, even unto bonds: that he endured all things for the elect's sake: that Onesiphorus was not ashamed of his chain: that he had made an apologie, when all men forsook him. But if this letter had been writ several years after his imprisonment in Judea, and at Rome; it would have been reasonable to expect some references to it, as a thing past, in his exhortations to Timothie, in speaking of persecutions and afflictions formerly endured by him.

11. Ch. ii. 22. Flee also youthful lusts. An exhortation to Timothie more suitable now, than several years afterwards. Indeed, this whole epistle is an admonition to Timothie, as a Chriflian, and a Minifter, better suiting the time of St. Paul's imprisonment at Rome, when sent thither from Judea, than any later time.

12. Ch. iv. 16. 17. At my first answer no man stood with me, but all men forsook me. . . . Notwithstanding the Lord stood with me, and strengthened me, that by me the preaching might be fully known, and that all the Gentils might hear. And I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion. These words afford a strong argument, that this epistle was writ, when Paul was sent bound from Judea to Rome. For it is much more reason- able able to think, that Paul would speak of such an apologie in an epistle writ soon after it was made, than in an epistle writ five or fix years afterwards. That Paul speaks of an apologie made at the time supposed by us, is very probable. And this text was so understood by several ancient writers, Eusebius, Jerome, Chrysostom, and Theodoret. The words of (y) Eusebius I transcribe below in his own language. Jerome's words were transcribed by us (x) formerly, and are fit to be repeated here. They represent the same sentiment with that in Eusebius: from whom, probably, and from some other ancients, he learned it. "It (a) should be observed, says he, "that at the time of his first apologie, Nero's government not being yet "quite degenerated, nor disgraced with the horrible wickednesse, which "historians speak of, Paul was set at liberty, that he might preach the "gospel in the western parts of the world: as himself writes in the second "epistle to Timothie, dictated by him in his bonds, at the time he suffered," And what follows.

(x) At before, p. 316.

And Chrysostom in a homilie upon the fourth chapter of this epistle:

"How, says (b) he, shall we understand this first apologie? He was at "first brought before the Emperour, and escaped. But when he had "converted his cup-bearer, then he was beheaded."

Theodoret is very express in his comment. "When (c) upon his ap- "peal, he was sent to Rome by Peflus, having apologized for himself, he "was dismissed as innocent, and went into Spain, and other nations. "By the first apologie therefore he meaneth that which was then made. "And I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion. So he calls Nero, as "being Emperour, and a cruel man."

Indeed this defense, or apologie, cannot relate to any other time. For he says: But the Lord stood with me, and strengthened me: that by me the preaching might be fully known, and all the Gentils might hear. This could not be said at any supposed second imprisonement, when the Apostle was near his end. But must relate to the prospect of successe, which he had soon

(y) .. οτι μιν ουν ἀπολογησάμενον, άνθι εἰς την την κηδεμόνας διακοινα "λόγος ἠρμήν εις ειλαθεν των ἀποστόλων δευτερον δι ειςωτα την αυτή σέλη την κατα "αυτών τη τελειωμα παραπλησίας: ίνω διεσπαραν εχόμενος της σερς τιμόθεου δευτερον επιστο "λαν συστάτης, ομίη σημαίνω τινα τη σερς περιπλησίαν αυτογαλογίαν, κε την "σαραγώνας τη τελειωμαν... Εἰκος γέτοι κατα μεν αὐχα επιτώτερον του νίκους διακε "μεν, εἰν την ἐπι τον δόγματος της σώλυμα καταδεξάθηναι απολογίαν προσδόθηναι, "τις εἰς αἴφερίας τόλμων, μετά των ἄσθων, κε τα κατα των ἀποστόλων ἐγκεκρισθα"ναι,

H. E. l. i. cap. 22. p. 62. A. et D.

(a) Scindium autem, in prima satisfactione, necendum Neronis imperio roborato, nec in tanta erumpente scegla, quanta de eo narrant historiae, Pau "lum a Nerone dimissum, ut evangelium Christi in Occidentis quoque partibus praedicaret. Sicut ipse in secunda epifola ad Timotheum, eo tempore quo et passus eft, de vinculis dictans epifolam. &c. De V. I. cap. V.

(b) Ποιειν δε πέμαν απολογίαν λόγοι; Παρείη ανα της νίκους, κε διμνειν. Πειθε "ν η δε των διογκοις αυτον κατάχηση, τοτε αυτον απίτεμαι. In 2 ερ. ad Tim. cap. iv, "hom. 10. T. xi. p. 722. B.

(c) Ηνικαι της ἄμεσως κατακέρισσες οι την ἑρίαν υπο της ὕπτης παρεπίμεθα, απολο "γησάμενοι ως ἄθως οἴσθεθα. . . Ποτέν τοιον απολογίαν την η ἐκείνη τη ἕκδοψα "γνωσμίαν ἰκαλείται κ. λ. In 2 ερ. Tim. iv. 26. Tom. 3. p. 506, soon after he was brought from Judea to Rome. At that time these expressions were exceedingly proper, and his expectations were fully answered. As may be collected from Philip. ii. 12. . . . 20. and iv. 22. Wisfus has some observations upon this place, which (d) defer to be transcribed. So do likewise the observations of another learned writer, (e) they being well suited to illustrate this text.

Vol. II.

For farther clearing up this point, I must stay somewhat longer here. I cannot but think it very evident, that Paul was now brought before the Emperor, and that he here refers to it. Lightfoot supposeth, that (f) in those words, at my first answer, Paul does not so much refer to what, or how many answers, he was called to: but intimates, that even at the first pinch and appearance of danger, all that should have been his assistants started from him.” And that may be the meaning. Nevertheless it is not impossible, that Paul might make two apologies, one soon after the other, at the first of which all forsook him: whereas, at the second, there were some, who appeared with him, and spoke in his behalf. But however that may be, I am of opinion, that Paul was brought before Nero himself, and that he here speaks of it. Several (g) moderns have

(d) Puto hac ad ea quæ Romæ tunc gefta sunt referenda esse. Ibi enim constituatur tunc fuit Paulus, ut in summo totius mundi loco, unde evangelii ab ipso prædicati sonus, non tanquam buccinae, sed tanquam tonitru, quaquaerunt audientur. . . . Porro ea, quæ Romæ, quæ in Prætorio, quæ ad tribunal Cæsaris dicebantur, vel agebantur, in tanta confluentium multitudine, celeri fama, per omnes totius propemodum orbis gentes vulgata fuerunt. Quibus non parum ponderis ex eo acceedit, quod captivus istic, tam mirabilium rerum annunciator, a popularibus quidem suis accusat, sed a Cæsare absolutus, vel certe non damnatus cisset. Wisf. de Vit. Paul. §. 12. num. xxxii.

(f) As before, p. 322.

(g) I shall cite an author or two here, though they may not agree with me about the time of Paul’s appearance before the Emperor.

“Acæs xxvii. 24. Thou muft be brought before Cæsar. By this, and by what Paul says, 2 Tim. iv. 17. it seems, that he had a personal hearing before Nero himself.” Wall’s Crit. Notes upon the N. T. p. 271.
have perceived this. But though this opinion had never had the patronage of any great names, I apprehend, it might be deduced with certainty from St. Luke's historie in the Acts. He is very concise in what he says of Paul after his arrival at Rome. Nor has he said, that Paul was brought before Nero. But it may be argued, and concluded from what he has said.

When Paul was first brought before Festus at Cesarea, after he had been left bound by Felix, at the end of two years imprisonment, and Festus propos'd, that he should go up to Jerusalem, and be there judged before him, Paul said: I stand at Cæsar's judgement seat, where I ought to be judged. Acts xxv. 9. 10. Then Festus, when he had conferred with his council, answered: Hast thou appealed unto Cæsar? Unto Cæsar shalt thou go. ver. 12. Therefore that was now determined. When Festus first spoke to King Agrippa about Paul's affair, he said to him: But when Paul had appealed to be referred to the hearing, or judgment, of Augustus, I commanded him to be kept, till I might send him to Cæsar. ver. 21. And when Festus actually brought Paul before Agrippa, and the rest, he said:
He himself having appealed unto Augustus, I have determined to send him.
ver. 25. After Paul had pleaded before Festus, and Agrippa, and that great company at Cesarea, it is said, ch. xxvi. 31. 32. And the King rose up, and Bernice, and they that sat with them. And when they had gone aside, they talked between themselves, saying: This man doth nothing worthie of death, or of bonds. Then said Agrippa unto Festus: This man might have been set at liberty, if he had not appealed unto Cæsar. After his appeal therefore the sending Paul to Rome was unavoidable. If Agrippa and the rest of that great company did not dare to dismiss him, though they thought him innocent, but judged it needful, that he should go to Rome, it may be reckoned probable, that he was actually brought before the Emperour. And Festus wrote a letter concerning Paul to the Emperour himself, as may be concluded from ch. xxv. 26. 27. And while Paul was in the voyage to Rome, he had a visionary. An angel stood by him, saying: Fear not, Paul, thou must be brought before Cæsar. ch. xxvii. 23. 24.
Certainly, therefore, he was brought before him. And that is what he intends, when he speaks of his apology. Which is also confirmed by what follows: And I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion. Whereby must be meant Nero himself.

And now we may be able to understand those expressions: No man stood with me, but all men forsook me. St. Luke's historie of Paul's arrival at Rome will give great light to those words. Acts xxviii. 13. 15. And we came the next day to Puteoli. Where we found brethren, and were desir'd to tarry with them seven days. And so we went toward Rome. And from thence, when the brethren heard of us, they came to meet us, as far as Appii Forum, and the Three Taverns. Whom when Paul saw, he thanked God, and took courage. The affectionate and respectful visit of so many Christianos from Rome was very refreshing and comfortable to him, after all the fatigues

Nous ne savions douter au moins que S. Paul n'ait comparu devant Neron peu de temps avant sa mort, comme on le voit par sa seconde epître à fatigues of his voyage, and in the disgraceful circumstances of his appearance. But when he was presented to the Emperour, no man stood by him. But all men forsook him. And these are the men, whom he intends: these, and other Christians then at Rome. None of them had courage to appear in his favour, and plead in his behalf, as they might have done. But all drew back, and left him alone. Notwithstanding the Lord stood with me, and strengthened me.

S 2

Let me now represent the progresse of this affair, as it appears to me, after having consulted (b) Lightfoot, and others.

When the prisoners from Judea were brought to Rome, they were all delivered to the Captain of the Guard, or Prefect of the Praetorium. At the same time Julius the Centurion, to whose charge they had been committed, and who had all along courteously entreated Paul [Acts xxvii. 3.] spoke honorably of him to the Prefect, or delivered in a written memorial of his voyage, and the several prisoners, whom he had brought with him, inferring, particularly, some things in favour of this prisoner, and also put into his hands the Governour's letter to the Emperour concerning Paul. The tenour of which, as may be concluded from the letter of Lysias to Felix, ch. xxiii. 25. . . 30. and from other things afterwards recorded in the Acts, omitting the usual forms, not needful to be mentioned here, was to this purpose: "My Lord, when I came into this province, committed to my charge by thy favour, I found a prisoner, "named Paul, left bound by my predecessor Felix, after he had been two "years in custodie. In a short time grievous complaints were made "against him by the chief men of the nation, desiring me to pass sen- "tence of condemnation upon him. Whereupon I appointed them a "a hearing. And being fat on the judgment-feat, I commanded the "man to be brought forth. But when the accusers stood up, they al- "leged no proofs of any thing that could render him criminal in the eye "of our laws. They had only certain questions against him of their "own religion, and concerning one Jesus, who had died, and whom "Paul affirmed to be alive. At this time the man expressed a desire to "be heard at thy tribunal. And having conferred with my Council, and "considering, that he is a citizen of Rome, his appeal was allowed to "be valid. Whereupon I resolvd to send him unto thee, as soon as "I could.

(b) "Julius, the Centurion, that had brought Paul, and the rest of the prisoners from Judea, had been his friend and favorer from his first setting out, and so continued, till his settling at Rome. . . . His accusers, that were come from Judea, to lay in the charge against him, [for we can hardly sup- pose, but that some were come:] would be urgent to get their businesse dis- patched, that they might be returning to their own homes again. And so would bring him to his trial, as soon as they could. And that his trial was early this year, appears by his own words in the second epistle to Timotheus, where he speaketh of his answer, that he had been at, and requireth Timotheus to come to him before winter. 2 Tim. iv. 16. 21.

As he appealed to Nero himself, so Nero himself heard his cause. Philip. i. 13. 2 Tim. iv. 16. And here it was possible for Paul and Seneca to see each other. At which time all that had owned him before, withdrew themselves for fear, and dared not stand by him, or appear with him in his danger." Lightfoot, as before, p. 322.
"I could. In the mean time King Agrippa and Bernice came to the "place of my residence. Who being Jews by nation and religion, and "willing to hear the man, I set him before them, that I might be the "better informed concerning him myself. In their presence, and be- "fore Me, and many others, Roman Officers, and principal men of "this city, he without reserve declared his doctrine, and his concern to "promote it, and indeed his whole life from the beginning. After "which, when the assembly, (as honorable as can be expected to be "seen in any of the provinces:) were gone aside, they talked between "themselves. And they were all agreed, saying: This man doth not- "thing worthie of death, or of bonds: and he might have been set at "liberty, if he had not appealed to Augustus. To thee therefore I now "send him. And to thy cognizance his cause is referred."

When Burrhus, the Prefect of the Pretorium, brought Paul before the Emperor, and delivered the Governor's letter; it is not improbable, that he might add some hints in favour of the prifoner, from the charac- ter given of him by Julius, either by word, or in his memorial. At this audience must have been present, beside Burrhus, divers other cour- tiers, of the greatest eminence and distinction, and perhaps Seneca. It may be likewise suppos'd, that some Jews delegated by the Council at Jerusalem, appeared, to plead against Paul. If there were none, it must have been understood to be a disrespect to the Emperor, and a great prejudice to the cause of the accusers. If there were any such here, it would shew the reasonableness of Paul's expectation, that some of the Christians at Rome should have attended likewise.

At this time, (unless there was another audience soon after,) the Em- peror pronounced sentence upon Paul, and signed the order of his con- finement: such as is related by St. Luke. Acts xxviii. 16. 30. 31. And though Paul was not acquitted, nor set at liberty, it may be esteemed a favourable decision.

It was after this audience of the Emperor, and this sentence, that Paul sent for the Jews at Rome, to come to him. But when he laid before them his cafe, and spoke of the proceedings against him in Judea, and of his appeal to Cæsar; they were very humble, and even low-spirited, and did not choose to enter into discourse upon the matter.

Paul says: Acts xxviii. 19. But when the Jews spake against it, I was con- strained to appeal to Cæsar: not that I had ought to accuse my nation of. These last words may be understood by some, as if he had said: "Not that I have any cause of complaint against my nation." Which would be great complaisance indeed, after he had received so much hard usage from the Jews. But the words may be thus rendered: "Not that I have a design to accuse my nation of any thing." And in that manner they are rendered by (i) Le Clerc, and (k) Lenfant, in their French trans- flations.

†† Burrhus is computed to have died in the year of Christ 62. and Seneca in the year 65. Vid. Bajf. Ann. 62. num. i. et Ann. 65. num. iv.

(i) Mais les Juifs s'y oppoient, j'ai été contraint d'en appeller à Cesar: fans que j'aye neanmoins dessein d'accuser ma nation, en quoi que ce soit. Cl.

(k) . . . fans que j'aye dessein neanmoins d'accuser ma nation, en quoi que ce soit. Lenf.
flations. And it is agreeable to (l) Beza's annotation upon the place, who is another good judge. This sense is very becoming Paul, and was very suitable to his circumstance and situation at that time. It was very proper to pacify the Jews at Rome, who might have been apprehensive of Paul's making use of his interest in the Emperor's Court against them, after he had been so ill used in Judea. But all he aimed at was the vindication of his own innocence, that he might with greater liberty preach the gospel.

Here we see the ground of the difference between Paul's imprisonment in Judea, and at Rome. The difference is manifest. Whilst in Judea, it does not appear, that he had any communication with other churches out of it. He is wholly engaged in his own defense, and does but just secure his life against the violence of the unbelieving Jews, and their Council. But when he came to Rome, and his apologie was over, he was permitted to live by himself, in his own hired house. There he receives intelligence by messengers of the churches, who come to him from divers parts. He makes converts, and writes letters, and has fellow-laborers, whom he sends abroad, as he pleath. We now see the ground of this. As (m) Jerome says, "The Apostle being sent to prison by the Emperor, he becomes acquainted with the Emperor's family, and makes the perecutor's house a church." Referring to Philip. iv. 22. When Paul was in Judea, he was the Governor's prifoner, whose goodwill was restrained by the influence of the people of the countrey. Now he is the Emperor's prifoner, who allows what liberty he pleaseth. And when granted, none dare to control, or abridge it in any measure. Hence all the advantages of this imprisonement, and the happy conclusion of it. Having so much liberty, and being able to receive all who came to him, he makes many converts, and many friends, some in the Emperor's own family, and near his person. Says the Apostle in this very Epistle iv. 16. 17. At my first answer no man stood with me. . . Notwithstanding the Lord stood with me, and strengthened me, that by me the preaching might be fully known, and all the Gentils might hear. It is a cafe much resembling that of our Apostle before, at Corinth. Acts xviii. 9 . . . 11. Then spake the Lord unto Paul in the night, by a vision: Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace. For I am with thee, and no man shall set on thee, to hurt thee. For I have much people in this city. And he continued there a year and six months, teaching the word of God among them. And though he was brought before Gallio the Governor, and accused; he was acquitted, and continued there yet a good while. In like manner here, the Lord stood by Paul, strengthened him, and delivered him. And he afterwards dwelt two whole years at Rome, preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things, which concern the Lord Jesus, no man forbidding him. Acts xxviii. 30. 31.

Some may say, that during this space several of the Apostle's friends and fellow-laborers were apprehended, and imprifoned. Which seems inconsistent with the supposition of his being committed by the Emperor, with an order for allowing him all the liberty, which he enjoyed. For Aristarchus is spoken of, as his fellow-prisoner. Col. iv. 10. and Epaphras, Phil. ver. 23. And Timothie is said to have been set at liberty. Hebr. xiii. 23. Who therefore must have been confined.

(l) Est auatem hoc additum a Paulo, ne putarent Judai ipsum constituisse criminari gentem suam apud Caesarum: cum hoc unum potius ageret, ut nullo hostium incommodo cauflam Chrifti et innocentiam suam tueretur. Beza.

To which I answer, that these imprisonments of some of Paul’s friends and fellow-laborers do not at all weaken our supposition, but confirm it: forasmuch as Paul’s liberty was not abridged, but continued the same all along, until he was quite enlarged. Which affords reason to think, that the method of his confinement was appointed, and ordered by an authority above controle. And it is eafie to conceive, how it came to pafs, that some of Paul’s friends were imprisoned: when it is considered, that he must have had many enemies, and some of his friends acted imprudently, and there were others, who from envy and ill-will were prompted to behave irregularly, with a view of bringing him and his best friends into danger, by expoling them to general refentment, and especially the refentment of men in power. As we learn from Philip. i. 15... 17. And yet it does not appear, that any of Paul’s fellow-laborers endured a long imprisonment. It is not unlikely, that they were taken up, and imprisoned by some inferior officers, to gratify the furie of the common people, who did not dare to keep them long in cuftodie, nothing material appearing against them. As Jerome (n) observes, such frequent short imprisonments and speedy releases were common at the first rife of the Christian religion, before Nero became an open persecutor, and before the publication of such edicts, as affected the lives of the followers of Jesus.

All these considerations cannot but be of great weight, to determine the time of this epistle. However, there are some difficulties, that ought to be taken notice of.

1. Obj. For I am now ready to be offered up, and the time of my departure is at hand. 2 Tim. iv. 6.

These expressions led (o) Eusebius of Cæarea and (p) Jerome, who followed him, and (q) Chrysostom, though he did not follow either, to say, that this was the last epistle of St. Paul, writ only a small space of time, before his martyrdom. And many learned moderns have been of the same opinion, as is well known.

But let us attend to Lightfoot. “There (r) is one passage, says he, in this epistle, which has caused some to doubt about the time of it’s writing.

(o) H. E. l. 2. cap. 22. (p) Quoted Vol. x. p. 111. from De V. I. cap. v.

writing. This is what he says iv. 6. I am now ready to be offered up, and the time of my departure is at hand. Would make one think, that he was now ready to be martyred, and taken away. And it has made some believe, this was the last epistle that ever he wrote. But when we compare his own words again, ver. 17. 18. and Philip. i. 25. and Philem. ver. 22. it maketh past controversy, that he speaketh not of his sudden martyrdom, but that he is to be understood in some other sense... And indeed the resolution of the difficulty lies open and conspicuous in the very text itself. Paul looked upon Timotheus, as the prime and choice man, that was to succeed him in the work of the gospel, when he himself should be dead and gone: as being a young man, not only of singular qualifications for that work, but of whom there had been special prophecies to such a purpose. 1 Tim. i. 18. He exhorts him therefore in this place, to improve all his pains and parts to the utmost, to do the work of an Evangelist, to make full proof of his ministry: ch. iv. 5. for that himself could not laft long, being now grown old, and worn out with travail, and beside all that, in bonds at present, and so in continual danger. Therefore must Timotheus be fitting himself daily to take his work, when he is gone.

So Lightfoot, and, as it seems to me, very properly. To the like purpose Estius upon the same text. Whom (s) I transcribe below.

I likewise place below (t) a part of Barovius's solution of the same difficulty, which appears to me very sufficient.

That Paul had now no certain and prophetic view of suffering martyrdom immediately, is apparent from several things in this epistle: particularly, from his desiring Timotheus to come to him, and to bring Mark with him, as profitable to him for the ministry. He supposed therefore, that he should have an opportunity to employ him in the service of the gospel.

(s) Quare quæ hic ab Apostolo dicuntur non ita sunt accepientia, quasi plane fentiat sese jam jam rapiendum ad martyrium: praefertim cum alia quædam ejusdem epistolae repugnent huic intellectu. ... Sed tanum significat, ipsum, ut de tempore mortis et passioinis incertum, tamen per carceres et tribunalia paras ad viétimam. ... Quocirca non apparat hêc a Paulo dicita suiisse per revelationem aliquam de insinante martyrio sibi factam. ... Illud etiam considerandum est, Paulum loqui, ut jam fenum, et laboriosum confessum, qui próinde non multum vitæ tempus sibi reliquum arbitrarit. Ac quoniam non dubitât, fæ martyrio siniendum, idcirco, et de eo tanquam brevi futuro loquitur: Ego enim, inquit, jam delibor. ... Sensus et connexion est: Idcirco, cum tam fera obfellatione te dicipulum meum officii tui ad-moneo, quod jam famex fim, et incertus quamdiu futurus superiles. Jam enim tanquam vitisima Chrifto deflinatas, per hos carceres, et graviísimos quos patior adversariorum impetus immorali incipio. Ef. ad z Tim. iv. 6.

(t) ... eo enim fenu hâc putant accipienda effe verba, quasi proxime esset Paulus martyrio coronandus, sicque ab eo spiritu prophetico effe pronunciata. ... Sed dicant velim: Nonne idem ipse Paulus in eadem textutur epistola, sibi Dominum apparuisse, dum in summo illo discrimine verfare-tur, horatumque effe, ac fore prædicti, ut per ipsum in omnes Gentes praedicatio impletura? Quomodo igitur hâc sibi coherent, ut in animis Pauli confummatio esset, idemque ipse fia a periculo liberandus, in omnes Gentes prædicationem evangelii propagatus esset? Et reliqua. Ann. 59. n. xiii.
gospel. He likewise must have hoped to receive, and use the things left at Troas, which he desired Timothy to bring to him.

Obj. 2. St. Paul says ch. iv. 18. And the Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly kingdom. By which many have supposed, that the Apostle does not express any hope of being now delivered from death, or the present danger, or any other temporal evil, but from sin, and from all unworthy conduct of his own. So say (u) Le Clerc and (x) Whitby. Paul had been delivered out of the mouth of the lion. But he did not now expect any such deliverance. He only hoped to be preserved from sin, and to be brought to God's heavenly kingdom.

But I do not think, that to be St. Paul's meaning. It is inconsistent with what he had just said: that the Lord had stood by him, and strengthened him, that by him the preaching might be fully known, and that all the Gentils might hear. Which could not be done presently. But must require some time. To me it clearly appears, that the Apostle's words express faith in God, and hope of the divine protection in future difficulties and dangers: or, that God would still deliver him, and uphold him in his service, against all the designs of evil men. And when he had done the work, still remaining for him to do, and fulfilled his testimonie to the gospel, he should be brought safe to God's heavenly kingdom. Accordingly, he was preferred for some good while after this, enjoying, so far as we know, as much freedom in preaching the gospel, as ever he did, till a period was put to his life by martyrdom. As before observed, what the Apostle says here at ch. iv. 16. . . . 18. much resembles what is said Acts xviii. 9. . . . 17. And the Apostle's circumstances at Corinth and Rome, were much alike.

3. Obj. Once more, it may be said, the state of things shews, this epistle to have been writ many years after the first epistle to Timothy, and when Paul was near his death. For he says here ch. i. 15. This thou knowest, that all they which are in Asia be turned away from me. Of whom are Phygellus and Hermogenes. Which implies, that great corruptions now prevailed in Asia, particularly, in the church of Ephesus.

To which I answer: that if the Asiatics, here spoken of, were now at Rome, or had been lately there; we are not hereby led to think disad-\nvantagously of the Christians at Ephesus, and in Asia, in general. That such are the persons here intended, has been the opinion of many, and is very probable. It was formerly observed, that (y) Chrysostom hereby understood such as were at Rome. Ephius, upon the place, says, this was

(u) Non de la mort, mais des mauvaises actions, qu'il aurait fallu que S. Paul fit pour l'eviter. Clerc.

(x) Dr. Whitby's note upon ver. 18. is. "If he will deliver him, as Chrysostom says, why does he say, I am offered? Observe therefore his words. He says not, he will again deliver me out of the power of the lion, but only, that he will preserve me from every evil work, and to his heavenly kingdom. The place of Chrysostom, which I suppose to be here referred to, may be seen: on 2. ad Tit. cap. iv. hom. x. Tom. xi. p. 722. Ed. Bened.

(y) Ch. 118. Vol. x. p. 358.
(z) was the general opinion of the Greek writers. And indeed it is in
(a) Oecumenius, who expressly says, that they which are in Asia is the same, as they which are of Asia. To the like purpose Theophylact: "They
"(b) in Asia are such of Asia, as were then at Rome." Dr. Hammond's paraphrase is to this purpose: "Thou (c) hast heard, I believe, that in "my affliction, I have been deserted by all the Asiatic Christians at Rome,
"excepting only Onesiphorus." So that this interpretation is confirmned by the connexion, it following immediately afterwards: The Lord give mercy to the house of Onesiphorus. For he oft refreshed me, and was not abashed of my chain. But when he was at Rome, he sought me out very diligently, and found me. Rightly does Hammond say, that Timothie had heard of this. It was likely, that before this letter came to Timothie's hands, he might have heard in general, how the Christians at Rome, particularly those of Asia, had carried it toward his great master, now in bonds. But it seems by the Apostle's way of speaking, that he thought he gave Timothie some farther information, especially, when he added: Of whom are Phygelus and Hermogenes. Beaufobre was for the late date of this epistle. Nevertheles he suppoleth (d) the Apostle to speak of some Asiatics, who had been with him at Rome, but were returned to their own country. Mr. Mosheim (e) speaks largely to this place. He understands hereby some Asiaticues, who had left Paul, and were gone home. He thinks, they were guilty of unkindness, and are chargeable with inconstance:
but he does not supposse, that they forsook the Apostle's doctrine, or endeavored to make innovations.

There is no ground therefore to suppose, that Paul here speaks of a general corruption, and defection of the Christians in Asia.

I know not of any other objections, that deserve consideration.
From what has been argued therefore I conclude, that this epistle to Ti-mothie was writ at Rome, when Paul was sent thither by Festus in the year 61.

For

(z) Porro secundum Graecorum expositionem, non est sermo de iis, qui Paulo hae scribente in Asia erant sed qui ex Asia Romam venerant. Eft.
in loc.
(a) Os in τῆς ἀσίας τούτων οί ἐκ τῆς ἀσίας. Oecum. in loc. T. 2, p. 261.
(b) Κατίλητον οὖν οἱ πάντες εἰς τῆς ἀσίας, τούτων οἱ ἐκ τῆς ἀσίας ἰδιομένων τῆς
(c) Audivi, ut opinor, ab Asiaticis Christianis, qui erant Romæ, excepto solo Onesiphoro, me desertum suisse, in mea calamitate. Hammond. in loc. ex versione Clerici.
(d) Il y a de l'apparence, que quelques Asiatiques, qui avoient suivi S.
Paul à Rome, l'avoient abandonné, et s'en étoient retournez dans leur pays.
Beauf. upon the place.
(e) Discerferant hi fine dubio, et in patriam reverterant, quod, Paulo Romæ in vincula conjeclo, vitæ sua metuebant, desperebantque, fore aliquan-do, ut in libertati restitutas itineria, quæ meditabantur, perfequeretur. In hoc vitii eff aliquid: fratrem enim, et multo magis Dei legatum, cui presen-dio et folatio esse possit, in vitæ differimine potissum, reliquere, animi levis est Christianæ disciplinae immemoris. Verum nihil habet hae inconstantia, ex quo intelligi possit, ideo hos homines domum redisse, ut quæ ex Paulo perceperant, dogmata oppugnarent, novasque res inter Christianos moliren-
For determining the time of the year we may receive assistance, not only from those who are for this early date, but from those likewise, who are for a later date of this epistle.

From Paul's deiring Timothie to come to him, before winter, Tillemant (f) concludes, that this epistle was writ near the middle of the year. Witfius thinks, it (g) was writ in the beginning of the summer, So likewise (b) Baronius.

It seems very probable, that Paul came to Rome about the end of February, or soon after, before April, or at the utmost in the beginning of it. But before the writing of this letter several things had passed. His apologie before the Emperor was over. Onesiphorus had made the Apostle divers visits. Several of the Apostle's assistants or fellow-laborers had been with him, since his arrival, and had taken directions from him. Demas was gone to Thessalonica, Crescens to Galatia, Titus to Dalmatia. The epistle to the Ephesians likewise, I suppose to have been writ before, and, if it had not been sent away, it lay ready, at least, to be carried by Tychicus, together with this to Timothie. If therefore Paul came to Rome in March, this letter might be sent away in May, or the beginning of June. The direction, ch. iv. 21. Do thy diligence to come before winter, might proceed from tenderneffe for Timothie, the Apostle himself having lately felt the inconveniences of a winter-voyage. And may also lead us to think, there would be need of Timothie's making dispatch, after the receipt of this letter, left he should be overtaken by bad weather.

In dating this epistle at the time I have done, I have followed (i) Lightfoot, (k) Baronius, (l) ESIUS, (m) Hammond, (n) Witfius. Who have all well affered this date. Witfius, the last mentioned, has an argument upon the point, which he has all along conducted with great candour, and concluded

(f) Il y prie S. Timothée de le venir trouver avant l'hiver. Ainsi ne pouvont pas être plus tard que vers le milieu de l'année. S. Paul art. 49. Mem. Tom. i.

(b) Sed et cum illud admonet, ut ante hiemem fe Romam conferat: certe, si quis exætæ consideret tempus, et locum ipsum, Timotheumque agentem in Asia, ut ejusmodi reddi posset epistolæ, et ipse Troadem ad fumendam penu- lam proficicetur, ac Roman ante hiemem fe conferret: plane inuenit, hoc ipfo anno, ineunte æstate hanc ad Timotheum scriptam epistolam. Baron. ann. 59. num. x.

(i) Harmonie of the N. T. in his Works, Vol. i. p. 324.

(k) Annal. 59. num. x.

(l) Pref. in 2. ad Timoth.

(m) Pref. in 2. ep. ad Timoth.

(n) De Vita et Rebus Pauli Apost. sect. xii. apud Meletem. Leyd. p. 182. &c.
concluded (o) with much modestie: though to me he seems to have removed every difficulty in a very satisfactory manner. And he speaks of Salmero, as being of the same opinion. And besides, in the course of the argument cites from Cocceius, and Solomon Van Till, (with whose writings I am but little acquainted,) divers observations, confirming the same opinion. Cave likewise was of this opinion, when he wrote the Lives of the Apostles, and the first volume of the Lives of the primitive Fathers, in English: expressing himself very clearly, and properly, both in (p) the Life of Paul, and (q) the Life of Timothie. But when he wrote his Historia Literaria, he speaks in the article of St Paul, as (r) if he had quite changed his mind: though in the article of St. Peter, as it still stands in the new edition at Oxford, he (s) speaks exactly as he had done before.

If he altered his mind, I suppose, it must have been in compliance with Pearson, who of late has been followed in this particular by many: who, if they had carefully read the above named authors, might easily have discerned the superiority of their arguments.

To him (t) likewise I suppose, it must be chiefly ascribed, that by the Apostle's first answer, or apologie, many of late have understood an apologie made in a second imprisonment at Rome. Which, as (u) before shewn

(o) Mea si desideretur iπικεισιες lator euidem aliquamdiu me in rationum consìciù animi ancipitem habèisse, quæ quibus anteponendas sint. Omnibus tamen perpenfis, non diffimulo, eo me magis propendere, ut scriptionem hu­jus epistolaæ ad priora Pauli apud Romam vincula referendum esse arbitrer. Ἱb. ἕδ. 12. νυμ. ν.ν.

(p) "It is not improbable, but that about this time St. Paul wrote his second epistle to Timothie. I know, that Eusebius, and the ancients, and most moderns after them, have it written a little before his martyrdom, induced thereunto by that passage in it, that he was then ready to be offered, and the time of his departure was at hand. But, surely, it is most reasonable to think, that it was written at his first being at Rome, and that at his first coming there, presently after his trial before Nero. In it he appoints Timothie shortly to come to him, who accordingly came, and his name is joined together with the Apostle's, in the front of several epistles, to the Philippians, Colossians, and Philemon. Cave's Life of St. Paul, ἕδ. 7. νυμ. ν. ρ. 103. 104.

(q) Life of Timothie. νυμ. ν.ν.

(t) Durant ævennali captivitate Paulus inde scripsit quatuor vel quinque epistolas, ad Colossenses, Ephesios, Philippenses et Philémonum, in quibus nullæ notæ, nullæ indicia, unde vel divinando quis affegi polet, Romæ Petrum tune suisse. ... In posteriori ad Timotheum, quam hoc etiam tempore scriptam esse, maxime est probable. ... Carcer Romano liberatus, dum adhuc in Italia hæceret, scripsit epistolam ad Hebræos. De Petro. H. L. ρ. 9.

See before, ρ. 272. ... 275.
shewn, is contrarie to the general opinion of ancient Christian writers. And indeed appears to me a (x) very unlikely meaning. And to him I suppose it to be entirely owing, that (y) Paul's lion, whom (z) all Christians in general had hitherto understood to be the Emperor Nero, has on a sudden dwindled into (a) Elius, or Helius, the Emperor's freed-man and favourite.

Upon the whole, it appears to me very probable, that this second epistle to Timothie was writ at Rome, when Paul was sent thither by Felix. And I cannot but think, that this ought to be an allowed, and determined point. Accordingly, I now proceed to mention some observations in the way of corollaries.

1. This second epistle to Timothie affords not any argument, that Peter was not at Rome, when Paul came thither a second time, and suffered martyrdom.

Upon these words chap. iv. 16. At my first answer no man stood with with me, but all forsook me. Beza says: "Where (b) was Peter then if " he was at Rome? Did he desert Paul in the time of his difficulty?" But the good man adds: "That Paul's general expressions need not to " be understood absolutely, without any exception." That is very charitable, and benevolent. But indeed, if Peter had then been at Rome, he could not have afforded any assistance to his brother Apostle. Nor would Paul have expected it of him. For Peter was himself an obnoxious per-

(x) Eusebe, S. Jerome, S. Chryfoffome en quelques endroits, et Theo-doret, ont entendu cette premiere defense de son premier voyage. S. Chryfoffome s'en eloigne en d'autres endroits, et l'entend d'une premiere comparion de S. Paul devant Neron dans son dernier voyage. Mais l'autre sentiment eut plus autorite, et fondé sur le sens le plus naturel du texte, &c.

(z) I refer to the collections of Gratius upon 2 Tim. iv. 17. whereby it appears to have been common to give such denominations to bad Princes, not to their officers. And I shall transcribe here a curious passage, to which he only refers, shewing, that Nero, for his bad temper, was early called a lion. Add deæ Scholiais, in Juvenalis, Sat. v. Seneca sub Claudio, quasi cons-ciucius adulteriorum Julia, Germanici filiæ, in Corficanam relegatus, post triennium revocatus eft. Qui etf magnò defiderio Athenas intendert, ab Agripp-pina tanien, erudiendo Neroni, in palatium adduxit, sævum immanemque natum et fenfí cito, et mitigavit, inter familiares solitus dicere ; non fore fevo illi leoni, quin, gultato femel hominis sanguine, ingenita redeat fevitia.

(a) Nobis fane non probatur conjectura doctissimi Pearson, qui communis tententia pertæfus, Helium Cæfareanum designatum suffe exifitem in Annali-bus Paulinian. Neronis potius et furor et dignitas, apta cæ metaphoræ significatur : quomodo defunffo Tiberio Marfias Agrippæ libertus dixit domino fuo : Mortuus eft Leo. Bezae. ann. 64. n. 6.

(b) Ubi tum Petrus, si Rome erat? Num enim quæfo Paulum des eruisset? Sed quod in genere dicitur, etf non temere sic loquitur Paulus, ita ramen accipiendus eft, ut aliqii excipi potuerint, sed perpauci. Beza. in loc.

Paul (c) refers only to such, as by their station were likely to be of some use to him, if they had appeared with him, and had exerted themselves in his behalf.

But though Peter's not appearing upon that occasion affords not any argument, that he was not then at Rome: the entire silence concerning him throughout this epistle affords good reason to think, he was not then at Rome. For ch. iv. 2. Paul lends falutations from Eubulus, Pudens, Linus, and Claudia. If Peter had been then at Rome, he would have been mentioned likewise. We do justly argue from St. Paul's omitting Peter among his salutations sent to divers of the Roman Chrisrians, ch. xvi. that Peter was not then in that city. It is also rightly argued from the silence concerning Peter in the epistles to the Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, and Philemon, that Peter was not at Rome, when they were writ. To which ought to be added this second epistle to Timotheus, as farther confirming the same thing, if written about the same time. But then, if it was written in the year 61, as I suppose; it will not afford any argument against Peter's being at Rome in 64. or 65. and then suffering martyrdom there. About which there ought not to be any doubt. That Peter suffered martyrdom at Rome, is said by the same writers, that speak of the martyrdom of Paul there. The (d) martyrdoms of both the Apostles have a like degree of credibility. For neither is Paul's martyrdom at Rome founded upon the testimony of any sacred book of the New Testament. If this second epistle to Timotheus was writ at the time here argued for, we have no proof from scripture, that Paul was a second time at Rome. Nevertheless, he must have been then a second time, if he suffered martyrdom there, as ecclesiastical historicus says. Consequentially, the martyrdom of Paul at Rome has no other, nor better evidence, than the martyrdom of Peter in the same city.

2. We cannot conclude from this second epistle to Timotheus, that St. Luke was qualified to write the historic of the Apostle Paul, for the space of several years than he has done in the book of the Acts.

Whitby says upon ver. 11. of the iv. chapter of this epistle: "Hence it appears, that Luke must be alive in the 12. or 13. year of Nero, when this epistle was indited." St. Luke might be then alive. But this epistle, if writ in the 7. or 8. year of Nero, affords not any proof, that Luke lived to the 12. or 13. of Nero, or that he was then with Paul. And it may be reckoned probable, that St. Luke did not accompany the Apostle after his release from his imprisonment at Rome.

Again, says Wall upon Acts xxviii. 30. 31. "St. Luke wrote this book about the year 63. . . . It is a wonder, that he did not add the historic of the rest of his life, whither he went, when he was let free, and what he did in the five years afterwards. One might have guessed, that Luke died about this time. But it was not so. He was with Paul"

(c) Loquitur de iis qui prodeffe potuerant, et qui gratia valebant apud aulicos. . . . Potest et ita exponi: Omnes, id est, pene omnes. Est. in loc.

(d) Denique si mentitur traditio de loco Petri martyrrii atque sepulcro, quo nobis indicio licebit Paulum Romae interficiendum esse atque conditum? Unum nobis est argumentum fama confiant, in quo etiam fundamentum collocatur quae per animos invasit, de Petri in urbem et adventu et morte, immota explorataque Veterum sententia. Baeusag. Ann. 64. num. x.
Paul a little before Paul died. As appears from 2 Tim. iv. 11.” But, that St. Luke was alive, and with St. Paul in the year 67. or 68. cannot be inferred from this epistle, if it was writ in the year 61.

3. We are now able to vindicate the character of Demas.

Says Wall upon 2 Tim. iv. 10. “At the former imprisonment, five years ago, Demas was one of Paul’s fellow-laborers. As we learn from Philem. ver. 24.” But that remark will appear preposterous, if the second epistle to Timothie was writ before that to Philemon, as I think it was.

Upon our order of the epistles the case will stand thus. Some time after Paul’s coming from Judea to Rome, upon the appearance of some unexpected difficulties, Demas, who had come to Rome to meet Paul, was discouraged. He did not apostatize from the Christian religion. But out of too great regard for his own safety, he abfented himself from the Apostle, and went where Paul had rather he should not have gone. This is what St. Paul intends, when writing to Timothie, he here says: Demas hath forfaken me, having loved this present world, and is departed unto Thessalonica. ch. iv. 10. But it was not very long, before he returned. Accordingly, Paul makes honorable mention of him, Col. iv. 14. and Philem. 24. epistles, writ near the end of his confinement at Rome.

How disagreeable, to think, that a fellow-laborer of Paul, who had attended him in his bonds, near the end of a two years imprisonment at Rome, should afterwards forfake him! According to our account, his fault, whatever it might be, was first, and his repentance last: and so sincere and compleat, that Paul readily accepted of it, and joins him with his best friends in the salutations sent to Colophie, and Philemon. And, perhaps, Demas had been very useful at Thessalonica, though the Apostle did not send him thither.

Grotius upon 2 Tim. iv. 10. says: “We (e) conclude from Philem. ver. 24. and Col. iv. 14. that Demas repented of his fault.” But that is inconsistent with the late date of the second epistle to Timothie. For if thofe texts prove Demas’s repentance, the second to Timothie must have been writ before thofe two epiflles: as (f) Beza perceived, when he allowed the repentance of Demas.

4. Coates’s (g) argument for the time of St. Mark’s writing his Gospel, built upon the fuppofition, that this second epiflle to Timothie, in which that Evangelium is mentioned, was writ juft before St. Paul’s martyrdom, is of no value.

5. This

(f) Videtur ille poftea reipifecens ad Paulum revertiffe, cum flat ejus men¬tio in epiflola ad Philemonem, quam probabile eft potì hanc scriptam fuiffe, cum in ea flat mentio Timothieh iipsius in inscriptione, atque etiam Marci, quasi jam cum Paulo veriantis. Bez. ad 2 Tim. iv. 10.

5. This second epistle to Timotheus affords not any argument against the supposition, that the epistle to the Hebrews was writ by St. Paul in the year 63, about the time of his being released from his confinement at Rome.

Le Clerc, in his French edition of the New Testament, in his notes upon Hebr. xiii. 23. says: "Nothing (b) of that kind happened to Timotheus during the life of St. Paul. If it had, he would not have failed to take notice of it in his second epistle to him, writ a very short time before his death. And he would have thence taken occasion to say something to Timotheus, by way of commendation, and encouragement, or otherwise. If then Timotheus was not imprisoned, during Paul's life; the mention of these his bonds, and his release, proves this epistle to the Hebrews not to have been written, till after Paul's death." Le Clerc speaks also to the like purpose in his (c) Ecclesiastical Historie. And some before Le Clerc must have been affected with this difficulty, as may be concluded from Beza's notes upon Hebr. xiii. 23.

To which I answer, first, that the original word, rendered by us, set at liberty, may signify (k) sent abroad on an errand. But upon that I do not now insist, and therefore say, Secondly, the epistle to the Hebrews is now generally supposed to have been writ by Paul in the year 63, soon after his release from his imprisonment at Rome. And we know, from the epistles to the Philippians, the Colossians, and Philemon, that Timotheus was with Paul at that time, when his imprisonment was near the period. It is not at all improbable, that Timotheus might be imprisoned, and soon set at liberty again: as divers of Paul's fellow-laborers were. But it is unreasonable to expect, that any notice should be taken of these things, in either of the epistles to Timotheus: one of which was writ before Paul's first imprisonment, as it is called: and the other soon after the beginning of it.

6. There can be no ground from this epistle to conclude a second imprisonment of Paul at Rome. For it was writ in the time of his imprisonment in that city, when he had been sent thither from Judea by Festus.

7. There may be many other things said upon a supposition, that this epistle was writ in a second imprisonment of Paul at Rome, in the year 67, or thereabout. All which must now fall to the ground.

It is often said, that error is endless. And it is certain, that one error is productive of another. This in particular is so. It has occasioned forced and wrong interpretations of divers texts of this epistle, and many

(b) Il n'étoit rien arrivé de semblable à Timothee, pendant la vie de St. Paul, qui lui écrivit cette epitre tres peu de tems avant que de mourir, et qui n'auroit pas manqué d'en parler en quelque occasion. &c. Notes sur Hebr. xiii. 23.

(c) Mentio fit Timothei in vincula conjecti et dimissi. cap. xiii. 23. Quod non contigerat ante posteriorem ad Timotheum, ubi nulla ejus rei, uti nec in priore, vel minima mentio. Quam tamen Paulus non praetermississet, si quid simile contigisset, cum ad laudem Timothei, at constantiam in eo augendam, multum faceret. Itaque in vincula, post coniectas demum ad eum episto- las, aut etiam post mortem Pauli, conjectus fuerit. H. E. A. D. 69. p. 459.

(k) Vid. Mill. Prelegom. num. 68. 69.
many false and groundless suppositions, so contrarie to the truth of historie. I shall take notice of but one more, beside those, which have been already mentioned. Tillemont in his historie of St. Paul’s affairs, in the year 65, some while after he had been set at liberty from his captivity at Rome, says: “It (l) was, perhaps, at this time, that he suffered at Antioch in “Pisidia, at Iconium, and Lystra, the afflictions, which he mentions in “general, in his second epistle to Timothie, ch. iii. 11.” Which to me “appears to me very absurd, and I had almoft faid, ridiculous.

I shall now mention one observation more, of a different kind.

8. We have no reason upon the whole, to regret St. Paul’s imprifonment at Rome.

When we read the opinion of that great companie, which had heard Paul’s pleading at Cesarea. Acts xxvi. 31. This man doth nothing worthie of death, or of bonds: and what Agrippa laid to Festus, in the next verse. This man might have been set at liberty, if he had not appealed to Cesare: we may be disposed to wish, that appeal had not been made, thinking, that in that cafe he might now have been set at liberty. But if we confider things maturely, we shall perceive it to have been necessarie. It was, indeed, prudently made, being the only probable means of his escape from the continued perfecutions of the enraged Jews.

But beside that, there are very many advantages attending it. Which ought to reconcile us to it, and induce us to acknowledge the overruling Providence of God in it. Without that appeal Paul would not have been mentioned to Agrippa. Nor should we have had that excellent apologie for himself, and his doctrine, which he made before Agrippa, and Festus. We should not have had the fine historie of the Apostle’s voyage to Rome, in which are so many affecting incidents. And though he came to Rome as a prifoner, he had there a great deal of liberty. Nor was the word of God bound. As he was able to fay in this epiftle, writ soon after his fefttlement at Rome. 2 Tim. ii. 9. And in his epiftle to the Philippians, 1. 12...14. writ afterwards, are these remarkable words: But I would, ye should understand, brethren, that the things which have happened unto me, have fallen out rather to the furtherance of the gospel. So that my bonds in Christ are manifest in all the palace, and in all other places. And many of the brethren waxing confident by my bonds, are much more bold to speak the word without fear. Says St. Luke: Two whole years Paul dwelt in his own hired house, and received all that came in unto him. Preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching these things, which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, with all confidence, no man forbidding him. Acts xxviii. 30. 31.

Jerome thinks, it (m) was a handsone dwelling, in which was a spacious

(m) Simul autem et prepara mibi hospitium. Non puto tam divitem suffe Apostolum, et tantis farcinis onuntum, ut preparato egeret hospitio et non una contentus cellula, breves corporis sui spatium sedes amplissimas exilimaret. ..Si autem hoc non diffenfatorie, fed vere quis exilimet imperatum, Apostolo magis quam Paulo hospitium preparandum eft, Venturus ad novam civitatem, predictarius crucifixum, et inaudita dogmata delaturus, fcebat...
cious room, where Paul could receive a good deal of company, and di-play his apostolical gifts to advantage. So he beforehand wrote to Philemon, to prepare him a lodging. ver. 22. Not that he should want many things for his own accommodation. But he wished to have a dwelling in a frequented part of the city of Colosse, and large enough to admit conveniently all who were desirous to be informed concerning his document.

Paul had a great desire to go to Rome, and testify there the gospel of Christ. He thought, it is likely, that he should there have a good opportunity to propose it to Jews and Gentiles, of inquisitive tempers, and distinguished characters. Rom. i. 9. 10. . . . Without ceasing making mention of you always in my prayers: making request, (if by any means now at length I might have a prosperous journey by the will of God:) to come unto you.
And ver. 14. 16. I am debtor both to Greeks and Barbarians, to the wife and unwife. So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also. For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ.
For it is the power of God unto salvation, . . . to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. See likewise ch. xv. 28 . . . 32. Well, Paul's desire was fulfilled. He was brought to Rome: and although not in the way, and in the circumstances, which himself would have chosen: yet I suppose, that in the end he had good reason to be well satisfied. Indeed, I think, that the time of his abode at Rome, must have been, upon the whole, as comfortable, and honourable, and useful, as any period of the like duration, since his conversion to the faith of Christ. He was bound, and was guarded by a soldier. But it needs not to be supposed, that the chain was always upon his hand. And notwithstanding the disgraceful circumstance of his bonds, and the disadvantage of his outward appearance in some respects: such were the dignity and importance of his behaviour, such the superiority of his discourse above that of all other men, and such the works, which God enabled him to perform, as could not but secure him the regard of all serious and discerning men. And (n) succe sed in his work would alleviate all his sufferings. For which reason we also ought to rejoice in them, and on account of the testimonies thereby given to the truth and innocence of the Christian doctrine.

In the introduction to the first part of this work, where our concern was with facts occasionally mentioned in the books of the New Testament, I said: Here is withall an account of proceedings and sentences of Courts

ad fe plurimos concursuros: et nescesse erat, primum, ut domus in celebri effe-tur bis loco, ad quam facile conveniretur. Deinde ut ab omni importunitate vacua, ut ampla, quae plurimos caperet audientium: ne proxima spe taculorum locis, ne turpi vicinia detestabilis: postremo, ut in plano potius sita effet, quam in coenaculo. Quam ob cauflam eum exitimo etiam Romanæ in conducento manfisce biennio. Nec parva, ut reor, erat manfio, ad quam Judæo-

(n) Simul autem admirandum de magnanimitate Apostoli, et in Christum mente ferventis. Tenetur in carcere, viniculis [ringitur, iqualœ corporis, carorum separatione, penalibus tenebris coaretur: et non fentit iuribus, non dolore cruciatur, nihil novit aliud, nisi de Christi evangelio cogitare.
Hieron. in Philem. Tom. 4. p. 450. m.
Courts of judicature, in cities of the first rank, and most general resort: and of some discourses made before persons, next under the Roman Emperour, of the highest rank and distinction: Referring to the historie in Acts xxiii. xxiv. xxv. xxvi. But now I should choose to say: And of some discourses made before persons of the highest rank and distinction, not excepting the Roman Emperour himself. For from what has been just now argued, it appears to be very probable, that Paul, when brought to Rome, pleaded once, if not twice, before Nero. And though those pleadings may have been very short: yet from thence, and from the treatment, which Paul had presently afterwards in the Imperial City, ariseth a very forcible argument for the innocence of the Christian doctrine, and it's teachers.

Every one perceives, that St. Paul's pleadings upon the occasions before referred to, in the presence of the Jewish Council at Jerusalem, and before Felix, and Festus, and Agrippa, at Cesarea, do us great honour. Particularly, in this last mentioned apologie, the doctrine, which Paul preached, as received from heaven, was reported to those great personages, and the honourable companie attending them. He lays before them the historie of his life, from his youth up, before he was a Christian, and afterwards. He plainly declares his doctrine, and the zeal, with which he had spread and propagated it every where, among Jews and Gentils, and his unwearied diligence in the cause, in which he was engaged. And in the end all acknowledge, that he did nothing contrarie to the peace of society: and that he might have been set at liberty. But having appealed to the Emperor, it was now requisite, that the cause should be referred to his tribunal, and be finally determined there.

Here therefore is another testimonie to the innocence of Paul, and his doctrine. Festus the Governour of Judea, certainly wrote a letter to the Emperor, giving an account of Paul. Of this all may be satisfied, who observe what is said. Acts xxv. 24. 27. So Lysias, the Tribune, and commanding officer at Jerusalem, when he sent Paul to Felix at Cesarea, wrote a letter, containing an account of the prisoner, and the proceedings against him hitherto. Ch. xxiii. 25. 30. In like manner now acted Festus. Nor can it be imagined, that any Governour should presume to falsify, prevaricate, or disguise, in such a letter. It might be very respectfull to the Emperor, and favorable to the prisoner. But there could be nothing but truth. And there must have been all the truth, that was needful to give a just notion of the cause. And yet Paul is not condemned, but obtains an order for such a custodie, as leaves him at liberty to dwell by himself, in his own hired house, and to receive all who came to him, and to discoursse to them of his doctrine. Here he was two years: during which time he had no molestation. And at length he was released. He was all that time in one place. And the place of his abode was well known. He might have been called for at any time. But there were no complaints made against him, or no such, as could induce those in power to change the order first given.

When Paul lay bound in the castle of Antonia at Jerusalem, after he had been brought before the Jewish Council, and his life was in imminent danger; the night following, the Lord stood by him, and said: Be of good cheer, Paul. For as thou hast testified of me in Jerusalem, so must thou bear witness... witnesses also at Rome. Acts xxiii. 11. Which word of our Lord was fully accomplished: as we are assured in the historie, which St. Luke has given of the Apostle’s going to Rome, and dwelling in that city two whole years, and in the epistles, writ by himself, during that period. Which by the divine goodness are still preserved to us.

According to the preceding argument, the second epistle to Timotheus was sent away from Rome, about the summer of the year 61. probably, in May, or June.

S E C T. XI.

The Epistle to the Philippians.

Here still remain three epistles of St. Paul to be considered by us, which are generally allowed to have been writ during the time of his imprisonment at Rome: the epistles to the Philippians, the Colossians, and Philemon. And I shall speak of them in the order, in which they have been just named.

A. D. 62.

The epistle to the Philippians was writ in the second year of the Apostle’s imprisonment. Timotheus, who had come to him from Ephesus, according to his desire. 2 Tim. iv. 9. 21. is joined with the Apostle in the inscription at the beginning of the epistle. It seems to have been writ not long before the end of his two years imprisonment. For he had some hopes of a release. Ch. i. 24. 25. Nevertheless to abide in the flesh, is more needful for you. And having this confidence, I know, that I shall abide, and continue with you all, for your furtherance, and joy of faith. Yea he expresseth hopes of making the Philippians a visit. Ver. 26. That your rejoicing may be more abundant in Jesus Christ for me, by my coming to you again. And ch. ii. 19. But I trust in the Lord Jesus, to send Timotheus shortly unto you. . . and ver. 23. 24. Him therefore I hope to send presently, so soon as I shall see, how it will go with me. But I trust in the Lord, that I also myself shall come shortly. But though he had hopes of obtaining his liberty, he was not yet certain of it. As appears from those words just cited, so soon as I shall see, how it will go with me: and from what he says ch. ii. 17. Yea, if I be offered upon the sacrifice and service of your faith, I joy, and rejoice with you all. See also ch. i. ver. 20. In the mean time, he sends back to them Epaphroditus, who had come to Rome, with a kind present from the Christians at Philippi, and who had been dangerously sick, but was now recovered. And it is likely, that by him this epistle was carried. So it follows in ver. 25. . . 30. of the second chapter. Yet I supposed it necessary, to send to you Epaphroditus, my brother, and companion in labour, but your messenger, and he that ministered to my wants. . . . I have sent him therefore the more carefully: that when ye see him again, ye may rejoice. Of their kind regard to him he speaks again. Ch. iv. 10. . . 19. In the end of the epistle he sends salutations to the Philippians from the brethren that were with him, and from all the saints, chiefly those of Cesar’s household. Who may be supposed to be the Apostle’s converts, and the perfons, who chiefly contributed to his being set at liberty, and had already given him hopes of it, and and may likewise have been friendly to him in other respects. And at the beginning of this epistle, ch. i. 13. speaking of the progress of the gospel, he says: So that my bonds in Christ are manifest in all the palace, and in all other places.

The salutations in this epistle are singular, being different from those at the end of the other epistles, writ about the same time. First it is said: The brethren which are with me greet you: intending, as I apprehend, Mark, and others, the Apostle's fellow-laborers, mentioned by name near the end of the epistles to the Colossians, and Philemon, but not so mentioned here. Then it is added. All the saints salute you: meaning all the Christians at Rome in general, chiefly, they that are of Cesar's household. The kind present from the Philippians, it is likely, had recomended them to the notice of all at Rome. That testimonie of respect for the Apostle was highly pleasing, and very edifying to the Christians in that city. It seems to have been a handsome sum. And it may be reckoned probable, that the collections made for the Apostle at Rome, and the contributions brought in from abroad, were all put into one bank, and lodged in the hands of some person, or persons of good credit, and substance. Possibly, there was now a superfluity. For St. Paul lays to these Philippians: I have all, and abound. I am full. If there was any thing superfluous, beyond what was requisite for his maintenance at Rome, it would be of use for defraying the expenses of the journeys, which he had in view. And this may be one reason, why this epistle is inscribed to all the saints, which are at Philippi, with the Bishops and Deacons. For there must have been such officers in many of the churches, to which the Apostle sent letters, though they are not mentioned. But the Bishops and Deacons at Philippi had encouraged the contributions made for the Apostle, and had assisted in conveying them to him. And therefore they could not be omitted.

St. Paul came to Rome, as I suppose, in the spring of the year 61.
There he dwelled two whole years in his own hired house. Acts xxviii. 30.
Consequently, his captivity ended in the spring of the year 63.

Hereby I am led to think, that this epistle to the Philippians was writ in the year 62. It was carried by Epaphroditus. Some time after he was gone, I suppose, (as (a) does Mill likewise,) that St. Paul sent Ti-mothie to Philippi, agreeably to his design, mentioned ch. ii. 19. . . 23.
And when he wrote the epistle to the Hebrews, in the spring of the year
63. he was in expectation of Timothie's return to him. Hebr. xiii, 23.
According to this computation, the epistle to the Philippians was writ, and sent away, in the year 62. and some while before the end of it.

(a) De vivendi enim Philippensibus, ubi primo e carcere eavesit, omnino cogitat. . . . Et quidem paullo post misfas hafce literas libertatem a-depus, Timotheum in Macedoniam misit, uti liquet ex Hebr. xiii. 23. &c.
Mill. ProL num. 68.
HE epistles to the Colossians, and Philemon, were sent away together. Chrysostom as (p) formerly observed, thought, that the epistle to Philemon was first writ. That he concluded from Col. iv. 7 . . . 9. However, I shall first speak of the epistle to the Colossians, according to the order, in which the epistles lye in our volume of the New Testament.

The epistle to the Colossians was carried by Tychicus and Onesimus, as we perceive from ch. iv. 7 . . . 9. All my estate shall Tychicus declare unto you . . . Whom I have sent unto you for the same purpose, that he might know your estate, and comfort your hearts: with Onesimus, a faithfull and beloved brother, who is one of you. They shall make known unto you all things (which are done) here.

These two letters, as before said, were sent away at the same time.
But it is likely, that the letter to Philemon was first delivered. For till Onesimus had been received by his master, he could not be a fit person, to joyn in delivering a letter to the church of Colosse.

Timothie joyns with the Apostle at the beginning in the salutation to the saints and faithful brethren in Christ, which are at Colosse. Near the end of the epistle are salutations from Aristarchus, said by the Apostle to be his fellow prisoner, from Mark, Jesus called Justus, Epaphras, Luke the beloved Physician, and Demas.

It might have been expected, that this letter should be carried by Epap-phras, who had come to the Apostle at Rome from Colosse. ch. i. 7. 8.
But he was now the Apostle's fellow prisoner, as is said, Philem. ver. 23.
However he and Aristarchus may have been set at liberty about the same time with St. Paul. Such things were frequent in the early days of the gospel, and before Nero became a persecutor, according to an observation of Jerome in his Commentarie upon the epistle to Philemon ver. 22.
cited by us (q) not long ago.

As Timothie joyns with the Apostle in the salutation at the beginning of this epistle, he was still at Rome, and not yet sent away to Philippi. I therefore conclude, that this epistle was writ about the same time with that to the Philippians, in the year 62. and some while before the end of it.

(q) See before, p. 279.
HILEMON was a citizen of Colosse, in Phrygia.

Paul (r) writes this epistle to him in behalf of Onesimus, a slave, who had robbed his master, and run away. Him Paul had converted to the Christian faith at Rome, during his bonds, which are several times mentioned in this epistle.

Timothie is joined with Paul in the salutations at the beginning of the epistle. At ver. 23. and 24. the Apostle sends salutations from Epaphras, then his fellow-prisoner: from Mark, whom Timothie had brought with him to Rome, according to Paul's desire. 2 Tim. iv. 11. from Luke and Aristarchus, who had accompanied the Apostle in his voyage from Judea to Rome, and had continued with him ever since: and from Demas, who had departed from the Apostle for a while, but was now returned. Compare 2 Tim. iv. 10.

From ver. 19. it is argued by (s) Jerome, as well as by some learned Commentators of late times, that the whole of this epistle was sent in the Apostle's own hand-writing.

St. Paul had now good hopes of obtaining his liberty. For he says at ver. 22. But withall prepare me also a lodging. For I trust, that through your prayers I shall be given unto you. Nevertheless, as Timothie joyns with the Apostle in the salutations at the beginning of the epistle, I think, it was not yet fully determined. For Paul says to the Philippians ii. 23. that he hoped to send him to them presently, so soon as he should see, how it would go with him. As Timothie was still at Rome, and not sent away to Philippi; it may be argued, that the Apostle did not yet certainly know the success of the attempts made use of by his friends to procure his liberty. I therefore conclude, that this epistle was writ about the same time with that to the Philippians, in the year 62. and some while before the end of it.

These three epistles, to the Philippians, the Colossians, and Philemon, are also placed by Mill (t) in the year 62.

I will now add a few observations concerning the epistle to Philemon.

Philemon's station is not certainly known. Gratius thought, he (u) dwelt at Ephesus, and was one of the Elders of that church. Beaufobre in

(s) Quod dicit, tale est. Quod Onesimus furto rapuit, ego me spondeo rediturum. Cujus sponesonis epistola haec et manus testis eit propria. Quam non folito more dictavi, sed mea manu ipse conscripsi. Hier. ib. p. 452.

(t) Vid. Prolegom. num. 68. . . . 70. et 80. . . . 82.

(u) Philemoni dilecto.] Videtur habitasse Ephesi, ubi Onesimus potest episcopatu in his notes upon the first verse of this epistle speaks of Philemon, as (x) one of the Pastours of the church of Colosse.

To me it appears evident, that Philemon was an inhabitant of Colosse. For his servant, Onesimus, is recommended by St. Paul to the church in that city, and said to be one of them. iv. 7. And the Christians at Colosse are required by the Apostle to say to Archippus, Take heed to the miniftrie, which thou haft received. ver. 17. Which Archippus is saluted in the epistle to Philemon. ver. 2.

Theodoret expressly says, that (y) Philemon was a citizen of Colosse, and that the house, in which he dwelt, was still remaining there. Theophylact (z) calls him a Phrygian. Jerome likewise says, he (a) was of Colosse. But he bestows so many words, to make it out, that we may be led to think, there were some in his time, who disputed it.

Philemon, therefore, was a Colossian. But whether he was an Elder there, or only a private Christian, in good circumstances, is not so certain. The inscription is, ut Philemon, our dearly beloved, and fellow-laborer. Which last expression is ambiguous. It may imply, that Philemon was an Elder in the church of Colosse. Or no more may be intended thereby, than in general, that Philemon was some way useful in helping forward the gospel. In the Apostolical Constitutions (b) Philemon is said to have been ordained Bishop of Colosse by the Apostles. But their testimonie is of very little weight. I do not perceive Jerome to say expressly, that (c) Philemon was Bishop, or Elder at Colosse. Perhaps he was not positive about it in his own mind. The Author of the Commentarie upon thirteen of St. Paul's epistles, by some reckoned to be Hilarie, (x) Il paroit par là, que Philemon étoit un des Pasteurs de l'église de Colosse. Beauf.

(c) Scribunt igitur Paulus et Timotheus Philemoni carissimo et cooperatori: qui ideo carissimus dictus est, quod in eodem Christi opere veretur. In ep. ad Philem p. 446.
Hilaric, Deacon of Rome, says, that (d) Philemon had no ecclesiastical dignity, but was one of the laity. And Occumenius, in his prologue to the second epistle of St. John, formerly (e) cited, appears also to have thought Philemon to be a man in private station.

Perhaps some have been the rather unwilling to allow, that Philemon was a Bishop, or Elder, because he had a wife, whose name was Apphia, and because he was a man of substance, who had one slave at least, if not more. Nevertheless we have just observed two learned men, of very good judgement, Gratius and Beausobre, who were not much swayed by those considerations. One of whom thought Philemon to have been an Elder in the church of Ephesus: the other, one of the Paftours of the church of Colosse. To them I can now add (f) Dr. Doddridge.

However, as the thing is of no great importance, so I must acknowledge, that it is not very easy to be decided. St. Paul's expression, fellow-laborer, as before observed, is ambiguous. His manner of address, which is very earnest, farther induces me to hesitate. If Philemon had been an Elder, he must have known his duty. And could not have needed so pressing an exhortation to receive a penitent, and him one of his familie.

Onesimus, unquestionably, was received by the church of Colosse, as a good Christian, upon the Apostle's recommendation. It is as reasonable to think, that Philemon was reconciled to him: and, probably, gave him his freedom. In the Apostolical Constitutions (g) he is said to have been Bishop of Berea in Macedonia. When Ignatius wrote his epistle to the Ephesians, about the year 107, their Bishop's name was Onesimus. And Gratius (h) thought him to be the same, for whom Paul interceded with Philemon. But that (i) is not certain.

S E C T. XIV.

The Epistle to the Hebrews.

I shall inquire, 1. to whom it was writ. 2. in what language. 3. by whom. 4. the time and place of writing it.

I. In the first place let us consider, to whom this epistle was writ.

Sir Isaac Newton thought, "That (k) this epistle was writ to Jewish believers, who left Jerusalem about the time that the war broke out, and went into Asia." According to this account,

(d) Philemon nulla erat ecclesiasticae ordinationis praeditus dignitate, sed vir laudabilis, unus ex plebe. &c. Prolig. in ep. ad Philem.
(e) See p. 120.
(g) Lib. 7. cap. 46.
(h) See before note (u) p. 295.
(k) "The epistle to the Hebrews, since it mentions Timothy, as related to "the account, the epistle could not be writ, till some while after the breaking out of the war in Judea, in the year 66. But it will be difficult to shew, that Paul, whom Sir Isaac allows to be the writer, lived so long. Not now to mention any thing else.

Dr. Wall was inclined to the same opinion, or somewhat not very different. "I (i) agree, says he, that the epistle was writ to Hebrews, that "is, to the Hebrew Chriftians of some place. But for the place or coun- "trey, I think, they were rather the Hebrew Chriftians of Asia, (Ephesus, "Miletus, and thereabout,) Macedonia, Greece, &c. where St. Paul had "spent moft of his time, than that they were thofe of Jerusalem, &c." The late Mr. Wetftein conjectured, that (m) the epifle was writ by Paul to the Jewish believers at Rome, Soon after he had been releafed from his confinement in that city. Which conjecture, I believe, will be fol- "lowed by very few. And as it has no ancient authority, and is deftitute of all appearance of probability; I fuppofe, it need not to be confuted.

Lightfoot thought, "That (n) this epistle was fent by Paul to the be-"living Jews of Judea, a people, fays he, that had been much engaged "to him, for his care of their poor, getting collections for them all along "in his travels." He adds: "It is not to be doubted indeed, that he "intendeth the discourse and matter of this epiftle to the Jews through"out their diſpersion.—Yet does he endore it, and fend it chiefly to "the Hebrews, or the Jews of Judea, the principal part of the circum-
"cision, as the properet centre, to which to direct it, and from whence "it might be best diffused in time to the whole circumference of the di-"persion."

Whitby, in his preface to the epiftle to the Hebrews, is of the fame op- "inion, and argues much after the fame manner with Lightfoot.

So likewise (o) Mill, (p) Pearfon, (q) Lewis Cappell, and Beza in his preface to this epiftle, and the editors of the French N. T. at Berlin, in their general preface to St. Paul's epiftles, and in their preface to this epiftle in particular. Of this Mr. Hallett had no doubt, who in his Synopfis of the epiftle fays: "This epiftle was particularly designed for the Hebrew

"the Hebrews, must be written to them, after their flight into Asia: where "Timothy was Bishop, and by confequence after the war was begun." New- "ton's Observations upon the Apoc. of St. John. ch. i. p. 244.

(i) Critical Notes upon the N. T. p. 317. 318.

(m) Si conjectura locus elft, exilimaverim potius ad Judæos Qui Romæ de"gebant, et Chrifti nomen deranter, scriptam fuiffe: quo admiffo, facile in"telligitur, qui factum, tum ut Paulus, qui Româ quidem, fed non Italiâ, excedere juftius erat, brevi â rediturum fperaret, tum ut Itali Romanos fa-

(o) Per Hebræos autem illos potifsimum fideles Hierofolymitanos intelligen-
"tur, apud quos ante duo annos verfatus fuerat. Hinc illud, ἔπανοικαστα-

(q) Ex quibus conjicere licer, hanc epiftolam a Paulo sub finem priorum
"vinculorum Româ scriptum fuiffe ad Hierofolymitanos Iudæos, qui in Chri-
"Hebrew Christians, that dwelt in one certain place, and was sent thither, as appears from the Apostle's saying, ch. xiii. 19. 23. I beseech you the rather to do this, that I may be restored to you the sooner. ... I will see you. And what particular place can this be supposed to be, but Judea? There the Christians were continually persecuted by the unbelieving Jews, as we read in the Acts of the Apostles, and as St. Paul takes no-tice i Thess. ii. 14. Hebr. x. 32. ... 36. xii. 4. 5. By these persecutions the Hebrew Christians were tempted to apostatise from Christianity, and to think, there was strength in the arguments urged by the persecutors in favour of Judaism. The Apostle therefore sets himself "to guard against both these dangers." And what follows. This appears to me to be the most probable opinion.

For 1. It is the opinion of the ancient Christian writers, who received this epistle.

It may be taken for granted, that this was the opinion of (r) Clement of Alexandria, and (s) Jerome, and (t) Euthalius, who supposed this epistle to have been first written in Hebrew, and afterwards translated into Greek. It may be allowed to have been also the opinion of many others, who quote this epistle, as writ to Hebrews, when they say nothing to the contrary. Nor do I recollect any ancients, who say it was writ to Jews living out of Judea.

Chrysostom says, that (u) the epistle was sent to the believing Jews of Palestine. And supposeth, that the Apostle afterwards made them a visit. Theodoret (x) in his preface to the epistle, allows it to be sent to the same Jews. And Theophylact (y) in his argument of the epistle expressly says, as Chrysostom, that it was sent to the Jews of Palestine. So that this (b) was the general opinion of the ancients.

2. There are in the epistle many things especially suitable to the believers in Judea. Which must lead us to think, it was writ to them. I shall select such passages.

1.) Hebr. i. 2. ... has in these last days spoken unto us by his Son.
2.) Ch. iv. 2. For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as to them.
3.) Ch. ii. 1. ... 4. Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things, that we have heard ... how then shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him: God also bearing them witness with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost.

Does

(i) Scripserat ut Hebræus Hebraeis Hebraice, id est, suo eloquio disertissime. De V. I. cap. v.
(u) Πε δὲ ὡς ἐπιτίθελλαι; Εμοῦ δοκεῖ ἐν εἰς ἑσδολομοίς ἦν παλασίν. ... Δό δὴ ὡς ὡς ἐπιτίθηνες ὄντως διδομενος ὁτα ἢ ἡθεῖον, ὡς εἰς τὰς στασίας ἵνα ἔρθην. εἰτα ἐν商标 ἵναιν ἐνῃ, ὡς ἦν ἵναιν ἐνῃ. Καὶ τότε καλίν ἴδον εἰς ἵδον, ὡς κ. ὡς ἵδον ἴδεν. Πρ. in ep. ad Hebr. T. 12. p. 2.
(x) Vid. Theodoret argument. ep. ad Hebr.
(b) Voyez la pref. de Beaufobre sur l'épître aux Hebr. num. xxxviii.
Does not that exhortation, and the reason, with which it is supported, peculiarly suit the believers of Judea, where Christ himself first taught, and then his disciples after him, confirming their testimonies with very numerous and conspicuous miracles?

4. The people, to whom this epistle is sent, were well acquainted with our Saviour's sufferings, as they of Judea must have been. This appears in ch. i. 3. ii. 9. 18. v. 7. 8. ix. 14. 28. x. 11. xii. 2. 3. xiii. 12.

5. Ch. v. 12. For when ye ought to be teachers of others, and what follows, is most properly understood of Christians in Jerusalem, and Judea, to whom the gospel was first preached.

6. What is said ch. vi. 4. . . . 6. and x. 26. . . . 29. is most properly applicable to apostates in Judea.

7. But call to remembrance the former days, in which, after ye were illuminated, ye endured a great fight of afflictions . . . to the end of ver. 34. This leads us to the church of Jerusalem, which had suffered much, long before the writing of this epistle, even very soon after they had received the knowledge of the truth. Comp. Acts viii. 1. ix. 1. 2. x. 19. and 1 Thess. ii. 14. Grotius (i) supposed as much.

8. Those exhortations ch. xiii. 13. 14. must have been very suitable to the case of the Jews of Jerusalem, at the supposed time of writing this epistle, a few years before the war in that country broke out.

9. The regard shewn in this epistle to the rulers of the church, or churches, to which it is sent, is very remarkable. They are mentioned twice or thrice: first in ch. xiii. 7. Remember your rulers, who have spoken unto you the word of God: whose faith imitate, considering the end of their conversation. These were dead, as (k) Grotius observes. And Theodoret's note is to this purpose: "He (l) intends the saints that were dead, "Stephen the proto-martyr, James the brother of John, and James called "the Juft. And there were many others, who were taken off by the "Jewish rage. Consider these, says he, and observing their example, "imitate their faith." Then again, at ver. 17. Obey them that have the rule over you, and submit yourselves. For they watch for your souls. . . . And once more ver. 24. Salute all them that have the rule over you, and all the saints. Upon which Theodoret says: "This (m) way of speaking intimates, that their rulers did not need such instruction. For which reason he did not write to them, but to their disciples." This is a fine observation. And Whitby upon that veré, says: "Hence it seems evident, that this epistle was not sent to the Bishops or rulers of the church, but to the whole church, or the laity." And it may deserve to be considered,

(k) Loquitur autem de iis, qui jam obierant, ut offendunt sequentia. Qui ubi locuti sunt verbum Dei: nempe in diversis oppidis: forte etiam diversis temporibus, cum mortuis alii succedissent. Id. ad Hebr. xiii. 7.

(l) In ep. ad Hebr. cap. xiii. Tom. 3. p 459. D.

(m) Nil stare in ò λόγοις, οι δ' περισσαίους αυτον τοιαύτης διδάσκαλιας οι ἐκτίκταις δε νεω τε κατευθείς εστίν, αλλ' τοις μαθηταῖς. Ibid. p. 462. D.
Hebrews, 301. and in Judea. 22. Notices of Judæa. Upon this text, Dr. Wetstein, whose words I place below, argued much after the same manner with Dr. Wall. This objection, perhaps, might be strengthened from Hebr. xiii. 2. Be not forgetful to entertain strangers. And from ver. 16. To do good, and to communicate, forget not.

Answ. But the poverty of the Jews in Judea, and the contributions of the Gentile churches for their relief, are no reason, why such admonitions as these should not be sent to them. They are properly directed to all Christians that they may be induced to exert themselves to the utmost. The Gentile churches, among whom St. Paul made collections.

(n) Critical Notes upon the N. T. p. 306.
(o) Secundo non poffunt intelligi, qui Hierosolymis degebant. Hi enim pauperiores erant, et opus habeabant, ut eorum inopia ab aliis ecclesiis sublevaretur. Iis vero, ad quos hae epistola scripta est, commendatur beneficentia. xiii. 16. vi. 10. Erant ergo tales, non qui slipem accipere, sed qui dare debebant, solentabantque. Wetf. ubi supr. p. 368. fin.
ons for the saints in Judea, were not rich. As he says. 1 Cor. i. 26. For ye know your calling, brethren ... not many mighty, not many noble, are called. ... And of the churches in Macedonia, he says. 2 Cor. viii. 2. ... How that in a great trial of affliction, the abundance of their joy, and their deep poverty, had abounded unto the riches of their liberality. In like manner there might be instances of liberality to the distresses among the believers in Judea. There is a very fine example recorded. Acts ix. 36. ... 39. Nor was there ever any city or countrey in the world, to whom that exhortation, be not forgetful to entertain strangers, or be not unmindful of hospitality, τοις φιλοξενοις μη παρακαμψοι, could be more properly given, than Jerusalem, and Judea. For the people there must have been much accustomed to it at their festivals, when there was a great resort thither from all countreys. And the writer of an epistle to the Christian inhabitants of Jerusalem and Judea would naturally think of such an admonition: being desirous, that they should not fall short of others in that respect. And we may here not unjustly recollect the history of St. Paul's going to Jerusalem, and how he, and his fellow-travellers were entertained at Caeræa, in the house of Philip the Evangelist, and at Jerusalem, in the house of Mnason, and old disciple. As related Acts xxii. 8. ... 16.

2. Obj. Upon ch. xiii. 18. 19. the same (p) Dr. Wall says: "One would think, that Paul should have prayed and purposed to go any "whither, rather than to Jerusalem, where he had been so used: and "where he fell into that five years imprisonment, from which he was "but just now delivered." To the like purpose also (q) Mr. Wet- "stein."

But there is not any improbability, that Paul might now desire to see his countrymen in Judea: if he might go thither with safety, as I think he might. Almost three years had now passed, since he left Judea. And his trial, or apologie, had been over two years. And he was now set at liberty by the Emperor himself. No man, not very presumptuous, would admit a thought of disturbing him. However, I suppose, that the Apostle would behave discreetly: so as to give no needless provocation to any, and that he would stay but a short time in Judea, and then go to Ephesus. There have been men of good sense, who have sup- posed, that Paul went to Jerusalem about this time, particularly Chr- "föllom (r) among the ancients, and (s) divers moderns, one of whom is (t) Pearson.

3. Obj. "St. (u) Peter's epistles were written to the Hebrew Chris- "tians, scattered in Asia, and Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, and Bithynia. "St. Paul must have written an epistle to those Hebrew Christians, to "whom St. Peter writes his two epistles. For St. Peter 2 ep. iii. 15. "cites to them what Paul had written unto them. No epistle of Paul "was

(p) As before. p. 316.
(q) Ubi supra. p. 386.
(r) See before. p. 299.
(u) Wall, as before. p. 318. 319.
"was written to Hebrews, particularly, but this. So that these must be "the Hebrews of the above named countries."

To which I answ'r, that St. Peter's epistles were not sent to Jews, but to Gentils, or to all Christians in general, in the places above mentioned, as will be clearly shewn hereafter. When St. Peter says, as Paul has written unto you, he may intend Paul's epistle to the Galatians, and (x) some other epistles, writ to Gentils. If he refers at all to this epistle to the Hebrews, it is comprehended under that expression ver. 16. as also in all his epistles.

4. Obj. This epistle to the Hebrews seems to have been writ in Greek. But if it had been sent to the Jewish believers in Judea, it would have been writ in Hebrew.

To which I answ'r, that allowing the epistle to have been writ in Greek, it might be sent to the believers in Judea. If St. Paul wrote to the Jewish believers in Palestine, he intended the epistle for general use, for all Christians, whether of Jewifh or Gentil original. Many (y) of the Jews in Judea, understood Greek. Few of the Jews out of Judea understood Hebrew. The Greek language was almost universal, and therefore generally used. All St. Paul's epistles are in Greek, even that to the Romans. And are not both St. Peter's epistles in Greek? and St. John's, and St. Jude's? Yea, did not St. James likewise write in Greek, who is supposed to have refided at Jerusalem, from the time of our Lord's ascension to the time of his own death? His epistle is inscribed to the twelve tribes, scattered abroad. But I presume, that they of the twelve tribes, who dwelt in Judea, are not excluded by him, but intended. Nor could he be unwilling, that his epistle should be read and understood by those, who were his special charge. The epistle writ by Barnabas, a Levite, or ascribed to him, was writ in Greek. Not now to mention any other Jewish writers, who have used the Greek language.

II. Thus we are unawares brought to the inquiry, in what language this epistle was writ. For there have been doubts about it among both ancients and moderns. So that we are obliged to take some particular notice of this point. But I should have deferred the consideration of it, till we had observed the writer of the epistle, if the just mentioned objection had not brought this inquiry in our way in this place.

And it may be recollected, that (z) I formerly alleged divers learned and

(x) Videtur repicere Petrus ad Rom. ii. 4. ubi de Dei longanimitate familia habet his que docte hic Petrus: dicereque ad Afiaticos scriptam epistolam, quae ad Romanos data, eo quod epistolae Pauli, quamquam ad fingulas ecclesias, et homines singulos, mittit, omnium Christianorum illius eii communes jure haberentur. Cleric. H. E. A. 69. p. 459.

(y) Ils n'ont point eu d'autre raison de croire, que S. Paul avoit écrit en Hebreu, que celle qu'il écrivoit à des Hebreux. Or cette raison, toute vraisemblable qu'elle paraît, n'est point convaincante, parcequ'il est certain, que la langue Grecque eft entendue dans la Judée, quoiqu'elle ne fût pas la langue vulgaire. Tous les auteurs du nouveau Testament ont écrit en Grec, bien qu'ils écrivissent pour tous les fidèles, soit Hebreux, soit Gentils. Beaus. Pref. sur l'epître aux Hebreux. num. xo.

(z) See Vol. viii. p. 189. ... 191, and judicious moderns, who have been of opinion, that Greek, and not Hebrew, was the original language of this epistle. To them I now add several others: (a) James Cappell, (b) S. Bajnaye, (c) Mill in his Prolegomena to the New Testament, and (d) the late Mr. Wetstein, and also (e) Spanheim in his dissertation concerning the author of this epistle, which well deserves to be consulted. One argument for this, both of (f) Spanheim, and (g) Wetstein, is taken from the Greek paronomasia in the epistle, or the frequent concurrence of Greek words of like sound. Which seems to be an argument, not safe to be answered.

Some ancient Christian writers were of opinion, that the epistle to the Hebrews was writ in the Hebrew language, and (b) translated into Greek by Luke, or Clement of Rome. Jerome (i) in particular seems to have supposed, that this epistle was writ in Hebrew. And Origen also is sometimes reckoned among those, who were of this opinion. But I think, I have shewn it to be probable, that (k) he thought it was writ in Greek. It seems likewise, that they must have been of the same opinion, who considered the elegance of the Greek language of this epistle as an objection against it's having been writ by St. Paul. For if the Greek epistle had been supposed to be a translation, the superior elegance of the style of this epistle above that of the other epistles of Paul could have afforded no objection against his being the author of it.

Indeed

(a) Jacob. Cappell, observat. in ep. ad Hebr. §. ii. et iii.
(b) Ann. 61. num. vi.
(c) Et fane magis adhuc futilis est eorum sententia, qui hanc epistolam Paulo quicem Hebraice scriptam volunt ab alio autem aliquo traducemus fuisse in sermonem Graecum. Nihil enim clarius atque evidentius, quam eam linguam Graecce primitus conceptam fuisse. &c. Prolegom. num. 95. . . . 98.
(i) Ch. 114. vol. x. p. 113.
Indeed the ancients, as Beausobre said (l) formerly, had no other reason to believe, that St. Paul wrote in Hebrew, but that he wrote to the Hebrews. So likewise says (m) Cappellus. The title deceived them. And because it was writ to Hebrews, they concluded it was writ in Hebrew. For none of the ancients appear to have seen a copy of this epistle in that language.

III. I now proceed to the third inquirie, who is the writer of this epistle. And many things offer in favour of the Apostle Paul.

I. It is ascribed to him by many of the ancients.

Here I think myself obliged briefly to recollect the testimonies of ancient authors, which have been produced at large in the preceding volumes. And I shall rank them under two heads: first the testimonies of writers who used the Greek tongue, then the testimonies of those who lived in that part of the Roman Empire, where the Latin was the vulgar language.

There are some passages (n) in the epistles of Ignatius, about the year 107. which may be thought by some to contain allusions to the epistle to the Hebrews. This epistle seems to be referred to by (o) Polycarp Bishop of Smyrna, in his epistle, writ to the Philippians in the year 108. and (p) in the Relation of his Martyrdom, writ about the middle of the second centurie. This epistle is often quoted as Paul's by (r) Clement of Alexandria, about the year 194. It is received, and quoted as Paul's by (s) Origen, about 230. It was also received as the Apostle's by (t) Dionysius Bp. of Alexandria in 247. It is plainly referred to by (u) Theognostus, of Alexandria, about 282. It appears to have been received by (x) Methodius, about 292. by (y) Pamphilus, about 294. and by (z) Archelaus, Bp. in Mesopotamia, at the beginning of the fourth centurie, by (a) the Manicheans in the fourth, and (b) by the Paulicians, in the seventh centurie. It was received, and ascried to Paul by (c) Alexander, Bp. of Alexandria, in the year 313. and by (d) the Arians in the fourth centurie. Eusibius, Bishop of Cesarea, about 315. says, there (e) are fourteen epistles of Paul, manifest and well known: but yet there are some, who reject that to the Hebrews, alleging in behalf of their opinion, that it was not received by the church of Rome, as a writing of Paul. It is often quoted by Eusibius himself,

(p) P. 223. (q) Vol. ii. p. 474. and 503. 504.
(u) Vol. iv. p. 162. ... 164. (s) Vol. v. p. 258. ... 261.
(a) Vol. vi. p. 336. (u) P. 423. ... 432.
(e) Vol. vii. p. 250. (d) P. 280. ... 282.
(c) Vol. viii. p. 160. 161. See also p. 110.
This epistle was received by (g) Athanasius, without any hesitation. In his enumeration of St. Paul’s fourteen epistles, this is placed next after the two to the Thessalonians, and before the epistles to Timothy, Titus, and Philemon. The same order is observed, (b) in the Synopsis of Scripture ascribed to him. This epistle is received as Paul’s by (i) Adamantius, author of a Dialogue against the Marcionites in 330. and by (k) Cyril of Jerusalem, in 348. by (l) the Council of Laodicea, in 363. Where St. Paul’s epistles are enumerated in the same order, as in Athanasius, just taken notice of. This epistle is also received as Paul’s by (m) Epiphanius, about 368. by (n) the Apostolical Constitutions, about the end of the fourth century. by (o) Basil, about 370. by (p) Gregorie Nazianzen, in 370. by Amphilochius (q) also. But he says, it was not received by all, as Paul’s. It was received by (s) Gregorie Nyffen, about 371. by (t) Didymus of Alexandria, about the same time, by (u) Ephraim the Syrian, in 370. and by (x) the churches of Syria, by (y) Diadore of Tarfis, in 378. by (z) Hierax, a learned Egyptian, about the year 302. by (a) Serapion, Bishop of Thmuis, in Egypt, about 347. by (b) Titus, Bp. of Sostra, in Arabia, about 362. by (c) Theodore, Bp. of Mopsea, in Cilicia, about the year 394. by (d) Chrysostom, at the year 398. by (e) Severian, Bp. of Gabala, in Syria, 401. by (f) Victor, of Antioch, about 401. by (g) Palladius, author of a Life of Chrysostom, about 408. by (h) Siodore of Pelusium, about 412. by (i) Cyril, Bp. of Alexandria, in 412. by (k) Theodoret, at 423. by (l) Eutherius, Bp. of Tyana, in Cappadocia, in 431. by (m) Sozocrates, the Ecclesiastical Historian, about 440. by (n) Euthalstus, in Egypt, about 458. and, probably, by (o) Dyonisius, falsely called the Areopagite. by (p) the Author of the Quæstiones et Reponsones, commonly ascribed to Justin Martyr, but rather writ it the fifth century. It is in (q) the Alexandrian manuscript, about the year 500. and (r) in the Stichometrie of Nicephorus, about 806. is received as Paul’s by (s) Cosmas of Alexandria, about 535. by (t) Leontius of Constantinople, about 610. by (u) John Damascen in 730. by (x) Photius, about 858. by (y) Occumenius, about the year 950. and by (z) Theophylact in 1070. I shall not go any lower.

I shall

(f) Vol. viii. p. 147. . . . 150.
(g) Vol. viii. p. 227. and 232.
(b) P. 243. . . . 245.
(l) P. 256.
(m) Vol. viii. p. 304. and 308.
(o) Vol. ix. p. 113. 114.
(p) P. 133.
(i) P. 156.
(x) P. 217. 218.
(a) The same. p. 45.
(b) Vol. vii. p. 51. and 336.
(c) Vol. ix. p. 395. 396.
(d) Vol. x. p. 312. 335.
(e) Vol. xi. p. 3.
(f) Vol. xi. p. 38.
(g) P. 60.
(h) P. 69.
(k) Vol. xi. p. 80. 84.
(l) P. 123.
(m) P. 452.
(u) Vol. xi. p. 212.
(p) See Vol. i. p. 262. the 2d. ed.
(q) Vol. xi. p. 240.
(r) P. 249.
(i) Vol. xi. p. 269.
(t) P. 383.
(u) P. 393.
(x) P. 401.
(j) P. 410.
(z) P. 418.
I shall now rehearse such authors, as lived in that part of the Roman Empire, where the Latin was the vulgar tongue.

Here in the first place offers Clement in his epistle to the Corinthians, written about the year 66. or as some others say, about the year 70. For though he wrote in Greek, we rank him among Latin authors, because he was Bishop of Rome. In his epistle (a) are divers passages, generally supposed to contain allusions, or references to the epistle to the Hebrews. Irenaeus, Bishop of Lyons, about 178. as we are assured by Eusebius, alleged (b) some passages out of this epistle, in a work now lost. Nevertheless, it does not appear, that he received it, as St. Paul's. By Tertullian, Prefbyter of Carthage, about the year 200. this (c) epistle is ascribed to Barnabas. Caius, about 212. supposed to have been Prefbyter in the church of Rome, reckoning (d) up the epistles of St. Paul, mentioned thirteen only, omitting that to the Hebrews. Here I place Hippolitus, who flourished about 220. But it is not certainly known, where he was Bishop, whether at Porto in Italie, or at some place in the East. We have seen evidences, that (e) he did not receive the epistle to the Hebrews, as St. Paul's. And perhaps, that may afford an argument, that though he wrote in Greek, he lived, where the Latin tongue prevailed. This epistle is (f) not quoted by Cyprian, Bishop of Carthage, about 248. and afterwards. Nor does it appear to have been received by (g) Novatus, otherwise called Novation, Prefbyter of Rome, about 251. Nevertheless it was in after times received (b) by his followers. It may be thought by some, that this epistle is referred to by (i) Arnobius, about 306. and (k) Labianus, in the fifth century. It was received, as Paul's, by (m) Hilarie, of Poitiers, about 354. and (n) by Lucifer, Bishop of Cagliari, in Sardinia, about the same time, and by (o) his followers. It was also received, as Paul's, by (p) C. M. Victorinus. Whether (q) it was received by Optatus, of Milevi, in Africa, about 370. is doubtful. It was received, as Paul's, by (r) Ambrose, Bishop of Milan, about 374. by (s) the Priscillianists, about 378. About the year 380. was published a Commentarie upon thirteen epistles of Paul only, (t) ascribed to Hilarie, Deacon of Rome. It was received as Paul's by (u) Hilasfer, Bishop of Brocilia in Italie, about 380. But he takes notice, that it was not then received by all. His successor Gaudentius, about 387. quotes this (x) epistle as Paul's. It is also readily received as Paul's by (y) Jerome, about 392. And he says, it was generally

(a) Those passages are alleged, with remarks. Vol. i. p. 87...95. first ed. p. 85...94. 2d ed. And see p. 103. first ed. p. 101. 2d ed.
(b) See Vol. i. p. 368...372. and p. 381.
(c) See Vol. ii. p. 606...612. (d) See Vol. iii. p. 24...31.
(e) See Vol. iv. p. 86. 88. 110.
(g) See Vol. vi. p. 93...98. (b) The same p. 97. and 105. 106.
(i) See Vol. vii. p. 52. (l) P. 185...188.
(k) P. 45. and 47. (p) P. 59. (g) See Vol. ix. p. 235. 236.
(l) P. 249. 250. (s) P. 325...328. (t) P. 361.
(m) P. 373...376. (x) P. 379. (y) Vol. x. p. 76. 112. 113. and 119. rally received by the Greeks, and the Christians in the East, but not by all the Latins. It was received as Paul's by (z) Rufin in 397. It is also in (a) the catalogue of the third council of Carthage, in 397. It is frequently quoted by (b) Augulf, as St. Paul's. In one place (c) he says, "It is doubtful authority with some. But he was inclined to follow
"the opinion of the churches in the East, who received it among "the canonical scriptures." It was received, as Paul's, by (d) Chroma-tius, Bp. of Aquileia, in Italy, about 401. by (e) Innocent, Bp. of Rome, about 402. by (f) Paulinus, Bp. of Nola in Italy, about 403. Pelagius (g) about 405. wrote a Commentarie upon thirteen epistles of St. Paul, omitting that to the Hebrews. Nevertheless it was received by (h) his followers. It was received by (i) Cassian, about 424. by (k) Prosper of Aquitan, about 434. and by (l) the Authors of the works ascribed to him: by (m) Eucherius, Bp. of Lyons, in 434. by (n) Sedulius, about 818.
by (o) Leo, Bp. of Rome, in 440. by (q) Salvian, Prefbyter of Marfelles, about 440. by (r) Gelajus, Bp. of Rome, about 496. by (s) Facundus, an African Bifhop, about 540. by (t) Junillus, an African Bifhop, about 556.
by (u) Caffidorius in 556. by (x) the Author of the imperfect Work upon St. Matthew, about 560. by (y) Gregorie, Bp. of Rome, about 590. by (z) Ifidore, of Seville, about 596. and by (a) Bede, about 701.
or the begining of the eighth centurie.

It may be now needful to make a few remarks.

It is evident, that this epistle was generally received in ancient times, by those Christians, who used the Greek language, and lived in the Ea-tern part of the Roman Empire. I forbear to insift here on the seeming references in Ignatius, and Polycarp. But Clement of Alexandria, before the end of the second centurie, received this epistle as Paul's, and quotes it as such frequently, without any doubt, or hesitation. And had a tradition from some before him, concerning the reason, why the Apostle did not prefix his name to this, as he did to his other epistles.

Concerning the Latin writers it is obvious to remark, that this epistle is not expressly quoted, as Paul's, by any of them in the first three centuries. However, it was known to Irenaeus, and Tertullian, as we have seen, and possibly to others also. It is generally suppos'd, that there are divers allusions and references to this epistle, in the epistle of Clement of Rome, writ to the Corinthians. However, I formerly mentioned (b) two learned men, who did not think that a clear point. I have since met with another of the same mind, whose words I place (*) below. And I

(z) P. 186. (a) P. 194. (b) Vol. x. p. 211. 239. . 247.
(c) P. 244. (d) Vol. xi. p. 25. (e) P. 39.
(f) P. 44. (g) P. 47. (h) P. 49.
(j) P. 169. (m) P. 179. 183. (n) Vol. xi. p. 190.
(q) P. 199. (r) P. 225. (s) P. 285. (t) P. 297.
(u) P. 305. . 308. and 311. (x) P. 330. 331.
(s) P. 349. 350. (z) P. 365. . 369. (a) P. 386.
(b) See Vol. i. p. 93. 2d. ed. p. 95. first edit.

(*) Sed quis dubitaret, quin ex epistola ad Hæbraeos multa habeat, cum Eusebii illud diserte annotat. . . Nec tamen illud tam exploratum et.

Phraum
must likewise refer to a consideration, formerly (c) proposed: that the little notice taken of this epistle by Latin writers in the second and third centuries: and Eusebius (d) and Jerome (e) affuring us, that by many of the Romans in their time, this epistle was not received: seem to weaken this supposition, that Clement had often alluded to this epistle. For if the church of Rome, in his time, had owned it for an epistle of Paul; it is not easy to conceive, how any Latin Christians afterwards should have rejected it, or doubted of its authority.

However, it is manifest, that it was received as an epistle of St. Paul by many Latin writers, in the fourth, fifth, and following centuries.

The reasons of doubting about the genuineness of this epistle, probably, were the want of a name at the beginning, and the difference of argument, or subject matter, and of style, from the commonly received epistles of the Apostle, as is intimated by (f) Jerome. Whether they are sufficient reasons for rejecting this epistle, will be considered in the course of our argument.

2. There is nothing in the epistle itself, that renders it impossible, or unlikely to be his.

For the epistle appears to have been writ before the destruction of Jerusalem: as was of old observed by (g) Chrysostom, and (b) Theodoret, and has been argued also by many (i) moderns. That the temple was still standing, and sacrifices there offered, may be inferred from ch. viii. 4. For if he were on earth, he should not be a Priest: seeing there are Priests, that offer according to the law: and from ch. xiii. 10. We have an altar, whereof they have no right to eat, which serve the tabernacle. Moreover, if (k) the temple had been destroyed, and the worship there abolished; the writer would not have failed to take some notice of it, in support of his argument, and for abating the too great attachment of many to the rites

(c) See Vol. i. p. 103. 1st ed. p. 101. 2d ed.
(d) Vid. Euseb. H. E. l. 3. c. 3. p. 72. B. C. and in this work, Vol. viii.
(p. 101.
(e) See Vol. x. p. 120. and 122.
(f) See Vol. x. p. 112.
(g) Vid. Chrys. Pr. in ep. ad Hebr. T. 12. p. 4. C. D.
(b) Theod. in Hebr. xiii. g. 10.
rites of the Mosaic institution. To this purpose speaks Spanheim in a passage, which I have transcribed below. And in like manner another learned Commentator, to (l) whom I refer. It is also probable, that (m) those words ch. iii. 13. While it is called to day, refer to the patience, which God yet continued to exercise toward the Jewish nation. He seems to have had in view the approaching desolation of Jerusalem, which would put an end to that to day, and finish the time, which God gave to the Jews, as a nation, to hear his voice. And Lightfoot (n) argues from ch. xii. 4. Ye have not yet refused unto blood: that the epistle was writ before the war in Judæa was begun.

Indeed those words have been the ground of an objection against this epistle having been sent to the believing Jews in Judæa, because there had been already several martyrdoms in that country. That difficulty I would now remove. And I have received from a learned friend the following observation, which may be of use. "It seems to me, says he,
"that (o) the Apostle here, as well as in the preceding context, alludes
"to the Grecian games or exercises: and he signifies, that they, to "whom he writes, had not been called out to the most dangerous com"bats, and had not run the immediate hazard of their lives. Which,
"I suppose, might be said, of them as a body, or church." And I shall transfer hither Mr. Beaufobre's note upon this place. "There had been "Martyrs in Judæa, as Stephen, and the two James. But for the most "part the Jews did not put the Christians to death, for want of power.
"They were imprisoned, and scourged. See Acts v. 40. and here
"xiii. 3. And they endured reproaches, and the loss of their substance.
"ch. x. 32. ... 34. These were the sufferings, which they had met "with. The Apostle therefore here indirectly reproves the Hebrews,
"that though God treated them with more indulgence than he had "done his people in former times, and even than his own Son, they ne-
"vertheles wavered in their profession of the gospel. See ver. 12."

3. There are divers exhortations in this epistle, much resembling some in the acknowledged epistles of St. Paul.

1.) Heb. xii. 3. ... Lost (p) ye be wearied, and faint in your mind.
Gal. vi. 9. And (q) let us not be weary in well-doing, for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not. And see 2 Thess. iii. 13. and Eph. iii. 13.

2.) Hebr. xii. 14. Follow (r) peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord. An exhortation very suitable to Paul, and to the Jewish believers in Judæa: admonishing them not to impose the rituals of the law upon others, that is, the Gentil believers, and to maintain friendship with them, though they did not embrace the law.
It has also a resemblance with Rom. xii. 18. But the words of the original are different.

3.) Hebr.

(l) See Beaufobre's preface to the epistle to the Hebrews, num. iii.

(m) The same.

(n) Harmon. of the N. T. Vol. i. p. 339.

(o) ... ποίς τὸν ἀμαχίαν ἀμαχοῦντον ματαιοῦσαν.

(p) ... ἵνα μὴ καρύστε, ταῖς ψυχαῖς ἐκλυόμεθα.

(q) Τῷ δὲ καλῷ ποιήτε, μὴ ἰκκακόμεν. Καὶ πεταν ἰδίῳ θερίσσει, μὴ ἐκλυόμεθαι.

(r) Εἰσάην διάκειο μιτα πάντων, οὔ τὸν ἀγιασμόν.
3.) Hebr. xiii. 1. Let brotherly love continue: and what follows to the end of ver. 3. Then at ver. 4. Marriage is honorable. But fornicators and adulterers God will judge. Here is an agreement with Eph. v. 2. 3. And walk in love, as Christ also has loved us. But fornication, and all uncleanness, and covetousness, let it not be once named among you. For this ye know, that no fornicator, nor unclean person, nor covetous man, has any inheritance in the kingdom of God.

4.) Ch. xiii. 16. But (s) to do good, and to communicate, forget not. For with such sacrifices God is well pleased. That exhortation is very suitable to Paul's doctrine, and has an agreement with what he says elsewhere: as Philipp. iv. 18.—An odour of a sweet smell, a sacrifice, acceptable, well pleasing to God. Moreover, as is observed (t) by Grotius upon this text, the word communicate, or communion, is found in a like sense in the Acts, and in other epistles of St. Paul. See Acts ii. 42. Rom. xv. 26. 2 Cor. viii. 4. ix. 13.

4. In the next place I observe some instances of agreement in the style, or phrafe, of the epistle to the Hebrews, and the acknowledged epistles of St. Paul.

1.) Hebr. ii. 4. God (u) also bearing them witness with signs, and wonders, and divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost.

Signs and wonders, together, seldom occur in other books of the New Testament. But they are found several times in the Acts, and St. Paul's epistles. The phrase is in Matth. xxiv. 14. and Mark xiii. 2. and once likewise in St. John's Gospel. iv. 48. But it is several times in the Acts. ch. ii. 19. iv. 30. . . . 43. v. 12. vi. 8. vii. 13. xiv. 3. xv. 12. The most remarkable are these, where there are three different words. Acts ii. 22. . . . A man approved of God among you by (x) miracles, and wonders, and signs. Rom. xv. 19. . . . Through (y) mighty signs and wonders, by the power of the Spirit of God. 2 Cor. xii. 12. . . . (z) In signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds. 2 Thees. ii. 9. (a) With all power, and signs, and lying wonders.

2.) Ch. ii. 14. . . . That through death he might destroy him that had the power of death. The word, καταργήσων, or καταργήσωμαι, is, I think, no where used in the New Testament, except in Luke xiii. 7. and St. Paul's epistles, where it is several times: and is sometimes used in a sense resembling this place, particularly, 2 Tim. i. 10. Who has abolished death: καταργήσωμαι, ύπερ δικαίων. And 1 Cor. xv. 26. Compare Dr. Doddridge's Family Expositor. Vol. IV. upon 1 Cor. xv. 24.

3.) Ch. iii. 1. . . . Holy brethren, partakers of the heavenly calling: Philip. iii. 14. The prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. 2 Tim. i. 19. . . . Who has called us with an holy calling.

4.) Ch.

(i) Τὰς δὲ ἐνσοίας καὶ κοινωνίας μὴ ἐπιλαμβάνεσθε.
(iii) Συμπιστικὴν ἡγεμονίαν τὰ διὰ εὐμενῶς τὰς τέρατας, καὶ ποικίλας δυνάμεις, καὶ σώματας ἀγίων μερισμοῖς.
(x) . . . δυνάμεις, καὶ τέρατα, καὶ σημεῖας.
(y) . . . ἐν δυνάμεις σημεῖων καὶ τεράτων, ἐν δυνάμει σωτερίας τῶν.
(z) . . . ἐν σημείοις, καὶ τέρατος, καὶ δυνάμεις.
(a) . . . ἐν πάσῃ δυνάμει, καὶ σημείοις, καὶ τέρατι ψυχῶς.
4.) Ch. v. 12. ... And are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat. 2 Cor. iii. 2. I have fed you with milk, and not with meat. However, in the original, there is no great agreement in the words: except that in both places milk is used for the first rudiments of the Christian doctrine.

5.) Ch. viii. 1. ... Who is set on the right hand of the throne of the majesty on high, Eph. i. 21. ... And set him at his own right hand in the heavenly places.

6.) Ch. viii. 6. ix. 15. and xii. 24. Jesus Christ is stilled mediator, So likewise in Gal. iii. 19. 20. 1 Tim. ii. 5. and in no other books of the New Testament.

7.) Ch. viii. 5. Who serve unto the example, and shadow of heavenly things. ... καὶ σκιὰ τῶν ἑτερον. X. 1. For the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things. ... σκιὰ ἑτερον τῶν μελλόντων αὐθεν, ἐκ αὐτῶν τὴν ιδίων τῶν πραγμάτων. Col. ii. 17. Which are a shadow of things to come. But the body is of Christ. “A ἵστ σκιὰ τῶν μελλόντων τὸ δὲ σῶμα τῷ χριστῷ.”

8.) Ch. x. 33. Whilst ye were made a gazing-stock, or spectacle, both by persecutions and afflictions. ὡς δὲ τῶν ταξιδεύοντων θαυματουργῶν 1 Cor. iv. 9. For we are made a spectacle unto the world. ... ὑπὲρ διατεταγμένων τῶν κόσμων.

9. St. Paul, in (b) his acknowledged epistles, often alludes to the exercises, and games, which were then very reputable, and frequent in Greece, and other parts of the Roman Empire. There are divers such allusions in this epistle, which have also great elegance. So ch. vi. 18. Who have fled for refuge, to (c) lay hold of the hope set before us, or the reward of eternal life, proposed to animate and encourage us. And ch. xii. 1. Wherefore seeing we also (d) are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let (c) us lay aside every weight, and the sin which does so easily be-Hebrews.

(g) Οί αἱ τῆς αποκάλυψεως χαράς. x. l. Vid. Krebs. ib. p 390.

(h) Ινα μὴ κάμπτε, ταῖς ψυχαῖς ὑμῶν ἐκλύσασθαι. ... Hanc duo verba a palestra et ab athletis defumta sunt, qui proprie dicuntur καμπτει, et ψυχαι εκλύσεις, cum corporis viribus debilitati et frañhi, omnique ipsa vincendi abjectâ, viâtas manus dent adversario. ... Neque dubium est, quin Apostolus eo refpexerit. Id. ib.

(i) Διὸ ταῖς παρεμίας χειρας κε τὰ σαραληλυμία γόνατα ἀνέθωται. Quemadmodum Paulus sepisìfime delectatur loquendi formulis ex re palestrica petitis; ita dubium non est, quin hic quoque retpexisse eo videatur. Athletis enim et ludatoribus tribununtur παρεμια αἱ χειρας κε σαραληλυμία γόνατα, cum luöendo ita defatigati, viribusque fraterni sunt, ut neque manus neque pedes officio suo fungî pollut, ipseque adeo victos se esse fateri coguntur. Id. ib. p. 392.

(k) See here, p. 310.

(l) πρὶς τὸν ἀμαρτίαν ἀνταγωνιζόμενος,
St. Paul's Epistles.

1. He here desires the Christians, to whom he is writing, to pray for him. ch. xiii. 18. Pray for us. So Rom. xv. 30. Eph. vi. 18. 19. Col. iv. 3. 1 Thess. v. 25. 2 Thess. iii. 1.

2. It is added in the same ver. 18. For we trust, we have a good conscience, in all things willing to live honestly. Which may well come from Paul, some of the Jewish believers not being well affected to him, or being even offended with him. So says (m) Theodoret upon this place, and Chrysostom (n) to the like purpose, very largely. To which might be added ver. 22. And I beseech you, brethren, to suffer the word of exhortation. It is also observable, that St. Paul makes a like profession of his sincerity, in pleading against the Jews, before Felix. Acts xxiv. 16.

3. Having desired the prayers of these Christians for himself, he prays for them. ch. xiii. 20. 21. Now the God of peace ... make you perfect ... through Jesus Christ. To whom be glory for ever and ever, Amen. So Rom. xv. 30. ... 32. having asked their prayers for him, he adds ver. 33. Now the God of peace be with you all. Amen. Compare Eph. vi. 19. ... 23. and 1 Thess. v. 23. 2 Thess. iii. 16.

4. Ch. xiii. 24. Salute all them that have the rule over you, and all the saints. They of Italie salute you. The like salutations are in divers of St. Paul's epistles. Rom. xvi. 1 Cor. xvi. 19. ... 21. 2 Cor. xiii. 13. Phil. iv. 21. 22. Not to refer to any more.

5. The valedictorie benediction at the end is that, which Paul had made the token of the genuinnesse of his epistles. 2 Thess. iii. 18. So here ch. xiii. 25. Grace (o) be with you all. Amen. Indeed, sometimes it is the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you. But at other times it is more contracted. So Col. iv. 18. Grace be with you. 1 Tim. vi. 21. Grace be with thee. See likewise Eph. vi. 24. 2 Tim. iv. 22. Tit. iii. 15. The same observation is in (p) Theodoret.

6. The circumstances of the epistle lead us to the Apostle Paul.

1. Ch. xiii. 24. They of Italie salute you. The writer therefore was then in Italie. Whither we know Paul was sent a prisoner, and where he resided two years. Acts xxviii. Where also he wrote several epistles, still remaining.

2. Ver. 19. He desires them the rather to pray for him, that he might be restored to them the sooner. Paul had been brought from Judea to Rome. And he was willing to go thither again, where he had been several times. And though the original words are not the same, there is an agreement between this and Phil. ver. 22. I trust, that through your prayers I shall

(m) Διακλητος ἀυτοῖς, ὡς τάξιστα τῷ ὅμως κρυστον. Διδάσκην τῶν ἄνωτέρων, ὡς ἐκ ἄλλω τῷ χάρῳ τούτῳ ποιεῖ, ἄλλα τῷ διω ἤργα πεπόμενον. Διὰ τὸ τότε καί τὸ σενεδρίων ἦς μαρτυρίως ἵκαλε. Theod. in Hebr. xiii. 18. T. 3. p. 461.

(n) In Hebr. xiii. hom. 34. Tom. xii. p. 313. 314.

shall be given to you. This particular is one of the arguments of Euthalius, that (q) this epistle is Paul's, and writ to the Jews of Palestine.

3.) Ver. 23. Know ye, that our brother Timothie is set at liberty. With whom, if he come shortly, I will see you. Timothie was with Paul, during his imprisonment at Rome. As is allowed by all. For he is expressly mentioned at the beginning of the epistles to the Philippians, Colossians, Philemon, writ when he was in bonds. He is mentioned again Philip. ii. 19. When the Apostle writes to Timothie, he calls him his son, or dearly beloved son. 1 Tim. i. 2. 2 Tim. i. 2. But when he mentions him to others, he calls him brother. 2 Cor. i. i. Col. i. i. 1 Theff. iii. 2. In like manner Titus. Comp. Tit. i. 4. and 2 Cor. ii. 13.

This mention of Timothie has led many, not only moderns, but ancients likewise, to think of Paul, as writer of the epistle, particularly.

(r) Euthalius. And undoubtedly, many others have been confirmed in that supposition by this circumstance.

The original word, ἀπολλυμένον, is ambiguous, being capable of two senses: one of which is that of our translation, set at liberty, that is, from imprisonment; the other is dismissed, sent abroad on an errand. In this last sense it was understood by Euthalius. Who in the place just cited says, "That scarcely any one can be thought of, beside Paul, who would send Timothie abroad upon any service of the Gospel." And indeed this passage doth put us in mind of what Paul says to the Philippians, ch. ii. 19. But I trust in the Lord Jesus, to send Timothie shortly unto you, that I also may be of good comfort, when I know your state. Him therefore I hope to send presently, so soon as I shall see how it will go with me. But I trust in the Lord, that I also my self shall come shortly. ver. 23. 24. Which induced Beausobre to lay in the preface to this epistle: "The (s) sacred author concludes with asking the prayers of the Hebrews, xiii. 19. That he may be restored to them. These words intimate, that he was still prisoner, but that he hoped to be set at liberty. Therefore he adds in the 23. ver. that he intended to come and see them with Timothie, as soon as he should be returned. If this explication be right, this epistle was writ at Rome some time after the epistle to the Philippians, and since the departure of Timothie for Macedonia."

Thus we are brought to the time of this epistle. Nevertheless before I proceed to speak distinctly to that, I would conclude the argument concerning the writer of it.

All these considerations, just mentioned, added to the testimonie of many ancient writers, make out an argument of great weight, (though not decisive and demonstrative,) that the Apostle Paul is the writer of this epistle.

(r) Καὶ εἰς τῷ λίγῳ, γινώσκετε τὸν ἀδελφὸν ὑμῶν τιμίους καὶ μόνοις ἀπολλυμένον... οὐδέδε γὰρ ὑμιστε ἀπίστους εἰς δικασταίς τιμιότεροι, εἰ μὴ σαῦλος, κ. λ. Euthal. ib. p. 671.

It should be observed, I have hitherto declined the use of two arguments, often insisted upon in discoursing of this point.

One of which is the testimonie of St. Peter: 2 ep. iii. 15. 16. This I have omitted, because I am not satisfied, that he and the author of this epistle write to the same persons. Nor does it appear certain to me, that St. Peter there takes any particular notice of this (t) epistle, as one of Paul's. However as many learned men look upon that passage of St. Peter, as a full testimonie to Paul's being the writer of this epistle; I shall refer to several, or transcribe below, a part at least of what they say: particularly (u) Mill, (x) Spanheim, and (y) Basnage.

The other argument omitted by me is that taken from Hebr. x. 34. For he had compassion of me in my bonds. On this infift (z) Spanheim, (a) Mill, and (b) Basnage, to prove, that this epistle was writ by Paul. But Mr. James Peirce translates the words thus: For ye sympathized with those who were in bonds. And in his notes says: Were it certain, that the common is the true reading of the place, there would be little room left to doubt of the epistle's being writ by St. Paul. But the "Alexandrian, and other manuscripts, of the best note, read here διαμορίως, instead

(t) Says Mr. Hallett. Introduction. p. 21. "Some learned men have attempted to prove this point from what St. Peter says. 2 Pet. iii. 15. 16. "If it could be proved, that he speaks of the epistle to the Hebrews, the testimonie of this Apocalypse would fully determine the dispute. But as I do not think, it can be certainly proved, that he speaks of this epistle, without proving that St. Paul was the author of it, I cannot argue from this passage. Those on the other side go upon the supposition, that St. Peter's epistles were written to the Hebrews, or Jews. But it seems to me abundantly more natural to suppose, that they were written to Gentil Christians, if we consider many passages of the epistles themselves."

(u) Et quidem epistolam hanc eam ipsam suisse, quam ad Hebraeos Christianos milerat Apostolus nofiter, difertis verbis D. Petri conflat. Ep. 2. cap. iii. 15. &c. Mill. Proleg. num. 86. . . 91.

(x) Vid. Spanhem. Diff. de Aut. ep. ad Hebr. Part. i. cap. ii. . . u.

"instead of τῆς ἀμαρτίας μου. And the same is confirmed by ancient versions."

And that this is the truer reading, may be seen in Bengelius, Wetstein, and Mill himself: though in his argument concerning the author of the epistle, he has been pleased to argue from the common reading. If Paul here referred to his bonds, I should think, he intended his imprisonment in Judea, as Mill thought, not at Rome, as Bajnages, in the place just cited. I make no doubt, but that the Hebrew believers in Judea afforded St. Paul relief and comfort, whilst he lay prisoner at Cæsarea. But as I do not here discern any plain reference to that, I do not form any argument from this text, in behalf of the writer of the epistle.

I say no more by way of argument. But there are objections, which ought to be considered.

1. Obj. Hebr. ii. 3. How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him?

Hence it has been argued, that the writer of this epistle placeth himself with those, who had received the doctrine of the gospel from Christ’s Apostles. But Paul had it from Christ himself, as he says at large in the first chapter of the epistle to the Galatians. This has been thought by (c) Grotius, and (d) Le Clerc, a good reason, why Paul should not be esteemed the writer of this epistle.

To which I answer, that it is not uncommon for Paul to join himself with those, to whom he is writing, and to say us, where he might say ye: especially, when he says any thing that is humbling, and that might be thought disagreeable. So Col. i. 12. 13. Giving thanks to the Father, who . . . has delivered us from the power of darkness. . . . This I take to be a plain instance. To which might be added, according to the judgement of some Commentators. Eph. ii. 3. and Tit. iii. 3. The note of Grotius upon this last cited text may be observed. And now I transcribe below (e) the answer of Mr. Wetstein to this objection. Which is in the main agreeable to what I have just said.

I would

(c) Praeterea Paulo hanc epistolam abjudicat, quod hujus scriptor se iis annumeret, qui non a Christo, sed ab ejus discipulis, notitiam evangelii acceperit. cap. ii. 3. Cum contra Paulus autóritatem sibi addat inde, quod hanc notitiam a Christo ipso acceperit. Grot. Pr. in ep. ad Hebr.

(d) Videtur et scriptor epistolae ad Hebraeos cap. ii. 3. &c. eorum numero cenferi velle, qui evangelium acceperant ab iis, a quibus auditus erat ipse Christus. . . Quod in Paulum non quadrat, qui evangelium ab ipso Jesu Christo et Deo acceperit se, non falsi gloriatur. Gal. i. Cleric. H. E. A. D. 69. p. 459.

(e) Hebr. ii. 3. Paulus se iis annumeret, qui notitiam evangelii a discipulis Christi acceperunt: cum tamen ad Galatas non femel teftetur, gloriorique, se non ab hominibus, sed ab ipso Christo fulisse institutum, Gal. i. 12. 17. ii. 6. Ratio differentis ex modo dictis manifesta sit. In epistola ad Galatas id agit, ut autóritatem suam adnitra: hic autem, ubi de supplicio desertoribus impendente loquitur, ut minus ingrata effet comminatio atque admonitio, feipsum illis annumerat comm. i. Dei ἡμῶν προστίκχιος τοις ἀκούσαίας, μεν ποτε παραεξήγηται . . . τοις ἡμῖν ἐκφυγίστας. . . Postquam inigitur ita cepisset, consequens erat, ut in eadem figura pergeret, scriberetque ἡτίς σωματία . . . ἤς ἡμῶν ἐκκλησίας. Ita Eph. ii. 3. Col. i. 12. 13. Tit. iii. 3. ubi
I would also observe, that there is another instance in this epistle, much resembling the text, upon which the present objection is founded. Hebr. xii. 1. . . Wherefore . . . let us lay aside every weight, and the sin, which does so easily beset us. . . . And this way of writing is suitable to Paul's style and method in his acknowledged epistles.

Secondly, I would farther add, if it might not be esteemed too prolix that in divers other places we find Paul, when he allerts the resurrection of Jesus Christ, insinuating also upon the testimonies of the other Apostles, and likewise of other disciples. Thus, preaching at Antioch in Pisidia, Acts xiii. 30. 31. But God raised him from the dead. And he was seen many days of them, which came up with him from Galilee to Jerusalem, who are his witnesses unto the people. And also 1 Cor. xv. at the beginning. Which I shall recite largely, as full to the point. Moreover, brethren, I declare unto you the gospel, which I preached unto you, which also ye have received. . . By which also ye are saved, if ye keep in memory what I preached unto you. . . For I delivered unto you first of all, how that Christ died for our sins, according to the scriptures: and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day, according to the scriptures: and that he was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve. After that he was seen of James, then of all the Apostles. And last of all he was seen of me.

And this context, perhaps, will justify me in proceeding somewhat farther. When St. Paul lays 2 Tim. ii. 8. Remember, that Jesus Christ was raised from the dead, according to my gospel: he intends, as I apprehend, to lead Timotheus to recollect the gospel, that had been preached by him in such and such circumstances, confirmed by miracles wrought by him, and agreeable to the prophecies of the ancient scriptures, and the testimonies of the other Apostles, and disciples of Christ. As he also lays at ver. 2. of the same chapter: The things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses: literally, by many witnesses: that is confirmed by many witnesses. And he may be supposed to intend not only (f) the Prophets, which is Grotius's interpretation, but likewise the testimonies of all the Apostles of Christ, and of many others, to which he had appealed in his preaching.

Upon the whole, it seems to me, that the expression of this text is highly becoming the Apostle Paul, especially, supposing him to be here writing to the believers of Jerusalem and Judea. And indeed, as before shewn, the beginning of this second chapter of the epistle to the Hebrews affords, in my opinion, an argument of no small force, that they are the Chriftians to whom it is sent.

2. Obj. Another objection against this epistle being St. Paul's is, that it is supposed to have in it an elegance superior to that of his other writings. This has been judged by Grotius, and Le Clerc, who were formerly (g) quoted, sufficient to shew, that it was not writ by Paul.

In

(f) Multis adducitis testibus prophetis, qui hæc prædixerant. Hebr. xii. 1. Grot. in 2 Tim. ii. 2.

(g) See p. 9.
In order to judge the better of this, it may be of use to recollect what we have already seen in divers ancient writers, relating to this point.

Eusebius has a passage of Clement of Alexandria, from his Institutions, at large cited by us (b) formerly: where Clement says: "That (i) the epistle to the Hebrews is Paul’s, and that it was writ to the Hebrews in the Hebrew language: and that Luke having carefully translated it, published it for the use of the Greeks. Which is the reason of that conformity of style, which is found in this epistle and the Acts of the Apostles."

The opinion of Origen in his homilies upon this epistle as cited by Eusebius, and by us (k) from him, is, "that the style of the epistle to the Hebrews has not the Apostle’s rudeness of speech . . . but as to the texture of it, is elegant Greek: as every one will allow, who is able to judge of the differences of styles. Again, he says: The sentiments of the epistle are admirable, and not inferior to the acknowledged writings of the Apostle. This will be attested to by every one, who reads the writings of the Apostle with attention. Afterwards he adds: If I was to speak my opinion, I should say, that the sentiments are the Apostle’s, but the language and composition another’s, who committed to writing the Apostle’s sense, and as it were reduced into commentaries the things spoken by his master." And what follows.

Eusebius (l) himself speaking of Clement’s epistle to the Corinthians, says: "Paul having writ to the Hebrews in their own language, some think, that the Evangelist Luke, others, that this very Clement, translated it into Greek. Which last is the most likely, there being a great resemblance between the style of the epistle of Clement, and the epistle to the Hebrews. Nor are the sentiments of those two writings very different." This passage has been already twice quoted by us: once in the chapter of Clement (m) Bp. of Rome, and again in that (n) of Eusebius.

Philaster, Bishop of Brecia, about 380. as formerly quoted, says:" There (o) are some, who do not allow the epistle to the Hebrews to be Paul’s: but say, it is either an epistle of the Apostle Barnabas, or of Clement Bp. of Rome. But some say it is an epistle of Luke the Evangelist. . . Moreover, some reject it, as more eloquent than the Apostle’s other writings."

Jerome, about 392. in his article of St. Paul in the book of Illustrious Men, as (p) before cited also, says: "The epistle, called to the Hebrews, is not thought to be his, because of the difference of the argument, and style: but either Barnabas’s, as Tertullian thought: or the Evangelist.

(b) B. i. ch. 22. Vol. i. p. 471, or 474.

(i) Και τον πιθήκον εισερχασ εις αυτον τους μεν θανατολ ιησον, γεγεγορθαί δια εις, αι τοις εις θανατον συνεστιν, εκδενε τοις θελεσιν. x. ap. Euseb. H. E. l. 6. c. 14. in.

(l) H. E. l. 3. cap. 38.

"Evangelist Luke's, according to some others: or Clement's, Bishop of Rome: who, as some think, being much with him, clothed and adorned Paul's sense in his own language... Moreover he wrote "as a Hebrew to Hebrews" in pure Hebrew, it being his own language. "Whence it came to pass, that being translated it has more elegance in "the Greek, than his other epistles."

I need not allege here any more testimonies relating to this matter. We sufficiently perceive by what has been said, that many ancient Christians supposed the Greek of this epistle to have a superior elegance to the received epistles of St. Paul. And to some of them the Greek was their native language. And others, as Jerome, though Latins, may be supposed to have been good judges in this matter.

Some learned men of late times, as Grotius, and Le Clerc, have thought this to be an insuperable objection. Of this opinion likewise was (q) Jacob Tollius. Who in his notes upon Longinus, of the Sublime, has celebrated the sublimity of this epistle, and particularly the elegance of the beginning of it. Which alone he thinks sufficient to shew, that it is not Paul's. Others allow the fine contexture of the style of this epistle. But do not see that consequence. These are obliged to account for it, which they do several ways.

Mr. Weifflein, who allows, that the epistle is St. Paul's, and that it was writ in Greek, thinks, that (r) Paul having now lived two years at Rome, may have emprofed his Greek style. But in answer to that it may be said, that we have several epistles of Paul, writ near the end of his imprisonment at Rome, in which we perceive his usual style.

Again, Mr. Weifflein adds: "That (s) this is a learned epistle, and may have been composed with more care, and exactness, than letters writ to friends, or to churches, whose urgent necessities obliged him to write in haste." But neither will this, I believe, be sufficient to account for the difference of style in this, and the epistles, received as Paul's. For no care and attention will on a sudden enable a man to alter his usual style, in a remarkable manner.

It remains therefore, as seems to me, that if the epistle be Paul's, and was originally writ in Greek, as we suppose, the Apostle must have had had some assistance in composing it. So that we are led to the judgement of Origen, which appears to be as ingenious, and probable, as any.

(s) Potuit hanc epistolam, quæ erudita ess, longiori meditatione elaborasse, cum alias ad familiares amicos, vel ad ecclesiæ, ubi necessitas urgetat, seffiantiarnus effudisset. Ibid.

"The sentiments are the Apostle’s, but the language and composition of some one else: who committed to writing the Apostle’s sense, and as it were reduced into commentaries the things spoken by his matter."

According to this account, the epistle is St. Paul’s, as to the thoughts and matter, but the words are another’s. Jerome, as may be remembered, said, He wrote as a Hebrew to Hebrews in pure Hebrew, it being his own language. Whence it came to pass, that being translated, it has more elegance in the Greek, than his other epistles. My conjecture, which is not very different, if I may be allowed to mention it, is, that St. Paul dictated the epistle in Hebrew, and another, who was a great master of the Greek language, immediately wrote down the Apostle’s sentiments in his own elegant Greek. But who this assistant of the Apostle was, is altogether unknown.

The ancients, beside Paul, have mentioned Barnabas, Luke, and Clement, as writers, or translators of this epistle. But I do not know, that there is any remarkable agreement between the style of the epistle to the Hebrews, and the style of the epistle commonly ascribed to Barnabas. The (t) style of Clement, in his epistle to the Corinthians, is verbose and prolix. St. Luke (u) may have some words, which are in the epistle to the Hebrews. But that does not make out the same style. This epistle, as Origen said, as to the texture of the style, is elegant Greek. But that kind of texture appears not in Luke, so far as I can perceive. There may be more art and labour in the writings of Luke, than in those of the other Evangelists: but not much more elegance, that I can discern. This epistle to the Hebrews (x) is bright and elegant from the beginning to the end. And surpasseth as much the style of St. Luke, as it does the style of St. Paul in his acknowledged epistles. In short, this is an admirable epistle, but singular in sentiments and language: somewhat different in both respects from all the other writings in the New Testament. And whose is the language, as seems to me, is altogether unknown: whether that of Zenas, or Apollos, or some other of the Apostle Paul’s assistants, and fellow-laborers.

3. Obj. There still remains one objection more against this epistle being writ by St. Paul. Which is the want of his name. For to all the thirteen epistles, received as his, he prefixeth his name, and generally calleth himself Apostle.

This objection has been obvious in all ages. And the omission has been differently accounted for by the ancients, who received this epistle as a genuine writing of St. Paul.

(x) Tout le monde reconnaît de l’éloquence et de l’élévation dans l’épître aux Hebreux, Beauf. Ibid.
Clement of Alexandria, in his Institutions, as cited by us (y) formerly, from Eusebius, speaks to this purpose: “The epistle to the Hebrews, he says, is Paul’s. But he did not make use of that inscription, Paul the Apostle. Of which he assigns this reason. Writing to the Hebrews, who had conceived a prejudice against him, and were suspicious of him, he wisely declined setting his name at the beginning, lest he should offend them. He also mentions this tradition: Forasmuch as the Lord was sent as the Apostle of Almighty God to the Hebrews, Paul, out of modesty does not file himself the Apostle of the Hebrews: both out of respect to the Lord, and that being preacher and Apostle of the Gentiles, he over and above wrote to the Hebrews.”

Jerome also speaks to this purpose: “That (z) Paul might decline putting his name in the inscription, on account of the Hebrews being offended with him.” So in the article of St. Paul, in his book of Eulogious Men. In his Commentary upon the beginning of the epistle to the Galatians, he assigns another reason: “That (a) Paul declined to file himself Apostle at the beginning of the epistle to the Hebrews, because he should afterwards call Christ the High Priest, and Apostle of our profession.” See ch. iii. 1.

Theodoret says, that Paul was especially the Apostle of the Gentiles. For which he allegeth, Gal. ii. 9. and Rom. xi. 13. “Therefore (b) writing to the Hebrews, who were not entrusted to his care, he barely delivered the doctrine of the gospel, without assuming any character of authority. For they were the charge of the other Apostles.”

I need not quote any others. Which would be only a repetition of the same, or like reafons. All these reasons may not be reckoned equally good. And, perhaps, none of them are sufficient, and adequate to the purpose. But though we should not be able to assign a good reason, why Paul omitted his name; the epistle, nevertheless, may be his. For (c) there may have been a good reason for it, though we are not able to find it out. It is the work of a matterly hand. Who for some reason omitted (y) Vol. ii. p. 474.

(z) Vel certe quia Paulus scribatur ad Hebræos, et propter invidiam suam apud eos nominis titulum in principio salutationis amputaverat. De R. I. cap. v.

(b) Ἐξάιοι ὃς τηθεὶς ὃν ἐκ ἐνεχειρίσθη τῷ ὑπιμλείαν, γυμνόν τῶν ἀξιομάτων ἰκτύς τῷ δικαικαίλων σωφρονίσκων ὑπὸ γὰρ τῶν ἀλλῶν ἀποστόλων σωφρονίσκων ἰκτύς. Theod. in Hebr. T. 3. p. 392.

omitted his name. Paul might have a reason for such silence, as well as another.

Lightfoot (d) says: "Paul's not affixing his name to this, as "he had done to his other epistles, does no more deny it to be "his, than the first epistle of John is denied to be John's upon that "account."

Tillemont says: "Possibly (e) Paul considered it as a book, rather than "a letter: since he makes an excuse for it's brevity. ch. xiii. 22. "For indeed it is short for a book, but long for a letter." The same thought is in (f) Eustius. This may induce us to recollect an observation of Chrysostom to the like purpose, formerly (g) taken notice of.

It is, I think, observable, that there is not at the beginning of this epistle any salutation. As there is no name of the writer, I0 neither is there any description of the people, to whom it is sent. It appears from the conclusion, that is was sent to some people, in a certain place. And, undoubtedly, they to whom it was sent, and by whom it was received, knew very well, from whom it came. Nevertheless there might be reasons for omitting an inscription, and a salutation, at the beginning. This might arise from the circumstances of things. There might be danger of offense in sending at that time a long letter to Jews in Judea. And this omission might be in part owing to a regard for the bearer, who too is not named. The only person named throughout the epistle is Timothie. Nor was he at that time present with the writer.

Indeed I imagine, that the two great objections against this being a genuine epistle of the Apostle: the elegance of the style, and the want of a name, and inscription: are both owing to some particular circumstances of the writer, and the people, to whom it was sent. The people, to whom it was sent, are plainly Jews in Judea: and the writer, very probably, is Paul. Whose circumstances at the breaking up of his confinement at Rome, and his setting out upon a new journey, might be attended with some peculiar embarrassments. Which obliged him to act differently from his usual method.

IV. Thus we are brought to the fourth and last part of our inquiry concerning this epistle, the time and place of writing it.

Mill was of opinion, that (b) this epistle was writ by Paul in the year 63, in some part of Italy, soon after he had been released from his imprisonment at Rome. Mr. Wetstein (i) appears to have been of the same opinion. Tillemont (k) likewise placed this epistle in the year 63. immediately

(e) S. Paul. art. 46. Mem. T. i.
(f) Sed poft haec omnia, an vera ratio omisste salutationis est, quod haec epistolae scripta est per modum libri, non per modum epistol? Unde in fine dicit: Etenim perpauci scriptae ubis. Quod de epistolae non erat dicturus, cum fit epistolae prolixas. Etf. de Aux. Ep. ad Hebr. p. 893.
(g) See Vol. x. p. 322.
(h) Interea, max ut e carcere evasit Apostolus, recellit in ulteriorum aliquam Itali? partem ibique scriptae epistolam ad Hebraeos. Proleg. num. 83.
(i) Wetf. N. T. Tom. 2. p. 387. in. (k) S. Paul. art. 46.
medially after the Apostle's being set at liberty. Who, as he says, was still at Rome, or at left in Italia. Balsage (l) speaks of this epistle at the year 61. and supposeth it to be writ, during the Apostle's imprisonment. For he afterwards speaks of the epistle to the Ephesians, and says, it (m) was the last letter, which the Apostle wrote during the time of his bonds. Lefant and Beaufobre, in their general preface to St. Paul's epistles, observe, "that (n) in the subscription at the end of the epistle it is said to "have been writ from Italia. The only ground of which, as they add, is "what is said ch. xiii. 24. They of Italia salute you. This has made "some think, that the Apostle wrote to the Hebrews, after he had been "set at liberty, and when he was got into that part of Italia, which borners upon Sicile, and in ancient times was called Italia. Neverthe- "less there is reason to doubt of this. When he requests the prayers of "the Hebrews, that he might be restored to them the sooner, he intimates, "that he was not yet set at liberty." Accordingly, they place this epistle in the year 62.

There is not any great difference in any of these opinions concerning the time, or place of this epistle: all supposing, that it was writ by the Apostle, either at Rome, or in Italia, near the end of his imprisonments at Rome, or soon after it was over, before he removed to any other country.

I cannot perceive, why it may not be allowed to have been writ at Rome. St. Paul's first epistle to the Corinthians was writ at Ephesus. Nevertheless he says ch. xvi. 19. The churches of Asia salute you. So now he might send salutations from the Christians of Italia, not excluding, but including those at Rome, together with the rest throughout that country.

The argument of Lefant and Beaufobre, that Paul was not yet set at liberty, because he requested the prayers of the Hebrews, that he might be restored to them the sooner, appears not to me of any weight. Though Paul was no longer a prisoner, he might request the prayers of those to whom he was writing, that he might have a prosperous journey to them, whom he was desirous to visit: and that all impediments of his intended journey might be removed. And many such there might be, though he was no longer under confinement. Paul was not a prisoner; when he wrote the epistle to the Romans. Yet he was very fervent in his prayers to God, that he might have a prosperous journey, and come to them. ch. i. 10.

For determining the time of this epistle, it may be observed, than when the Apostle wrote the epistles to the Philippians, the Colossians, and Philemon, he had hopes of deliverance. At the writing of all those epistles Timotheus was present with him. But now he was absent, as plainly appears from ch. xiii. 23. This leads us to think, that this epistle was writ after them. And it is not unlikely, that the Apostle had now obtained that liberty, which he expected, when they were writ.

Moreover

(l) Ann. 61. num. ii. . . . vi.

(m) Epilolarum omnium, quas primis in vinculis exaravit Apostolus, ca que ad Ephesios, ultimae esse videtur. Ibid. num. vii.

(n) Pref. gen. sur les epistles de S. Paul, num. lii.
Moreover in the epistle to the Philippians he speaks of sending Timothie to them, ch. ii. 19. 23. But I trust in the Lord Jesus, to send Timothie shortly unto you, that also may be of good comfort, when I know your state. Timothie therefore, if sent, was to come back to the Apostle. Him therefore I hope to send presently, so soon as I shall see, how it will go with me. It is probable, that Timothie did go to the Philippians, soon after writing the above mentioned epistles, the Apostle having gained good assurance of being quite released from his confinement. And this epistle to the Hebrews was writ, during the time of that absence. For it is said Hebr. xiii. 23. Know ye, that our brother Timothie is set at liberty. With whom, if he come shortly, I will see you. 23. Know ye, that our brother Timothie is set at liberty: or has been sent abroad. The (o) word is capable of that meaning. And it is a better, and more likely meaning, because it suits the coherence. And I suppose, that Timothie did soon come to the Apostle, and that they both failed to Judea, and after that went to Ephesus, where Timothie was left, to reside with his peculiar charge.

Thus this epistle was writ at Rome, or in Italie, soon after that Paul had been released from his confinement at Rome, in the beginning of the year 63.

And I suppose it to be the last written of all St. Paul’s epistles, which have come down to us, or that we have any knowledge of.

Who was the bearer of it, is not known. At the end of the epistle, in some manuscripts, is a subscription to this purpose: that it was carried from Italie by Timothie. But that subscription is esteemed of no authority by all learned men in general, Beza, in particular. I put below (p) a part of what he says. It is inconsistent with what is said of Timothie ch. xiii. 23. Timothie was to accompany the writer. The epistle was sent before.

C H A P. XIII.

That the epistle, inscribed to the Ephesians, was writ to them.

HE epistle to the Ephesians is one of the acknowledged epistles of St. Paul. There never was any doubt among Chriffians, who was the writer. But there has been, especially of late, a dispute concerning the perfons, to whom it was sent: some thinking,

(p) Puto igitur hanc subscriptionem non fatis considerate adscriptam fuiffe a quopiam, qui occaionem ex eo arripuerit, quod Timothei et Italorum mentio fada fuerat. Nam etiam et in Claromontano codice, et in Syra interpretatione non exflatu. Bez. ad cap. xiii. in fin.

X 3
that the common inscription is false, and that this is either a general epistle, or that it was sent to the Laodiceans. Of this opinion is (a) Mill, in his Prolegomena to the New Testament, who has had many followers. Some of whom must be here mentioned by me. Mr. James Peirce (b) who likewise speaks of Mr. Whiston, as of the same opinion. The (c) Author of a Latin Letter or Dissertation in the third volume of Mr. La Roche's Literary Journal, published in the year 1731. That letter is anonymous. But the writer is Artemonius, otherwise Samuel Crellius, author of Initium Evangelii S. Joannis Apostoli restitutum. This I was assured of by Mr. La Roche, the editor. W. Wall in his critical Notes upon the New Testament. Dr. Benfon (d). The author of a letter at the end of the second volume of Dr. Benfon's Historie of the first planting the Christian Religion. Which learned Author has also since published a Postscript to that letter, which is at the end of the third volume of the same work of Dr. Benfon. The unknown Author of an edition of the New Testament, in Greek and English, in two volumes octavo, published at London in 1729. Campegius Vitringa, the Son, Professor of Divinity in the University of Franeker, wrote a Dissertation on the same side of the question. And not having therein finished his design, his successor, Mr. Venema, added another Dissertation, both together making more than one hundred and thirty pages in (e) quarto. Lastly, Mr. J. J. Wetstein in his notes upon the beginning of this epistle. Who also has put a mark under the text, shewing Laodicea to be, in his opinion, the right reading, instead of Ephesius. I here mention no more. But perhaps some others may be taken notice of hereafter.

The common reading however has been defended by (f) several. I mention

(a) Quidni igitur scripta fuerit ad Laodicenses? Proleg. num. 74. vid. ib. num. 71...79. et num. 237.
(b) See an Advertisement at the end of his Paraphrase upon the Ep. to the Philippians. p. 114. &c.
(d) See Dr. Benfon's Historie of the first planting the Christian Religion. Vol. ii. p. 270...276. first ed. p. 290...297. 2d. ed.
(f) Vid. J. C. Wolf. Curæ in N. T. T. 4. p. 1...13. I may be allowed likewise to take notice of a Commentarie upon the epistle to the Ephesians, published in the Dutch language, by Peter Dinant, a learned Minister at Rotterdam, in the year 1721. Of which an honourable account is given in the Bibliotheca Bremanis, where we are assured. Ampla operi praemitt Prolegomena, in quibus primo loco Apostolum Paulum vere epistolam ad Ephesios scriptorem esse demonstrat... Agit deinde de Epheso, cujusque, cum Apostolus hanc epistolam confriberebat, statu: de Diana cultu... Hinc refutat Grotium, qui Marcionem fecutus non ad Ephesios, sed Laodicenses scriptam hanc epistolam creditid. Sententia quoque Usserii, qui non ad solos Ephesios, sed plures ecclesiæ deßinatam, adeoque pro encyclica habendam putat, examinatur, &c relictur. Bibliotheca, Hist. Phil. Theolæ. Classis quintæ Fasc. tertius. p. 533. 534. Bruxæ 1721.
mention two authors of great note. One is Le Clerc (g) in his Ecclesiastical Historie, whose words I have placed below. He had seen Mill's argument, and slighted it. He thought, that few would be moved by it. However, he briefly considers, and answers the principal objections, taken from Eph. i. 15. iii. 2. and 4. As for any other arguments, he says, they are of too little moment to be oppose to the general conten of Christian writers. So that, says he, there is no reason, why we should doubt, whether this epistle was writ to the Ephesians.

The other writer is Whitby, in his preface to this epistle. A part of which I fearfully transcribe here. "That this epistle to the Ephesians was indeed written by St. Paul, and directed to them, and not to any other church, we cannot doubt, if we believe either the epistle, or Paul himself. For, first, it begins thus: Paul an Apostle of Jesus Christ to the saints which are at Ephesus. And in this reading all the versions, and all the manuscripts agree. Secondly, in the close of the epistle he speaks thus to them: That you may know my affairs; and how I do, Thybicus, a beloved brother, and faithful minister in the Lord, shall make known unto you all things. Whom I have sent unto you for the same purpose. ... Ch. vi. 21. 22. And in the second epistle to Timothy he says: Thybicus have I sent to Ephesus. 2 Tim iv. 12. Moreover, thirdly, all antiquity agrees, that this epistle was writ by Paul to the Ephesians." And what follows.

Those arguments appear to me a sufficient defense of the present reading. Nevertheless the other opinion, contrarie to Le Clerc's expectation, has of late much prevailed: as appears from the number of the patrons of it, above named. And as the arguments of those two learned men, whose writings are well known, have not been judged satisfactory; there can be little reason to expect, that any thing said by me should be of much weight. And indeed, it has sometimes happened, that certain opinions have had a run, and it has been in vain to oppose them: though afterwards they have fallen of themselves, being unsupported by any good evidence.

However,

The Epistle, inscribed to the Ephesians,

However, as a fair occasion offers, I shall enlarge upon the arguments just mentioned, in favour of the present reading in our Bibles. After which I will particularly consider the objections brought against it.

1. The present reading at the beginning of this epistle, to the saints which are at Ephesus, and to the faithful in Christ Jesus, is the reading of all Greek manuscripts, and of all ancient versions, the Latin, Syriac, Pehic, Arabic, Ethiopic, and all other. It is altogether inconceivable, how there should have been such a general concurrence in this reading, if it had not been the original inscription of the epistle.

2. It may be argued from the epistle itself, that it was writ to the Ephesians.

Says the Apostle here ch. ii. 19... 22. Now therefore ye are fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God. And are built upon the foundation of the Apostles, and Prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone. In whom all the building fitly framed together, growth unto an holy temple in the Lord. In whom you also are built together for an habitation of God through the Spirit. It has been observed that (b) St. Paul frequently accommodates his style to the persons, to whom he is writing. In the first epistle to Timothy, sent to him at Ephesus, he useth the architect-flile. So, particularly, ch. ii. 15. In like manner here the Apostle may be well supposed to allude to the magnificent temple of Diana, on account of which the people of Ephesus much valued themselves, as appears from Acts xix. 27. 28. 34. 35.

I might, perhaps, refer likewise to ch. iii. 18. but forbear, it being an obscure text.

And that the epistle was sent, not to strangers, but to Christians, with whom the Apostle was well acquainted, I suppose to be certain from internal characters. But the shewing that is deferred till by and by.

3. That this epistle was sent to the church at Ephesus, we are assured by the testimonie of all catholic Christians in all past ages.

This we can now say with confidence, having examined the principal Chriftian writers from the first ages to the beginning of the twelfth century. In all which space of time there appears not one, who had any doubt about it.

The testimonie of some of these is especially remarkably, on account of their early age, or their learning, or some other considerations.

One of them, remarkable for his early age, is Ignatius, who was Bishop of Antioch in the later part of the first, and the beginning of the second century, and suffered martyrdom at Rome in the year 107. or, as some think, in 116. In a letter of his to the Ephesians, writ at Smyrna, as he was going from Antioch to Rome, he says: "Ye (i) are "the companions in the mysteries of the gospel of Paul, the sanctified, "the Martyr, [or highly commended,] defervedly moft happy, at whose "feet may I be found, when I shall have attained unto God, who "throughout all his epistle makes mention of you in Christ Jesus."

He

(b) See Dr. Benson upon 1 Tim. iii. 15.
(i) Πάντας συμμαθητής τοῦ ἄγιου θεοῦ, τοῦ μιστροῦ του Ἰουνίου, ἕξωρον ἐτησίως... ὅσιος ἐν πάσῃ ἐπισκοπῇ μνημοσυνή πώς ἐν καιρῷ θεοῦ. Ignat. ep. ad Eph. cap. xii.
He plainly means the epistle of Paul to the Ephesians, in which the Apostle commends those Christians, and never blames them.

So I wrote in the first edition, in 1734, when I collected the passages of Ignatius, bearing testimonie to the books of the New Testament. Afterwards, in 1735, was published the letter above mentioned at the end of the first edition of Dr. Benson's History of the first planting the Christian religion. Which occasioned my adding a note upon that quotation from Ignatius, at p. 154... 156. of the second edition of the first volume of this work, in 1748.

"The learned writer of that letter, instead of μυροινς ομως would read μυροινς ομως: meaning, that Ignatius himself mentioned the Ephesians in every epistle. In answer to which I said, that conjecture appears to be without foundation: forasmuch as in all the editions of Ignatius's epistles the verb is in the third person: not only in the Greek of the smaller epistles, which I translate, but also in the old Latin version of the same small epistles, Quo in omni epistola memoriam fecit vestri in Jefu Chrifto. So likewise in the Greek interpolated epistles, and in the Latin version of the same. There is therefore no various reading. And a new one ought not to be admitted, unless the feme should require it. Which it does not appear to do here.

"For Ignatius is extolling the Ephesians. And one part of their glorie is, that the Apostle throughout his epifle to them had treated them in an honourable manner."

So I wrote in the note juft referred to. And though that learned writer has been since pleaded to publish a poftfcript to his letter, he has not produced any manuscript, or version of this epifle of Ignatius, where the verb is found in the firft perfon.

However, in order to support his proposed reading he excepts to our interpreting the word μυροινς, of an honourable mention. In answer to which I did in the fame note produce proof of the word's being used sometimes for an honourable, or affectionate mention or remembrance. And the noun μυροινς, is evidently thrice used in the New Teftament for an honourable memorial. Matt. xxvi. 13. Mark xiv. 9. Acts x. 4. Of these examples I have been reminded by a learned friend.

That learned author excepts likewise to our interpretation of in πασιν ἔπιστολά, throughout all his epifle, and would translate, who make mention of you in every epifle: that is, as he understands it, Ignatius tells the Ephesians, to whom he is writing, that he made mention of them in every one of his epistles. In answer to which I said in the above mentioned note, that Pearson had well defended the interpretation, for which we contend. And I alleged a part of the note of Cotelerius upon this passage of Ignatius. But by some means Valesius is printed there, instead of Cotelerius. I now tranfcribe that note of Cotelerius at length. Fruftra funt, et Andabatarum more digladiantur viri literati, non videntes, in πασιν ἔπιστολά, esse in tota epifola, ad Ephesios nimium scripta, quà illos laudat valde, ac semper commendat, ut fuit ab Hieronymo observatum. And I shall place here two instances of the ufe of the word ομως, which appear to me altogether fimilar, and therefore to the purpofe. One is taken from the fifth chapter of Ignatius's epifle to the Ephesians, where he fays: If the prayer of one or two be of fuch force, how much more that that of the Bishop, and the whole church." καὶ πᾶσις ἰσχυρωσις. The other is in St. Paul's epistles to the Ephesians, ch. ii. 21. In whom all the building, or the whole building, fitly framed together, groweth unto an holy temple to God. Εἰς ψωφικον ἱερόν κἀλα.

Indeed, Ignatius has mentioned the Ephesians in every one of his epistles, except that to Polycarp. But it is very unlikely, that this should be his meaning here. He is extolling the Ephesians, as companions of Paul in the mysteries of the gospel, and the like. To say to them presently afterwards, and in the same period, that he made mention of them in every one of his epistles, would have an appearance of much vanity: with which, I think, Ignatius was never charged. And at the same time it would be very flat and insipid. Moreover, it is observable, that this is not one of the last epistles, which Ignatius wrote. But, according to the order, in which they are mentioned (k) by Eusebius, it is the very first of his seven epistles.

There is therefore no reason, why we should hesitate to admit the sense, in which this place has been generally understood by learned men.

We also find this sense in some ancient writers. Jerome observes, that (l) when the Apostle wrote to the Corinthians, he had occasion to blame them for fornication, and for strifes and contentions: but there is no fault found by him in the Ephesians. To the like purpose Primojius in (m) the preface to his Commentarie upon St. Paul's epistles, and (n) in his argument of the epistle to the Ephesians, in particular.

So that either those ancient writers understood Ignatius, as we do. Or else, they were led by the epistle itself to form the same idea of it, that we suppose him to have had.

What Ignatius means by the Apostle's mentioning, or being mindful of the Ephesians throughout all his epistles to them, is happily explained by Bp. Pearson. Whole (o) words I shall transcribe below, as his work is not in

(k) Vid. Euseb. H. E. l. 3. cap. 36. and this work, Vol. i. p. 147. 148.

(l) Corinthii, in quibus audiebatur fornicatio qualis nec inter gentes, lae dete paliuntur, quia necandum poterant solidum cibum capere. Ephesii autem, in quibus nullum crimen arguisset, ab ipso Domino celesti velscuntur pane, et sacramentum quod a seculis absconditum fuerat agnoscent. Ep. ad Marcell. t. 2. p. 628. ed. Martiam. animadvertat magnam inter Corinthios et Ephesios esse diastiam. Illis quasi parvulis atque lactentibus scribitur: in quibus erant differentiones, et schismata, et audiebatur fornicatio qualis nec inter gentes quidem. Ephesii vero, apud quos fecit triennium, et omnia eis Christi aperuit sacramenta, aliter erudirentur, &c. In ep. ad Eph. cap. v. T.

(m) Ephesii nullo reprehensione, sed multa sunt laude digni, quia fide Bibl. P. P. T. x. p. 144. H.

(n) Ephesi sunt Asiæni. Hi accepto verbo veritatis persiterunt in ide.

Hos conlaudat Apollolus, scribens eis Roma a carcere. Argum. ep. ad Eph.
b. p. 217. A.

(o) ... quæ scriptit S. Ignatius, S. Paulum in tota epistola, memoriam corum facere in Jeō Chrístō. Hæc a martyre non otiose aut frigide, sed vere, imo signanter et vigilanter dīcē sunt. Tota enim epistola ad Ephesios scripta ipas Ephesios, eorumque honorem et curam maxime speçiat, et summe honorificam eorum memoriam ad posteros transmitit. In aliis epistolis Apolo-in every body's hands. Indeed this is a proper character of this epistle, as may be easily perceived. Nor did any of the ancients for that reason hesitate to allow, that it was sent to the church at Ephesus.

I hope, that I have now justified the present reading, and common interpretation of this passage of Ignatius.

The learned writer, with whom I have been arguing, concludes his postscript in this manner. "Should what has been offered, not prove satisfactory, the difficulty will still remain, how to reconcile the present reading, in Ignatius, with Dr. Mill's reasons against St. Paul's epistle being written to the Ephesians... The most plausible solution of which seems to be that in Mr. Locke..." And what there follows to the end.

I think, we should cheerfully accept of Mr. Locke's, or any other reasonable solution of the difficulty, if there be any. This, so far as I am able to judge, is better, than to attempt the alteration of a passage in an ancient author, without the authority of any manuscript: when there is nothing in the coherence, that necessarily requires it. And much better, than to alter a text of an epistle of the New Testament, contrarie to the authoritie of all manuscripts, and the concurring testimonie of all ancient Christian writers.

Befide that passage, there are in Ignatius's epistle to the Ephesians, many allusions and references to St. Paul's epistles to the Ephesians. Which shews, that he believed, that epistle to have been writ to the church at Ephesus. Those allusions, (though not all of them) were taken notice of by us long (p) ago. And Dr. fortin having observed, that (q) Ignatius in his xii chapter takes notice of St. Paul's epistle to the Ephesians, and his martyrdom, adds: "And as he was writing to the same church, he often alludes to the Apostle's letter to them."

But there is one word in that twelfth chapter of Ignatius's epistle to the Ephesians, of which I have not yet taken sufficient notice. I mean the word συμπόσια. Ye are, says he, the companions of Paul in the mysteries of the gospel: or ye are partakers of the mysteries of the gospel with Paul. This is said out of a regard to St. Paul's epistles to the Ephesians. And it fully shews, that Ignatius thought, that epistle to have been sent to the church, to which himself was then writing. For that is their distinguishing character: at least it is a character, which is more especially the character of the Christians, to whom that letter is writ.

I formerly (r) gave an account of Palladius, author of a Dialogue of the Life of Chrysostom, about the year 408. In that work Palladius has an argument, Ius eos ad quos scribit, sepe acriter objurgat... aut parce laudat... Hic omnibus modis perpetuo se Ephefis applicat, illoque tanquam egregios Chriftianos tractat, evangelio salutis firmiter credentes, et Spiritu promissionis obgignatos, concives sanctorum, et domesticos Dei. Pro iis sepe ardenter orat, ipfos hortatur, obsecrat, laudat, utrumque sexum fedulo inruit, suum erga eos singularem affectum ubique prodit. Pearlou. Vind. Ignat. Part. 4. cap. x. sub init.

(p) See Vol. i. p. 169... 172. firft ed. p. 168... 170. 2d. ed.
(q) See the firft Volume of his Remarks upon Ecclesiastical History. p. 56.
(r) Vol. xi. p. 59.
argument, in which he observes, "That Paul had called the Cretians "liars. Tit. i. 12. the Galatians stupid. Gal. iii. 1. and the Corinthians "proud. i Cor. v. 2. On the other hand (s) he calls the Romans faith-"full, the Ephesians ωδας, initiated, to whom also he writes in a sub-"lime manner, and the Thessalonians lovers of the brotherhood."

When Palladius says, that St. Paul called the Romans faithful, it cannot be doubted, that he refers to Rom. i. 8. And when he says, that the Thessalonians were called lovers of the brotherhood, he must intend i Thes. iv. 9. 10. When he speaks of the Ephesians as initiated, it may not be so easy to determine the text, particularly intended by him. But, probably, it is Eph. i. 9. or that, joined with others, such as ch. iii. 3. 4. . . . 6. and 9. and v. 32. vi. 16. For in this epistle the word mysterie occurs frequently.

However, hereby we are assured, that this was, especially, the character of the Chrisrians at Ephesus. And we plainly perceive, that Ignatius supposed, that epistle to have been writ to them.

Nor will my readers, possibly, blame me for prolixity, if I here allege a pallage of Jerome: where he says, “That (t) still there are in the churches remainders of the same virtues, or vices, for which they were remarkable of old. The Romans are still faithfull, and devout, the Corinthians proud, the Galatians stupid, the Thessalonians lovers of the brotherhood.” In that place Jerome says nothing particular of the Ephesians. But in his Commentarie upon the epistle to them he often observes, that (u) no epistle of St. Paul was fuller of mysteries: which occasioned obscurity,

(s) . . . η αδισταλις πιτες κραιναις αποκαλεων, κε μυτας ιδιωσις, κε κε υπαιλ-"τερος επιστελελευ, κε ψαλιδελφης δεσπαλικη, μἀνις περιεγραφει τος ιπτατας; η τακτης. Pallad. ap. Chrys. T. 13. p. 71. E.

(u) Satis abundeque offendi, quod beatus Apostolus ad nullam ecclesiarum tam mytlice scripserit, et abfondita feculils revelaverit sacramento. Pr. 5. in ep. ad Eph. T. 4. p. 375.

Decenter quoque Ephesios, qui ad scientie summam confcenderant, scribitur, quod fint lux in Domino. In cap. 5. p. 383.

Hac idcirco universa replicimus, ut offenderemus, quare Apostolus in hac vel potissimum epiftola obiusuros fenius, et ignota feculils sacramenta conge-"ferit. Pr. i. in ep. ad Ephb. ib. p. 522.
fcurity, and rendered it very difficult to be explained. And in a place already cited he says of the Ephesians, that they had (x) received the mysterie hid from ages: that is, they were initiated, or were partakers of the mysteries of the gospel with Paul. And to the like purpose in several passages, just transcribed at the bottom of the page.

By all which, I think, it must appear very evident, that Ignatius supposed, St. Paul's epistle to the Ephesians to have been really writ to them. And his judgement is decisive. For he could not be mistaken. So says the writer of the letter above mentioned. Whole words are these: "I have been the longer, says he, upon these passages of Ignatius, by reason of the weight, his authority might justly claim in this case, was it certain, that he had spoken of this epistle of Paul, as written by him to the Ephesians. For if this epistle was writ in the ninth year of Nero, and that of Ignatius in the tenth of Trajan, as Bp. Pearson placeth them, the distance of time will be but forty five years. So that Ignatius, being then far advanced in age, could not well be ignorant of the truth of this matter. And besides, Onesimus was Bishop of Ephesus at the time Ignatius wrote his epistle to that church, is mentioned in it, and had lately made Ignatius a visit. So that had there been any doubt concerning this affair, he could easily have set him right."

It might have been added, that (y) Ignatius, at the time of his writing his epistle to the Ephesians, had with him Burrus, a Deacon of the church at Ephesus, and Crocus, Euphus, and Fronto, all members of the church at Ephesus, who were then with him at Smyrna. Who likewise, as may be supposed, afterwards carried his letter to Ephesus.

If therefore by what has been said it appears evident, that Ignatius has spoken of this epistle of Paul, as writ to the Ephesians, (as I think he does,) we have made out what must be reckoned of great weight in this matter.

However, it is not Ignatius's testimonie only, that is decisive. There are many other ancient writers, whose testimonie also is satisfactorie, and decisive.

For by Irenæus, Clement of Alexandria, Tertullian, Origen, Cyprian, writers of the second and third centuries, this epistle is expressly quoted as writ by Paul to the Ephesians. They so quote this epistle, without hesitation, as freely, and plainly, as they do the epistles to the Romans, the Galatians, the Corinthians, or any other of the acknowledged epistles of St. Paul.

It is quoted in the like manner by all writers in general, of every age, Latins, Greeks, and Syrians. I would particularly observe, that it is so quoted by Jerome, who also wrote a commentarie upon this epistle, and had seen many ancient manuscripts and editions of the New Testament. Who never expresseth any doubt, whether this epistle was writ to the Ephesians, nor takes notice of any various reading in the inscription of it. For which I refer to his chapter, in the tenth volume of this work. This epistle is quoted in the like manner by Athanasius, Epiphanius, Gregorie

(x) Ephesii ... sacramentum quod a seculis abscendit fuerat agnos-
(y) Vid. ep. ad Eph. cap. ii.
Gregorie Nazianzen, and all the writers of every age, and of different, and remote countreys.

We may also observe here, that in the fifth century, there were some Christians, who had a notion, that this epistle was writ to the Ephesians, before the Apostle had seen them. It is likely, that this notion was founded upon Eph. i. 15. Nevertheless, they still thought the epistle to have been writ to the Ephesians. Which is a proof, that they knew nothing to the contrarie, and had never heard of any various reading in the inscription of this epistle. Among these is Euthalius, who (z) in his prologue to St. Paul's epistles considers the two epistles to the Romans and Ephesians, as epistles writ to Christians, whom the Apostle knew by report only. This is remarkable. It shews, that he had no various reading in this place. If he had, he would have taken notice of it. Euthalius was a learned man. He put out an accurate edition of the Catholic epistles, and of St. Paul's epistles, with a general prologue to them. And (a) he had consulted, besides others, the manuscripts in the librarie at Cesarea in Palestine. Nevertheless he had not met with any various reading.

And in the Argument of the epistle to the Ephesians, now placed in the edition of Euthalius, it is said, that (b) the epistle to the Ephesians was sent by Paul from Rome to them, when he had not yet seen them, and had only heard of them. I do not ascribe this argument to Euthalius. The reasons were assigned (c) formerly. Euthalius wrote a prologue to St. Paul's epistles. But it does not appear, that he wrote arguments to each of his epistles severally. The same thing is also said of the epistle to the Ephesians in the (d) Synopsis of Scripture, ascribed to Athanafius. These I reckon one and the same, but different from Euthalius.

And I may here take notice of a small inaccuracie in Mr. Wettstein, who (e) in his notes upon the beginning of the epistle to the Ephesians quotes both the prologue to St. Paul's epistles, and the Argument of the epistle to the Ephesians in particular, as Euthalius's: though in his Prolegomena, in his account of what Euthalius had done, he had observd, and rightly, that (f) those Arguments were not composd by Euthalius, but by another.

I therefore here suppose two, that is, Euthalius, and another, who wrote the Arguments of St. Paul's epistles severally. Who may be the same that composd the Synopsis ascribed to Athanafius.

However, beside these there may have been about this time some others of the same opinion. For Theodoret in his preface to the epistle to the

(b) Ταυτόν ἐπίσημον ἀπὸ εἰκόνως, ἐπὶ τῶν μὴ ἑπαρκῶς ἀντίς, ἀκόας ὑπὲρ περὶ ἀντίς. Arg. επ. ad Eph. ib. p. 633.

(c) See Vol. xi. p. 207...210.

the Ephesians observes, there (g) were some, who said, that Paul wrote to the Ephesians, before he had seen them. But he shews it to be a false and absurd opinion, and concludes, saying: “It (h) is manifest therefore, that the Apostle had preached the gospel to them, before he wrote to them.”

This affords a good argument, that there was not in the fifth century, nor before, any notice, or apprehension of a various reading in the inscription of this epistle. For if there had, none would have admitted so absurd a supposition, that Paul wrote from Rome an epistle to the Ephesians, before he had seen them.

Another thing deserving notice here is, that before the end of the fourth century there was forged an epistle to the Laodiceans, ascribed to Paul. For (i) it is expressly mentioned by Jerome in his book of Illustrious Men, writ about 392. Which must induce us to think, that the epistle to the Ephesians was never called the epistle to the Laodiceans. For then there could have been no pretence for forging another with that title, to verify a false interpretation of Col. iv. 16.

I should now proceed to another argument. But I must look back, to secure this, taken from the testimonie of ancient Christian writers. For it has been argued from a passage of St. Basil, in his books against Eunomius, that he had seen some ancient manuscripts of this epistle, in which these words, at Ephesus, were wanting. That passage, as cited formerly, is thus: “And Paul writing to the Ephesians, as truly united to him who is, through knowledge, called them in a peculiar sense such who are, saying: To the saints who are, and [or even] the faithfull in Christ Jesus. For so those before us have transmitted it, and we have found it in ancient copies.” This point having been already examined by us largely, I refer to what was then (k) said. It was then argued by us, that St. Basil does not here intimate, that the word, or words, at Ephesus, were wanting in any copies seen by him. And I would now observe farther, that our account of this passage is confirmed by the works of other authors, both before, and after Basil. There had lived many learned Christian writers before his time. There were many learned Christians contemporarie with him: as his own brother, Gregory Nyssen, Gregory Nazianzen, Amphiblochius, and others: and also soon after him, as Theodoret, and Euthalius: not now to mention Jerome, or other learned Latin authors. None of whom have said, that the words, at Ephesus, were wanting in any copies, which they had seen. The various reading therefore, intended by Basil, must have been somewhat small, not any thing like 1 Tim., at Ephesus. For so remarkable a reading could not have been paffed by in silence, unobserved by all others. And every one may see, that in this very place, as well

---

(h) Dvinktai dea saphiis, vewkhrvzov avtovis to evagylion oswas glvcafe tiv etiologh. Ib. p. 292.
(i) Legunt quidam et ad Laodicenses. Sed ab omnibus exploditur. De V. I. Cap. v.
well as elsewhere, Basil cites this epistle, as writ by Paul to the Ephesians. And they are the Christians, of whom Paul had said, that through knowledge they were united to him who is.

In the place, to which I referred just now, I gave an account of a Dissertation of Lensfant, vindicating the common reading. Which was approved by Wolfius, and others. However, Mr. Kusler was not satisfied. And in the preface to his edition of Mill's New Testament, he says, "That (l) the argument, or interpretation of Basil, depends upon a supposition, that the words, at Ephesus, were wanting in the inscription of this epistle. Otherwise the Christians, to whom that epistle is sent, could not have been reckoned more especially united to him who is, or called such who are, rather than the Romans, or Philippians, or any other Christians, to whom Paul wrote."

To which I answer: that is saying all, and the only thing, that can be said, in behalf of the supposition, that the words, at Ephesus, were wanting in some copies, which Basil had seen. But though this may seem specious and plausible, it is not conclusive. We have perceived from Palladius, and Jerome lately alleged, that there were some, who appropriated certain characters to divers churches. The Romans were especially called faithful, the Ephesians initiated, and knowing, and the Thessalonians lovers of the brotherhood. But it cannot be thence concluded, that other Christians were not entitled to the same characters: or that the same things might not be also said of them. As may appear to any one, who does but look into St. Paul's epistles. In which the faith of other churches is spoken of, befide that of the Romans. And others, befide the Thessalians, are supposed to have been lovers of the saints, or the brotherhood. Says the Apostle 1 Thess. i. 3. Remembering without ceasing your work of faith, and labour of love. 2 Thess. i. 4. So that we ourselves glory in you, in the churches of God, for your patience and faith in all your persecutions. 2 Cor. viii. 7. As ye abound in every thing, in faith. . . Eph. i. 1. To the saints which are at Ephesus, and to the faithful in Christ Jesus. ver. 15. Wherefore, . . . after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints. Col. i. 2. To the saints, and faithfull brethren in Christ, which are at Colosse. Philem. ver. 5. Hearing of thy love, and faith, which thou hast toward the Lord Jesus, and toward all saints. And others, beside the Ephesians, were partakers of the mysteries of the gospel, with the Apostle. See Rom. xi. 25. 1 Cor. ii. 6. 7. Col. i. 25. . . 27. ii. 2. iv. 3.

That is the very observation of Palladius in the place above cited: that when the Apostle blames some for certain vices, and commends others for certain virtues, he by no means intends to intimate, that those vices, or those virtues, were peculiar to the persons blamed, or commended by him.

The Romans were called by some in ancient times in an especial manner faithful, the Ephesians initiated, and the Thessalians or Macedonians, lovers of the brotherhood. But they were not so, exclusive of others.

(l) Nec magis idαξωτας Apostolus Ephesios, ex senfu Basilii, vocaverit ορας quam Romanos, Philippenses, etc. ad quos scribens codem plane loquendi formula utitur. Kusler.
thers. For all the Churches, or Christians, to whom Paul wrote, were faithfull, and initiated, or partakers with him in the mysteries of the gospel, and lovers of the saints, or brotherhood: though they might be reasonably exhorted to abound therein more and more. As are the Thessalonians themselves, 1 ep. ch. iv. 10. See also iii. 12. And indeed, if such properties did not belong to them, they could not have been Christians. Nevertheles, when these several characters had been applied to some, particularly, it is likely, that few would scruple to follow the same way of speaking, if there was occasion.

So in the present case, that observation in Basil having been applied to the Ephesians by some men of no great judgement, it was left there, and not applied to any others. Indeed it is an impertinent observation, as Jerome (m) calls it. And, as it seems, was made use of by a few only. But it might have been as properly said of other Christians, as of the Ephesians.

One thing more I add here. They who are for leaving out the words, at Ephesus, must read the place in this manner: to such as are saints, and faithfull in Christ Jesus. Then this should be a general epistle, not directed to any one place, but to good Christians every where. But that it is not a general epistle, is manifest from Eph. vi. 21. 22. without insisting now on any other places. But that ye may also know my affairs, and how I do, Tychicus a beloved brother, and faithful minister in the Lord, shall make known unto you all things. Whom I have sent unto you for the same purpose, that ye might know our affairs, and that he might comfort your hearts. This plainly thaws, that the epistle had not a general inscription, to saints and faithfull men, but was inscribed to the saints of some place. And who should they be, but the saints and faithfull at Ephesus: to whom it is inscribed in all Greek manuscripts, and in all versions, and in all catalogues of the books of the New Testament, whether composed by Councils, or others?

4. Once more. St. Paul himself says 2 Tim. iv. 12. And Tychicus have I sent to Ephesus, very probably referring to this epistle, as (n) was shewn some while ago. This is what Whitby intends at the beginning of his preface to this epistle, before transcribed. “That this epistle to the Ephesians was indeed written by St. Paul, and directed to them, and not to any other church, we cannot doubt, if we believe either the epistle, or St. Paul himself.” By the testimonie of the epistle he means the inscription at the beginning, where is at Ephesus, in all manuscripts and versions. By the testimonie of St. Paul himself he means what is said 2 Tim. iv. 12. quoted above.

Having finisht the argument in favour of the genuinnesse of the common inscription of this epistle, which to me appears sufficient, and satisfactorie: I now propose to consider objections, which have been raised by Mill, and others.

1 Obj. “It is said, that there are in this epistle divers expressions, not suited to the Christians at Ephesus, where Paul had been twice, and

(m) See Vol. ix. p. 118. 119. note (p).
(n) See before. p. 263.

Vol. II.
The Epistle, inscribed to the Ephesians,

Ch. XIII.

spent there almost three years. See Acts xviii. 19. . . 21. xix. and xx. i. and 17. . . 38."

 Says Mr. Peirce in the place before referred to, representing Mill's argument: "He has proved it highly improbable, that the epistle was at " first writ to the Ephesians. St. Paul had resided among them, and " kept back nothing that was profitable unto them. . . How then could he " write to them, as though he had never seen, or been among them, " but only had heard of them? Eph. i. 5. Wherefore I also, after I " heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love to all the saints. Again, " is it likely, he would refer thofe, to whom he had declared all the coun-" sel of God, fo long together, to a bare report of himself? Eph. iii. 2. " If ye have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God, which is given me " to you-ward. Or would he suppose, that they who had heard him " preach a thousand times would need to understand his knowledge in the " mystery of Christ, from what he said in a few verses, or even the whole, " of that short epistle? Eph. iii. 4."

To the like purpose another learned author, whom likewise I shall tran-" scribe here, that this objection may appear in all it's strength: " He " (o) intimath, that he had only heard of their faith in Christ, and of " their love to all Christians. ch. i. 15. . . Again, he not only men-" tioneth his hearing of their faith in Christ, but ch. iii. 1. 2. he speaks, " as if he was dubious, whether they had heard of the extraordinary " revelations, which he had received from heaven. . . And verses 3. " 4. he intimath, that, if they had never heard of these things before, " they might understand them from the brief hints, which he had given " them in this epistle. Is this like St. Paul's file to the churches of " his own planting? . . Or could a few lines, or even a larger epistle " than this, have given them so clear a knowledge of St. Paul's illu-" mination, as their hearing him a thousand times? For had he not " been among them for the space of three years, warning every one of " them night and day with tears?"

But this difficulty, if I mistake not, will diappear upon farther con-" sideration, and a fuller examination of the matter.

First. It appears from the epistle itself, that the Christians, to whom it is sent, were not unknown to Paul, nor they to him: but they were well acquainted with each other.

That the Apostle was acquainted with these Christians, must, I think, " be evident to all, who read without prejudice the first fourteen verses of " the first chapter of this epistle. I inftit only upon ver. 13. In whom ye " also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: " in whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with the holy spirit of pro-" mise. How could the Apostle write thus to any, but to such, whose " conversion to Christianity he was well acquainted with, and that upon " their believing they had received gifts of the Spirit? How could any man write thus to people, whom he had but lately heard of?"

There are also many other passages of this epistle, which shew the Ap-" oste's knowledge of the state of these Christians, both before, and af-" ter their conversion. Some of which I must select here.

Ch. ii. 1. 2.

Ch. XII.

was writ to them. 339

Ch. ii. 1. 2. And you bath he quickened, who were dead in trespasses, and sins: wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, ... and throughout that chapter to the end.

Then at ch. iii. 13. Wherefore I desire, that ye faint not at my tribulation for you, which is your glory. That must be laid to Christians, of whose tender affection for him he was very sensible: recollecting, it is likely, what had happened at Miletus, as related Acts xx. 36. ... 38. And indeed it is throughout an affectionate, as well as instructive, and useful epistle.

Ch. iv. 20. But ye have not so learned Christ. 21. If so be, or * forasmuch as, ye have heard him, and have been taught the truth as it is in Jesus. This the Apostle knew very well.

I cannot forbear to recite this place more largely, from ver. 20. to ver. 24. But ye have not so learned Christ, forasmuch as ye have heard him, and have been instructed in him, as the truth is in Jesus, to * put off, with respect to the former conversation, the old man, which is corrupt according to deceitful lusts, and to be renewed in the spirit of your mind, and to put on the new man, which is created according to God in righteousness and true holiness. Certainly these are St. Paul's own converts and disciples. The case of these people resembles that of the Galatians. ch. iii. 1. Before whose eyes Jesus Christ had been evidently set forth crucified among them. But to these Christians, at Ephesus, the Apostle expreslieth himself with more mildness, as was fit, than to the Galatians.

Then ver. 30. And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye were sealed unto the day of redemption: or, with which ye were sealed in the day of redemption. These Gentil Christians had received the Spirit. And from whom, I pray, if not from St. Paul? And that they had a variety of spiritual gifts, is manifest from ch. v. 18. ... 20.

Ch. v. 8. For ye were sometime darkness. But now are ye light in the Lord. Walk as children of the light. Which shews, that the Apostle knew the state of these Christians before, and after their conversion.

And that St. Paul was acquainted with them, and they with him, appears to me very evident from ch. vi. 21. 22.

Secondly, at ch. i. 15. are words, upon which an objection has been formed, as we have seen. Wherefore I also, after I heard of your faith in the Lord Jesus, and love unto all the saints: that is, according to Mr. Locke's paraphrase: "Wherefore I also here in my confinement having heard of "the continuance of your faith in Christ Jesus, and your love to all the "saints." And in his preface to this epistle Mr. Locke has these expressions. "Wherefore when he heard, that the Ephesians stood firm "in the faith, whereby he means their confidence of their title to the "privileges and benefits of the gospel, without submission to the law, he "thanks God for them."

Whitby's

* See Dr. Doddridge upon the place, whose version, in the main, I have here adopted.
Whitby's paraphrase of this verse is to this purpose. "Wherefore I "also having heard of your steadfast faith in the Lord Jesus, and your "encreasing love to all the faints: that is, that the faith and love wrought "in you continues steadfast, and aboundeth."

To the like purpose also (p) Grotius, whose words I have placed below.

Theodoret's note upon ver. 15. and 16. is to this purpose: "Hence "some have supposed, that the Apostle wrote this epistle to the Ephe- "sians, when he had not yet seen them. But they should consider, that "writing to the Corinthians, concerning whom he had received some "disagreeable information, he says: It has been related to me of you, my bre- "thren, by them which are of the household of Chloe, that there are contentions "among you. 1 Cor. i. 11. As therefore when he had received infor- "mation of some things disagreeable, he wrote with grief of mind: fo "when he had received an account of things agreeable concerning these "Ephesians, he bestows commendation. He praiseth them, both for "their piety and for their liberality to the faints. Whereupon he also "gives thanks to God, the author of all good things."

So that this text was no difficulty at all with Theodoret. However, it may be expedient, that I should enlarge somewhat farther.

I observe, then, that St. Paul writes in the same manner to Philemon, "his own convert, whose faith therefore he certainly knew. Philem. ver. 4. 5. I thank my God, making mention of thee always in my prayers: 'hearing of thy love, and faith, which thou hast toward the Lord Jesus, and toward all "faints. That Philemon had been converted to the faith of the gospel by "Paul, I suppose to be evident from ver. 19. Albeit I do not say unto thee, "how thou owest to me thy own self besides. So that text (q) has been gene- "rally understood. And how it can be interpreted otherwise, I do not conceive.

Whitby's paraphrase is: "Albeit I do not say unto thee, how thou owest to "me, by whom thou wast converted, even thy own self, or the well being "of thy foul, besides."

Beaufres and Lenfant in their preface to the epistle to Philemon ex- "press themselves in this manner. "'Philemon was a considerable person "at Colosse, a city of Phrygia. St. Paul had converted him, either at "Ephesus, or some other city of Asia, when he preached the gospel in "that countrey: or else at Colosse itself, in one of the journeys, which he "had made in Phrygia.'"

There are some other things to be observed here concerning this per- "son. For in the first verse of that epistle Paul calls Philemon beloved, and "his fellow-laborer. Which, if I am not mistaken, indicate personal ac- "quaintance, and imply their having labored together in the service of the "gospel, at Colosse, or Ephesus, or in some other place. And yet St. Paul "writing to Philemon speaks of his having heard of his faith, and love."

Still

(p) Loquitur autem Paulus de prophetu evangelii apud Ephesios, ex quo "ipse ab illis discesserat. Grot. in Ehp. i. 14.

Still farther, it appears to me highly probable, that Onesimus, in whose behalf this epistle was writ, knew Paul, before he saw him at Rome. He either had seen Paul at his master's house at Colossæ, or else at Ephesus, when attending upon his master there. Paul was a prisoner at Rome, and could not go abroad. He dwelt in his own hired house, with a soldier that kept him. Acts xxviii. 16. and 30. It is likely, therefore, that Onesimus came first to Paul. Being in Iberia, and knowing Paul's benevolent temper, and what civilities he had received from his master, Philemon, he might hope for some relief from him. Or, possibly, hearing, that Paul was at Rome, and recollecting the discourses, which he had heard him make, when attending on Philemon, he was touched with remorse for the faults, which he had been guilty of, and came to Paul for farther instruction in the things of religion, and for advice and comfort. He might also encourage himself with hopes of Paul's interceding in his behalf, and obtaining a reconciliation with his master.

Says Beaufobre in his preface to the epistle to Philemon: It can hardly be doubted, that the repentance of his fault obliged Onesimus to come to Paul, whom he knew to be his master's friend. For otherwise, he might have remained unknown at Rome.

Philemon then was well known to Paul. Nevertheless, at the beginning of his epistle to him, he thanks God, having heard of his love and faith. The meaning is, he had received information of the continuance of his faith, and of it's bearing good fruit. If Paul could write thus to Philemon, his convert, friend, and fellow-laborer, he might write in a like manner to other Christians, to whom he was no stranger.

So likewise to the Colossians ch. i. 3, 4. We give thanks to God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you: since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus, and of the love, which ye have to all the saints: that is, having heard of the continuance of your faith, and of the good fruits of it. This he had been assured of by Epaphras, who had come to the Apostle at Rome. It is not to be supposed, that Paul now first heard of the faith of the Colossians, or the Laodicæans. I think, that the Colossians were Paul's own converts, and that the church there had been planted by him. But supposing that to be uncertain, I imagine, it cannot be questioned, that the church there had been planted a good while ago by some of the Apostle's assistants, and fellow laborers. Consequently, the Apostle did not now first know, and hear of the faith and love of the Christians at Colosse. He must have known it before he came to Rome, and before he was apprehended at Jerusalem. But he had lately received good tidings concerning their steadfastness and perseverance from some, who had come from them to him at Rome.

St. Paul, since his coming to Rome, had received from Tychicus an account of the state of things at Ephesus, which upon the whole was very pleasing. He had received from Epaphras a like account of the state of things at Colosse, and particularly a good account of the conduct of Philemon. For all which he praised God in his epistles to them. Indeed it could not but be matter of much joy to the Apostle, to hear of the continued faith of Christians in several places, notwithstanding the many difficulties attending the profession of Christianity, and notwithstanding the the discouragement, which his own long captivity might have occasioned in the minds of many.

In these three epistles, to the Ephesians, the Colossians, and Philemon, are the same expressions, near the beginning, having heard of your faith and love. And they are all to be understood in a like manner. If these words were to be understood in the epistle to the Ephesians of now first hearing: it might be as well argued, that the epistle could not be writ to the Laodiceans. For, as before intimated, it may be reckoned certain, that before Paul came to Rome he knew of the faith of the church at Laodicea.

Thirdly, in the next place I consider that part of the objection, which is raised from Eph. iii. 2. 3. 4. If ye have heard of the dispensation of the grace of God, which is given to you-ward: How that by revelation he made known unto me the mystery, as I wrote before in a few words: whereby ye may understand my knowledge in the mystery of Christ.

To which part of the objection I answer, that if ye have heard of the dispensation, may be rendered, since, or forasmuch as ye have heard, and what follows. So Theophylact, approved by Whitby upon the place.

I observe farther. These things are as properly said to the Ephesians, as to any other Christians in that country, or thereabout. They were all acquainted, and much alike acquainted with them. If such expressions might be used in an epistle to the Colossians, or the Laodiceans, they might be used also in an epistle to the Ephesians. No Gentil Christians, whether converted immediately by Paul himself, or by some of his affiants or fellow-laborers, could be ignorant of it. Nor could Paul doubt, whether they knew it. Nevertheless he might judge it proper to hint these things, the more to confirm the instructions, and exhortations, which he sent them, and to secure their steadiness in the faith and profession of the pure gospel of Christ, as they had been taught. And does he not speak more largely, and more distinctly of this matter, in his epistle to the Galatians, whom none ever denied to be the Apostle's converts? Gal. i. 11. ... 20. But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel, which was preached of me, is not after men. ... For ye have heard of my conversation in time past. ... But it pleased God ... to reveal his Son in me. ... Now the things, which I write unto you, behold, before God, I write not. These things the Galatians were not ignorant of. But in his epistle he reminds them of them, and in a very solemn manner.

The writers, from whom this objection was taken, speak of the Ephesians having heard the Apostle preach a thousand times, and ask: Could the Apostle suppose, that they who heard him preach a thousand times, could need to understand his knowledge of the mystery of Christ, from what he said in a few verses, or even from the whole of this short epistle? But those expressions appear to me very strong, and even unjustifiable: though they are warranted by (r) Mill, whom those learned men follow.

He and they seem to conceive of the Christians at Ephesus, as a small society, consisting perhaps of two or three hundred people. And they speak,

(r) Quomodo convenit hoc civibus Ephesinis, qui sexcentes prædicantem audierant Apollolum? Mill. Proli num. 72.
was writ to them. 343

speak, as if they supposed that church to have been formed and planted before the Apostle came thither, or very soon after his arrival: and that they had all heard him preach once at least every day of the three years, that he refided in that city. How else could they think, that the Chriftians at Ephesus had heard Paul preach a thousand times? He fays indeed to their Elders at Miletus, Acts xx. 31. that for the space of three years he had not ceafed to warn every one night and day with tears. For certain, the Apostle was very diligent in making converts, and in confirming the believers there. But conversions were made gradually, not all at once, as is evident from the account, which we have of Paul's preaching at Ephesus, in the xix. chapter of the Acts. Where alfo St. Luke observes, at ver. 10. that all they which dwelt in Asia, heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks. This may lead us to think, that Paul had many converts in several parts of Asia. Some of these may have been, and heard the Apostle at Ephesus, once only, or however not often. To all these the epiflfe to the Ephesians was fent. The incription, to the faints and faithful at Ephesus, the chief city, would comprehend all the believers in the countrey. And fome converts may have been made, fince the Apostle was there. However, though it fhould be allowed, that most of thofe Chriftians had heard the Apostle often, the reading of this epiflfe might be of great ufe to them. For it is an excellent epiflfe, as all muft allow, and not inferior to the moft admired of St. Paul's writings.

I have now considered the firft, and, as I fuppofe, the principal ob-jeftion.

2. Obj. It is faid, "that in all St. Paul's epiflles, writ to particular churches, there is some peculiar cafe mentioned, respecting each church, that feems to be one reason at leaft for writing to them. Which is alfo obferved in his epiflfe to the Coloflans, whom he there cautions againft the worship of angels."

I anfwer. That is a juft obfervation. And the fame may be found in Jerome's preface to his Commentarie upon this epiflfe to the Ephesians. Where he fays: As (i) the bleffed John in the Revelation, writing to the seven churches, either reprehends the faults, or commend the virtues of each: fo likewife, he fays, does the Apostle Paul in his epiflles. And he fuppofeth this epiflfe to have been writ to the Chriftians at Ephesus, and to be suited to their cafe.

But we are not to expect, that even an Apostle fhould cenfure, and find fault, where there is little, or no occasion for it. It becomes him to own the good temper and conduct of any church, that deferves it. And what church could be fo likely to deserve mild treatment, as the church at Ephesus, which had had fo much of the Apostle's preffence, and of his fa-

(i) Necesse eft enim, ut jufta diverfitates locorum, et temporum, et hominum, quibus scriptæ sunt, diverfas et caufas, et argumenta, et origines habeant. Et quomodo beatus Johannes in Apocalyphl tua ad septem scribens eccleſias, in unaquaque earum specialia vel vitia reprehendit, vel virtutes probat: ita et fanes Apostolus Paulus per fingulas ecclesias vulneribus medetur illatis, nec ad inflar imperiti Medici unò collyrio omnium oculos vucurare. Pr. i. in ep. ad Eph. T. 4. p. 320.
vorite disciple Timothie, upon whom he has bestowed so great commendations? 1 Cor. iv. 17. xvi. 16. Philip. ii. 19...22. and who undoubtedly would be faithful and diligent, where he was sent occasionally only, or where he was stationed for a while. This was the case here. I suppose, that Timothie was left at Ephesus, when Paul went up to Jerusalem. There he continued, till after the Apostle's arrival at Rome, and after the writing of this epistle to the Ephesians, of which we are now speaking. Moreover, as is well known, when Paul was going up to Jerusalem, he delivered, at Miletus, a most pathetic charge to the Elders of that church, and to Timothie, with them, as I suppose. See Acts xx. 17...38. particularly 28...31. Which certainly must have excited all to faithfulness and zeal in the performance of their duty. Indeed he says: I know, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. There would arise men, that would endeavour to devour, and lay waste the church of Ephesus. Nevertheless, I think, these earnest warnings of the Apostle must have been of great use to defeat the designs of such evil men: so that they should not be able to do much mischief there, at least for some while.

And says the Apostle ver. 31. Watch, and remember, that by the space of three years I ceased not to warn every one of you night and day with tears. This the Apostle does again very suitably in this epistle, in divers places, which cannot be overlooked, nor passed by us here. So Eph. iv. 1. I therefore the prisoner of the Lord beseech you, that ye walk worthie of the vocation, wherewith ye are called...ver. 17. This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk not as other Gentils, and what follows. So alio ch. v. 1... And vi. 12...17. These warnings have, probably, a respect to temptations, which the Ephesians might meet with from their Heathen and idolatrous neighbours, and from deceitful and artful men among Christians. To such things as these Jerome supposed Paul to have an eye in this (t) epistle.

And these written warnings, as well as others, seem to have had a good effect. The church of Ephesus appears to have behaved commendably for a good while. This may be collected from Rev. ii. 1...6. And Ignatius at the beginning of his epistle to them says ch. vi. “And indeed Onesimus himself does greatly commend your good order in God: that you all live according to truth, and that no herefie dwells among you.” And ch. ix. “I have heard of some, who have passed by you, having perverse doctrine: whom you did not suffer to sow among you.” And to the like purpose in other places of that epistle.

3. Obj. It is said, “that Timothie's name is not mentioned in “the introduction to this epistle: though it is found in the begining of the epistle to the Colossians, and that to Philemon.

(t) Scribest ad Ephesos Dianam colentes. ... Scribest autem ad metropolim Azie civitatem, in qua ita idololatria ... et artium magicarum praetigiae viguerant. Hae idcirco univerfa replicavimus, ut offenderemus, quare Apostolus in hac vel potissimum epifola obfcuros fenfus, et ignota feculis sacramenta congererit: et de sanctarum contrariaurumque virtutum docuerit poteftate: qui fint damones, quid valeant. ... De quibus ait: Non est nobis pugna adversum carnem et sanguinem, sed adversum principitatibus et potestatibus. ... Hieron. ubi supr. p. 322.

Hence
CH. XIII.

was writ to them.

"Hence it is argued, that Timothie was unknown to all, or most of the church, to whom this epistle was written. Confequently it was not sent to the church of Ephesus, where Timothie was well known."

In anfwer to which I would fay, firft, that I can fee no reafon, why St. Paul fhould scruple to put Timothie's name at the beginning of an epistle, writ to Christians, with whom Timothie was not perfonally acquainted. Secondly. There can be no reafon to doubt, that Timothie was as well known to the Christians at Laodicea, as at Coloffe. Thirdly. Therefore there muft have been some other reafon for omitting the name of Timothie at the beginning of this epifle. Fourthly, that reafon prefently offers, and probably was this, that at writing this epifle Timothie was not with the Apostle at Rome. I think, Timothie was now at Ephesus. How then could his name be placed at the beginning of an epifle writ to the Ephesians from Rome?

4. Obj. "At Philippi the church was ftetled with fixed officers, before the Apostle wrote. And therefore he directs his epifle not only to the Christians in general there, but to the Bishops and Deacons. But there is no fuch thing here: though the church of Ephesus "had evidently fuch officers, before the writing of this epifle. See Acts "xx. 17."

To which I anfwer, that there muft have been fixed officers in many churches, befide that at Philippi. Says St. Luke in his account of the peregrination of Paul and Barnabas in feverall places: Acts xiv. 21... 23. they returned again to Lyftra, and Iconium, and Antich, [in Pifidia,] confirming the fouls of the disciples... And when they had ordained them Elders in every church, and had prayed with fasting, they commended them to the Lord, on whom they had believed. Says Beza upon this text: "In (u) every church they ordained Elders, that is, Pfators and Deacons, and other officers." From what is faid here Luke leads us to conclude, what was done elsewhere. It was not needful to mention fuch things every where. But very probably there were church-officers fixed in all the churches in no long time after they were planted, and particularly, in Greece, and Macedonia. From St. Paul's epifle we know, that there were Bishops and Deacons at Philippi, though not mentioned by St. Luke in his ftorie of the Apostle's preaching there. Acts xvi. 12... 40. Beza concludes from 1 Thef. v. 27. that (b) there were fixed officers in the church at Thessalonica. And it is very manifeft from ver. 12. and 13. of that chapter: And we befeech you, brethren, to know them which labor among you, and are over you in the Lord, and admonifh you: and to eftimate them very highly in love, for their work's fake. St. Paul faies to Titus ch. i. 5. For this caufe left I thee in Crete, that thou fhouldest fet in order the things

(b) Vos iuæzi. Hinc apparet, mitti folitas fuiffe apoftolicas epiftolas prefibyterio, ad quod hac abjurationi et precedentibus duo versiculi proprius pertinent: quoniam aliqui abfurdada effet hac petitio, si ad totum ecclefsiae coetum referretur. Biz. in 1 Th. v. 27.
things that are wanting, and ordain Elders in every city, as I appointed thee. Whenever Paul was in Crete, it is reasonable to think, that he made there but a short stay. Nevertheless before he left that island, he had given orders to Titus, to ordain Elders in every city. And not long after coming thence he wrote to him an epistle with particular directions for that purpose. Before Paul left Ephesus, it is likely, that he had ordained several Elders in that city, and in the district of Asia. And yet he afterwards wrote to Timotheus, giving him directions concerning the qualifications of such persons, that he might make a farther supply, where it was wanting. Which must induce us to think, that the Apostle was not willing, that any churches should be destitute of fit guides and instructors for any long time after they had been planted. St. Paul’s epistle to the Galatians is inscribed to the churches of Galatia, without any mention of Bishops, or Deacons. And yet there must have been there men of that character. St. Peter writes to the Christians in Galatia, and other neighboring parts, and sends an admonition to such. 1 Pet. v. 1. 2. The Elders which are among you I exhort.... Feed the flock of God, which is among you. And from the epistle itself it may be concluded with certainty, that there were fixed officers in the churches of Galatia, though they are not mentioned in the inscription. For so St. Paul directs ch. vi. 6. Let him that is taught in the word, communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things. There is no notice taken of any Elders in the inscriptions of either of St. Paul’s epistles to the Corinthians. And yet there must have been such officers in that church. Clement of Rome, in the first century, in his epistle to the Corinthians, speaking of the Apostles, says, ch. xlii. “They went abroad, publishing the good tidings, that the kingdom of God was at hand. And preaching in countreys and cities, they (c) appointed their first-fruits, having first proved them by the Spirit, to be Bishops and Deacons of those who should believe.” And afterwards in ch. xliiv. “Wherefore we cannot think, that they may be justly cast out of their ministrue, who (d) were either appointed by them, [the Apostles,] or were afterwards chosen by other eminent men with the consent of the whole church.” ... So writes Clement. And thus he bears witness to two things. First, that this was the general method of the Apostles. And, secondly, he assures us, particularly, that this had been done in the church of Corinth. About which, I suppose, he could not be mistaken. There must therefore have been fixed officers in the churches of Thessalonica, Corinth, and Galatia: though St. Paul has taken no particular notice of them in the inscriptions of his epistles. It cannot then be any just exception against this epistle having been sent to the Ephesians, because their Bishops or Elders are not named. For it was a common thing with the Apostle, to inscribe his epistles to the churches, or saints, of such a place, without any particular notice of their officers, though there were men of that character among them. I have mentioned above St. Paul’s epistles to the Thessalonians, the Corinthians, and the Galatians. To them might be added the epistle

(c) ... καθίσας τας ἀπαρχαὶ αὐτῶν, δοκιμάζοντες τῷ στίγματι, εἰς ἲπισκό-

(d) Τὸς ἐν κατασκευής ὑπ’ ἰκανοῦ. κ. λ.
epistle to the Colossians. For that also in inscribed to the saints, and faithfull brethren, in Christ, which are at Colosse. And yet there must have been Elders in that church. One is mentioned, whose name is Archippus. However, it is in this manner only. Col. iv. 17. And say to Archippus: Take heed to the ministrv, whick thou hast received of the Lord, that thou fulfill it. Nor does the Apostle send his salutations to the church in Laodicea by him, in particular, but by the saints, to whom the epistle is inscribed. See ch. iv. 15. Once more, Timothy, as is generally allowed, was at Ephesus when St. Paul wrote to him those two epistles, which we have. When the first was writ, there must have been some Elders in that church, and yet more at the time of writing the second. It cannot be contested by any. Nevertheless no salutations are sent to the Elders of Ephesus, in either of those epistles.

5. Obj. "If this epistle was sent to the Ephesians, it may be thought "very strange, that St. Paul should not salute any of his friends there, "where he had many friends and acquaintance."

But I cannot perceive this to be of much weight. There is no epistle of St. Paul that has so many salutations in it, as that to the Romans, whom he had never seen. There are no salutations of particular persons at the end of the first epistle to Timothy who was then at Ephesus. I suppose Timothy to have been in the same city likewise, when Paul wrote his second epistle to him. Nevertheless there are in it no particular salutations, except those in ch. iv. 19. Salute Prisca and Aquila, and the household of Onesiphorus. Tychicus went with this epistle to the Ephesians. And what is said ch. vi. 21...23. would be instead of many particular salutations, and fully answer the end. For Tychicus is there required to make known unto them all things, and to comfort their hearts. I might add, that no particular persons are saluted by name in either of the epistles to the Thesalonians, nor in the epistle to the Galatians, nor in that to Titus, excepting only Titus himself, to whom the epistle is sent.

6. Obj. Mr. Wetstein says, "that (e) the epistle to the Ephesians is "writ to Gentils, whereas the church at Ephesus consisted chiefly of "Jews."

I answer: That the epistle, called to the Ephesians, is writ to Gentils, or to such chiefly, is allowed, and is very manifest. And it seems to me very evident, from the historic, which we have of St. Paul's preaching at Ephesus, in the book of the Acts, that the Apostle's chief harvest there was from among the Gentils. For a while indeed he taught in the synagogue. But the behaviour of the Jews obliged him to withdraw. Whereupon he preached in another place. And I should conclude from what is in Acts xix. 17...40. that the Apostle had many more converts there among Gentils, than Jews.

7. Obj. "It is argued from Col. iv. 16. that this epistle was sent to the Laodiceans. For St. Paul says there: And when this epistle is read among you, or has been read among you, cause, that it be read also in the church of the Laodiceans: and that ye likewise read the epistle from Laodicea."

Hereby, as is argued, must be intended the epistle called to the Ephesians, but really sent to the Laodiceans. For says Mill (f), and likewise others after him, this epistle called to the Ephesians, and the epistle to the Colossians, were both sent by the same messenger, and at the same time.”

To which I answer, that if the epistle, called to the Ephesians, be the epistle intended by the Apostle, and sent at the same time with that to the Colossians; it is manifest, that it was not sent to the Laodiceans. This may be concluded from what is said to the Colossians ch. iv. 15. Salute the brethren, which are in Laodicea, and Nymphas, and the church which is in his house. This plainly shews, that there was not now any epistle sent to the Laodiceans. If there had, there would have been no occasion for the Apostle to send this order to the Colossians. For it is impossible to write a letter to any persons, or societies, without saluting them, or doing somewhat that is equivalent. And it is manifest, that in the epistle inscribed to the Ephesians, the Christians, to whom it is sent, are saluted. Particularly ch. i. 1. 2. and vi. 21. 22. 23. This has appeared evident to learned men of the first rank, and different communications. So (g) Baronius, and Tillemont. This last says, “that (h) since “St. Paul orders the Colossians to salute those of Laodicea in his name; it is a certain sign, that he did not write to them at that time.” Du “Pin says: “If (i) St. Paul had writ at the same time to the Laodiceans, “he would not have charged the Colossians to salute them in his name.” And James Balsnage: “St. (k) Paul did not then write to the Laodiceans, “since he salutes them in his letter to the church of Colosse.” The acute and honest Mr. Pierre, though much inclined to Mill’s opinion concerning this epistle, saw this difficulty, and owned it. “But I have one ob- “jection, says he, which I cannot so easily get over. And were it not for “that, I might fully agree with him. My objection is, that it seems “highly improbable, that St. Paul should send his salutations to the “Laodiceans, in the epistle, which he wrote to the Colossians in case he “had sent that epistle to the Laodiceans by the same messenger.”

I am

(f) Quidni igitur scripta fuerit ad Laodicenses? ... Sane per eundem num- cium missa erat hae epistola, per quem delata erat epistola ad Colossenses, Ty- chicum scilicet, nec non codem tempore. Mill. Prol. num. 74.

(g) Sane nullam eidem tabellario ad Laodicenses fuisse a Paulo datam epistolam, fatis confat: dum in ea, quam tum scripsit ad Colossenses, salutari mandat eos, qui Laodiceae effent fideles, sic dicens: Salutate fratres, qui sunt Laodicæae ... Libertius igitur Chrysostomo ac Theodoro inhaeremus, quam ceteris, ut nulla a Paulo scripta fuerit epistola ad Laodicenses. Baron. ann. 60. num. xiii.

(b) Et quisque S. Paul ordonne aux Colossiens de faluer de sa part ceux de Laodicée, c’est un marque indubitable, qu’il ne leur écrivit point alors. S. Paul. note 69. Mem. Ec. Tom. i.

(i) En effet, si saint Paul, eût écrit en même temps aux Laodicéens, il n’eut pas chargé les Colossiens, de les faluer de sa part. Diff. Prol. 1. 2. ch. 2. 2. §. viii.

(k) S. Paul n’écrivit pas alors aux Laodicéens, puisqu’il leur fait une salutation dans la lettre à l’église de Colosse. Bahn. Hist. de l’Eglise. l. 8. cb. 3. n. iii.
I am not unwilling to allow, that the epistle spoken of in the later part of verse 16. of ch. iv. to the Colossians, is our epistle to the Ephesians: and that ye likewise read the epistle from Laodicea: that is, the epistle, that is to come to you from Laodicea. So the place is rended in the French Testament of Lenzant and Besoubre: and (l) cause likewise to be read among you that which the Laodiceans will send to you. And their note is this: "that (m) from Laodicea: that is to say, that which will come to you from "Laodicea. For the original has that sense."

If the epistle to the Ephesians was sent away by the Apostle at the same time with those to the Colossians, and to Philemon: I should think, that Tychicus went first to Ephesus, and there left the epistle to the Ephesians, with an order, that it should be forwarded to Laodicea, and so to Colosse. Tychicus having left that letter at Ephesus, went forward with Onesimus to Colosse: where they delivered the epistles to Philemon, and the Colossians. And then I suppose, that Tychicus's commission was at an end. He had no order to go to Laodicea. The Apostle's salutations to the brethren at Laodicea were to be taken care of by the Colossians.

But I rather think, as before shewn, that the epistle to the Ephesians was writ very soon after the Apostle's arrival at Rome, and then carried to Ephesus by Tychicus. And when Tychicus went now in the second year of the Apostle's imprisonment, with these epistles to the Colossians, and Philemon; he came afoare at Ephesus, and there left express orders, that the epistle, formerly sent to them, should be soon forwarded by them to Laodicea, and so to Colosse. Having so done, he went, as before said, with Onesimus to Colosse: where they joyed in delivering the letters to Philemon, and the church at Colosse. And now the commission of Tychicus was at an end.

8. Obj. Once more, it is observed by learned men, "that Marcion said, this epistle was writ to the Laodiceans, or called this the epistle "to the Laodiceans."

To which I answer, first, Humphrey Hody denied that (n) Marcion reckoned the epistle called to the Ephesians to have been writ to the Laodiceans. And indeed this point seems to lie in great obscurity. Nor is it said by any one, besides Tertullian, that I know of.

(1) Et faïtes lire de meme parmi vous celle que les Laodicéens vous envoyoront.

(m) Gr. celle de Laodicée, c'est à dire, celle qui vous viendra de Laodicée. Car l'original a ce sens là.

Secondly, Suppose Marcion to have affirmed this, what does it avail? Grotius says, in his preface to this epistle, "Marcion (o) called this the epistle to the Laodiceans. Nor was there any reason, why he should falsify in this matter." And to the like purpose others. To which I answer: Catholic writers of the same time, and since, call this the epistle to the Ephesians. Nor is there any reason, why they should falsify. Yea the same is said, not only by all Catholics, but likewise by all heretics in general. Let Marcion's credit be ever so good, this is a sufficient answer. For what interest had the Catholics to falsify here? If Marcion said, this epistle was sent to the Laodiceans, he must have been mistaken. We are assured, that what he said is false, from the unanimous testimonie of numerous men, who had no interest to deceive, and could not be deceived.

But Marcion's credit is very little in such an affair as this. The same writer, who speaks of Marcion's (p) calling this the epistle to the Laodiceans, I mean Tertullian, does also let us know, that (q) Marcion rejected the epistles of Paul to Timothie, and Titus. And chargeth (r) him with altering the text of scripture, openly employing a knife, not a file. And speaks particularly of his leaving out texts (s) in the epistle to the Romans. Will any say, that Marcion had good reason for so doing? or that all this was owing to his superior care and judgement above other Christians? For my own part, I think not. And if he said, that this epistle was writ to the Laodiceans, not to the Ephesians, he was mistaken at least. He had not, and could not have any good reason for it.

Mill (t) and other learned men after him, in defending their opinion concerning this epistle, magnify the care and exactness of Marcion. "He flourished, they say, in the beginning of the second centurie, and "lived at Sinope, in Paphlagonia, which was in Asia Minor as well as "Laodicea. And he affirmed, that the epiistle called to the Ephesians was "actually an epistle to the Laodiceans. Most probably, he had heard so "from such as knew the fact, and could inform him: or rather, had seen "some of the manuscripts, which gave it that title."

But all this is said without any ground. Such suppositions are easily made. But there is no proof of the truth of them. If there is any credit to be given to what the ancients say of Marcion, he must have been a very rash, and arbitrarie, and careless critic: provided he at all deserved the name of a critic. And if he thought, this epiistle to have been writ to

(o) Marcion hanc epistolam vocat ad Laodicenses, ex fide, ut credibile est, ecclesiae Laodicensis. Nam cur in ea re mentiretur, nihil erat causa: Grot. Pr. in ep. ad Eph.
(p) Tertull. adv. Marc. I. 5. cap. xi.
(r) Marcion enim ex certo et palam machaera, non fillo usus est: quoniam ad materiam suam caedem scripturarum confecit. Id. de Presc. Hær. cap. 38.
(t) Sed omnino verisimile est, Marcionem, qui Sinope aliam quidem abhorsit, haud procul a Laodicea, five ex popularium fuorum traditione, seu ei tur autoritate exemplarium quorundam, hanc epistolam tanquam ad Laodicenses scriptam citasce. Mill. ProL num. 78.
to the Laodiceans; it is likely, he took up that opinion without much inquiry, or examination, and without sufficient reason, and, perhaps, without assigning any.

Jerome (u) speaking of Marcion and Basiliades, who, as he says, were not friendly to the Old Testament, and altered the Gospels and Epistles of the New Testament, and rejected both the epistles to Timotheie, and the epistle to Titus, and that to the Hebrews, he adds: "And if they assigned any reasons, why they did not reckon these epistles to be the Apostle’s, we should endeavour to make an answer, and perhaps might say, what would be sufficient to satisfy the reader. But now since with heretical authority they pronounce, and say, this epistle is Paul’s, and that not: they may be fitly answered on the side of truth, in the same manner, that they assert falsehood."

And Tertullian having spoken of Marcion’s admitting the genuineness of the epistle to Philemon, adds: "Nevertheless (x) I wonder, that when he receives an epistle to one man, he should reject two to Timotheie, and one to Titus, which treat of the government of the church. He had a mind, I suppose, to alter also the number of the epistles:" that is, as he had done of the Gospels. Which passage, as the reader may remember, was quoted by us (y) formerly.

It hence appears, that Tertullian knew not, why Marcion rejected the epistles to Timotheie, and Titus. He knew, that Marcion rejected those three epistles. But he was not aware of his having assigned any reasons for so doing. Which shews, I think, that Marcion acted arbitrarily in such things, as these.

Indeed Tertullian speaking of Marcion’s attempting, or designing to alter the inscription of the epistle to the Ephesians with this expression: "as if he had made more than common inquiries about it (z)." But I suppose Tertullian to speak by way of ironic, and farcally: not allowing Marcion uncommon diligence and exactness, but intimating, that a man, who acted thus, should be very careful to be rightly informed.

(x) Miror tamen, quam ad unum hominem literas factas receperit, quid ad Timotheum duas, et unam ad Titum, de ecclesialico faturo compositas, recursaverit. Adiectavit, opinor, etiam numerum epifollarum interpolare. Marcion. I. 5. cap. ult. p. 615. D.

(y) See Vol. ii. p. 596. See also here, p. 350. not. (q).

(z) See below. note (b).
All this I have said in the way of a general answer to the argument, taken from the supposed opinion of Marcion. I will now more particularly inquire, what Marcion said, and did, and what might be the ground and reason of his opinion, and conduct. And I think, there are but two writers, from whom we can receive any information, Tertullian, and Epiphanius.

The first is Tertullian. "I (a) pass by another epistle, says he, which we have inscribed to the Ephesians, but heretics to the Laodiceans."

Afterwards: "According (b) to the true testimony of the church, we suppose that epistle to have been sent to the Ephesians. But Marcion once had a mind to alter the title, as if he had made a very diligent inquiry into that matter. But the title is of no importance, since the Apostle wrote to all, when he wrote to some."

I hope, I have rightly translated the word gestit. I think, it meaneth, had a mind to, or was inclined, or shewed an inclination so to do.

By these passages of Tertullian we are assured, first, that this epistle, which was in the hands of catholic Christians, was, in all it's copies, inscribed to the Ephesians. And Tertullian was persuaded, that it was the true testimony, or tradition of the church from the beginning.

Secondly, in the first of these passages Tertullian says, that heretics called this the epistle to the Laodiceans: by heretics meaning, as I suppose, Marcion, and his followers.

Thirdly, Tertullian says, that once, or upon some occasion, Marcion had a mind to alter the title of this epistle.

Here it may be questioned, whether by title be meant what we call a running title, affixed to the epistle, or the inscription, which makes a part of the epistle, and is inserted at the beginning of it. I rather think, this left to be intended. But take it either way, Tertullian supposed, that Marcion had in his copies the same title, or inscription with the Catholics, that is, to the Ephesians, or at Ephesus. Nor does Tertullian say, that Marcion ever inserted the inscription, to the Laodiceans, in any of his copies. It seems to me, that he did not.

Consequently, what Tertullian says, is, that Marcion, and his followers, sometimes at least, called this the epistle to the Laodiceans, and perhaps quoted it by that title. But he had not in his copies any title, or inscription, different from that of the Catholics. Marcion gave out, that the epistle, called by the Catholics to the Ephesians, was writ to the Laodiceans. He affirmed this to be right, and that the Catholics were in the wrong in calling it an epistle to the Ephesians. For he was persuaded, it was writ to the Laodiceans.

I think, this is the most, that is said by Tertullian, or that can be collected from him. Yea, it seems to me, that I have in a strong manner represented the whole of what is said by him.

I now

I now proceed to Epiphanius, who says, "that (c) Marcion received "only ten epistles of Paul. They are these. The first is that to the "Galatians, the second is the first to the Corinthians, the third is the "second to the Corinthians, the fourth that to the Romans, the fifth is "the first to the Thessalonians, the sixth the second to the Thessalonians, "the seventh is that to the Ephesians, the eighth to the Colossians, the "ninth to Philemon, the tenth to the Philippians. He has also some "parts of an epistle to the Laodicæans." So Epiphanius.

It is well known, that Marcion had an Evangelicon, and an Apostolicon, or a Gospel and an Apostle. In the former, as is generally said, he had St. Luke's Gospel only. But concerning the truth of that account I make no inquiries now. Our concern at present is with St.
Paul's epistles only. And Epiphanius here expressly says, that Marcion received ten, and placed them in the order, in which they are rehearsed above. He likewise says, that Marcion had some parts of an epistle to the Laodicæans. And he quotes, as from him, those words, which are in Eph. iv. 5. 6. after this manner: One Lord, one faith, one baptism, one Christ, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in all.

Having so done, he says: "Nor (d) did the unhappy Marcion think fit to take that passage from the epistle to the Ephesians, but from the epistle to the Laodicæans, which is not the Apostle's."

This account of Epiphanius led H. Hody to say, that Marcion received eleven epistles of St. Paul. James Balsnage was of the same opinion.
He says: "It (e) has been conjectured by some, that Marcion confounded the epistle to the Laodicæans with that to the Ephesians. . . .
"But that conjecture cannot be maintained. For he distinguished two epistles of St. Paul, one to the Ephesians, and another to the Laodi-cean. And Epiphanius reproacheth him, because he rather chose to take his passage from the epistle to the Laodicæans, which was not
"Paul's, than from the epistle to the Ephesians, where are the same "words."

And indeed, I apprehend, that if we had Epiphanius only, many might be of the same opinion. But comparing him and Tertullian, and examining carefully the whole article of Epiphanius, I think, it must appear more

(c) Etiam die n. instigolens, apostolos, autem thewgin apostolorum, sic, ait, quinque exspectari.
As ili instigolens, apostolos, autem thewgin apostolorum, sic, exspectari ait, quinque exspectari.
\[\text{Epiph. H. 42. num. iv. p. 310.}\]

(d) Quod idem, igitur, epistolam, apostolos, autem, thewgin apostolorum, sic, exspectari ait, quinque exspectari ait, quinque, et quinque exspectari ait, quinque exspectari ait, quinque exspectari ait, quinque exspectari ait, quinque exspectari ait, quinque exspectari ait, quinque exspectari ait, quinque exspectari ait, quinque exspectari ait, quinque exspectari ait, quinque expect

(e) Marcion l'a citée. Il en tiret même quelque preuve pour son heresie.
On a conjecturé, qu'il la confonduit avec celle des Ephesiens. . . . Mais cette conjecture ne peut se soutenir, parceque Marcion distinguoit deux lettres de S. Paul, l'une aux Ephesiens, l'autre aux Laodicæens. Et S. Epiphane lui fait une espece de reproche, de ce qu'il a mieux aimé tirer son passage de l'epistre aux Laodicæens, qui n'étoit point de S. Paul, que de celle aux Ephesien, dans laquelle on trouvait les meimes paroles. \[J. Balsn. Hist. de l'Egl. \text{L. 8. ch. 5. num. iii.}\] more probable, that Marcion did sometimes quote the epistle to the Ephesians, as if it had been sent to the Laodiceans. Nor can I perceive any good reason to think, that any letter to the Laodiceans was forged so early, as the time of Marcion.

And now I would observe, that Epiphanius seems to have been well acquainted with Marcion's Apostolicon. For he (f) had read his writings, and composed a treatise against him, called Scholion, or Scholia, which he inserted, somewhat altered, in his article of the Marcionites, in his large work, called the Panarium, which we have.

Having observed this, I say, that from Epiphanius it appears, that in Marcion's Apostolicon the epistle to the Ephesians was entitled, and inscribed to them, as it was in the copies of the Catholics. And all the difference between the Catholics and him, upon this head, was, that he sometimes quoted this epistle, as writ to the Laodiceans. Epiphanius, who had seen Marcion's Apostolicon, found therein ten epistles, all inscribed, as in the Catholic copies. One of which, and the seventh in order, was that to the Ephesians. However, in one place of Marcion's works, and (g) but one, he had seen a passage of the epistle to the Ephesians quoted, as from an epistle to the Laodiceans.

Some such thing, as this, induced Tertullian, a man of a violent temper, to say: “I pass by another epistle, which we have inscribed to the “Ephesians, but heretics to the Laodiceans.” However, from Tertullian, as before shewn, it appears, that in Marcion's copies of this epistle it had the same title, as in the Catholic copies, and that he never altered the inscription. And thus Tertullian and Epiphanius agree. For from this last likewise we plainly perceive, that in Marcion's Apostolicon was the epistle to the Ephesians: but not exactly in the same order, as with the Catholics.

And thus, if I mistake not, Marcion himself confirms the common reading at the beginning of this epistle. And this recompenfes we have of our diligent inquisition into this affair. So it often happens. Opposition made to truth is the means of establishing it.

This opinion of the case may be farther justified by two considerations, which perhaps deserve to be mentioned. One is, that there is no notice taken of this affair by any other writers, beside Tertullian and Epiphanius. Jerome, and many others, who often speak of Marcion, and his principles, say nothing of it. It is therefore very probable, that his inscription of the epistle to the Ephesians was the same, as in the Catholic copies. If not, his alteration here, as well as in other places, would have been observed. The other is, that all those, called heretics, so far as we know, had this epistle inscribed to the Ephesians. The Manicheans agreed with Marcion in divers of his peculiarities. Nevertheless, in their copies this epistle was inscribed to the Ephesians. This has appeared.

(f) Ελίνσομαι δι' εἰς τα ὑπ' ἀυτῷ γνεφαρμάνα. κ. λ. H. 42. cap. ix. p. 309. C.

(g) Præter hanc tamen ad Ephesios epistolam, putat Epiphanius, recepta etiam effe a Marcione epistolæ ad Laodicenses fragmenta. Eχις δὲ κτίς σεβή λαονίας μην, inquit. E quibus tamen unicum illud a se productum reperit, Jac. Usser. Diff. de Ep. ad Laod.
peared from the quotations of it in the writings of Fauflus, and Secundin, formerly (b) taken notice of.

But though the inscription of this epistle was the fame in Marcion’s, as in the Catholic copies; he sometimes quoted it, as an epistle to the Laodiceans, and was of opinion, that it was wrat to them. We are therefore now to inquire into the ground and reason of this opinion.

Pamelius (i) in his notes upon Tertullian, as cited by A. B. Upher, (for I have not his edition at hand:) conjectured, that the words of Col. iv. 16. were the occasion of this opinion of Marcion. So likewise says (k) Eflius.

It is very probable, that those words (l) gave occasion to the forging an epistle to the Laodiceans. Theodoret, not far from the beginning of the fifth century, as formerly (m) cited by us, says in his commentarie upon that text: “Some have hence imagined, that the Apostle had also wrat “ to the Laodiceans, and they have forged such an epistle. Nevertheless “ leaves the Apostle does not say; the epistle to the Laodiceans, but from La- “ odicea.”

That is the unvaried reading of this text in all the copies of the New Testament, and in all ancient Greek * writers. And I have suspected, that the epistle to the Laodiceans was forged by a Latin: and that the Latin version of that text gave occasion to it. Fabricius (n) in the introduction

(b) See vol. vi. p. 336. 343. 409.

(i) Jacobus Pamelius, Annot. 259. in lib. 5. Tertulliani adv. Marcionem.

* As some proof of this, I allege the note of Theophylla upon this verse. “Which is the epistle from Laodicea? It is the first to Timolbke. For that was wrat from Laodicea. However some say, it is an epistle, which the Laodi- ceans had sent to Paul. But what good the reading such an epistle could do them, I do not know.”

troduction to his account of the epistle to the Laodiceans speaks to the same purpose.

In like manner I have for a good while been of opinion, that the Latin version of this text was the occasion of the mistaken notion of Marcion.

When I formerly gave an account of a Latin Commentarize upon thirteen of St. Paul's epistles, writ about 380. I took notice, that (o) the translation of Col. iv. 16. followed by that author, was, that ye read the epistle of the Laodiceans. Et vos ut eam, quae est Laodicensium, legatis. The same translation is in the Commentariz of Pelagius. Et ea, quae Laodicensium est, vobis legatur. Which affords good proof, that this was the translation, which was in the Latin version, then in use.

I also observed in the same place, that this expression is ambiguous. It may import an epistle, writ by the Laodiceans; or an epistle, which was their property, as having been writ to them. I have since found the same observation in (p) Euseius. So Secundin, the Manichean, in his letter to Augustin, by the epistle of the Ephesians plainly means the epistle to the Ephesians. For his words are these: "Against (q) whom the A-" poistle in the epistle of the Ephesians, says, he wrestled. For he says: "We wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, and powers." Eph. vi. 12.

It is not unlikely, that a good number of the Latins, by the epistle of the Laodiceans, in Col. iv. 16. understood an epistle writ to the Laodiceans. And Marcion also, having before him the Latin version, and understanding the words in that sense, concluded, that St. Paul had writ an epistle to the Laodiceans. At length he was brought to think, that the epistle, intended by St. Paul, was the epistle, inscribed to the Ephesians. Accordingly, he sometimes quoted it with that title. This will be the more readily admitted, when it is considered, that Marcion made use of the Latin version of St. Paul's epistles. So say both (r) Mill, and (s) Wetstein.

And now, I suppose, it may appear, what regard is due to the authority of Marcion in this matter.

Thus

(p) Fetellit tamen hos omnes ambiguitas verborum hujus loci, prout Latina leguntur. Quod enim dicitur, eam quae Laodicenium est, intelligi potest, vel ad quos, vel a quibus epistola scripta est aut missa. Et quidem priori modo Latinis fere intellexerunt. Sed hanc ambiguitatem diffolvit Graeca lectio, quae hic habet: Et eam quae ex Laodicea est, ut et vos legatis. Eft. ad loc.
(s) Ac principio, quod a nemine adhuc animadversum putus, (nifi a J. Mille Pro. 378. suboluiffe putamus,) commperimus, Marcionis codices N. T. non ex Graecis exemplaribus, sed ex versione Latina veteri five Italica conflatos suiffae. &c. Weften. Prolegom. p. 79.
Thus I have at large stated, and considered all the material objections against the common reading at the beginning of this epistle, the epistle to the Ephesians. And from the solutions that have been offered, seem to me satisfactory. And from the universal agreement of all copies in that reading, and the unanimous testimonie of all Christian writers for the first twelve centuries, it appears, that there is no more reason to doubt of the genuineness of the inscription of the epistle to the Ephesians, than of any other of the acknowledged epistles of St. Paul.

This disquisition has been of greater length, than might have been wished. But if any things have been set in a truer light, than usual, it will be acceptable to some.

CHAP. XIV.

That the Churches of Colosse and Laodicea were planted by the Apostle Paul.

It has been of late a prevailing opinion, that the Christians at Colosse, and Laodicea, were not converted by St. Paul. But to me it seems, that there is no good ground for it.

Says Theodoret in his Argument of the epistle to the Colossians, prefixed to his Commentarie: “Some (a) are of opinion, that when the divine Apostle wrote this epistle, he had not seen the Colossians. And they endeavour to support their opinion by these words: ‘For I would that ye should know, what great conflict I have for you, and for them at Laodicea, and for as many as have not seen my face in the flesh. ch. ii. 1. But they should consider, that the meaning of the words is this: ‘I have not only a concern for you: but I have also a great concern for those that have not seen me. And if he be not so understood, he expresses no concern for thofe, who had seen him, and had been taught by him.’

Moreover the blessed Luke says in the Acts: ‘And after he had spent some time there, he departed, and went over all the country of Galatia, and Phrygia, in order. ch. xviii. 23. Colosse is a city of Phrygia. And Laodicea, the metropolis of the country, is not far from it. How was it possible for him to be in Phrygia, and not carry the gospel to thofe places? And in another place the blessed Luke says: ‘Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia, and the region of Galatia, and were forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia.’ ch. xvi. 6.

So says that very learned writer in the fifth century. And those observations have led me to divers considerations, inducing me to think, that the churches of Colosse and Laodicea had been planted by Paul, and that the Christians there were his converts.

1. The

(a) Theod. Tom. 3. p. 342. 343.
1. The Apostle was twice in Phrygia, in which were Colosse, Laodicea and Hierapolis. Says St. Luke in the places already cited by Theodoret Acts xvi. 6. Now when they had gone throughout Phrygia, and the region of Galatia, and were forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the word in Asia. And ch. xviii. 23. And after he had spent some time there, [at Antioch,] he departed, and went over all the countries of Galatia and Phrygia in order, strengthening the brethren. To which St. Luke refers again ch. xix. 1. Paul having passed through the upper coasts, came to Ephesus. St. Luke does not mention any cities by name. But there is no reason to say, that he was not at Colosse. It is much more reasonable to think, that in one, or rather, in both those journeys, Paul was at Colosse, Laodicea, and Hierapolis, chief cities of Phrygia. For, as Theodoret says, how was it possible, that he should be in that country, yea and go through it, and all over it, and not be in the chief places of it? St. Luke has not particularly named any places in Galatia, in which Paul was. But he must have been in several towns and cities in that country, where he planted divers churches. Gal. i. 1. 2. So was he, in like manner, in several cities of Phrygia: where also, in all probability, he planted divers churches.

This argument alone appears to me conclusive. The accounts, which St. Luke has given of St. Paul's journeys in Phrygia, are sufficient to assure us, that he preached the gospel there, and made converts, and planted churches in the chief cities.

2. Ch. i. ver. 6. Which bringeth forth fruit, as it does also in you, since the day ye heard it, and knew the grace of God in truth. Of this St. Paul was assured. Which renders it probable, that he was their father, or first teacher. He speaks to the like purpose several times. ch. ii. 6. 7. See likewise ch. i. 23. St. Paul knew, that they had been rightly taught the gospel. Nothing more remained, but that they should persevere in the faith, which they had received, and act according to it.

3. Epaphras was not their first instructor in the doctrine of the gospel. This may be concluded from ch.i. 7. the words following those quoted above from ver. 6. As (b) ye have also learned of Epaphras, our dear fellow-servant, who is for you a faithful minister of Christ. The Colossians had been taught by Epaphras. But he was not their first instructor. However, he had faithfully taught them, agreeably to the instructions, which they had received.

Theodoret (c) upon ch. i. 7. 8. well observes, "that the Apostle bestows many commendations upon Epaphras, calling him beloved, and fellow-servant, and a faithful minister of Christ, that the Colossians might have the greater regard for him." If Epaphras had first taught the Colossians the Christian doctrine, I think, the Apostle, when recommending him to their esteem, and regard, would have added, by whom ye believed, or by whom ye were brought to the fellowship of the gospel, or something else, to the like purpose. That would have been a great addition to what is said at ver. 7. before cited, and to what is said of him. ch. iv. 12. 13. Epaphras, who is one of you, a servant of Christ, saluteth you, always laboring fervently for you in prayers, that ye may stand perfect and complete.

(b) Καθὼς γὰρ ἔμαθες ἂν εἰπαφρᾶς.
(a) Ubi supra. p. 244.
pleat in all the will of God. For I bear him record, that he has a great zeal for you, and for them that are in Laodicea, and them in Hierapolis.

Epaphras, who is one of you. Would the Apostle have used such an expression concerning Epaphras, if the church of Colosse had been founded by him? Impossible. He says as much of Onesimus, who was but just converted, and was now first going to appear among them as a Christian. His words at ver. 9. of the same chapter are: Onesimus, a faithful, and beloved brother, who is one of you.

I imagine, that St. Paul does the more enlarge at ver. 12. 13. upon the affectionate concern, which Epaphras had for these Christians, being apprehensive of some prejudices taken up against him, that might obstruct his usefulness among them. For he had brought the Apostle an account of the state of this church. Which, though it was true and faithful, was not in all respects agreeable: as is concluded by Commentators from what St. Paul writes in the second chapter of this epistle.

4. St. Paul does in effect, or even expressly, say, that himself had diffen ed the gospel to these Colossians, ch. i. 21... 25. I shall recite here a large part of that context. ver. 23... 25. If ye continue in the faith, grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard... whereof I Paul am made a minister. Who now rejoice in my sufferings for you, and fill up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ in my flesh, for his body's sake, which is the Church. Whereof I am made a minister, according to the dispensation of God, which is given to me for you, to fulfill, or fully to preach, the word of God. And what follows to ver. 29.

St. Paul therefore had been the minister of God to these Colossians, as well as to other Gentils. Nor would they have been excluded, but included among other Gentils, to whom he had preached the word, if Commentators had not been misled by a false interpretation of those words in ch. iv. 1. 2. of which we have already seen Theodore's account, and shall say more presently. Those words having been misinterpreted, a wrong turn has been given to these likewise.

5. Chrysostom in his preface to the epistle to the Romans speaks to this purpose: "I (d) see the Apostle writing to the Romans and the Colossians, "upon the same things indeed, but not in the same manner. To them "he writes with much mildness, as when he says... Rom. xiv. 1. 2. "To the Colossians he does not so speak of the same things, but with "greater freedom. If therefore, says he, ye be dead with Christ from the "rudiments of the world... and what follows. ch. ii. 20... 23." Does not this observation lead us to think, that the Colossians were the Apostle's own converts, to whom a different address from that used toward others might be very proper? And there are other passages of this epistle, beside that alleged by Chrysostom, which might be taken notice of, as confirming the same observation.

6. Ch.

(d) "Оταν γὰρ ἔδω δομάςαμεν κολοσσαῖοιν ὑπὲρ ᾧτῶν μὲν ἑπισκέλεσαν, ὅτι δὲ ἐπι τῶν ἀποστόλων, ὅτι εἰκόνες μὲν μετὰ σωλῆνας τῶν συγκαταθέσαν ἐπὶς εἰκόνες γραφήνας καὶ εἰκόνες τινὶ ἀποστόλων ἀλλὰ μετὰ σωλῆνας ἐκάπης. κ. λ. "Pompe. in ep. ad Rom. T. 9. p. 427."
6. Ch. ii. 6. 7. As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him: grounded, and built up in him, and established in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving. Certainly these exhortations of the Apostle are the more proper, and forcible, supposing the Colossians to have been first taught and instructed by him. Nor had he any occasion to be more particular. They knew, who had taught them. But I think that in this, or some other of the places, where he reminds the Colossians of what they had heard, and had been taught, if those instructions had been received from another, different from himself, that would have appeared in the expressions made use of by him. In short, if they were converted by the Apostle, there could not, possibly, arise, in his mind a doubt, whether they remembered, who had been their first teacher, and who were his fellow-laborers, who had accompanied him in his journeys, when he was in their country. And therefore there was no need to remind them of himself more expressly, than he has done. The thing is supposed all along.

7. The presence of Epaphras with Paul at Rome is an argument, that the Colossians had personal acquaintance with the Apostle. Indeed Grotius upon ch. i. 7. says, “that Epaphras is the same as Epaphroditus, mentioned in the epistle to the Philippians.” But Beaufobre well observes upon the same place: “This may be the same name with Epaphroditus. Philip. ii. 25. But it is not probable, that it is the same person. St. Paul had sent Epaphroditus to Philippi. But Epaphras was still at Rome. And there is reason to think, that he was a prisoner there.” See Phil. ver. 23.” If Epaphras was sent to Rome by the Colossians to inquire after Paul’s welfare, as may be concluded from ch. iv. 7. 8. that token of respect for the Apostle is a good argument of personal acquaintance. And it is allowed, that Epaphras had brought St. Paul a particular account of the state of affairs in this church. Which is another argument, that they were his converts.

8. Ch. i. 8. Who also declared unto us your love in the spirit: that is, says (e) Grotius, “how you love us on account of the Holy Spirit given to you.” Or, as Peirce: “Who also declared unto me the love you bear to me upon a spiritual account.” Or, as Whithy: “Your spiritual and affectionate love to me, wrought in you, by the Spirit, whose fruit is love.” All thus understanding it of their love of the Apostle, and rightly, as seems to me. Nothing else can be meant by it. For before, at ver. 4. he had spoken of their love to all the saints. This I take to be another good proof of personal acquaintance. And the place is agreeable to what he writes to the Thessalonians, allowed by all to be the Apostle’s converts. 1 Thess. iii. 6. But now when Timothy came from you unto us, and brought us good tidings of your faith and charity: [that is the same with Col. i. 4. Since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus, and of your love to all the saints:] and that ye have good remembrance of us always.

9. Ch. iii. 16. Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching,

(e) Quomodo nos diligatis propter Spiritum Sanctum vobis datum. Grot. in loc.
teaching, and admonishing one another, in psalms, and hymns, and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. This shews, that the Colossians were endowed with spiritual gifts. And from whom could they receive them, but from St. Paul? Apostles (f) only are allowed to have had the power and privilege of conveying spiritual gifts to other Christians. This text therefore has been a difficulty with such as have supposed, that Paul never was at Colosse. But now that difficulty is removed.

10. Ch. ii. 1, 2. For I would, that ye knew, what great confidence I have for you, and for them at Laodicea, and for as many as have not seen my face in the flesh: that their hearts might be comforted. This quick change of persons upon the mention of such as had not seen the Apostle's face, seems to imply, that the Colossians, to whom he is writing, had seen him. For if the Colossians, had been among those who had not seen him, he would have expressed himself in this manner. I would that ye knew, what great confidence I have for you, and for them at Laodicea, and for as many as have not seen my face in the flesh, that your hearts might be comforted. But upon the mention of such as had not seen him, he says: that their hearts might be comforted. And having finifhed his testimonie of concern for such as had not seen his face, he returns to the Colossians, to whom he was writing, and says ver. 4. And this I say, lest any man should beguile you with enticing words.

Theodoret, bevide what he had said in the preface to this epistle, which has been already transcribed, speaks again to this purpose in his paraphrase of ch. ii. 1, 2. "I would have you be perfuaded of my great confidence for you, and for the Laodiceans: and not only for you and the Laodiceans, but likewise for all who have not seen me. And (g) that this is his meaning, appears from what follows: that their hearts may be comforted. He does not say your, but their: that is, of such as had not seen him."

11. Ch. ii. 5. For though I be absent in the flesh, yet am I with you in the spirit, joying, and beholding your order, and the steadfastness of your faith in Christ. It is here implied, If I am not mistaken, that the Apostle had been with them, and had been present in the assembly of the believers at Colosse.

12. What is said ch. iv. 7, 8, 9. All my state shall Tychicus declare unto you, and the rest, befit suits the supposition of perfonal acquaintance, as before hinted. Indeed, I think it to be full proof, that Paul was acquainted with them, and they with him.

13. The salutations in ver. 10, 11, 14. from Aristarchus, Mark, Luke, Demas, suppose, the Colossians to have been well acquainted with St. Paul's fellow travellers, and fellow-laborers. And Timothie's name is in the salutation at the beginning of the epistle. Consequently, the Colossians

(f) "Though several of the Christians had spiritual gifts, and miraculous powers, none but Apostles could confer upon other such gifts and powers."

(g) "Ωτι δε τάντα κατά τάδιν αὐτῷ τῷ διάνοιαν εἶχεν, καὶ τὰ ἐπαγόμενα δοκεῖ: ὡς παρακληθῶσιν αἱ καθιαν αὐτῶν. Οὐκ ἵπποι ἦσαν, ἀλλ' αὐτῶν, τοὺς μονοῖς τεθαμίως. Theod. ib. p. 350. 351."
Colossians were not unknown to the Apostle, nor unacquainted with him. And the like salutations are also in the epistle to Philemon, an inhabitant of Colosse.

14. Ch. iv. 15. Salute the brethren, which are in Laodicea, and Nymphas, and the church, which is in his house. ver. 17. And say to Archippus: Take heed to the ministrife, which thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fully fill it. This shews, that Paul was well acquainted with the state of the churches in Colosse and Laodicea. And it affords an argument, that he had been in that country, and particularly, at Laodicea. He salutes the brethren there, and Nymphas by name, and the church in his house. “It (b) is probable, says Theodoret, that he was one of the faithfull in Laodicea, who had made his house a church, adorning it with piety.” As for Archippus, the same Theodoret says, “That (i) some had suppos’d him to have been minifter at Laodicea. But, says he, the epistle to Philemon shews, that he dwelted at Colosse, where Philemon was.” See Philem. ver. 2.

15. Ch. iv. 3. 4. Withall, praying also for us, that God would open unto us a door of utterance, to speak the mysterie of Christ, for which I am in bonds: that I may make it manifest, as I ought to speak. And ver. 18. Remember my bonds. Such demands may be made of strangers. But they are most properly made of friends and acquaintance.

In a word, the whole tenour of this epistle shews, that the Apostle is not writing to strangers, but to acquaintance, disciples, and converts.

16. Finally, an argument may be taken from the epistle to Philemon, an inhabitant of Colosse, sent at the same time with this to the Colossians.

From ver. 19. of the epistle to Philemon, I suppose it to be evident, that he had been converted to Chrisitianity by St. Paul. Indeed this might be done at some other place. But it may as well have been done at home.

And St. Paul’s acquaintance with Philemon, and the Chrisitians at Colosse, may be inferred from several things in that epistle. At ver. 2. he salutes Apphia by name, probably, wife of Philemon: and Archippus, probably, Paftour at Colosse, at leaft an Elder in that church: who, as before oberved, is also mentioned Col. iv. 17. Once more, at ver. 22. St. Paul desires Philemon, to prepare him a lodging. Whence I conclude, that Paul had been at Colosse before.

We might argue also from the characters of Philemon and Archippus, in the first two verses of the same epistle. The former the Apostle calls his fellow-laborer, and the other his fellow-soldier. Which expressions imply personal acquaintance, and that they had labored with him in the service of the gospel in some place. And what place can be so likely, as Colosse? There are many, of whom St. Paul speaks in his epistles, as his fellow-laborers, or fellow-helpers, or fellow-soldiers: concerning whom it may be made appear, that he and they had labored together in some one place.

(b) Ibid. p. 363.
(i) Τους Παύλου, τούτου Λαοδικίας γεννησθαι διδάσκαλος ευ. Ib. Ibid.
place. And why then should these two be exceptions? Yea, it may be reckoned not improbable, that Archippus had been ordained by St. Paul himself an Elder at Colosse. Whether Philemon likewise was an Elder there, I do not say; though he may have been so.

From all these considerations it appears to me very probable, that the church of Colosse had been planted by the Apostle Paul, and that the Christians there were his friends, disciples, and converts. And if the Christians at Colosse were his converts, it may be argued, that so likewise were the Christians at Laodicea, and Hierapolis. None of which places were far asunder.

CHAP. XV.

Of the Seven Catholic Epistles.

I. The Antiquity, and the Reason of that Denomination. II. Called also canonical. III. Concerning their Reception in several Ages. IV. Their Order.

I. Here are seven epistles, which we call Catholic. The antiquity of this denomination may be made manifest from a few quotations. Eusebius having given an account of the death of James, called the Just, and our Lord's brother, concludes: "Thus (a) far concerning this James, who is said to be the author of the first of the epistles called catholic." In another place he says, That (b) in his Institutions Clement of Alexandria had given short explications of all the canonical scriptures, not omitting those which are contradicted. "I mean the epistle of Jude, and the other catholic epistles." They were so called therefore in the time of Eusebius, and, probably, before. Of which likewise we have good proof. For St. John's first epistle is several times called a catholic epistle by Origen (c) in his remaining Greek works, as well as in others. It is likewise (d) so called several times by Dionysius, Bishop of Alexandria. Athanasius, Epiphanius, and later Greek writers received seven epistles, which they called catholic. I only observe here farther, that they are so called likewise by (e) Jerome.

They

(a) Τοιαύτα κ' τα κατὰ τὸν ἰάκωβον, καὶ περὶ τῶν ὀσομαζομένων καθελικῶν ἐπιστολῶν ἑπεις λέγεται. H. E. l. 2. c. 23. p. 66. D.

(b) . . . μὴ δὲ τὰς ἀπίλειμμας σφαιρῆν τιν ἐδει λέγω, κ' τὰς λοιπὰς καθελικῶς ἐπιστολὰς. Ib. l. 6. cap. 14. in.

(c) See of this work Vol. iii. p. 268.

(e) Petrus ... scriptit duas epistolás, quae catholicae nominantur. De V. I. cap. i.
They are called catholic, or universal, or general, because they are not writ to the believers of some one city, or country, or to particular persons, as St. Paul's epistles are, but to Christians in general, or to Christians of several (f) countries. This is the case of five, or the greater part of them, with which the two other are joined. Moreover, when the first epistle of Peter, and the first of St. John were called Catholic by the most early Christian writers, the two smaller of St. John were unknown, or not generally received.

II. These epistles are several times called canonical by (g) Caussiodorus, about the middle of the sixth century, and (h) by the writer of the prologue to these epistles, ascribed to Jerome, though not his. The reason of which appellation is not certainly known. Nor is it easy to perceive the propriety of it. Du Pin says: "Some (i) Latins have called these epistles canonical, either confounding the name with catholic, or else to denote, that they also are a part of the canon of the books of the New Testament."

By whom received.

The first of St. John, were universally received in the time (k) of Eusebius. However, the rest were then well known. In proof of which I shall allege one passage only from him. "Here (l) says he, it will be proper to enumerate in a summariie way the books of the New Testament, which have been already mentioned. And in the first place are to be ranked the four sacred Gospels. Then the book of the Acts of the Apostles. After that are to be reckoned the epistles of Paul. In the next place, that called the first epistle of John, and the first of Peter. After these is to be placed, if it be thought fit, the Revelation of John... And among the contra-dicted, but yet well known to the moost, [or approved by many,] are that called the epistle of James, and that of Jude, and the second "of Peter, and the second and third of John."

And

Johannus... unam tantum scriptam epistolam, quae de septem catholicis est.

Ib. cap. 2.

Judas, frater Domini, parvam, quae de septem catholicis est, epistolam re-liquit. Ib. cap. 4.

(f) Or, as Leontius expresseth it, "They are called catholic, because they are not writ to one nation, as Paul's epistles, but in general to all." See Vol. xi. p. 381.

(g) Oeavus codex canonicas epistolas continet Apostolorum... sed cum de reliquis canonice epistolis magna nos cogitatant fattigaret, subito nobis codex Didymi Graeco filio conscriptus in expositionem septem canonicanum epistolaram Domino largiante concehhus efl. De Infiit. Div. Lit. cap. 8.

Vid et Caufiodori Complexiones canonicanum epistolaram septem.

(i) Diff. Prelim. I. 2. eb. 2. §. ix.

Vol. viii. p. 96. 97.
And in the preceding volumes of this Work we have observed all the seven to have been received by Athanafius, Epiphanius, Jerome, Auguftin, and many other writers. But the Syrian churches received (m) three only of these epiftles. Nor does it appear, that more were received by (n) Chriftophom or (o) Theodor. And Amphifochius, in his Iambic Poem, fays: "Of (p) the Catholic Epiftles some receive feven, others three only." However, as we proceeded, we shall particularly consider the claims of the difputed epiftles, under the names of thofe, to whom they are ascribed.

IV. Before I conclude this introduction, I would take notice of the order of fome epiftles, becaufe there is fonie variety in ancient authors. In the paflage, cited from Eufebius at the beginning of this chapter, he fays, that the epiftle of James was the firft of thofe called catholic. In the paflage, fince taken from him, where he mentions these epiftles according to the degree of authority, which they had obtained, he first fpeaks of the firft epiftle of John, and the firft of Peter. Nevertheless, when he comes to thofe, that were contradifted, the epiftle of James is firft named. This is the order in the Festal epiftle of Athanafius: "Seven (q) epiftles of the Apostles, fays he, called catholic: Of James one, of Peter two, of John three, and after them, of Jude one." Which is our present order. The fame order is obferved in the catalogue of Cyril, of Jerusalem, the council of Laodicea, Epiphanius, Grégorie Nazianzen, Amphifochius, Jerome's letter to Paulinus, Euthalius, Gelaftus, Bifhop of Rome, the Alexandrian Manuscript, the Stichometric of Nicephorus, Patriarch of Constantinople, Leontius, J. Damefcon. The fame order is in Bede's prologue to these epiftles, largely tranfcribed by us (r) in it's proper place. Where he affigns reafons of this order, and particularly, why the epiftle of James was placed firft. In other authors is a different order. By Rufin (s) they are rehearted in this manner: "two epiftles of the Apostle Peter, one of James, the "brother of the Lord, and Apostle, one of Jude, three of John: the "Revelation of John." One may be apt to think, that St. John's three epiftles are here mentioned laft, that they might not be separated from the book of the Revelation. In the canon of the third council of Carthage, they stand in this order: "two (t) epiftles of the Apostle Peter, three of the Apostle John, one of the Apostle Jude, one of the Apostle James." In Auguftin's work of the Chriftian Doctrine: "two (u) "epiftles of Peter, three of John, one of Jude, and one of James." In the catalogue of Pope Innocent: "three (x) epiftles of John, two epiftles of Peter, an epiftle of Jude, an epiftle of James." In the Commentaric of Caffidorius (y) upon these epiftles they are in this order: "Two epiftles of Peter, three of John, of Jude one, of James one."

CHAP. XVI.

ST. JAMES, the LORD's Brother.

I. His Historie from the N. T. whereby he appears to have been an Apostle.
II. His Historie from ancient Authors. A Passage from Eusebius concerning Him, with Remarks, shewing Him to be the same, as James the Son of Alpheus. III. A passage of Eusebius, containing two Quotations from Clement of Alexandria, mentioning his Appointment to be Bishop, or residing Apostle at Jerusalem, and the Manner of his Death. IV. A Passage of Origen, speaking of our Lord's Brethren, and the Death of James. V. A Chapter of Eusebius, containing Accounts of his Death from Hegesippus, and Josephus, with Remarks. VI. The Time of his Death. VII. How he was related to our Lord, and in what Respect he was his Brother. VIII. That he was an Apostle, and the Son of Alpheus. IX. Why called the Less. X. Surnamed the Just, and other Marks of Respect shown Him. XI. A Review of what has been said.

I.

HERE is frequent mention of James in the His Historie from the N.T. in Acts, and St. Paul's epistles. If he was an Apostle, he must be James, the son of Alpheus, always distinctly named in the catalogues of the Apostles (a) in the first three Gospels, and in the first chapter of the Acts. For (b) there was but one other Apostle of this name, James the brother of John, and son of Zebedee. However the proofs of his being James the son of Alpheus are deferred for the present. I begin with writing the historie of James, mentioned in the Acts, and St. Paul's epistles.

St. Paul, reckoning up the several appearances of our Lord to the disciples after his resurrection, says 1 Cor. xv. 5...8. that he was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve. After that he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once: meaning, I suppose, at the place in Galilee, where he had appointed to meet the disciples. After that he was seen of James, then of all the Apostles: meaning, it is likely, when they were witnesses of his ascension. And last of all he was seen of me also.

By James must be here intended the same, that is mentioned by St. Paul elsewhere. Moreover James, the son of Zebedee, had been dead a good while before writing this epistle to the Corinthians, in the Year of Christ 56. It is likely, that St. Paul speaks of him, who was still living. And he here speaks of a particular appearance of Christ to him.

We learn from Jerome, that in the Gospel according to the Hebrews there was an account of a particular appearance of our Lord to James, the Lord's brother, who, according to his computation, governed the church.

church of Jerusalem thirty years. It is to this purpose. "Very (c) soon after the Lord was risen, he went to James, and showed himself to him. "For James had solemnly sworn, that he would eat no bread from the time that he had drunk the cup of the Lord, till he should see him risen from among them that sleep. It is added a little after. Bring, faith the Lord, "a table and bread. And lower: He took bread, and blessed, and brake it, "and then gave it to James the Just, and said to him: My brother, eat thy bread. For the Son of man is risen from among them that sleep."

I think, this story may be sufficient to shew, that James, called the Just, and the Lord's brother, was in high esteem with the Jewish believers, who used the Gospel above mentioned. But some of the circumstances of this account must needs be fabulous. Nor is there any reason to think, that James, or any of the Apostles, had a certain expectation of the Lord's rising from the dead. Nevertheless I shall mention a thought, to be considered by candid readers. Possibly, this account is founded upon the history recorded in Luke xxiv. 13...35. of the two disciples, to whom the Lord appeared on the day of his resurrection, to whom he was known in breaking of bread. One thing more may be concluded from this passage. They who used this gospel, thought James, the Lord's brother, to have been an Apostle. For here is a reference to his partaking in the eucharist, appointed by our Lord. Where none were present, beside the twelve.

However, as I have proposed a conjecture concerning the history in Luke xxiv, it ought to be observed, that the two disciples, there mentioned, were not Apostles. For at ver. 35. it is said, that when they were returned to Jerusalem, they found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them.

Upon that text of St. Paul Dr. Doddridge (d) mentions a conjecture, which had been communicated to him: that James had not seen our Lord after his resurrection, untoil the time there mentioned by St. Paul. "That by sickness, or some other accident, James had been detained from meeting his brethren, both on the day of our Lord's resurrection, and that day evenning, and likewise at the time, when Christ appeared to the five hundred. And that he might on this respect be upon the level with them, our Lord appeared to him alone, after all the appearances mentioned before." But I take that conjecture to be without ground, as well as very improbable. St. Paul's words do not imply, that our Lord had not been seen by James before, but that this was a particular appearance appearance to him alone, as (c) Augustine has observed. Who likewise adds very judiciously: "Nor did Christ now first shew himself to all the Apostles." Which agrees with Lightfoot's (f) interpretation of that text.

I have one thing more to add. It seems to me, that James, here spoken of, was an Apostle. And it will afford a good argument, that James, sometimes called by ancient Christian writers Bishop of Jerusalem, was an Apostle.

Gal. i. 18. 19. Then after three years I went up to Jerusalem, to see Peter, and abode with him fifteen days. But other of the Apostles saw I none, save James the Lord's brother.

This text seems decisive in favour of the Apostleship of James. St. Luke speaks of the same thing in this manner. Acts ix. 27. Barnabas took him, and brought him to the Apostles. Comparing these two texts together, I conclude, that James now resided at Jerusalem, and acted there as president of that church. And I imagine, that Barnabas first brought Paul to James, and James brought him to Peter. Thus Paul had communion with all the Apostles, though he saw and conversed with none of them, beside James and Peter.

When St. Peter had been delivered out of prison, in the reign of Herod Agrippa, about the time of Passover in the year 44. he came to the house of Marie, where many were gathered together, praying. And when he had declared unto them, how the Lord had brought him out of prison, he said: Go shew these things to James, and to the brethren. Acts xii. 12... 17. This also gives ground to think, that James now presided in the church of Jerusalem.

Before, Acts xi. 29. 30. it is said: Then the disciples, at Antioch, determined to send relief unto the brethren, which dwell in Judea. Which also they did, and sent it to the elders by the hands of Barnabas and Saul. Hence some have concluded, that James was not now at Jerusalem. But there is no reason for that supposition. For it would imply also, that none of the Apostles were at Jerusalem: whereas, probably, they were all there, or near it. We have proof from the next chapter, already cited, that James the son of Zebedee and Peter were there. For the former was beheaded, and Peter imprisoned at Jerusalem by Herod Agrippa about this time. And when Peter had been brought out of prison, he defined his friends

(f) "After the appearing to above five hundred brethren at once, which we suppose, and not without ground, to have been that last mentioned, the Apostle relateth, that he was seen of James. 1 Cor. xv. 7. and then of all the Apostles. Which does plainly rank this appearance to James between that to the five hundred brethren on the mountain in Galilee, and his coming to all the Apostles, when they were come again to Jerusalem. Which James this was, Paul is silent of, as all the Evangelists are of any such particular appearance. It is most like, he means James the less, of whom he speaks often elsewhere." Harmony of the N. T. Vol. i. p. 273.
friends to inform James of it, as we have just seen. Therefore he certainly was then at Jerusalem.

There are two ways of understanding that expression. By Elders may be meant Elders in general, not excluding the Apostles. So in the place of Paul, before cited: after that he was seen of above five hundred brethren at once. Where the Apostles are not excluded, but included in the word brethren. For it is reasonable to think, that divers, yea most, if not all of the Apostles, were present at that time. So here the Apostles may be included in the general denomination of Elders. Or by Elders may be meant such as are called Elders by way of distinction from Apostles, as in Acts xv. 4. 22. xxi. 18. who might be person[s], more especially entrusted with the receiving, and the distributing such contributions. Neither of these senses oblige us to think, that James was not now at Jerusalem.

When the controversy about the manner of receiving the Gentils was brought before the Apostles and Elders, assembled in Council at Jerusalem; after there had been much disputing, Peter spoke, and then Barnabas, and Paul. After all which James speaks last, sums up the argument, and propofeth the terms, upon which the Gentils should be received. To which the whole assembly agreed. And they sent letters to the Gentils in several places, accordingly. Acts xv. 1...29. It is manifest, I think, that James presided in this Council. And it may be thence reckoned probable, that he was an Apostle, as well as President of the church of Jerusalem.

Chrysostom, in a homilie upon the xv. chapter of the Acts, says: “James (g) was Bishop of Jerusalem, and therefore spoke last.” In the same place he justly applauds the propriety of his discourse in the Council.

St. Paul, in the second chapter of the epistle to the Galatians, giving an account of some things, which happened, when he was that time at Jerusalem, but are not mentioned in the book of the Acts, speaks of James, Cephas, and John, as pillars: who also gave to him and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship. Those expressions strongly imply, that James was an Apostle, and presiding Apostle in the church of Jerusalem.

Jerome, in his book against Helvidius, allows, that (b) the texts, which I have already cited from the epistle to the Galatians, shew James, the Lord’s brother, to have been an Apostle.

Afterwards, in the same chapter, giving an account of what happened at Antioch, ver. 11. 12. he says, that when Peter was come thither, he did eat with the Gentils, before that certain came from James: but when they were come, he withdrew, and separated himself, fearing them of the circumcision. This, I think, implies, that James resided at Jerusalem, and presided

---

Vol. II. A 2
fided in that church, and that he was greatly respected by the Jewish believers there.

Once more, Acts xxi. 17. 18. When Paul went up to Jerusalem, about Pentecost, in the year 58. the day after our arrival, says St. Luke, Paul went in with us unto James, and all the elders were present, and what follows. Here is another proof, that James resided at Jerusalem, and superintended in that church (A).

In what has been now alleged we have perceived evidences of James being related to our Lord, forasmuch as he is called his brother, and that he was much at Jerusalem, and prefixed in that church, and that, probably, he was an Apostle in the highest sense of that word. We have also seen reason to think, that he was much respected by the Jewish believers. And, though we do not allow ourselves to enlarge upon every thing, said of him in the historie of the Council of Jerusalem, and his reception of Paul, when he went up to Jerusalem, and was imprisoned:
yet I suppose, that every one may have discerned marks of an excellent character, and of his admirably uniting zeal and discretion, a love of truth and condescension to weak brethren. His epistle confirms that character. I think likewise, that the preservation of his life, in such a station as his, to the time, when he is mentioned last by St. Luke, (which we suppose to have been about the time of Pentecost, in the year of Christ, 58.) may induce us to believe, that he was careful to be inoffensive in his behaviour toward the unbelieving part of the Jewish nation, and that he was had in reverence by many of them.

II. I should now proceed to write the historie of this person from ancient authors. But that is a difficult task, as I have found, after trying more than once, and at distant spaces of time. I shall therefore take divers passages of Eusebius, and others, and make such reflections as offer, for finding out as much truth as we can.

A Passage of Eusebius has a chapter (i) "Concerning our Saviour's disciples." Where he speaks of all these following, as said to be of the number of the Seventy: Barnabas, Sosthenes, who joyns with Paul in writing the first epistle to the Corinthians, Cephas, whom Paul resifted at Antioch, of the same name with the Apostle Peter, but different from him, Matthias, chosen in the room of Judas, and he who was put up with Matthias, and James, to whom Christ shewed himself after his resurrection, as related by St. Paul 1 Cor. xv. 7. "He "(k) likewise, says Eusebius, was one of those called our Saviour's diff-ciples, and one of his brethren."

Upon this it is easy to observe, that beside the loose and inaccurate manner, in which this chapter is writ by our historian, here are, probably,
bably, several mistakes. Some things will be readily as-\footnote{fented to, as not \footnote{unlikely: that Matthias, and the other disciple put up with him, were of \footnote{the Seventy. But omitting some other things, there is no good reason \footnote{to say, that Cephas was different from Peter, or that Sosthenes was one of \footnote{the Seventy. If those things are wrong, there is the less reason to rely \footnote{upon that account, which places James, the Lord’s brother, in the num\footnote{ber only of his disciples, or of the Seventy.}

However, we here seem to discern the opinion of our Ecclesiastical \footnote{Historian, that James, the Lord’s brother, so often mentioned in the \footnote{Acts, and St. Paul’s epistles, was not one of Christ’s Apostles. And \footnote{there we have also his interpretation of these words, 1 Cor, xv. 7. then \footnote{he was seen of all the Apostles. By (l) which he understands others, be-\footnote{side the twelve. And to the like purpose (m) Origen. And it was for-\footnote{merly shewn at large in the chapter of Eusebius, that (n) he did not e\footnote{stee this James an Apostle in the highest acceptation of the word. It \footnote{may be observed likewise, in the large account formerly given of Jerome’s \footnote{opinion concerning this James, that (o) he seems not to be quite free \footnote{from hesitation. Sometimes he speaks of him as one of the twelve \footnote{Apostles, and sometimes not so. We have also seen reason to think, \footnote{that (p) Cyril of Jerusalem did not reckon James, called Bishop of Je\footnote{rusalem, to have been one of the twelve Apostles. Gregorie Nyffen (q) \footnote{likewise distinguisheth James, the son of Alpheus, one of the twelve A-\footnote{postles, from James the Lesh, who was not of that number. The same \footnote{opinion appears in (r) the Apostolical Constitutions.

Tillemont says: “The (s) Greek Christians of our time distinguish \footnote{James the son of Alpheus, one of the twelve Apostles, and James the \footnote{Lord’s brother, and Bishop of Jerusalem, as two different persons: to \footnote{making us entirely ignorant of the historie of James, the son of Alpheus, \footnote{and excluding the Lord’s brother from the number of Apostles. But \footnote{the opinion of the Latins, who believe, that they are one and the same \footnote{person, and the Apostle, appears more conformable to the Scripture, \footnote{and is supported by the authority of St. Paul in particular, who gives to \footnote{James the Lord’s brother the title of Apostle in the same manner that he \footnote{gives it to Peter. Gal. i. 19.”

III. Eusebius has (t) another chapter, entitled, “Of \footnote{things constituted by the Apostles after our Saviour’s ascension.” Which is to this purpose. “The first is \footnote{of Matthias, one of Christ’s disciples, into the apostleship, \footnote{in the room of Judas. Then the appointment of the seven Deacons, \footnote{one

(1) \footnote{\Sb} ές ως παρά τότεις κατά μίρασιν τῶν δώδεκα πληντών οὖσιν υπάρχοντων ἀπο\footnote{σολων... προτίθησι λίγους ἑπτα τοῖς ἀποστολοῖς εἰς. } ib. p. 31.
\footnote{(m) See Vol. iii. p. 397.}
\footnote{(n) Vol. viii. p. 152... 155.}
\footnote{(o) Vol. x. p. 125... 129.}
\footnote{(p) Vol. viii. p. 273.}
\footnote{(q) De Christi Ref. \footnote{Or. 2. Tom. 3. p. 413. E. C.}
\footnote{(r) See Vol. viii. p. 395.}
\footnote{(s) S. Jacob lq.
\footnote{Mineur. Art. i. Tom. i.}
\footnote{(t) H. E. l. 2. cap. 1.
of whom was Stephen, who soon after his being ordained was stoned by those who had killed the Lord, and was the first martyr for Christ. Then James, called the Lord’s brother, because he was the son of Joseph... to whom the virgin Mary was espoused. This James, called by the ancients the Juff, on account of his eminent virtue, is said to have been appointed the first bishop of Jerusalem. And Clement, in the sixth book of his Institutions, writes after this manner: That after our Lord’s ascension, Peter, and James, and John, though they had been favored by the Lord above the rest, did not contend for honour, but chose James the Juff to be Bishop of Jerusalem. And in the seventh book of the same work he says, that after his resurrection the Lord gave to James the Juff and John and Peter the gift of knowledge. And they gave it to the other Apostles. And the other Apostles gave it to the Seventy, one of whom was Barnabas. For there were two named James: one the Juff, who was thrown down from the battlement of the temple, and killed by a fuller’s staff. The other is he, who was beheaded. Of him that was called the Juff Paul also makes mention, saying: Other of the Apostles saw I none, save James, the Lord’s brother.”

Upon what has been thus transcribed a few remarks may be properly made. In the former part of it Eusebius seems to declare it as his own opinion, that James, called the Lord’s brother, was the son of Joseph, that is, by a former wife.

For clearing up this passage, I would farther observe: I suppose, the whole of this quotation to be taken from Clement. Some may indeed at first be apt to think, that the second passage of Clement concludes with the word Barnabas. But I rather think, that all which follows in this quotation is Clement’s, and nothing of Eusebius. One reason of my thinking so is, that in the 23. chapter of the same book, where our Ecclesiastical Historian gives an account of the death of James from Hegesippus, who relates, that James was thrown down from the temple, and killed by a fuller’s staff, he twice says, that is, at (u) the entering upon that account, and (x) at finishing it, that this was agreeable to what had been before alleged from Clement. The other reason is, that Eusebius seems not to have been so clear, that there were no more than two of this name, as is implied in this passage, particularly in the conclusion of it.

Upon these two passages cited by Eusebius from Clement, one from the sixth, the other from the seventh book of his Institutions, we are led to observe, first, that James called the Juff, is here supposed to be an Apostle, Nor did Clement know of any more of the name James, in the New Testament, before James the son of Zebedee, and him called James the Juff. Secondly, I observe, that James, called the Juff, is supposed to have been appointed Bishop of Jerusalem, by three Apostles especially, Peter, and the two sons of Zebedee, and not by our Lord. And the order

(u) Τὸν δὲ τῆς τῶν ἱερών τελευτῆς τροπῶν ὑπὲρ μὲν πρῶτον οἱ παρατιθέμενοι τῷ κληρικῷ φησιν δεδεκακαίναι, ἀπὸ τοῦ θετικοῦ μεταξὺ, ἐξειρημένον τοῦ ἱεροῦ θίατου ποιήσαντες τὸν Ἰσακίνα οἰκονόμους. I. 2. cap. 23. p. 63. C.

(x) Ταῦτα δὲ πλῆθος εὑρεθαὶ τῷ κληρικῷ ἐν ἡγεμονίᾳ. Ibid. p. 65. C.
der and coherence of things in this chapter of Eusebius seems to imply, that this was done soon after the martyrdom of Stephen.

Which appears to me agreeable to the historic in the Acts, and the passages alleged thence at the beginning of this chapter. Peter always speaks first, as president among the Apostles, until after the choice of the seven Deacons. Every thing said of St. James after that implies his presiding in the church of Jerusalem. And when St. Paul mentions the three chiefs, who were pillars, Gal. ii. 9. with whom he conferred at Jerusalem, he names James first. The reason of his doing so, I take to be, that James then presided in the church of Jerusalem.

Tillemont (y) thinks, "That Christ himself may have appointed James to be Bishop in that church: but the Apostles deferred the declaring it solemnly, till the time of the persecution, which broke out after the death of St. Stephen. Then they thought of providing more particularly for the church of Jerusalem, whence, perhaps, they feared they should be constrained to remove. This obliged them to appoint a proper Pastor, who should be obliged to stay there till his death, and should charge himself with every thing necessary for their welfare."

To me it appears evident, that (z) the Apostles did not now leave Jerusalem, nor till a good while afterwards. But they were obliged to live privately. And the circumstances of things made it prudent to appoint one of their number, who should preside in that church, and act in their name. Though they could not all appear in public, it was fit there should be one at least, to whom the faithful might apply at any time, in case of need. This choice, or appointment, is ascribed by Clement to three of the Apostles. But it might be done with the consent and approbation of all.

As this episcopate, or superintendence of James has been thus mentioned, I shall here observe what notice is taken of it by other ancient Christian writers.

Eusebius, in one place, says, that (a) James was appointed Bishop of Jerusalem by the Apostles: in another by (b) Christ and the Apostles: So likewise in the (c) Apostolical Constitutions. Jerome in his Catalogue of Ecclesiastical Writers says, "that (d) James furnamed the Just, was ordained Bishop of Jerusalem by the Apostles, soon after the Lord's passion." In his Commentary upon the epistle to the Galatians he speaks, as (e) if the Lord himself had given him this high trust: meaning,

(y) St. Jacque le Mineur. Art. iv. mem. Tom. i.
(z) See Acti. viii. 1.
(a) . . . ὃς πάρος τῶν ἀποστόλων ὁ τῆς ἤπειρος τῆς in ieroglýmou ἵκες καὶ ἰγκαθισμοῦ θρόνος. H. E. l. 2. cap. 23. in Vid. et l. 2. cap. 1. in p. 38. B.
(b) Τὸν γὰρ Ιακώβην θρόνον τὴν ἀράτην τῆς ἱεροσόλυμος ἐκκλησίας των ἤπειρος πάρος τῷ σωτῆρι καὶ τῶν ἀπόστολων ὑποτηθείσης. κ. λ. l. 7. c. 19.
(c) Confl. l. 8. cap. 35.
(d) Jacobus, qui appellatur frater Domini, cognomento Juufus ... pot præsumi Domini statim ab Apostolis Hierofolymorum Episcopus ordinatus. De V. I. cap. 2.
(e) Nunc hoc sufficiat, ut propter egregios mores, et incomparabilem fdlum, fapientiamque non medianum, frater dictus fuit Domini: et quod primum ei ecclefiæ præsuerit, quod prima in Chrifum credens ex Judaeis fuera conc. gregata.
ing, perhaps, no more, than that Christ gave it him by the Apostles; or that they in so doing had acted by divine inspiration. Epiphanius (f) ascribes this appointment to our Saviour himself, as do (g) Chrysostom, and (h) Oecumenius, and (i) Photius. The Latin author of a Commentary upon thirteen of St. Paul’s Epistles, says, James (k) was appointed Bishop of Jerusalem by the Apostles. Nicephorus’s account is, that (l) he was so appointed by our Saviour, or, as some said, by the Apostles also. I shall cite no more writers relating to this point, but proceed.

IV. I would now take a passage of Origen from the tenth tome of his Commentaries upon St. Matthew, where he discourseth upon Matt. xiii, 55—56.

Is not this the carpenter’s son? Is not his mother called Mary? And his brethren, James, and Joseph, and Simon, and Judas? And his sisters, are they not all with us? (m) They thought, says Origen, that he was the son of Joseph and Mary. The brethren of Jesus, some say upon the ground of tradition, particularly what is said in the Gospel according to Peter, or the book of James, were the sons of Joseph by a former wife, who cohabited with him before Mary. They who say this, are desirous to maintain the honour of Mary’s virginity to the last: [or her perpetual virginity:] that the body chosen to fulfill what is said: the Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee. Luke i. 35. might not know man after that. And I think it very reasonable, that as Jesus was the first-fruits of virginity among men, Mary should be the same among women. For it would be very improper to give that honour to any, beside her, This James is he, whom Paul mentions in his epistle to the Galatians, saying: Other of the Apostles saw I none, save James, the Lord’s brother. This James was in so great repute with the people for his virtue, that Josephus, who wrote twenty books of the Jewish Antiquities, desirous to align the reason of their suffering such things, so that even the temple was destroyed, says, that (n) those things were owing to the anger of God for what they did to James the brother of Jesus, called Christ. And it is wonderful, that he who did not believe our Jesus to

(1) Her. 78. num. vii.
(2) Chr. in ep. 1. ad Cor. hom. 38. p. 355. Tom. x.
(3) Occ. ad Aet. xvi. 13. T. i. p. 122.
(4) Phot. Ep. 117.

(1) Niceph. l. 2. cap. 38.
(n) ... εαν ουτως κατα μιν δια τουτα αυτοι απερηναι, δια τη του εις ιακωβων του αδησου ενεγ του λογουρχου χριστος, υπ αυτων τετελκομενα. Και το θαυμασσόν εις, ότι του εισην εκα ο καταδεξαμενοι ειναι χριστος, εκι επο υπο ιακωβος δικαιοουμεν ιερος αυτους της αυτους. Ανεμε δε, ότι η λαος των ενομιξε δια των ιακωβων υπολοιπους... Περι δε ιωσηφ, κη συμφων ευς ιεροσαμεις. Id. p. 463. Bened. p. 223. Huet.
to be the Christ, should bear such a testimonie to James. He also " says, that the people thought they suffered those things upon account of James. Jude wrote an epistle, of few lines indeed, but filled " with the powerful words of the heavenly grace, who says at the begin- " ing: Jude, a servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James. Of Jesus " and Simon we know nothing."

Origen, in (o) his books against Celsus, quotes Josephus again, as speaking of James to the like purpose. But there are not now any such passages in Josephus: though they are quoted, as from him, by (p) Eusebius also. But he does not say, whether from his Jewish war, or from his Antiquities, or in what book of either, as he sometimes does, when he quotes Josephus. Jerome has twice quoted Josephus for these things: first in his (q) article of St. James, and then in that (r) of Josephus himself: but not much more expressly, than Eusebius.

Upon the long passage of Origen, just transcribed, I would observe, as follows.

It is strange, that Origen should take such particular notice of the epistle of St. Jude, and say nothing of the epistle of James, whose historie he was writing, when it was not unknown to him. It may be suspected, that a paragraph has been lost, and dropt out of the Commentaries in this place. It is also strange, that he should say, he knew nothing of Simon: when it is probable, that he likewise was one of Christ's Apostles, called Simon the Canaanite by Matthew ch. x. 4. and Mark iii. 18. Simon Zelotes by Luke vi. 13. and Acts i. 13.

From what Origen says of the death of James it may be concluded, that in his time Chriftians were persuaded, that James had died a martyr for Christ, and had been killed by the Jews, notwithstanding his eminent virtue. Though the passages, to which Origen refers, are not now in Josephus, and though it should be supposed, that there was some inaccuracy in Origen's quotations of him, or references to him; I think, it must be allowed, that Chriftians had in his time a tradition concerning the death of James, and that it happened in circumstances very dishonorable to those who were the authors of it: insomuch that many were disposed to think, it was one of those things, for which God was much offended with the Jewish people. Moreover we have already observed a brief account of the death, or martyrdom of James in Clement, older than Origen, though in part contemporane with him.

All farther notice of that passage of Origen is deferred, till we come to consider, how James was related to our Lord.

V. As

(p) H. E. l. 2. cap. 23. p. 65. C. D.

(q) Tradit idem Josephus, tantæ eum sanctitatis sussit, et celebritatis in populo, ut propter ejus necem creditum sit, subverfam esse Hierofolywm Hier. de Vir. Ill. cap. 2.

(r) Hic confitetur . . . et propter interfectionem Jacobi Apostoli dira- tam Hierofolywm. Ib. cap. 13.
V. As the death of James has been mentioned, I shall now immediately take the accounts of it, which are in Eusebius. And I will transcribe a large part of the 23. chapter of the second book of his Eccle-tical Historie.

"But when Paul had appealed to Caesar, and Festus had sent him to Rome, the Jews being disappointed in their design against him, turned their rage against James the Lord’s brother, to whom the Apostles had assigned the episcopal chair of Jerusalem. And in this manner they proceeded against him. Having laid hold of him, they required him in the presence of all the people to renounce his faith in Christ. But he with freedom and boldness beyond expectation, before all the multitude, declared our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ to be the Son of God. They not enduring the testimonie of a man, who was in high esteem for his piety, laid hold of the opportunity, when the countrey was without a Governour, to put him to death. For Festus having died about that time in Judea, the province had in it no Procurator. The manner of the death of James was shewn before in the words of Clement, who said, that he was thrown off from the battlement of the temple, and then beat to death with a club. But no one has so accurately related this transaction, as Hegesippus, a man in the first succession of the Apostles, in the fifth book of his Commentaries, whose words are to this purpose: "James, (s) the brother of our Lord, undertook together with the Apostles the government of the church. He has been called the Just by all from the time of our Saviour to ours. For many have been named James. But he was holi-from his mother’s womb. He drank neither wine, nor strong drink, nor did he eat any animal food. There never came raifour upon his head. He neither anointed himself with oil, nor did he use a bath.

To him alone was it lawful to enter the holie place. He wore no woollen, but only linen garments. He entered into the temple alone, where he prayed upon his knees. In somuch that his knees were be-like the knees of a camel, by means of his being continually upon them, worshiping God, and praying for the forgivenesle of the people. Upon account of his virtue he was called the Just, and Oblia, that is, the defense of the people, and righteousness. Some therefore of the seven sects, which there were among the Jews, of whom I spake in the former part of these Commentaries, asked him, (b) which is the gate of Jesus: or, what is the gate of salvation.

And

(1) Διαδηλετονε νε τινι έκκλησιαν μετα των αποστολων ο οδελφος του κυριου λακωνης. ex. l. p. 603. C. D.

(b) . . . περιθυνοντο δουλα, τις ε βυζα του ιναζ η ελεγα των εις τον σωτηρα. Le Clerc, in his observations upon this passage of Hegesippus, says, he does not understand those words, what is the gate of Jesus. And, perhaps, the place has been corrupted. Τις ε βυζα του ιναζ; Quod quid fibi velit, non intellegio. Sed forte locus est corruptus. H. E. p. 416. Ann. lxii. Mr. Moseheim thinks, with great probability, that the question put to James was: What is the gate, or way of salvation? Tell us, how we may obtain eternal life?” James answered: “The gate of salvation is our Saviour Jesus Christ.”
"And he said: Jesus is the Saviour, or the way of salvation. Some of them therefore believed, that Jesus is the Christ. . . And many of the chief men also believing, there was a disturbance among the Jews, and among the Scribes and Pharisees, who said, there was danger, lest all the people should think Jesus to be the Christ. Coming therefore to James, they said: We beseech thee to restrain the error of the people. We entreat thee to persuade all that come hither at the time of Passover to think rightly concerning Jesus. For all the people, and all of us put confidence in thee. . . Stand therefore upon the battlement of the temple, that being placed on high, thou mayest be conspicuous, and thy words may be easily heard by all the people. For because of the Passover, all the tribes be come hither, and many Gentils. Therefore the Scribes and Pharisees, before named, placed James upon the battlement of the temple, and cried out to him, and said: O Justus, whom we ought all to believe, since the people are in an error, following Jesus who was crucified, tell us (c) what is the gate of Jesus. And he answered with a loud voice: Why do you ask me concerning the Son of Man: He even sitteth in the heaven, at the right hand of the great power, and will come in the clouds of heaven. And many were fully satisfied, and well pleased with the testimony of James, saying, Hosanna to the Son of David. But the same Scribes and Pharisees said to one another: We have done wrong in procuring such a testimonio to Jesus. Let us go up, and throw him down, that the people may be terrified from giving credit to him. . . And they went up presently, and cast him down, and said: Let us stone James the Just. And they began to stone him, because he was not killed with the fall. But he turning himself kneeled, saying: I entreat thee, O Lord God the Father, forgive them. For they know not what they do. As they were stoning him, one said: Give over. What do ye? The just man prays for you. And (d) one of them, a fuller, took a pole, which was used to beat cloths with, and struck him on the head. Thus his martyrdom was completed. And they buried him in that place, and his monument still remains near the temple. This James was a true witness to Jews and Gentils, that Jesus is the Christ.

And Christ."
And soon after Judea was invaded by Vespasian, and the people were carried captive. So writes Hegesippus at large, agreeably to Clement. For certain, James was an excellent man, and much esteemed by many for his virtue: insomuch that the most thoughtful men among the Jews were of opinion, that his death was the cause of the siege of Jerusalem, which followed soon after his martyrdom: and that it was owing to nothing else, but the wickedness committed against him. And (u) Josephus says the same in these words: "These things befall the Jews in vindication of James the Just, who was brother of Jesus, called the Christ. For the Jews killed him, who was a most righteous man." The same historian, in the twentieth book of his Antiquities, relates his death in this manner. "The Emperor being informed of the death of Festus, sent Albinus to be Prefect in Judea. But the younger Ananus, who, as we said before, was made High Priest, was haughty in his behaviour, and very enterprising. And moreover he was of the sect of the Sadducees, who, as we have also observed before, are above all other Jews severer in their judicial sentences. This then being the temper of Ananus, he thinking he had a fit opportunity, because Festus was dead, and Albinus was yet upon the road, calls a Council. And bringing before them James, the brother of him who is called Christ, and some others, he accused them as transgressors of the laws, and had them stoned to death. But the most moderate men of the city, who also were reckoned most skilful in the laws, were offended at this proceeding. They therefore sent privately to the King, [Agrippa the Younger] entreating him to send orders to Ananus, no more to attempt any such things. And some went away to meet Albinus, who was coming from Alexandria, and put him in mind, that Ananus had no right to call a Council without his leave. Albinus approving of what they said, wrote a very angry letter to Ananus, threatening to punish him for what he had done. And King Agrippa took away from him the priesthood, after he had enjoyed it three months, and put in Jesus, the son of Damnaeus." These are the things which are related of James, whose is the first of the epistles called catholic. Thus I have given a literal version of almost the whole of this chapter, being desirous, that my readers should see the accounts, which ancient writers have given of James: though they are not altogether so credible, nor so entertaining, as might have been wished. Nor do they any where lie in better order than here. And therefore I have chosen this chapter. The same things are transcribed by Jerome from Eusebius in his chapter of James the Just, in his Catalogue of Ecclesiastical Writers: but very inaccurately, blending together Hegesippus, and Clement, and Josephus: so that, without comparing Eusebius, it could not be known what belongs to one, and what to the other. For which, I think, he deferves to be censured. Nor could I pass it by without notice, as an ufe may be made of

(u) O γεν. γείωσεν ὁ Ἀκώνης ξέ τοῦ ἑγγράφους ἐπιμαρτύρων, ὡς το Φαος λέγειν. Τάντα τί συμπληκτεῖ τεινάιες, κατ' ἱκάδας ἱακόνδε τέθειαν, ὡς ἦν ἀκέμμας ἱερὰς ἡ λεγομένων κηρύ. ἐπιφάνης δικαίωτατον ἄντιν ὑπα τείναι ἱεράς ἐκπίτευσιν. 16. p. 65. D.
of it. For it may induce us to suspect, that to such carelessness and inaccuracy of quotation we owe those passages of Josephus, in which he is said to have assigned the death of James, as the sole cause of the ruin of the Jewish People.

And now I proceed to make some remarks upon the chapter of Eusebius, and the passages therein quoted by him.

1. In the first place, it appears from Eusebe’s introduction, at the beginning of the chapter, that he supposed the martyrdom of St. James to have happened at a time, when there was no Roman Governor in Judæa, after the death of Februarius, and before the arrival of Albinus in the province. What reason he had for this, we do not certainly know. We do not observe any notice of that circumstance in what he has transcribed from Hegeippus. It is indeed expressly said in the passage of Josephus. But if that passage be the only foundation for the opinion, it’s authority may be questioned. For divers learned men have suspected the genuineness of that part of the passage, which speaks of the death of James. As will be shewn more particularly by and by.

2. Upon the first quotation, which is from Hegeippus, it is easy for any one to observe, that (x) there are in it many things very unlikely: as (y) that James should live in the manner here represented, and particularly, that he should eat no animal food: that he had a right to enter into the holie place, when he pleased, whether thereby be understood the Holie of Holies, or only the temple: that the Scribes and Pharisees should place him on a pinnacle, or battlement of the temple, to deliver his opinion to the people concerning Jesus: that they should throw him down thence, and kill him in the temple, or any of the courts of it: that they should bury him near the place, in which he is here said to have been killed: when the Jews, and all other people in those times, usually buried their dead without the walls of their cities: and, finally, that he should have a monument, or pillar, over him, near the place where he was buried, which remained to the time of Hegeippus, after the war was over, and the city of Jerusalem and the temple had been overthrown. Concerning which last particular Jerome, in the Catalogue above mentioned, says:

says: "He (a) was buried near the temple, where he had been thrown "down. He had a conspicuous monument, till the siege of Titus, and "that since by Adrian. Some of our people have thought, that he was buried on mount Olivet. But that is a mistaken opinion." So that even in Judea there were different opinions concerning the place, where James was buried. Nevertheless I presume, all were persuaded, that he had suffered martyrdom from the Jews at Jerusalem. There was no different sentiment about that.

However, this difference of opinion concerning the place, where St. James was buried, deserves our notice. For it may lead us to suspect some mistake in the account of Hegesippus. Possibly, St. James was buried in mount Olivet: though there was a pillar erected near the place, where he was killed. I think, this may be of use to remove some difficulties in the account of Hegesippus. The pillar, which he faw, might be erected after the siege of Jerusalem, by some, who remembered the place, where St. James had been killed. And some from that monument might conclude, he had been buried there, though really he was not.

I have made some remarks upon the passage of Hegesippus. A fuller critique may be seen in other (a) writers: partly aggravating the improbabilities of this account, partly softening them, and striving to remove difficulties. Accordingly Petavius says, "that (b) though there are in it several things very unlikely, yet the whole historia ought not therefore to be rejected." To whom I am not unwilling to accede. But as I have not room to enlarge upon particulars, for shewing the reasonableness of that judgement; I must be content with recommending a careful and impartial attention to the observations of the writers, to whom I have referred. However, I may by and by have an opportunity to mention a few thoughts, beside what I have already said, for removing difficulties, and answering objections.

3. Eusebius says, "that many thoughtful men among the Jews were of opinion, that the death of James was the cause of the siege of Jerusalem, and that it was owing to nothing else but the wickedness committed against him, and that Josepbus says the same."

Origen speaks to the like purpose, as we have seen. But not quite so strongly. The same is said by Jerome more than once. I mean in (c) his

(b) Nec diffiteor nonnulla vel ab Hegesippo profita, vel ab aliis inferta, quae parum probabilia videantur. Sed totam ipfam Historiam nego properea damnandam esse. Petav. Animad. ad Epiph. H. 78. n. iii. p. 332.

(c) Tradit enim Josepbus, tanta eum sanctitatis suiffa et celebratissim in populo, ut propter ejus necem creditum sit, subversam Hierosolymam. De V. I. cap. 2. Vid. et cap. 13.
his book of Illustrious Men, and (d) also elsewhere. But neither he, nor Eusebius expressly say, in what place of Josephus. Which may make us think, that they borrowed this from Origen. Nor does Origen inform us, in what Work of Josephus those things were said, though he has mentioned them several times. Which may dispoze us to think, that they were no where expressly in Josephus.

4. Eusebius proceeds, and says, that in the xx. book of his Antiquities Josephus had related the death of James in a passage, which he there transcribes. Which passage is still in the works of Josephus. And what is there said, may be very true, for the most part: "that (c) Ananus the younger, being High-Priest, and a man of an haughty and enterprizing temper, when there was no Roman Governour in Judea, convened a Council, and had some flonied to death, as transgressors of the laws: and that many of the most discreet and moderate men among the Jews were offended at this proceeding: forasmuch as whilst Judea was in the state of a province, the High-Priest had no right to call the Council together, without leave, and they feared, that this action would be resented by the Emperor." All this, I say, is very likely. Nevertheless those words, James, the brother of him, who is called Christ, have been suspected to be an interpolation. And, probably, (f) are so. Supposing (g) those words to be an interpolation, we can gather no more from that passage, than that Ananus did illegally condemn several persons to death, as transgressors of the Jewish laws. But who they were, or whether any of them were Christian, or not, cannot be determined with certainty.

5. Eusebius supposeth, that this passage of Josephus confirms the account given by Hegesippus: whereas (b) it appears, on the other hand, very difficult

(e) Facile quidem crediderim Jerusolymitanos proceres graviter tulisse, quod synedrium sua autboritate infituisse, cum dudum jus gladii a Romanis Judaeis esse eroptum: quod iterum inconfulto Caesar ab Anano usurpatum timebant, ne genti sua gravi forfeta poena luendam esse. Sed quae de Jacobo, Jesu, qui Christus dicebatur, fratre, habentur, merum adjuntum male feriati Christiani esse videntur, Qua de re alibi diximus. Cleric. ubi supp. §. ii. p. 415. Conf. ejufd. Ars Crit. Part. 3. sect. i. cap. 14. num. xi.

(f) See the Credibility. &c. Part. i. B. i. ch. 2. §. xi. p. 163. . . . 165. the third edition. See here likewise not. (e) p. 50.

(g) See Dr. Bonfons History of St. James. Sec. ii. p. 12. the second edition.

Secundo, qui idem habent narrationi Hegesippi, eos oportet, aut Josephum falsa arguer, aut suspe&um habere hunc locum, quo res publica Jerusolymae gella, adeoque notissima, aliter narratur: ut mirari subeatis, ab Eusebio Josephi et difficult to reconcile them. I do not perceive Hegesippus to say any thing of Ananus, the High-Priest. Nor has he expressly mentioned the Sad-ducees, of which see Ananus was. Nor does Hegesippus say a word of the Council of the Jews. And as the punishment of stoning, when or-dered by magistrates, was generally inflicted on men out of the city; it is probable, that they who were put to death by the procurement of Ananus, suffered without Jerusalem. But according to Hegesippus, James died at the temple, or near it, and was buried not far off from the place, where he had expired.

6. Since what is said of James in the passage of Josephus, is justly sus-pected to be an interpolation, it ought not to be regarded. Learned men of late times find (i) it very difficult to determine, how James died. But that difficulty, as seems to me, is much increased by paying too much regard to a passage, the genuineness of which is far from being certain. Josephus, indeed, is an older author than Hegesippus, and he is an historian of good credit. But we should be first assured, that the account is his. If a passage, or part of a passage, has been inserted in his works, and there is good reason to think it not his; it should be disregarded, and stand for nothing.

If we once set aside that passage, we may soon come to a determina-tion concerning the manner of James's death. That James had suffered martyrdom at Jerusalem, was the general persuasion of Christians in the time of Eusebius, and before, as we plainly perceive. Two ancient Christian writers of the second centurie assure us, that his death was compleated by the blow of a fuller's pole, with which they are wont to beat wet cloths. And Hegesippus, in particular, and at large, relates, that his death was effected in a tumultuous manner. The tumult began at the temple. Where the Scribes and Pharisees, and other Jews, entred into discourse with James. He standing upon some eminence, which Hegesippus calls ἀριθμόν, and we now generally render a battle-ment, or pinnacle, openly declared, and argued, that Jesus was the Christ, or the expected Messiah, and that his doctrine contained full instruction, how men may be saved, and obtain eternal life. At which some leading men among the Jews were much offended. They then laid hold of him; and perhaps dragged him out of the temple. Some of the people threw stones at him. And though he earnestly prayed to God in the behalf of those who abused him, they persisted in their abuses, till one struck him with a long pole, which put an end to his life.

St. John has recorded two instancies of the Jews taking up stones to throw at our Lord, when he was teaching in the temple. Ch. viii. 59. and ch. x. 31. . . 46. The first is in these words: Then took they up stones to cast at him. But Jesus hid himself, and went out of the temple, going through the midst of them, and passed by. They took up stones to cast at him. And if our Lord had not saved himself by a miraculous exert-ion of power, they would have then killed him. Divine Providence not interposing in a like manner, when a like attempt was made upon James, he fell a sacrifice to the rage of the unbelieving part of the Jewish people at Jerusalem.

Nor ought it to be thought exceeding strange, or absolutely unaccountable, that some Scribes and Pharisees, or other Jews, should gather about James at the temple, and ask his opinion concerning Jesus, though they knew it very well already: or that they should come to him with pretenses of great respect, and assurances of paying a regard to his judgment. For many like things are recorded in the Gospels. Which every one is able to recollect. I shall therefore take particular notice only of that second instance, mentioned by St. John, of their taking up stones to throw at our Lord. John x. 22. ... 31. And it was at Jerusalem, the feast of the Dedication. ... And Jesus walked in the temple, in Solomon's porch. Then came the Jews round about him, and said unto him, How long dost thou make us to doubt? If thou be the Christ, tell us plainly. Jesus answered them: I told you, and ye believed not. The works that I do in my Father's name, they bear witness of me. ... Then the Jews took up stones again to stone him. They came to Jesus, and desired an answer to a question, that had been answered before. But they pretend now to desire, it should be answered in the plainest and fullest manner. Nevertheless they could not hear the answer with patience.

I said just now, that two ancient writers of the second centurie, Clement and Hegesippus, assure us, that the death of James had been compleated by a fuller's pole, after he had been thrown off from the temple. I suppose this must have been the opinion also of Eusebius, who has taken notice of these things, and of other ancient Christians. It is the account, which (k) Jerome gives of the death of James, in his article, in the book of Illustrious Men, and likewise (l) elsewhere. The fame is said by (m) Epiphanius.

Let this suffice for the circumstances, and the manner of the death of James.

VI. The time of the death of James may be determined without much difficulty. He was alive, when Paul came to Jerusalem at the Pentecost in the year of Christ 58. And it is likely, that he was dead, when St. Paul wrote the epistle to the Hebrews, at the beginning of the year 63. Theodoret (n) upon Hebr. xiii. 7. supposeth the Apostle there to refer to the martyrdoms of Stephen, James, the brother of John, and James the Just. According to Hegesippus the death of James happened about the time of Passover, which might be that of the year 62. And if Jesus was then dead, and Albinus not arrived, the province was without a Governor. Such a season

(k) Quo cum præcipitatus de pinna templi, contra stat cruribus, adhuc semivivus ... fullonis suite, quo ueda vestimenta extorqueri solent, in cerebro percussus interiti. De V. I cap. 2.

(m) Hær. 78. num. xiv. p. 1046.

(n) Theod. Tom. 3. p. 459.
season left the Jews at liberty to gratify their licentious, and turbulent disposition. And they were very likely to embrace it. We may therefore very reasonably place this event at that juncture.

And it is now the general opinion of learned men, that James died about that time. Pearson (o) who seems to admit the genuineness of the whole passage of Josephus, placeth the death of James in the year 62. Him Mill (p) follows. Le Clerc, who disputes the genuineness of those words, that relate to James, allows, that (q) he might dye about that time. This also is agreeable to Tillemont's (r) computation. And I refer to (s) Valerius.

VII. It still remains, that we consider, on what account he was called the Lord's brother, and whether he be the same as James the son of Alpheus.

James, as we have seen, is called by St. Paul the Lord's brother. Gal. i. 19. All Christian writers in general speak of him in the like manner. The question is, in what sense he was so.

That James was not the son of Marie, or our Lord's brother by nature, has been well argued by Christians in former times, both (t) Latins, and (u) Greeks, from our Lord's words upon the cross, recorded John xix. 26. 27. where he recommends the care of his mother to John: requiring her to consider him, as her son, and him to take care of her, as his mother.

And indeed it has been the opinion of all Christians in general, that Marie was always a virgin, and that she never had any children by Joseph. We must therefore inquire, in what respect this James was our Lord's brother, and some others his brothers, or sisters.

Eusebius, in a chapter quoted some while ago, in the first of the second book of his Ecclesiastical Historie, without hesitation says, "that (x) James was said to be the Lord's brother, because he also was called the son of Joseph. And Joseph was reckoned his father, because the virgin Marie was espoused to him."

Origen

(p) Prolegom. num. 56.
(q) H. E. An. 62. num. iii.
(r) S. Jacque le Mineur. art. vii. in.
(s) Vales. Anot. ad Euseb. l. 2. cap. 23. p. 41.
(u) Εἰ δὲ γὰρ δὲ τεκνὰ τῆς μαρίας, κύριος ὑπὸ τῶν αὐτῆς, τῶν λόγως παρειδοῦσι τὴν μαρίαν τῶν ἱωάννης, κύριος τῶν ἱωάννης τὴν μαρίαν: Εὐρυπ. Hær. 78. num. x. p. 1042. C.
(v) Εἰ γὰρ ἐγὼ αὐτῷ, κύριος ἐν ταῖς γυναικεῖς ἑαυτῷ, σῶς ὡς ἀπερατοτόν αὐτίν, κύριος ἔχων τὴν, τῷ ἔκτῃ συρατίθεται, κύριος καὶ αὐτῷ οἱ τῆς ἱωάννης ἐκείνης, Χρυσότ. in Matt. hom. 5. T. 7. p. 77.
(x) Tōte δὴ κύριος ἐκατοθάνει τῷ τῷ κυρίῳ λεγόμενον αὐδαρφόν, ὥστε κύριος τοῦ ωδοτός ὕπομανος τειχεῖσθαι τῷ δὲ χειστὶ πατὴρ ὕπωκρίνῳ, ὥς μνηπευθεῖ αὐτῷ συμβαίνεισκός. x. λ. L. 2. c. 1. p. 38. B.
Origen (y) in passage also cited (z) above, says, that the brethren of Jesus were the sons of Jesus by a former wife, who had cohabited with him before Marie. And he mentions it as supported by an ancient tradition. This was the opinion (a) of Epiphanius, and of many (b) ancient writers, both Greeks and Latins.

Jerome, in his article of this person, in his catalogue of Ecclesiastical Writers, says: "James (c) who is called the Lord's brother, forenamed the Just, was, as some think, the son of Jesus by another wife, but, as seems to me, the son of Marie, sister to our Lord's mother, mentioned by John, in his Gospel. John xix. 25." And in his book against Helvidius he delivers it as his opinion, that (d) those called our Lord's brethren in the Gospels, were so named, as they were cousins, or relations. He speaks to the like purpose also (e) in his Commentarie upon Matt. xii. 49. 50.

This opinion was at length embraced by Auguflin. In his Exposition of the epistle to the Galatians, writ about the year 394. he speaks dubiously, saying, "that (f) James was the Lord's brother, as he was the son of Jesus by a former wife, or else as he was related to his mother Marie." But in works, writ afterwards, he continually says, that (g) our Lord's brethren were relations of his mother Marie.

The

(z) See before. p. 374.
(c) Jacobus qui appellatur frater Domini, cognomento Justus, ut nonnulli exiftimant, Joseph ex alia uxore, ut mihi videtur, Marie fororis mater Domini, cujus Ioannes in libro suo meminit, filius. De V. I. cap. 2.
(g) Fratres ejus fìc accipite, fìc nonnìs. Non enim novum est quod auditis. Confanguinei virgins Marie fraters Domini dicebantur. Scriptura tamen
The former, as appears from the authors just cited, was the more ancient opinion. Nor does Jerome allege any before him who held the opinion mentioned as his own. Indeed he seems to have been the first, who said, that our Lord’s brethren were the sons of Marie, his mother’s sifter, and therefore only cousins or relations. But when he advanced this notion, he (b) was inclined to think Joseph also a virgin. As has been well observed by (i) G. J. Vossius.

However Jerome’s opinion has prevailed very much of late. I suppose, it may be that (k) of the Romanists in general. It was also the opinion of (l) Lightfoot. It is likewise embraced by (m) Witius, and (n) Lampe, and (o) many other Protestants. But Valesius, among the Romanists, in his Annotations upon the above cited chapter of Eusebius, says, he (p) thinks, that James was the son of Joseph by a former wife.

Et Loth frater Abraham dicitur, cum patruus ejus effet Abraham. Ex quâ vocabuli confundundae etiam fratres Domini vocantur in Evangelio, non utique quos Maria virgo pepererat, sed ejus confanguinitate omnes propinquui. Contr. Faust. l. 22. cap. 35. T. 8.

(b) Tu dicis, Mariam virginem non permansisse. Ego mihi plus vindico, etiam ipsum Joseph virginem fuisse per Mariam, ut ex virginitatis conjugio virgo filius naferetur. Adv. Helvid. Tom. 4. p. 142. in.

(p) Ait igitur Eusebiius, Jacobum, qui in Evangelio et epifola Pauli frater Domini dicitur, filium fuiffe Josephi ex aliâ conjugé, quam Josephus ante Mariam sibi sociaverat. Cum Eusebio confentit Epiphanius... Gregorius Nyssenus... sed Hieronymus in libro de Scriptoribus Ecclefiaflcis Jacobum hunc idecirco fratrem Domini appellatum effe exilimatum, quod fìlius effet Mariae, fororis fratris Domini... Multa quidem de hoc argumento differuit Baronius in Annalibus. Mihi tamen verior videtur opinio eorum, qui Jacobum,
The same opinion has been asserted by several among the Protestants, as (q) G. J. Vossius, and (r) Bajnag, and (s) Cave, in his Lives of the Apostles, writ in English. Nor does it appear, that he had abandoned his first judgement, when (t) he wrote his Historia Literaria.

I likewise have for a long time been much inclined to the same opinion. And have composed an argument upon the question. But I have laid it aside, supposing it to be rather too prolix, and too intricate, to be inserted in this place. And after all, perhaps some might think, that the argument does not afford a compleat solution of all difficulties and objections. I therefore enter not at present into any dispute about it, but leave every one to judge as he sees good.

VIII. Whether James was the son of Joseph by a former wife, or the son of Marie, wife of Cleophas, sister to Marie, our Lord's mother, or otherwise near-ly related to her, he was an Apostle. I think, it was clearly proved at the beginning of this chapter from the New Testament, that James, called the Lord's Brother, was an Apostle in the highest accep-tation of the word. Consequently, he must be James the son of Alpheus, or Cleophas. For those names seem to be one, differently writ.

But how he was so, is made out differently. They who say, that those called our Lord's brethren were sons of Cleophas, husband of Marie, related to our Lord's mother, seem to have here no difficulty. But they who Fuit enim Jacobus filius Josephi, ac proinde oriundus ex flirpe David. Id. in Annot. ad l. 2. cap. 23. p. 40.

(q) Voss. de Gen. J. C. cap. vi.

(r) Bajnag. ann. ante Chrift. 6. num. xxviii. et xxix.

(t) "He was the son, (as we may probably conjecture,) of Joseph, afterwards husband to the blest virgin, and his first wife. Hence reputed our Lord's brother, in the same sense, that he was reputed the son of Joseph. . . Jerome, and some others, will have Christ's brethren so called, because sons of Mary, cousin-german, or, according to the custom of the Hebrew language, sister to the virgin Mary. But Eusebius, Epiphanius, and the far greater part of the ancients, (from whom, especially in matters of fact, we are not rashly to depart,) make them the children of Joseph by a former wife. And this seems most genuine and natural, the Evangelists seeming very express and accurate in the account which they give of them. Is not this the carpenter's son? Is not his mother called Mary? and his brethren, James, and Joseph, and Simon, and Jude? . . Matt. xiii. 55. 56. By which it is plain, that the Jews understood these persons not to be Christ's kinsmen only, but his brothers, the same carpenter's sons, having the same relation to him that Christ himself had: though they indeed had more. Christ being but his reputed, they his natural sons." And what follows. The Life of James the Less. num. 2.

who suppose our Lord's brethren to have been sons of Joseph by a former wife, are somewhat embarrassed. However, I just observe, that the account, given by (u) Epiphanius, is this. Cleophas and Joseph were brothers. The former died without issue, and Joseph raised up seed to his brother. Accordingly, James being the first-born of Joseph, was called the son of Cleophas. In like manner speaks (x) Theophylact. But, as before said, I do not now form any debate about this.

That James, called our Lord's brother, is the same as he, who in the catalogues of the Apostles is called the son of Alpheus, or Cleophas, is allowed by Epiphanius, Chrysostom, and Theophylact. Epiphanius says, that (y) James, by nature the son of Joseph, who was called the Lord's brother, and was an Apostle, was appointed the first Bishop of Jerusalem. Chrysostom in his comment upon Gal. i. 19, says, "that (z) Paul calls James the Lord's brother, giving him that honorable appellation, when he might have said the son of Cleophas, as he is called in the Gospels." Theophylact likewise says, "that (a) Paul calls him brother, by the way of honorable distinction: when he might have called him the son of Cleophas. Nor was he the Lord's brother according to the flesh, but only thought to be so." I mention no more ancient writers.

And that James, called the son of Alpheus in the catalogues of the Apostles, was one of those, who are called the Lord's brethren, I think, may be shewn from the Gospels, by comparing several texts together.

In all the catalogues of the twelve Apostles of Christ the four last mentioned are these. James the son of Alpheus, and Lebbeus, whose surname was Thaddeus, Simon the Canaanite, and Judas Iscariot, who also betrayed him. Matt. x. 3. 4. James the son of Alpheus, and Thaddeus, and Simon the Canaanite, and Judas Iscariot, which also betrayed him. Mark iii. 18. 19. James the son of Alpheus, and Simon called Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James, and Judas the brother of James. Acts i. 13.

Let us now compare the texts in the Gospels, where our Lord's brethren are named. Matt. xiii. 55. Is not this the carpenter's son? Is not his mother called Marie? and his brethren James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas? And Mark vi. 3. Is not this the carpenter, the son of Marie, the brother of James, and of Joses, and of Judah, and Simon?

(z) Πίθει ἐν τῷ κλοπτῷ: ἀκούει κλοπέτας καὶ ἰσχυρὰ ἀδελφοί. Τῷ κλοπτῷ ἀπεχομένῳ τελευτασίᾳ, ἢ ἰσχυρὰ ἐξαιρέσθην αἰών ἐπικράτεις, ἢ ἕτοις τετῶν, ἢ τῷ ἀλλῷ ἀντὶ ἀδελφῆς. κ. λ. Theoph. in Gal. i. 19.

(a) εἴδε μεν τῷ κλοπτῷ, καὶ καταραβίσταις εἰς ηῶς ἐκεῖνος ἅπαντα, καὶ εἰς τῷ ἀλλῷ, ὅτι ἐγένετο τὸ ἀδελφόν, καὶ ἀπορολήν ἑπίσκοπα περιμένειν, εἰς ἰσχυρὸς φυτεύσων ἰῶτα. κ. λ. Har. 29. n. iii.

(vii.) Εἰς γὰρ σημαίνει τῷ ἐλεγές ἢθελεν, καὶ εἰς περὶ γνωρίσματος τούτων ποιεῖται ἄλλοι, καὶ εἰς τῷ κλοπτῷ, ὅτι καὶ ἐκείνης ἑπείρον, ἐκείνης. Chr. in Gal. cap. i. 11. p. 678. E.

(x) Εἰδε ἔτι καὶ ἱκάκεαν. Μετὰ τιμηθεὶς ἔτι καὶ τοῦτο μίμηται, τῷ αδελφῷ τῷ κυρίῳ ἕτοι, ἔτι καὶ βασιλείᾳ ἀπολήπτεν καὶ ποιεῖ ἑκείνης εἰς ἐκείνης μεταφέρεται ἄλλος. τόν τιν ἐκ τοῦ κλοπτοῦ εἰδε γὰρ κατὰ συγκατάστασιν ἀδελφῷ ἃν τῷ κυρίῳ, ἀλλ' ἐνομόζοιτο. Theoph. in Gal. i. 19.
All these, except Joses, seem to have been Apostles. For must not the three Apostles, last mentioned before Judas Iscariot, in the first catalogues, and the three last mentioned, in the Acts, be three of the four called in the Gospels our Lord's brethren?

And I should choose to translate the texts of St. Luke, where the Apostles are named, somewhat differently from what is generally done, in this manner. James the son of Alpheus, and Simon Zebedee, and Judas, brethren of James: declaring, that both Simon, and Judas, were brethren of James, the son of Alpheus, before named. A word must be supplied. And the coherence leads me to think, brethren more proper than brother.

By all which we are led to conclude, that James, several times mentioned in the Acts, and St. Paul's Epistles, is the same, who in the catalogues of the Apostles is called James the son of Alpheus. For James, mention by St. Paul is called the Lord's brother, and plainly appears to be an Apostle. Consequently, he is James, the son of Alpheus, mentioned in all the catalogues of the Apostles of Christ.

Wall, in his notes upon John vii. at the beginning says: "These brethren and kinsfolk of our Lord, as they were but mean persons, so also they were some of the backwaerdst to believe in him. . . . They that are most usually called his brethren were James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas. . . . Two of these, James and Judas, some learned men think to have been two of the Apostles. And there were two Apostles of those names that were brethren. But this place, if they be of those that are meant in it, is a strong argument against that opinion. For these brethren did hardly yet believe in him. But the Apostles did. This was but half a year before he suffered."

Upon which I would observe. When St. John says ch. vii. 5. For neither did his brethren believe in him: he does not intend to say, that they had not faith in him. Grotius's comment appears to me very right. "The (b) meaning is not, that they did not believe at all: but that they did not believe, as they should."

Learned men are certainly in the right, when they say, that some of Lord's brethren were Apostles. And it seems to me, that all those, who in the Gospels are called our Lord's brethren, had early and always an affection and esteem for him. This may be perceived from several places in the Gospels, as Matt. xii. 46. Mark iii. 31. Luke viii. 19. See also John ii. 12. And in time they all believed in him, and that rightly, as the Messiah. St. Luke, in the historie of things after our Lord's ascension, Acts i. 13. 14. having mentioned the names of the Apostles, adds: These all continued with one accord in prayer and supplication, with the women, and Marie the mother of Jesus, and with his brethren.

And St. Paul 1 Cor. ix. 5. speaks of brethren of the Lord, not Apostles, who labored in spreading the Gospel in the world.

They, of whom St. John speaks, had worldly views and expectations. They were deficient, that Jesus, if he were indeed the Messiah, should go to Jerusalem, and set up his kingdom in a glorious manner. Even after this several, who certainly were Apostles, betrayed great ignorance, or weak faith, or wrong apprehensions, by their discourses, and questions put.

(b) Non omnino, non ut oportebat. Grot. in loc.
put to our Saviour. Of Thomas see John xiv. 5. Of Philip see ver. 8. . . 11. and of Judas ver. 22. 23.

Those brethren of our Lord proposed, that he should haste to Jerusalem, to the feast of Tabernacles, nigh at hand. . . . Jesus said to them: My time is not yet come. But your time is always ready. The world cannot hate you. But me it hateth, because I testify of it, that the works thereof are evil. Go ye up unto this feast. I go not up yet unto this feast. For my time is not yet full come. ch. vii. 6. 7. 8. It is manifest, that he taxeth their carnalitie and worldlimindedneffe. As if he had said, "It is (c) not proper for me to go up to this feast, as yet, nor till after it is begun. But you may go up at any time, since you have done little or nothing to make the Jews unfriendly to you, as I have done: who by the strictneffe of my doctrine, and the freedom of my reproofs, have provoked many to a great degree."

It follows in ver. 9. 10. When he had said these things unto them, he abode still in Galilee. But when his brethren were gone up, then went he also up unto the feast, not openly, but as it were in secret. These words may afford, in the opinion of some, another objection to the supposition, that these brethren of our Lord were Apostles. But to me the objection appears not of much moment. Some of these brethren might nevertheless be among the Apostles, and go up to the feast before him. For our Lord seems not to have been attended by all his Apostles in that journey. So much is implied in the manner, in which it was performed. He went not openly, but as it were in private: in a more private manner, than he had usually done, and attended by a small number of his Apostles only, several of them having gone up to Jerusalem before him, upon occasion of the approaching solemnity.

Chrysostom seems not to have doubted, that some of the brethren of our Lord, here spoken of, were Apostles, or at least among his disciples. For discoursing on John vii. 3. 4. 5. he says: "Observe (d) with me the power of Christ. Of them who uttered these words, one was the first Bishop of Jerusalem, even the blessed James, of whom Paul says: Other of the Apostles saw I none, save James the Lord's brother. And Judas also is said to have been a wonderful man." So says Chrysostom, who did not receive the epistle of St. Jude, so far as we can perceive, though he did that of St. James.

IX. This James is called by St. Mark, the left, ch. xv. Why called 40. There were also women looking on afar off. Among whom was Marie Magdalen, and Marie the mother of James the left, and foses, and Salem. That hereby is meant James, the Lord's brother, and the son of Alpheus, is generally suppos'd, and I think reasonably. He can be no other, because foses is presently afterwards mentioned, as his brother, agreeably to other places of the Evangelists, where our Lord's brethren are named, Matt. xiii. 55. Mark vi. 3. But interpreters are not agreed, why he was so called.

(a) Συνέκρίνετο τῷ χριστῷ τὸν διάρκειαν. ἀπὸ γὰρ τῶν ταῦτα λεγόντων τὰ γέματα, ὡς πρότερον τῶν ἑρωολογίων ἑπίσκοποι γέγονα, ὁ μακάριος ἱεραρχὴς ἦν . . . Λιγνηταί δὲ εἶ ἡ ἱεράς ἄναμματος τῇ γέγονας. In Jo. hom. 48. T. 8. p. 284. D.
It has been thought, that (e) herein is a reference to James the son of Zebedee, and brother of John, who had been beheaded by Herod in the year of Christ 44. And Lightfoot says, "that (f) James, or Jacob, is "commonly called James the great, in distinction from James the son of "Alpheus, who is called the less, not for any dignity, or superiority of "apostleship that he had above the other, but either because this James "was the elder, or because of the singular privacy, that Christ admitted "him to with himself, as he also did Peter and John."

Here are several reasons of this denomination, but though Lightfoot says, James the son of Zebedee was commonly called James the great, there is no instance of it in the New Testament.

It may be observed, that the less, in the original, is not a comparative, but a positive, the little, τὸ μικρόν. And so Beza has translated. Maria Jacobi parvi et Jofe mater. However in the Latin Vulgate it is Jacobi minoris. And it is evident that (g) Jerome so understood the word.

Gregorie Nyffen (h) thought, he was called the less, as not being one of the twelve Apostles. Which reason I cannot admit, because I am persuaded he was an Apostle, if he was the Lord's brother. Nor do I perceive in the New Testament more than two of this name.

Some say, he was so called, because he was the younger of the two Apostles of this name. But of this there is no proof, nor probability. For James, the son of Alpheus, must have been his father's first-born, and may have been as old, or older than James the son of Zebedee.

Some have conjectured, that (i) he might have been so called on account of his stature. Which conjecture is favoured by the literal sense of the word in the positive degree, James the little. And some may be apt to think, that this was one reason, why the Jews at the temple, according to Hegesippus, placed him on an eminence, that he might be heard by all the people, when assembled in great numbers. So Zacheus, being little of stature, and there being a great crowd, climbed up into a sycamore tree, to see Jesus, as he passed by. Luke xviii. Perhaps, this is as likely a conjecture, as any.

Nevertheles I shall mention one more. He might be so called, on account of his inferiority, in comparison of the other James. It is mani

(e) Puto ita ditum inter Apostolos ad discriem Jacobi Zebedaida, Grot. ad Marc. xxv 40.

(f) The third Part of the Harmony of the four Evangelists. Vol. i. p. 634.

(g) Si non est Apostolus, sed nescio quis Jacobus, quomodo est frater Domini putandus? Et quomodo tertius ad distinctionem majoris appellabi nifeft, that during the time of our Lord's abode on this earth, Peter, and James, and John, the two sons of Zebedee, were the most eminent and considerable of the disciples. They were the most favored, and were admitted by our Lord to some special measure of confidence and freedom. And it is observable, that in all the catalogues of the Apostles James the son of Alphaeus, and Simon the Canaanite, or Zelotes, and Judas, are the last mentioned, except Judas Iscariot. Possibly these three, whom I suppose to have been our Lord's brethren, were the latest called to be Apostles, and for a while were defective in faith, and understanding, or not so considerable, and eminent, as some of the other Apostles, particularly, James the son of Zebedee. The question put to our Lord by Judas, one of them, recorded in John xiv. 22. seems a remarkable instance of the flowness of his understanding in the things of religion, under all the advantages, which he had enjoyed.

James therefore might be called the left, by way of distinction from another of the same name, who had been called to be an Apostle before him, and was more eminent. And yet the appellation carried not in it any reflection. This coincides with some things said by Lightfoot above.

However, it is mentioned only as a conjecture, to be considered by those, who are disposed to do it. For I am not able to say with assurance, what was the ground and reason of this appellation.

Surnamed the Just, and other Marks of Respect. X. We have seen divers proofs of the respect shown to this person, which any one is able to recollect, and therefore they need not to be repeated. However, I shall here take notice of a few such things.

1. He is never called Justus, or the Just, in the New Testament. But he seems to have been so called by many even in his life-time, as well as afterwards. Eusebius says, that (k) he was called the Just by the ancients on account of the eminence of his virtue. He is several times so called in the passages of Clement of Alexandria, quoted from Eusebius (l) some while agoe. Hegesippus says, he (m) had been called the Just by all from our Saviour's time to his own: and afterwards, that (n) on account of his eminent virtue he was called the Just, and Oblias. He likewise says, that (o) the Jews at the temple called him the Just, as may be seen in the account of his death, transcribed above. Jerome (p) in the beginning of his article of this person says, "that James the Lord's brother was surnamed the Just."

2. In

(k) Τύτον δὲ ἂν αὐτὸν ἰάμενον, δὴ καὶ δικαιοὶ ἵππικον ἵππαλας ὑὰρ εἰς ἱκαλεῖν εὐπρεπίματα. . . . Eus. H. E. I. 2. c. 1. p. 38. B.
(l) p. 371. 372.
(m) Οἱ δὲ ἀνωτάτως ὑπὸ χριστὸν δίκαιος ἀπὸ τῶν τῷ κυρίῳ χρῖσιν μίχρα καὶ δικαιοῦν Ἄρη. Euseb. I. 2. c. 23. p. 63. D.
(n) Διὰ γῆς τοῦ υπέροδον τῆς χριστιανοῦν ἀντὶ ἵκαλεῖτο δίκαιος καὶ ὀμιλια. Ap. p. 64. A.
(o) . . . καὶ ἤκραζεν ἀντὶς, καὶ ὑπον. Δικαίος, οὑ χριστὸς πειθοῦσας ὀμιλεῖτον. Ib. D. Vid. et p. 65. A. et B.
(p) Jacobus, qui appellatur frater Domini, cognomento Justus. De V. I. cap. 2.
The Epistle of St. James.

The Epistle of St. James.

I. The Evidences of it's Genuinnesse. II. When writ. III. To whom.

AVING now done all I am able for clearing up the historie of this person, I come to consider the epistle ascribed to him.

Here I would observe the evidences of it's genuinnesse, and authority, the time when, and the people, to whom it was writ.

I. And

(g) Hic autem Jacobus episcopus Jerusolymorum primus fuit, cognomento
Julius: vir tantæ sanætatis et rumoris in populo, ut fimbriam vestimento ejus

(r) Τὸ γὰρ ίακωβ θεόν τον πεσότην τος Ιερουσαλήμ ισκηκτικός ἐν ἐκκλησίας... τὸ δὲ γενο Ἀπολαγήματος ὃς τοὶ κατὰ διαδοχὴν περιέποτες ἀδιλφοὶ. Ιακ. H. E. I. 7. c. 19.
I. And for the first point. This epistle seems to be alluded, or referred to, by Clement Bishop of Rome. Vol. i. p. 95. 97. and by Hermas, p. 128. 131. It is not expressly quoted by Ireneæus. Nor are there in him any indisputable references to it. Vol. i. p. 373. 378. Nor do we perceive it to be quoted by Clement of Alexandria. Vol. ii. p. 504. 508. and 511. 515. nor by Tertullian. p. 613. 616. This epistle is quoted once or twice by Origen, but, as of doubtfull authority, or not received by all. Vol. iii. p. 262. 264. We do not observe any notice to be taken of this epistle by Cyprian. Vol. iv. p. 828. It seems to be referred to by Commodian, a Latin writer about the year 270. Vol. v. p. 124. It is probable, that it was received by the Manicheans, and Paulicians. Vol. vi. p. 337. 338. and p. 428. 432. It seems to be referred to by Lactantius, vii. p. 188.

From a passage of Eusebius, cited in the (a) preceding chapter, it appears, that in his time, the beginning of the fourth century, all the seven epistles called catholic, were well known, and received by many. And he expressly says, that the epistle of James was the first of them. And to the like purpose again in another passage to be here taken notice of by us. Having given a particular account of the death of James, called the Just, and the brother of the Lord, and Bishop of Jerusalem, he concludes the chapter in this manner. "Thus far, (b) says he, concerning James, "who is said to be the writer of the first of the epistles called catholic. "But it ought to be observed, that it is spurious: [meaning, that it was "a contradicted book of scripture, or at the utmost, that it was doubted "of, or rejected by many:] Forasmuch as there are not many of the ancient writers, who have quoted it: as neither that called Jude's, another of the seven epistles called catholic. However we know, that "these also are commonly used [or publicly read] in most churches, to "gather with the rest."

This passage is very satisfactory. For it affurses us, who was the writer of this epistle: namely James, before spoked of, called the Lord's brother, surnamed the Just, who generally refided at Jerusalem. It also affures us, that though it had been doubted of by some, it was then generally received, and publicly read, in the assemblies of Christians. They who have leisure, and are curious, may see what was farther observed by us formerly relating to the opinion of Eusebius himself concerning this epistle, and the writer of it. Vol. viii. p. 150...

I only add here, that this epistle of St. James is one of the three catholic epistles received by the Syrian Christians, and by Chrysostom, and Theodoret. And that after the time of Eusebius, this and the other six catholic epistles, were received by all Greeks and Latins in general: and are in the catalogues of canonical scripture composed by Councils, and learned learned authors. As was shewn in a foregoing chapter. However, there might be still some few, who doubted of it's authority, especially in the Eaft, as was observed Vol. xi. p. 298. 299.

(a) See before. p. 364.

This epistle was received by Jerome, as was distinctly and largely shewn in his article. Vol. x. p. 125...129. Who in one place says: "The (c) apostles, James, Peter, John, Jude, write seven epistles, of few words, but full of fentence." It may nevertheless be worth the while to recollect here particularly what he says of it in his book of Illustrious Men, transcribed there at p. 125. "James, the Lord's brother... wrote but one epistle, which is among the seven catholic epistles. Which (d) too is said to have been published by another in his name. But gradually, in process of time it has gained authority. This is he, of whom Paul writes in his epistle to the Galatians. And he is often mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles."

Which likewise, says Jerome, is said to have been published by another in his name: that is, even that one epistle is said by some to be spurious, and not really writ by James, though it bears his name. But I do not believe, there is reason to think, that was ever said by any. And I am persuaded, that what Jerome says here is owing to a mistake of his, not rightly understanding Eusebius. Who, as may be remembered, says:
"This James is said to be the author of the first of the epistles called catholic. But (e) it ought to be observed, that it is spurious." By which Jerome understood Eusebius to say, that this epistle was fallly scribed to James, and was not his. Whereas Eusebius means no more, than that it was a contradicted book, not received by all as of authority: or at the utmost, that it was doubted of, or rejected by many. This I suppose to have been clearly shewn before. See Vol. viii. p. 112...121.
and also p. 155. 156. (A).

The reason, why this epistle was not received by all, I suppose to have been, that it was not certainly known, that James, the writer of it, was an Apostle. We have observed several ancient writers, who did not allow him to have that high character. There were two Apostles, of this name: James the son of Zebedee, and James the son of Alpheus.
That the writer of this epistle was not James the son of Zebedee, must have been evident. Nor was it certain, that he was the son of Alpheus.
Another reason of doubting of his apostleship may have been, that he was often called Bishop of Jerusalem, and said by some to have been appointed to that office by the Apostles. This also may have contributed to the doubt, whether he was one of the twelve Apostles of Christ.

Other reasons have been assigned in late ages, why some might hesitate about receiving this epistle as a part of canonical scripture. But those reasons are not to be found in the most early antiquity. Whereas we can plainly perceive, that not a few learned Christians

(c) Vol. x. p. 77.
(d) Quae et ipsa ab alio quodam sub nomine ejus edita asseritur.
(e) εἰς ὑπὸ τώρα υποθετεῖν. H. E. l. 2. cap. 23. p. 66. C.
(A) I likewise refer to Dr. Leonard Travell's Examination of the late new Text and Version of the N. T. Part. 2. ch. 2. p. 82. Who speaks to the like purpose.
tians of the first ages were not satisfied, the writer was an Apostle. Which must have occasioned a demur concerning the high authority of the epistle.

If this James was not one of the twelve Apostles, he was nevertheless a person of great distinction, as he was the Lord's brother, and resided many years at Jerusalem after our Lord's ascension, as president, or superintendent of the church there, and of the Jewish believers in Judea in general. Accordingly, Eusebius, who did not think this James to be one of the twelve Apostles, in his Commentary upon Isaiah, reckons fourteen Apostles, meaning Paul, and this James, though not equal to him. See Vol. viii. p. 153. 154. And Jerome likewise, in one place, formerly taken notice of, reckons this James, brother of the Lord, an additional Apostle with Paul, beside the twelve. Vol. x. p. 128.

But I think it manifest, that James, the Lord's brother, who resided at Jerusalem, several times mentioned in the Acts of the Apostles, and in St. Paul's epistles, was an Apostle, one of the twelve, and consequently, the same with him, who is called the son of Alpheus. And as this epistle has been all along ascribed to James, the Lord's brother, surnamed the Just, I receive it as a part of sacred scripture, and think, it ought to be so received.

When writ. II. Concerning the time of this epistle, there cannot be very different apprehensions.

Mill (f) says, it was writ before the destruction of Jerusalem, and a year or two before his own death, about the year 60. Which is also the opinion of (g) Fabricius.

But that appears to me rather too soon. If St. James suffered martyrdom in the year 62. I should be inclined to think, this epistle was writ in the beginning of that year, or in 61. and but a short time before his death.

Eusebius says: "When (h) Paul had appealed to Cesar, and had been sent to Rome by Feius, the Jews who had aimed at his death, being disappointed in that design, turned their rage against James, the Lord's brother, who had been appointed by the Apostles Bishop of Jerusalem." In like manner Tillemont adopting that thought, says: "St. Paul (i) having been sent to Rome, near the end of the year 60. by Feius, Governor of Judea, the Jews finding themselves not able to accomplish their design against him, turned their rage against James. Nevertheless they did not shew it, till eighteen months after, when Feius being dead, and Albinus, who succeeded him, not being yet arrived, the province was without a Governor."

That

(g) Bib. Gr. l. 4. cap. v. n. ix. Tom. 3. p. 165.

(h) H. E. l. 2. cap. 23. in.

That the Jews were much vexed, when Paul was sent to Rome, and had thus escaped out of their hands, is very reasonably supposed. But that their vexation upon that account was the occasion of the death of James, is mere conjecture. Nor does any thing like it appear in the accounts of his death, which Ensebius has transcribed from Hegesippus, and Josephus.

If I likewise may be allowed to mention a conjecture, (which is at least as probable, as that just taken notice of,) I should say, I am apt to think, that the death of James was partly occasioned by the offensive taken at his epistle: in which are not only sharp reprobations of the unbelieving Jews for the crimes committed by them, but also affecting representations of the dreadful calamities coming upon them. Chap. iv...1. 8. v. 1.

III. I am now to consider, to whom this epistle was sent.

Beza says, it (a) was sent to the believing Jews, dispersed all over the world. Cave (l) seems to say, to believing Jews chiefly. And (m) to the like purpose Fabricius. Gratius (n) says, to all the people of Israel living out of Judea. Wall's account of this epistle is this: "It (o) was written to such Jews, (being now Christians,) as were dispersed abroad out of Judea.... This epistle consists of general exhortations to piety, patience, and other moral virtues. It has twice or thrice mentioned our Saviour: but has nothing of his miracles, or teachings, or death, or resurrection, or our redemption by him: of which Paul's, and Peter's, and John's epistles are full."

To me it seems, that this epistle was writ to all Jews descendent of Jacob, of every denomination, throughout the world, in Judea, and out of it. For such is the inscription: James, a servant of God, and of the Lord Jesus Christ, to the twelve tribes, which are scattered abroad, greeting. No expression can be more general, than the twelve tribes. There is not any limitation, restraining it to Christians, or believers in Jesus. Nor does he with them grace or peace from Jesus Christ. It is only a general salutation, or greeting. Indeed he does not dissemble his own character. He calls himself a servant of God, and of the Lord Jesus Christ. He takes upon himself the character of a Christian, and, perhaps, of an Apostle. But he does not so characterize those, to whom he writes. Nor is there any Christian benediction at the end of the epistle.

Nor can I see, why the twelve tribes scattered abroad should not comprehend those of them in Judea, which were the peculiar charge of the

(a) fidelibus omnibus Judæis, cujuscunque tribus sint, per orbem terrarum dispersis. Beza. ad cap. i. 1.
(m) ad Judæos maxime Christianissimum amplexos, qui usquequaque dispersi degebant. Ubi supr. p. 160.
(n) Id efl, gente Israelitica qui erant extra Judæam. Gr. ad loc.
(o) Crit. Notes upon the N. T. p. 144.
the writer. And divers things in the epistle seem to belong to them especially. He means therefore the people of the twelve tribes every where, in Judea, and out of it.

A large part of the epistle is suitable to Christians. But there are divers paragraphs, that must be understood, to be addressed to unbelieving Jews, particularly ch. v. 1. . . . 6. as is generally allowed. I think likewise, that the first ten verses of ch. iv. are addressed to unbelieving Jews. Where it is said: Whence come wars and fightings among you? Come they not hence, even of your lusts, that war in your members? Ye lust, and have not. Ye kill, and desire to have, and cannot obtain. Ye fight, and war. These things could not be said to Christians. They must relate to those disturbances, which, some while before the Roman war broke out, were every where among the unbelieving Jews.

I am of opinion, that this way of writing was chosen, to abate the offence, which the reproofs, and exhortations, and warnings of the epistle were likely to occasion. St. James writes in a general way. Let all apply to themselves those things, which belong to them. Wall's note upon ch. v. 6. is to this effect: "This is spoken, not to the Christians, but to some rich Heathens, or infidel Jews, that oppressed and murdered them. No Christians of those times had any wars, or fightings, such as ch. iv. 1. or killing, as here: viz. not in the time of James, Bishop of Jerusalem.

And says Whitby upon ch. iv. 1. "Whence come wars? This epistle seems to have been writ about the 8. of Nero, and the 62. of Christ, the year before the death of James: before which time the Jews had great wars and fightings, not only with their neighbours, [See note upon Matt. xxiv. 6.] but even among themselves, in every city and familie, faith Josephus: nor only in Judea, but in Alexandria, and Syria, and many other places." A very proper note upon the text, as seems to me. And what he says upon the following verses of that chapter, and upon ch. v. 1. . . . 6. and in his preface to the epistle fec.t. v. and vi. deferves also attentive regard. Where indeed he expressly says: "Since James writes "to the whole twelve tribes, I doubt not but those of Palestine must be included."

Mr. Pyle (p) has spoken clearly to the like purpose in the preface to his Paraphrase of this epistle.

I shall now transcribe a part of Venerable Bede's note upon the beginning of this epistle. From the words, scattered abroad, he is led to think of what is said Acts viii. 1. that upon occasion of the persecution against the church at Jerusalem after the death of Stephen, they were all scattered abroad

(p) These circumstances gave occasion to this Apostle, the Residentiarie of the circumcision in Judea, to endite this epistle, partly to the infidel, and partly to the believing Jews. . . . It was directed to the Jews and Jewish converts of the dispersion. Yet, as that to the Hebrews was intended for the general benefit of all the scattered tribes, though directed to the natives of the holy land: so, no doubt, this had an equal respect to them, over whom James immediately presided, in the special character of their Bishop." Pyle's Paraphrase. vol. ii. p. 290. 291.
abroad throughout the regions of Judea, and Samaria, except the Apostles, and says, "that (q) James writes this epistle to those who were scattered abroad, and suffered persecution for the sake of righteousness: nor to them only, but also to those, who though they had believed in Christ, were not careful to be perfect in good works, as what follows in the epistle plainly shews: and likewife to such as continued unbelieving, and to the utmost of their power persecuted those who believed." Which appears to me very right.

CHAP. XVIII.

ST. PETER.

I. His Historie to the Time of our Saviour's Ascension. II. To the Council of Jerusalem, in the year 49. III. He goes to Antioch, where He is re-proved by St. Paul for Dissimulation. IV. His Travels, and the Time of his coming to Rome. V. The Time of his Death. VI. Several Things, hitherto omitted, or but lightly touched upon, 1. His episcopate at Antioch.
2. his having been five and twenty Years Bishop of Rome. 3. his Children. 4. his Wife's Martyrdom. 5. his abscoding at Rome. 6. the Manner of his Crucifixion. VII. That he was at Rome, and suffered Martyrdom there.

I. "HE land of Palestine, says (a) Cave, at [Image 0x0 to 341x579]

and before the coming of our Blessed Saviour, was distinguished into three several provinces, Judea, Samaria, and Galilee. This last was divided into the Upper and the Lower. In the Upper, called also Galilee of the Gentiles, within the division, belonging to the tribe of Naphtali, stood Bethsaida, formerly an obscure and inconsiderable village, till lately reedified, (b) and enlarged by Philip the Tetrarch, and in honour of Julia daughter of Augustus called by him Julias. It was situated upon the banks of the sea of Galilee, called also the sea of Tiberias, and the lake of Gennesareth, which (c) was about forty furlongs in breadth, and a hundred in length, and had a wilderness on the other side,

(q) Legimus, occiso a Judæis B. Stephano, quia facta est in illa die perfe-cutio magna, in ecclesiâ, quæ est Hierosolymis, et omnes dispersi sunt per regiones Judeæ et Samariae, praeter Apostolos. His ergo dispersis, qui persecutionem passi sunt propter justitiam, mittit epîstolam. Nee solum his, verum etiam illis, qui percepsta fide Christi needam operibus per-fecuti esse curabant, sicut sequiæ epîstolæ plane testantur: necnon et eis, qui etiam fidei exercitis durabant, quin et ipsam in credentibus, quantum valuère, persequi ac perturbare fludebant. Bed. Expositor. super Jacob.

Epît.

(a) Life of St. Peter. Sect. i.

(b) Joseph. Antiq. l. 18. cap. 3. al. 2. in.

(c) Id. de B. J. l. 3. cap. 10. al. 18. side, called the desert of Bethsaida, whither our Saviour used often to retire."

At this place was born (d) Simon, surnamed Cephas, or Petros, Petrus, Peter, signifying a stone, or rock. He was a fisherman upon the forementioned lake, or sea: as was also, in all probability, his father Jonas, Jonah, or John. He had a brother, named Andrew. Which was the eldest of the two, is not certain. For concerning this there were different opinions among the ancients. Epiphanius (e) supposed Andrew to be the elder. But according to Chrysostom (f) Peter was the first-born. So likewise (g) Bede, and (h) Cassian, who even makes Peter's age the ground of his precedence among the Apostles. And Jerome himself has expressed himself in the like manner, saying, "that (i) the keys were given to all the Apostles alike, and the church was built upon all of them equally. But for preventing diffension, precedence was given to one. John might have been the person. But he was too young. And Peter was preferred upon account of his age."

St. John (k) has informed us of the first acquaintance of Simon Peter with Jesus: to whom he was introduced by his brother Andrew. He foundeth his own brother Simon, and faith unto him: We have found the Messiah. And he brought him to Jesus. And when Jesus beheld him, he said: Thou art Simon, the son of Jonas. Thou shalt be called Cephas.

Undoubtedly, they had been from the beginning among those, who are said to have looked for the kingdom of God, and waited for redemption in Israel. Andrew had received Jesus as the Messiah. And his brother Simon readily concurred in the same belief and profession. They had heard John, and, as may be supposed, had been baptised by him, as all Jews in general were. Being from his testimonia, and by personal conversation with Jesus convinced, that he was the Messiah, it is likely, that henceforward they often came to him, and heard him, and saw some of the miracles done by him. We may take it for granted, that they were present at the miracle at Cana in Galilee: it being expressly said, that Jesus and his disciples were invited to the marriage-feast in that place. John ii. 1. 2. It is also said ver. 11. This beginning of miracles did Jesus in

(d) John i. 44. (e) H. 51. num. xvii.
(f) Hom. in Matt. 58. al. 59. T. 7. p. 536. D.
(g) In Evang. Joann. cap. i.

(k) Cb. i. 35. . 42.
in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory. And his disciples believed on him: that is, were confirmed in the persuasion, that he was the Messiah.

The call of Andrew and Peter to a stated attendance on Jesus is recorded by (l) three Evangelists. Their father, Jonas, seems to have been dead. For there is no mention of him, as there is of Zebedee, when his two sons were called. It is only said of Andrew and Peter, that when Jesus called them, they left their nets, and followed him. At that time Jesus made them a magnificent promise. "Follow me, said he, and I will make you fishers of men." In time you will be qualified by me to "gain men, and to recover them, in great numbers, from ignorance "and error, follie and vice, and form them to just sentiments in reli- gion, and the practice of virtue."

From this time they usually attended on our Lord. And (m) when he completed the number of his Apostles, they were put among them.

Having before writ the historie of St. John at large, I need not be so particular in that of Peter, because these two Apostles were much together. However, I intend to take notice of the most remarkable things in his life, especially after our Saviour's ascension.

Simon Peter was married, when called by our Lord to attend upon him. And upon occasion of that alliance, as it seems, had removed from Bethsaida to Capernaum, where was his wife's familie. Upon (n) her mother our Saviour in a very gracious manner wrought a great miracle of healing.

And I suppose, that when our Lord left Nazareth, and came and dwelled at Capernaum, (as mentioned Matt. iv. 13.) he made Peter's house (o) the place of his usual abode, when he was in those parts. I think, we have a proof of it in the historie just taken notice of. When Jesus came out of the synagogue at Capernaum, he entered into Simon's house. Luke iv. 38. Comp. Mark i. 29. Which is well paraphrased by Dr. Clarke: "Now when Jesus came out of the synagogue, he went home to Peter's house." And there it was that the people resorted unto him in the evening. Luke iv. 40. Matt. viii. 16. Mark i. 32.

Another proof of this we have in a historie, which is in St. Matthew only. ch. xvii. 24. . . . 27. of our Lord's paying at Capernaum the tribute-money for the use of the temple, and his directing Peter, when he had found a piece of money, in the manner there prescrib'd, to pay it for both of them. The text is to this purpose. And when they were come to Capernaum, they that received the tribute-money, came to Peter, and said: Doth not thy master pay tribute? He saith: Yes. And when he was come into the house, Jesus prevented him. . . . The beginning of that account the house of Simon and Andrew. Mark i. 29.

Vol. II.
at ver. 24. is thus paraphrased by Dr. Clarke. "Now when they were " come home to Capernaum, where Jesus used to dwell, the officers, ap- " pointed to gather the yearly offering for the service of the temple, " came to Peter."

After the miracle of the five loaves, and two fishes, straitway Jesus conftained his disciples to get into a ship, and to go before him to the other side, while he fent the multitudes away. In their paffage they met with a con- tradic wind. In the fourth watch of the night, near morning, Jesus came toward them, walking on the sea. And there not being yet light enough, to know who he was, they were affrighted, thinking it had been an ap- parition, and cried out for fear. Jesus then fpake to them, and they knew him. After which follows a particular concerning Peter, related by St. Matthew only. "Peter (p) answered him, and faid: Lord, if it be thou, bid me come unto thee on the water. And he faid: Come. And when Peter was come down out of the ship, he walked on the water, to go to Jesus. But when he fhew the sea boifterous, he was afraid. And beginning to sink, he cried, faying: Lord, fave me. And immediately Jesus stretched forth his hand, and caught him. . . . And when he was come into the ship, the wind ceafed." Peter at first presumed too much upon the strength of his faith, and was forward to fhew his zeal. However, this muft in the end have been of use to confirm his faith. He had here great and fen- fible experience of the knowledge, as well as the power of Jesus. As soon as his faith failed, our Lord fuffered him to fink. And upon his calling for help, Jesus immediately stretched out his hand, and faved him.

The next day our Lord preached in the synagogue at Capernaum, as related by St. John, ch. vi. 24... 65. where many, who expected from the Messiah a worldly kingdom, were offended at his discourse. And it is faid ver. 66... 69. From that time many of his disciples, who had hitherto followed him, and profefled faith in him, went back, and walked no more with him. Then faid Jesus unto the twelve: Will ye alfo go away! Then Simon Peter anfwered him: Lord, to whom fhould we go? Thou haft the words of eternal life. And we know, and are sure, that thou art the Chrift, the Son of the living God.

Some time after this, when our Lord had an opportunity of private conversation with the disciples, he inquired of them, what men faid of him, and then, whom they thought him to be? Simon Peter anfwered, and faid: Thou art the Chrift, the Son of the living God. Matt. xvi. 13... 16. So far likewife in Mark viii. 27... 29. and Luke ix. 18... 20. Then follows in Matthew ver. 17... 19. And Jesus anfwered, and faid unto him: Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-Jona. For flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. That is: "It is not a partial affection for me, thy matter, nor a fond and incon- "fiderate regard to the judgements of others, for whom thou haft a re- "pect, that has induced thee to think thus of me. But it is a juft per- "fluation, formed in thy mind by observing the great works, which "thou haft feen me do by the power of God, in the confirmation of "my mission and doctrine." And I fay unto thee: Thou art Peter, and upon upon this rock will I build my Church. . . . And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven. By which many interpreters suppose, that (A) our Lord promised to Peter, that he should have the honour of beginning to preach the gospel, after his resurrection, to Jews and Gentils, and of receiving them into the Church. If so, that is personal. Nevertheless, what follows: And whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven. And whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven. This, I say, must have been the privilege of all the Apostles. For the like things are expressly said to them. Luke xxii. 29. 30. John xx. 21. 22. Moreover, all the Apostles concurred with Peter in the first preaching both to Jews and Gentils. As he was President in the college of the Apostles, it was very fit, and a thing of course, that he should be primarily concerned in the first opening of things. The confession, now particularly before us, was made by him. But it was in answer to a question, that had been put to all. And he spoke the sense of all the Apostles, and in their name. I suppose this to be as true in this instance, as in the other, before taken notice of, which is in John vi. 68. 69.

(p) Matt. xiv. 28... 31.

In the account, which St. John has given of our Saviour's washing the disciples feet, Peter's modesty and servour are conspicuous. John xiii. 1. 10.

When (q) the Jewish officers were about to apprehend our Lord, Peter having a sword, drew it, and smote a servant of the High-Priest, and cut off his right ear. Our Lord having checked Peter, touched the servant's ear, and healed him. So great is Jesus every where!

They that laid hold of Jesus, led him away to the house of Caiaphas. The rest of the disciples now forsook their Master, and fled. But Peter followed him afar off unto the High-Priest's palace, and went in, and sat with the servants, to see the end. Here Peter thrice disowned his Lord, peremptorily denying, that he was one of his disciples, or had any knowledge of him, as related by (r) all the Evangelists. For which he soon after humbled himself, and wept bitterly.

We do not perceive, that Peter followed our Lord any farther, or that he at all attended the crucifixion. It is likely, that he was under too

(A) Dr. Clarke is very singular in his paraphrase of that text. Matt. xvi. 18. "You shall be the first preacher of my true religion to the Gentil world." And ver. 19. "You shall first open the kingdom of the Messiah, and make the first publication of the gospel to the Gentils." Upon both verses also referring to Acts x. When I first observed this, I was surprized. Nor could I see the ground of it. But now I guess, that he confined this personal privilege to Peter's first preaching to Gentils at the house of Cornelius, because Peter was then alone, and none of the Apostles were there with him: whereas, after the pouring out of the Holy Ghost, all the Apostles were present with him, as it is said, Acts ii. 14. But Peter, standing up, with the eleven, lift up his voice. . . .

John xviii. 15 . . . 27.
too much concern of mind, to appear in public, and that he chose retirement, as most suitable to his present temper and circumstance.

On (s) the first day of the week, early in the morning, when Marie Magdalen, and other women came to the sepulchre, bringing the sweet spices, which they had prepared, they saw an angel, who said unto them: Be not affrighted. Ye seek Jesus, who was crucified. He is not here. For he is risen. . . . Go quickly, and tell his disciples, that he is risen from the dead: as in Matthew. Tell his disciples, and Peter, as in Mark. And behold, he goes before you into Galilee. That was a most gracious dispoal of Providence, to support the disciples, Peter in particular, under their great affliction.

Our Lord first shewed himself to Marie Magdalen, and afterwards to some other women. On the same day likewise, on which he arose from the dead, he shewed himself to Peter, though the circumstances of this appearance are no where related. However it is evident from Luke xxiv. 33. 34. For when the two disciples, who had been at Emmaus, returned to Jerusalem, they found the eleven gathered together, and those that were with them, saying: the Lord is risen indeed, and has appeared unto Simon. That must be the same appearance, which is mentioned by St. Paul. 1 Cor. xv. 5. and that he was seen of Cephas, then of the twelve. And it has been observed, that as Marie Magdalen was the first woman, so (t) Peter was the first man, to whom Jesus shewed himself after he was risen from the dead.

In the xxi. chapter of St. John's Gospel are some appearances of our Lord to his disciples, in which Peter is greatly interested, to which the attentive reader is referred. Our Lord there graciously affords Peter an opportunity of making a threefold profession of love for him. Which he accepts; and renews to him the apostolical commissiion, and as it were re-infates him in his high and important office: requiring him, as the best testimonie of love for his Lord, to feed his sheep with fidelity and tenderneffe. And notwithstanding his late unsteadiness, our Lord encourageth this disciple to hope, that in his future conduct he would set an example of resolution and fortitude under great difficulties, and at length glorify God by his death, in the service, to which he had been appointed.

As we have now proceeded in the historie of this Apostle to the time of our Lord's ascension, it may be worth the while to look back, and observe those things in the Gospels, which imply his peculiar distinction, or at least are honourable to him.

By Mark ch. v. 37. and Luke viii. 51. we are assured, that Peter was one of the three disciples, whom our Lord admitted to be present at the raising of Jairus's daughter. That particular is not mentioned by Matthew. ch. ix. 18. . . . 26. From all the first three Evangelists we know, that Peter was one of the three, whom our Lord took up with him into the mountain, where he was gloriously transformed. Matt. xvii. 1. Mark ix. 2. Luke ix. 28. He was also one of the three, whom our our Lord took with him apart from the other disciples, when he retired to prayer, a little before his last sufferings. As we know from Matt. xxvi. 37. Mark xiv. 23. But that particular is omitted by Luke ch. xxii. 39. . . . 46.

(t) . . . αὐτον ἡμᾶς τῆς μάλιστα δέχομαι, ἵνα τοῖς ἀμφότεροι μαθηταῖς μοι ἀπειλῆ...  Chryst. in 1 Cor. hom. 38. Tom. n.

And if it might not be reckoned too minute and particular, I would observe some things of this kind, mentioned by one Evangelist only.

There are several such things deserving notice in St. Matthew. 1. In the catalogue of the Apostles Matthew only (u) calls Peter chief, or the first, ch. x. 2. He only has the account of Peter’s desiring to come to Christ upon the water, and what follows. ch. xiv. 28. . . . 31. 3. He alone has recorded what our Lord said to Peter, when he gave him the keys of the kingdom of heaven. ch. xiv. 16. . . . 19. 4. He only relates our Lord’s paying the tribute-money for Peter. ch. xvii. 24. . . . 31. 5. He likewise says, that after Peter had denied Christ, he wept bitterly. ch. xxvi. 75.

In St. Mark are chiefly two things to be observed, as honorable to Peter. The first is, that he was one of the four Apostles, to whom our Lord addressed himself, when he foretold the destruction of the temple, and the calamities attending it. Mark xiii. 3. The other is, that in the message, sent by the angel to the disciples after our Lord’s resurrection, Peter is particularly named. ch. xvi. 7.

In St. Luke are these things remarkable. First, that when our Lord warned Peter of his danger, he also assured him, he had prayed for him, that his faith might not fail. Luke xxii. 31. 32. Secondly, we perceive from St. Luke, that our Lord appeared to Peter in particular on the day of his resurrection, though the circumstances of that appearance are not recorded. ch. xxiv. 33. 34.

In St. John’s Gospel are divers things honourable to Peter. 1. The profession of faith in Christ, related John vi. 67. . . . 69. 2. Peter’s remarkable humility, expressed in an unwillingness, that Jesus should wash his feet, with our Lord’s particular discourse to him. ch. xiii. 6. . . . 10. 3. Peter’s zeal in cutting off the ear of the High-Priest’s servant is related by other Evangelists. But St. John only mentions Peter by name. ch. xviii, 10. 4. It is, I think, honorable to Peter, that when he and John went together to the sepulchre, John, only stooping down, looked in: but Peter went in, and searched the sepulchre. After which John also went in. ch. xx. 4. . . . 8. 5. St. John only mentions Peter’s faith and zeal in casting himself into the sea, to go to Christ. ch. xxi. 7. 6. Our Lord’s discourse with Peter concerning his love to him, and his particular repeated charge, to feed his sheep. ver. 15. . . . 17. 7. Our Lord’s predicting to Peter his martyrdom, and the manner of it. ver. 18. 19.

It is observable, that Matthew and John, the two Apostles, have mentioned more of these prerogatives of Peter, than the other two Evangelists. We may hence conclude, that the Apostles, when illuminated by the Spirit with the knowledge of the true nature of Christ’s kingdom, were were quite free from envy, and that Peter was not assuming and arrogant among his brethren.

(u) Πέτρος στίχων ἡ λεγόμενος πέτρος.

It may be here observed likewise, that as our sacred historians were not envious, so neither were they fond and partial. The several advantages and virtues of Peter are recorded by some only. But his fault in denying Christ, when under persecution, is related by all.

II. In a short time after our Lord’s ascension Peter, as presiding in the college of the Apostles, proposed, that in the room of Judas another should be chosen out of the men that had accompanied them during the time that Jesus had been with them. And when two such had been nominated, and they had by prayer appealed to God, who knows the hearts of all men, the lot fell upon Matthias. And he was numbered with the eleven Apostles. Acts i. 15. . . . 26.

I have here, and elsewhere, spoken of Peter, as presiding among the Apostles, or having a primacy of order. For it appears in what has been just mentioned, and in other things related afterwards. And it is observable, that in all the catalogues of the twelve Apostles Peter is named first, though there is some variety in the order of the names of the other Apostles. I might add, that (x) where ever the three disciples, Peter, James, and John, are mentioned together, Peter is always put first, though there is a variety in the order of the names of those two brothers, James and John, sons of Zebedee. He is also first placed, where (y) four are named, Andrew being added to them. And likewise where (z) only he and John are mentioned. There is an exception in Gal. ii. 9, where the order is James, Cephas, and John. The reason of which I take to be, that (a) James, there mentioned, then presided in the church of Jerusalem, where Paul then was. I place below (b) the thoughts of Balfage

(y) See Mark xiii. 3.
(a) See before, p. 373.
Bajnagé concerning this point, who speaks to the like purpose: without denying the equal dignity of the Apostles, or ascribing to Peter any jurisdiction over them. For which there is not any the least foundation either in the Gospels, or the Acts.

On the day of Pentecost, next ensuing, the promised gift of the Holy Ghost came down upon the Apostles and their company. And upon this occasion Peter, standing up with the eleven, preached to a great number of people assembled about the Apostles, and asserted the resurrection of Jesus, and with such force, that about three thousand were converted, and baptized. Acts i. 14. . .47.

Afterwards Peter and John healed a poor man at the temple, who had been lame from his birth, a well known person, forty years of age. And many being gathered about them, Peter made an affecting discourse, whereby many were awakened, and convinced. And in a short time after this, the number of believers at Jerusalem was (b) about five thousand. ch. iii. and iv. 4. But the Jewish Priests and Rulers were much offended. And whilst Peter and John were speaking to the people, their officers came, and laid hold on them. And it being then evening, they put them in prison, till the next day. On the morrow therefore they were brought before the Council. Having been examined, they were at length dismissed, with a charge not to preach any more in the name of Jesus, and were severely threatened, if they did. ch. iv. 1. . .22.

The number of believers being much increased, and many being in low circumstances, some who were possessed of houses, or lands, sold them, and brought the prices of the things that were sold, and laid them at the Apostles' feet. And distribution was made to every man, according as he had need. But a certain man, named Ananias, and Sapphira, his wife, when they had sold a possession, brought a part of the price, keeping back the rest, though they declared it to be the whole price. For this they were reproved by Peter, and were charged with having lied to God himself, who acted by the Apostles. At his reproof Ananias and Sapphira were both struck dead by the immediate hand of God in a small space of time, one after the other. ch. iv. 31. . .v. i. . .11. We have here, as seems to me, a proof, that Peter now presided in the assembly of the Apostles, and the whole church of Jerusalem.

And, after this, by the hands of the Apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people . . . insomuch that they brought forth the sick in the streets, and laid them on beds and couches, that at the least the shadow of Peter passing by might overshadow some of them. There came also a multitude out of the cities round about Jerusalem, bringing sick folks, and them that were vexed with unclean spirits. And they were healed every one. ch. v. 12. . .16.

I put this in the history of St. Peter, as he has a share in it. But I do not think, that all the miracles here spoken of were wrought by his hands.

(b) How that five thousand in Acts iv. 4. ought to be understood, was shewn Vol. xi. p. 201. 202. I shall now add here the words of Senecur. Ainsi croisset l'Eglise Chretienne parmi les Juifs. Et elle se montoit bien alors à cinq mille personnes. A. C. 35. Histoire de l'Eglise, et de l'Empire, Vol. i. p. 133.
hands, or by his shadow passing by. It seems, that many of these miracles were wrought by other Apostles, as hinted, or expressly said, at the beginning of the citation, in ver. 12. In a word, there were now miracles wrought at Jerusalem in great numbers by all and every one of the Apostles. This may be also farther argued hence, that hereupon all the Apostles were taken up, as is said ver. 17, 18. Then the High-Priest rose up, and all they that were with him, and were filled with indignation. And they laid their hands on the Apostles, and put them in the common prison. The event may be seen in what follows. ch. v. 17...42. However, I am willing to allow, that there were no miracles wrought by the shadow of any of the Apostles, except Peter's. This (c) seems to be most agreeable to St. Luke's expressisons.

Upon the death of Stephen there arose a great persecution against the church that was at Jerusalem: insomuch that all the believers in general were scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the Apostles. Then Philip, one of the Seven, went down to Samaria, and preached Christ to them. And many of the people there believed. Now when the Apostles, which were at Jerusalem, heard, that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John, that they might confer upon them the gift of the Holy Ghost. Which they did by prayer, and laying on of their hands. Here Peter reproved Simon of Samaria, as he is called: who himself was a believer for a while, but had given proofs of insincerity. These two Apostles then returned to Jerusalem, and in their way thither preached the gospel in many villages of the Samaritans, ch. viii. 1...25.

St. Paul, who informs us of his return to Jerusalem, three years after his conversion, has assured us, that he then saw Peter and James, and no other of the Apostles. Gal. i. 18, 19. And St. Luke having given the historie of St. Paul's opposition to the disciples, and of his conversion, and return from Damascus to Jerusalem, says, that Barnabas brought him to the Apostles. Acts ix. i...30. These two accounts are easily reconciled. Paul saw only Peter and James. But they received him in the name, and with the approbation of all the Apostles, and thus he had communion with them.

It follows in St. Luke's historie. Acts ix. 31. Then had the churches rest throughout all Judea, and Galilee, and Samaria, and were edified. And walking in the fear of the Lord, and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, were multiplied. This rest, as was formerly shewn, commenced in the year 40. and probably continued a year, or more. This season, as we may well suppose, was improved by all the Apostles, and by Peter, in particular. Of whom it is said, that he passed through all parts of the country, and came down also to the saints that dwelt at Lydda. Here, in the name of Jesus Christ, he healed Eneas, who had the palsy, and had kept his his bed eight years. Whilst he was in that place, a Christian woman, named Tabitha, died at Joppa, which was not far off. The disciples therefore sent to Peter, dehiring him without delay to come to them. Which he did, and there restored her to life. And he tarried many days at Joppa, with one Simon, a tanner. ch. ix. 32...43.

Whilst Peter was there, Cornelius, of Cesarea by the sea-side, (the city, where the Roman Governour had his residence) a Centurion, a worshipper of God, but not of the house of Israel, nor a Jewish profelyte, had a vision. Wherein he was directed by an angel, to send to Joppa, for Simon, whose surname was Peter: from whom he would receive farther information in the things of religion. When the vision was over, he called two of his servants, and a pious soldier, and sent them to Joppa. The day after, as they drew near the city, Peter went up to the top of the house, to pray, about the sixth hour of the day, or noon. There he fell into a trance, or extase, and had a vision. A vessel descended, wherein were all sorts of living creatures, wild and tame, clean and unclean. And there came a voice to him, saying: Kill and eat. But Peter said: Not so, Lord. For I have never eat any thing that is common or unclean. And the voice spake unto him again the second time: What God hath cleansed, that call not thou common. While Peter thought on the vision, the Spirit said unto him: Behold, three men seek thee. Arise therefore, and get thee down, and go with them, doubting nothing. For I have sent them. On the morrow Peter went away with them, and certain brethren from Joppa, fix in number, accompanied him. The next day they arrived at Cesarea, and entered into the house of Cornelius, where were also many others, his relations, and intimate friends, whom Cornelius had invited to come thither. Peter said unto them: Ye know, how that it is an unlawful thing for a Jew, to keep companie, or to come unto one of another nation. But God has shewn me, that I should not call any man common or unclean. While Peter was preaching, and speaking to them the things concerning Jesus Christ, and before he had finisshd, the Holy Ghost fell on all of them that heard the word. And they of the circumcision, which believed, were astonished, as many as came with Peter, because that on the Gentils also was poured out the gift of the Holy Ghost. For they heard them speak with tongues, and magnify God. Peter therefore commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord. Then prayed they him to tarry certain days. ch. x.

Thus the door of faith, or the kingdom of heaven, or of the Messiah, was opened to Gentils, and they were received into the church of God. And, if I may say it, God now cleansed all Gentils, and shewed with full evidence, and divine attestations, that all men, of every nation, who became worshippers of God, and believed in Jesus, were accepted of him, as his people, and the members of his Church, and in the way of salvation, without circumcision, or taking upon them the observation of the rituals of the law of Moses.

While Peter tarried at Cesarea, the Apostles and brethren, that were in Judea, heard that the Gentils also had received the word of God. And when Peter was come up to Jerusalem, they that were of the circumcision contended with him, saying: Thou wentest in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them. But Peter gave them an account of the transaction from the beginning, beginning, and all were satisfied. When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God, saying: Then hath God also to the Gentils granted repentance unto life.

An opinion has obtained among Christians in late ages, that Cornelius was a proselyte of the gate. Which opinion is founded upon a supposition, that there were among the Jews two sorts of proselytes: some called proselytes of the covenant, or of righteousness, who were circumcised: and others, called proselytes of the gate: who, though they were not circumcised, observed some things, not obligatory in themselves, as is supposed, in order to facilitate commerce between the Jews and them. What those things were, or are supposed to be, I do not now inquire.

However, for clearing up this matter I would observe, that there was but one sort of proselytes among the Jews: and that Cornelius was not a proselyte, but a Gentil.

First. There was but one sort of proselytes among the Jews. They were circumcised. So they became Jews by religion, and were admitted to eat the passover, and to partake of all religious privileges, as the Jews by descent did. They were called strangers, or proselytes within the gates, and sojourners, as they were allowed to dwell, or sojourn among the people of Israel. And they were so called, because they could not possess land. For according to the law of Moses, all the land of Canaan was to be given to the twelve tribes of Israel, the descendents of the Patriarch Jacob. Which enables us to discern the propriety of the expression, just mentioned.

What has been now said, may be illustrated by some texts. Which, though well known, shall be alleged here.

Exod. xii. 48. And when a stranger shall sojourn with thee, and will keep the passover to the Lord, let all his males be circumcised. And then let him come near, and keep it. And he shall be as one born in the land. 49. One law shall be to him that is home-born, and to the stranger that sojourneth among you.

Lev. xvii. 8. Whatsoever man there be of the house of Israel, or of the strangers, which sojourn among you, that offereth a burnt-offering, or sacrifice ... ver. 12 ... children of Israel, neither any stranger, that sojourneth among you. The same again, ver. 13. and ver. 15. One of your own country, or a stranger.

Numb. ix. 14. And if a stranger shall sojourn among you, and will keep the passover to the Lord ... ye shall have one ordinance, both for the stranger, and for him that was born in the land.

Num. xv. 15. One ordinance shall be both for you of the congregation, and also for the stranger that sojourneth with you ... as ye are, so shall the stranger be before the Lord. 16. One law, and one manner shall be for you, and for the stranger that sojourneth among you.

In all these places by stranger, and stranger that sojourneth among you, I suppose to be meant men circumcised, according to the law of Moses.

Perhaps, it may be here asked. Could none then, dwell among the Israelites in the land of Canaan, but proselytes, or circumcised men? To which I answer. It seems to me, that no other had the privilege of a settled abode, or residence there, that is, to sojourn in the land. However,
However, I think, there must have been an exception for travellers, passing through the country, even though they were idolaters, and for some, whose traffick was needfull, and therefore allowed of. As Patrick says upon Deut. xiv. 21. “There were some called Nocherim, which we here translate aliens: who were mere Gentils, and not suffered to have an habitation among them, but only to come and go in their traffick with them.”

And, if I mistake not, an argument of the Apostle may be hence illustrated. Eph. ii. 13. But now, in Christ Jesus, ye, who some time were far off, are made nigh, very nigh, even to a coalescence, by the blood of Christ, ver. 19. Now therefore ye are no more strangers, and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God. The Apostle alludes to the state of things in the Jewifh Commonwealth. Now therefore, says he, ye are no more strangers, and foreigners. Those are not terms of distance, as they seem to be in our translation, and as some have supposed, but of nearness. They are expressive of all the favour and privilege, which could be vouchsafed to any, not of the natural seed of Israel, before the manifestation of the gospel. “Now (d) therefore ye are no longer guests. Such you might be, and be well, and civilly entertained (c) for a while, though you were aliens: and sojourners, as the Jewifh profelytes were, who might live in the country, but had few privileges, they not being allowed to possess land, nor to have any share in the government of it: but ye are fellow-citizens with the saints: you have equal rights of citizenship with the people, and natives of the country: and are God’s domesticks. You are brought into the court and family of the King of the country, and are admitted to his presence, and to attend upon his person.” The whole of this is much the same with what is said 1 Pet. ii. 9. 10. and Rev. i. 8. I place below a Latin version (e) of this text, which appears to me to be right.

Profelyte is a word of Greek original, equivalent to stranger, long since become a technical word, denoting a convert to the Jewifh religion, or a Jew by religion.

In the fourth commandment they are called thy stranger within thy gates. Ex. xx. 14. and Deut. v. 4.

According to the Jewifh way of reckoning, agreeably to the law of Moses, there were three sorts of men in the world: Israelites, called also home-born, or natives: strangers within their gates, and aliens. So Deut. xiv. 21. Ye shall not eat any thing that dieth of itself. Thou shalt give it to the stranger that is in thy gates, that he may eat it: or thou mayest sell it to a foreigner.

(d) Αρα δὖν οὐκέτας ἐστιν ξένος, καὶ πάροικος ἄλλος συμπολίταις τῶν ἁγίων, καὶ οἰκιός τὸ θεᾶς.

(c) The Greek word ξένος, like the Latin word hospes, signifies both a host, and a guest, an entertainer, and him that is entertained, et qui domo succipit, et qui succipitur. In Rom. xvi. 23, it is used in the former, here in the latter sense.

(e) Nempe igitur non amplius eis hospites, et inquiline, sed concives sanctorum, ac domestici Dei.
to an alien. Or, otherwise, there were two sorts of men, circumcised and uncircumcised, Jews and Gentils, or Heathens.

A profelyte, as before said, is a man circumcised according to the law of Moses, or a Jew by religion. This is the sense of the word in all the texts of the New Testament, where it is used, Matt. xxiii. 15. Ye compass sea and land to make one profelyte. Acts ii. 10. Jews and profelytes. Acts vi. 5. Nicolas, a profelyte of Antioch. xiii. 43. religious profelytes. There never was any doubt about preaching to these, and receiving them into the Church. Such were among St. Peter’s hearers of his first sermon. And one such person at least was among the seven Deacons in the church of Jerusalem.

In this sense the word is always understood by ancient Christian writers. Says Bede in his Exposition of the second chapter of the Acts: “They (f) called those profelytes, that is, strangers, who being of Gentil original, had embraced circumcision, and judaism.” To the like purpose (g) another Latin writer, of the ninth century, in his Commentarie upon St. Matthew’s Gospel. So likewise (h) Theodoret, and (i) Euthymius. Nor do I believe, that the notion of two sorts of Jewish profelytes can be found in any Christian writer before the fourteenth century, or later.

Cornelius is not called a profelyte in the New Testament. It is said of him, that (k) he was a devout man, and one that feared God with all his house: that is, he was a truly good man. What is there said of him is only his personal character. Here is not any thing, denoting a religious denomination, as some have thought. And it is plain, that notwithstanding his piety, he was an alien. Peter would not have conversed with him, if he had not been directed by an express command. The reason is, that there is no appointment in the law of Moses for receiving any men into covenant with God, or to communion with his people, but by circumcision: which implied an obligation to obey all the laws of the Mosaic institution.

Let us now go over, and observe the most remarkable particulars of this historie.

(h) ὁ Ἰ ἰ τῶν προσελκυότες, καὶ κατὰ τὰς σει σώματας σωθήσατοι σωλήνων, τῶν ἄδικον παρ’ ἀυτῶν σφαγὴν ὑπομνήσατο προσκυνήσει γὰρ τῶν ὅμοιων. Theod. in Ps. xciii. al. xcv. ver. 6. Tom. i. p. 775. Conf. Suid. V. Προσέλκυότος.

(k) οὗτοι υἱοὶ φαραών τῆς βίας, σὺν πατί τῷ δίκῳ ἀυτῶ.
Cornelius, and his friends, are called Gentils. ch. x. 45. xi. 1. and 18. xv. 7. that is, gojim, a Hebrew word, very frequent in the Old Testament, and rendered by us nations, or heathen, or heathens. And in our version of the New Testament likewise is several times put heathen instead of the nations, or the gentils. 2 Cor. xi. 26. Gal. ii. 9. iii. 8.

In the next place we take notice of the vessel let down from heaven, and set before Peter. There were in it all manner of four-footed beasts of the earth, and wild beasts, and creeping things, and fouls of the air: some of them altogether abominable, and exceeding filthy in the eye of Jews. Hereby are represented the people, who had sent for Peter, though pious, because they were uncircumcised. But it is likely, that herein are also included, and represented Gentils of all sorts, men of every nation, all men uncircumcised in general, whether worshippers of God, or not. ver. 13. 14. And there came a voice to him, saying: Arise, Peter, kill, and eat. But Peter said: Not so, Lord. For I have never eaten anything that is common or unclean. And the voice spake unto him again the second time: What God has cleansed, that call not thou common. This was done thrice. And the vessel was received up again into heaven....

What God has cleansed, that call not thou common: denoting, that those people, which were most impure in Jewish esteem, were now cleansed, or to be cleansed, and to be received as pure and holy.

Omitting some other things, in the next place we observe Peter's address at the house of Cornelius. ver. 28. Ye know, how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew, to (D) keep company, or to come to a man of another nation. The people therefore, to whom Peter had been sent, and among whom he now was, were such, as no Jew might converse with, according to the law of Mofes, and their established custom. A man of another nation: ἀλλοφύλος: an alien, or foreigner. Jerome observes, that (l) though the Greek word signifies in general a man of another

(D) "Κολλαθέω, ἁρσοίχεχος, ἀλλοφύλος. By which words is not to be understood, as if a Jew might have no dealing at all with a Gentil, and traffick with them: for it was next to impossible to do otherwise, they living, very many of them, in Heathen cities. And Gentils came continually, in the way of trade, to Jerusalem. Neh. xiii. 16. What was unlawful, was conversing with Gentils in near and close society, as the word κολλαθέω signifies, and that especially in these two things, not to eat with them, and not to go into their houses. And this is that, for which they of the circumcision excepted at Peter upon his return. Thou wertefi in to men uncircumcised, and didst eat with them. ch. xi. 3." So Lightfoot in his Commentarie upon the Acts of the Apostles. Vol. i. p. 844. Where follow other things, relating to this subject, very worthie of observation.

Phililtaos autem, ut sape diximus, Palæstininos signifitcat, quos alienigenas vulgata scribit editio: quum hic non unius gentis, sed omnium ceterarum gentium vocabulum fit. Id in Is. xivio. 29. p. 116.

Videamus autem, quid Phililthiim, et urbes ejus peccaverint, quos septuaginta femper alienigenas transfluerunt. Ubiquumque enim in veteri testamento nother nation; the seventy Translators of the Old Testament constantly made use of it, to denote the Philiflins, or heathen people of the land of Palestine. That observation is repeated by him, And I have transcribed below several of his passages. This character, an alien, or a man of another nation, satisfies us, that the people, to whom Peter was now sent by divine order, had not been before received into the Jewish church, or admitted to communion with them, but were aliens from their commonwealth.

It follows in the same address of Peter: But God has shewed me, that I should not call any man common or unclean. Those expressions are as general and comprehensive, as any that can be used: plainly including all mankind, who now were cleansed, or to be cleansed, and purified by faith, and received into the church of God without circumcision.

Cornelius having declared the occasion of sending for him, Peter opened his mouth, and said: Of a truth, I perceive, that God is no respecter of persons: but in every nation, he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him. These expressions are as general and comprehensive, as the former, including men of all nations, without exception.

The conclusion of St. Peter's discourse at the house of Cornelius is this: To him give all the Prophets witness, that through his name, whatsoever believeth in him, shall receive remission of sins. Which, so far as I am able to perceive, is preaching the gospel as clearly, as ever it was preached by Paul himself.

While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them that heard the word. Or, as St. Peter himself expresseth it, rehearsing the matter at Jerusalem. ch. xi. 15. As I began to speak, the Holy Ghost fell on all them, as on us at the beginning. Whereupon Peter ordered them to be baptized, and so received into the Church. And, as he says in the defense of himself: Forasmuch then, as God gave them the like gift, as he did unto us, who believed on the Lord Jesus Christ: what was I that I could withstand God?

That very extraordinary manifestation, the coming down of the Holy Ghost immediately from heaven upon these persons, leads us to think, that the transaction at the house of Cornelius was a very important thing, and no less, than cleansing the whole Gentil world: or encouraging the preaching of the gospel to them, and receiving them to communion, without the rites of the law. And from this time forward it was so preached to them, as appears from the historie in the Acts.

I suppose, that what I have now said is agreeable to the sense of all Christians in ancient times. Who call Cornelius (m) the first-fruits of the mento, id est, alienigenas, legitimus, non commune nomen omnium externarum gentium, sed proprius Philisthi, qui nunc Palæstini vocantur, accipiendo sunt. Id. in Amos. cap. i. ib. p. 1376.

the Gentils, and (n) the beginning of the Gentils. And say, that (o) in him all Gentils were cleansed and sanctified, and that (p) the living creatures of all kinds, which were in the vessel let down to Peter, and held by four corners, represented all Gentils throughout the world.

Many learned men of late times make a great difference between preaching the gospel to what they call devout gentils, or profelytes of the gate, and idolatrous gentils. But I do not perceive, that Chrisrians in ancient times had any notion of this. Nor is there any foundation for it in the New Testament. But all men, uncircumcised, whether worshippers of God, or idolatrous, are called gentils. That Cornelius, and his familie, and friends, are called gentils, though pious, has been lately seen. And in almost innumerable places of St. Paul's epistles the fame word is used of such as then were, or had been idolaters.

Nor can I conceive, how there should be an objection against preacting to idolatrous gentils, in order to convert them from idolatry. It is well known, that the Jewish people were very diligent in making pro-elytes to their religion. Our Lord himself has taken notice of it. Matt.
xxiii. 15. The obstructions given to Paul were not owing to his converting men from idolatry, but to his manner of receiving them. If he had taught, and required them to be circumcised, and keep the law, all had been well. For certain, I think, there could have been no offense taken by any believers from among the Jews, however bigotted. And I, brethren, says the Apostle to the Galatians, if I yet preach circu-cision, why do I yet suffer persecution? Then is the offense of the craffe ceased. Gal. v. 11.

These thoughts, which are now proposed to public consideration, are not new. A thorough examination of this point was occasioned by the Miscellanea Sacra, which was published in 1725. And in a few years I came to a full determination. Nor have I concealed my sentiments.
They have been communicated to several. And by some they have been approved.

Nor

(o) Sub Apollolis vero, cum ii, qui in Chriftum ex circuncifione credi-derunt, eos qui genties erant, dicebanturque preputium, judificationem gra-tia arbitrentur participes effe non posse, docet B. Apollolus Petrus, quam indifferetum apud Deum uterque fit populus, si in unitatem fidei denuo conve-cap. 18.

(p) Etenim Ecclesia neccum erat in gentibus. In Judaeá crediderunt ex Judæis, et putabant . . . folos fæ perinere ad Chriftum. Misfii sunt Apofolis ad gentes, praedicatum eft Cornelio. . . Difce ille, qui habebat omnia animalia, signifacabat omnes gentes. Ideo autem quatuor lineis pendebat, qua quattuor sunt partes orbis, unde futurì populi erant. Auguf. Enarr. in Ps. cxvi, num. 13. Tom. iv.

Siquidem cum Sanctus Petrus per visionem omne genus animalium, de bap-tizando Cornelio, ac perinde de omnibus gentibus doceretur, atque ille imumdum et indifferetum cibum Judaica observantia recufaret, trina ad eum don faéta fit, dicens: Quæ Deus mundavit, tu ne commone dixeris. Prosper.
Nor do I make any question, but that others likewise are of the same opinion. I shall therefore here transcribe a paragraph of a letter from my honored friend, Mr. Joseph Hallett, of Exeter, received from him in the year 1735. "It is certain fact, says he, that the Scripture never mentions the difference between preaching to devout Gentiles, and idolatrous Gentiles, which some do. The original instruction was: "Go, disciple all nations. Matt. xxviii. 19. Preach the gospel to every creature. Mark xvi. 5. The order, in which the Apostles were to preach the gospel, was in Jerusalem, in all Judea, in Samaria, and to the uttermost parts of the earth. Acts i. 8. In these, and all other places, one and the same character comprehends all Gentiles. When St. Peter stuck at preaching the gospel to Cornelius, the plain reason was, "because he was uncircumcised. See Acts xi. 3. Neither he at first, "nor they that afterwards quarrelled with him, would have any more hesitated to preach to idolaters, than to Cornelius. Only in that case, "they must have begun with proving the unity of God. Which they "had no need to do in the case of Cornelius, since he already believed "it."

And as I have this opportunity, I shall now communicate to the public some other thoughts of Mr. Hallett, relating to the same subject, which I received from him at the same time. "That the decree in Acts xv. relates to the idolatrous Gentiles in particular is manifest. "Indeed it is demonstrable from ver. 19. where St. James speaks of those, who from among the Gentiles are turned to God. Their being turned to God here is the same, as their becoming Christians. They were not turned to God before. And therefore they were (not devout, but) idolatrous Gentiles. They were plainly of the same sort with the Thessalians, who turned to God from Idols. 1 Thess. i. 9. "who are acknowledged to be idolatrous Gentiles. The same character then will prove, that the others were so too. The same thing is demonstrable from ver. 17. For the expression, all the Gentiles, can never be restrained to a few profelytes of the gate. Farther, the letter of the church of Jerusalem was directed and sent to the believing Gentiles in Antioch, &c. ver. 23. to decide a dispute, which was raised there. But the dispute there was about idolatrous Gentiles in particular. ver. 2. 3. 5. Consequentially, the letter must be interpreted to speak of the same persons. Nay the church at Antioch was composed of such as had been idolatrous Gentiles. And therefore the letter must relate to that sort of men. And when Paul went through Syria, Cilicia, Derbe, Lystra, &c. (where, it is allowed, there were converts from among the idolatrous Gentiles,) he delivered the decrees "to them, i.e. the said idolatrous Gentiles, to keep. ch. xvi. 1. 4."

So Mr. Hallett.

Dr. Doddridge, in the third volume of his Family-Expositor, which is upon the Acts of the Apostles, has many acute and judicious observations, relating to this subject. And I am well satisfied, that he intended to write a Dissertation concerning Jewish Profelytes. Which is also acknowledged by (q) the learned editor of his posthumous volumes: though

(q) See the note at the bottom of p. 218. of the sixth volume of the Family-Expositor.
though no such thing has been found among his papers. And in his general Introduction to the first epistle of St. Peter Dr. Doddridge freely declares, "that there is no sufficient ground to suppose, that there ever were any such persons, as Profelytes of the gate." And he thinks, "that what he has suggested in his notes upon the Acts may convince an attentive reader." And indeed I am of the same opinion concerning what he has said in those notes. For which reason I do not so much regret the lofe of the Dissertations, as otherwise I should.

Says Sueur, speaking of St. Peter's vision of the sheet: "God (r) thereby shewed unto his servant, that thence forward he would have all the people of the world, without exception, called to partake in his gracious covenant in his son Jesus Christ, and to the knowledge of salvation by him." That it was so understood by the primitive Christians, we have lately seen. And that this whole transaction was so understood by the Apostles, and by the Evangelists, their fellow-labourers, is manifest from the sequel of the historic in the book of the Acts.

For removing difficulties, and fully clearing up this point, it may be needful to consider that text, Gal. ii. 1. 2. Then fourteen years after, I went up again to Jerusalem, with Barnabas, and took Titus with me also. And I went up by revelation, and communicated unto them that Gospel, which I preach among the Gentiles, but privately to them which were of reputation, left by any means I should run, or had run in vain.

Some who contend for the supposition of two sorts of Profelytes among the Jews, and think, that the Gospel was preached several years to such as they call profelytes of the gate, before it was preached to idolatrous Gentiles, and understand the decree of the Council of Jerusalem, to bind those profelytes only, say, that the conversion of idolatrous Gentiles was unknown to the church at Jerusalem, when that decree was made, and explain the above cited words after this manner: "That Paul communicated what he had preached to the Gentiles, only to James, and Peter, and John, the three renowned Apostles of the circumcision, and that under the seal of the greatest secrecy."

But that cannot be St. Paul's meaning. For most, if not all the converts at Antioch, must have been idolaters. But, supposing for the present, that they had been devout Gentiles; it is universally allowed, that before the controversy arose at Antioch about circumcising the Gentiles that believed, the gospel had been preached for a good while by Paul and Barnabas to idolatrous Gentiles in Cyprus, Perga, Antioch in Pisidia, Iconium, Lystra, Derbe, and other places: of which a particular account is given Acts xiii. xiv. And presently after, St. Luke, relating the journey of Paul and Barnabas to Jerusalem, says ch. xv. 3. 4. And being brought

(r) Et puisque Dieu romploit cette separation, il montrait à son serviteur, que de là en avant il voulut appeller indifféremment tous les peuples de la monde à son alliance de grace en fons fils Jesus Christ, et à sa salutaire connoissance. J. Sueur Hist. de l'Eglise, &c. A. C. 41. Tom. i. p. 165.

* See Miscellanea Sacra in the Preface, and Essay iv. and Dr. Benfon's History of the first planting the Christian Religion. vol. 2. chap. iii. sed. i. ii. &c.

Vol. II.
brought on their way by the church [of Antioch] they passed through Phenice, and Samaria, declaring the conversion of the Gentils. [or Heathens.] And they caused great joy to all the brethren. And when they were come to Jerusalem, they were received by the church, and by the Apostles, and Elders. And they declared all things, that God had done with them. In which must have been included their preaching not only at Antioch in Syria, but also in all the other countreys and cities mentioned just before. Of this they gave an account to the church of Jerusalem in general, and particularly to the Apostles and Elders.

And Acts xv. 12. in the Council. Then all the multitude kept silence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, declaring what miracles God had wrought among the Gentils by them.

And ver. 25. 26. the Apostles and Elders in their Epistle, speaking of Barnabas and Paul, say, they were men that had hazarded their lives for the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Intending, as may be reasonably supposed, the dangers, and sufferings, which they had met with, when preaching the gospel to idolaters at Antioch in Pisidia, Iconium, and Lystra, of which St. Luke has given an account Acts xiii. near the end, and ch. xiv. to which St. Paul also refers. 2 Tim. iii. 11. These things Paul and Barnabas, or the brethren that went up with them from Antioch, had related to the church at Jerusalem, and to the Apostles and Elders. For we hence plainly perceive, that these things were well known there.

That is St. Luke's historie. Let us now observe St. Paul's own words in this text. Then fourteen years after I went up again to Jerusalem. And I went up by revelation, and communicated to them that gospel, which I preach among the Gentils: meaning, as seems to me, the church, or the believing brethren there. So say all the best interpreters in general. Dr. Hammond's paraphrase is in these words: "And by God's "appointment, either first signified, or afterwards confirmed to me by vi- "sion, (such as Paul had about several matters,) I went up at this "time to Jerusalem, and gave the church there an account of my preach- "ing, and the succelle of it among the Gentils. This I thought fit "to do, and yet first to do it to those that were the principal men among "them." So Hammond. To the like purpose Eslius, whom †* I transcribe below. Le Clerc's French version is to this purpose. "And "†† I explained in public to the saints the gospel which I preach among the "Gentils: the which I also did in particular to them who were in reputation.

And

†† J'y allai. ... et j'expliquai en public aux saints l'evangile, que j'annonce parmi les Gentils: ce que je fis aussi en particulier à ceux qui étoient le plus en reputation. Le Clerc.

‡‡ Or j'y allai par revelation, et je conferai avec les fidèles touchant l'évan- "gile, que je prêche parmi les Gentils. J'en conferai en particulier avec les "plus célèbres entre eux. Beauf.
And Beaufobre's: 14* went thither by revelation, and I conferred with the faithfull about the gospell, which I preach among the Gentils. I conferred about it also in particular with those who were moft efteeemed among them.*

It follows in the fame verse: Left by any means I should run, or had run in vain. That is: "This I thought fit to do, in order to secure the success of my miniftrie: for removing obftacles in the way of my preaching for the future, and that the minds of converts already made might not be unsettled. With those views I conferred with the believers at Jerusalem in public, and alfo in private with those who were moft efteeemed."

Ver. 3. But neither Titus, who was with me, being a Greek, was com-pelled to be circumcised. The Apostle's taking such particular notice of Titus in a letter to Christians converted from idolatry, and calling him a Greek, lead us to think, that he was originally idolatrous.

Ver. 4. And that because of false brethren, unawares brought in, who came in privily to spy out our liberty in Christ Jesus, that they might bring us into bondage. 5. To whom we gave place by subjeftion, no not for an hour: that the truth of the gospell might continue with you.

Where St. Paul feems to refer to the rife of the dispute at Antioch, which is thus related by St. Luke. Acts xv. 1. And certain men, which came down from Judea, taught the brethren, and said: Unlesf ye be cir-cumcified after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be faved. These, as the Apostle here fays, had intruded themfelves into the church of Antioch, that they might bring them into subjeftion to all the burden-fome obfervances of the law of Moses. Upon that account, and for defeating their design, he went up to Jerusalem, and there acted, as juft fhewn.

This text, and the explication now given of it, may receive illuftration from the account, which St. Luke gives of Paul's coming to Jerusalem afterwards, where he firft converfes with the brethren, and then has a conference with James, and the Elders. The refult of which is foon made known to all. Acts xxii. 17. And when we were come to Jerusalem, the brethren received us gladly. 18. And the day following Paul went in with us unto James. And all the Elders were present. 19. And when he had fallen them, he declared to them particularly what things God had wrought among the Gentils by his miniftrie. Certainly St. Paul here intends hear-thens.

* * The interpretation given by me of St. Paul's phrase κατ' έδικα, as equivalent to separatiy, particularly, may be much confirmed by a passage of Libanius, which I here tranfcribe. "Εγώ δέ σοι μετὰ τῆς ὀλίγας στόλεως οίκλων καθιν. οὐκ γὰρ μοι καὶ συντόνοι γες αὐτων ἑκών εἰς γεραιμίας, καὶ παλιν ἐβίω ταῦτα ἐτῶν. Λιβαν. [ad Maximum.] Ep. 1157. p. 553. ed. Wolfs. To which may be added another from Josephus. Epw 6: ἐν τῇ εἰς τὴν αἰτιολογίαν αὐτῶν ἐναντίων συγγραφάμενοι σαιραφίσαντες, εἰς τότε καὶ τῇ ἐπὶ αὐτῆς ἅγιαν αὐταλήματα. Antiq. i. i. cap. i. § 1.

Accordingly, the Latin Vulgate is thus: Seorsum autem iiis, qui widebantur aliquid eft. And, in the margin of fome of our Bibles, for privately is put severally. Which I think to be the true meaning.

... ἐκείνῃ καθ' ἐκατόν ἐν ἐπιστήνον ὁ θεὸς ἐν τοῖς ἑδαυ ἔδιδα τὸς διακονίας κυτε.
then and idolaters. Ver. 20. And when they heard it, they glorified the Lord, and said to him. . . Ver 25. As touching the Gentils which believe we have written, and concluded, that they observe no such thing. . . The connection leads us to suppose, that they speak of all Gentils whatever, idolatrous, as well as others.

Upon the whole the Apostle assures the Christians, his converts, in Galatia, that his going to Jerusalem, his declaring there to all the gospel, which he preached among the Gentils, and his conferring in private with the Apostles, particularly, with those who were reckoned the chief of them, were all done with a view to their benefit, that the truth of the gospel might continue with them, and other Gentils. And the event, as related by St. Luke, and as represented by the Apostle himself in this epistle, was entirely to his satisfaction.

St. Paul in this epistle most earnestly exhorts the Galatians, to stand fast in the liberty, with which Christ has made us free, and not be entangled again with the yoke of bondage. ch. v. 1. and he severely censures instability in the genuine faith of the gospel. It would be, as seems to me, very strange, to suppose him to say, that when he was at Jerusalem, a few years only before writing this epistle, he had studiously concealed the doctrine, which he preached among the Gentils, from all but some few Apostles. His so doing, whether through fear, or from prudential considerations, or any reasons whatever, must have been a great discouragement to them, to whom he is writing. How could it be expected, that they should openly affect before all the world the true evangelical liberty, if himself had been upon the reserve upon a late and important occasion?

St. Paul’s having a private conference with some of the Apostles, is no proof, that he had any secrets, with-held from the knowledge of others. But it might be a proper piece of respect, to discourse with those who were in great esteem, about what was to be communicated to all.

If St. Paul had desired to conceal his preaching to idolatrous Gentils, he could not have done it. His preaching at Antioch, and his and Barnabas’s peregrination in divers other countries, related in Acts xiii. xiv. were well known to all the Christians at Antioch. And when Paul and Barnabas went thence to Jerusalem about the question that had been started there; it is very likely, that some went to Jerusalem upon the same occasion, who were on the imposing side of the question. If Paul had endeavoured to conceal any thing of an offensive nature, they would not have failed to divulge it.

We now proceed in the historie.

Peter having by divine appointment and direction performed that important service at the house of Cornelius in Caphera, and having received Gentils into communion by baptism, without circumcision according to the law of Moses: and his conduct having been approved by the Apostles, and brethren at Jerusalem: they who had been scattered abroad upon the persecution that arose about Stephen, and had hitherto preached the word to none but Jews only, having heard of this transaction, when they came to Antioch, spake unto the Greeks there, preaching the Lord Jesus. And the hand of the Lord was with them. And a great number believed, and turned unto unto the Lord. Then tidings of these things came unto the ears of the church which was at Jerusalem. And they sent forth Barnabas, that he should go as far as Antioch. He afterwards brought Paul thither. And from that time forward the Gospel was freely preached to Gentiles, as well as Jews, and with great success. Acts xi. 19. ... 26.

Soon after the conversion of Cornelius, it is likely that the rest of the churches, before mentioned was abated, till it was quite interrupted. However, Peter, and the other Apostles, still continued in Judea. And according to the utmost of their power, as the circumstances of things allowed, employed themselves in confirming the believers, and making additions to their number.

Toward the end of his reign Herod Agrippa became an open persecutor of the believers. And killed James, the brother of John, with the sword. And because he saw, it pleased the Jews, he proceeded farther, to take Peter also. [Then were the days of unleavened bread.] And when he had apprehended him, he put him in prison, and delivered him to four quaternions of soldiers, to keep him; that is, sixteen in all, four of which were by turns to watch him: intending after Easter, to bring him forth to the people. Acts x. 1. ... 4.

The conversion of Cornelius happened, as I suppose, in the year 41. of our Saviour's nativity, according to the vulgar computation. And the Easter, or Pasover, here mentioned, was, probably, the Pasover of the year 44.

Peter therefore was kept in prison. But prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him. ver. 5. And he was delivered out of prison in a miraculous manner, as related ver. 6. ... 11. The Divine Being did not allow, that a period should be yet put to the life of that Apostle, One thing very observable in this historie is the composure of Peter's mind in a great extremity, and in the near apprehension of death. For it is said ver. 6. And when Herod would have brought him forth, the same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains. In that posture the angel found him, who at that instant was sent to affist his escape.

Having informed some of his intimate friends, assembled at the house of Marie, in Jerusalem, of his wonderful deliverance out of prison, he departed, and went to another place. ver. 17. Meaning either another house in Jerusalem, or else some city, or village, not far from it. Where, probably, he lived privately, till the death of Herod Agrippa, which happened before the end of that year.

Some have thought, that Peter now went to Antioch, or Rome. But there is no good evidence of either of those opinions. Says Mr. Lenfant upon the place: "If St. Peter had gone to some celebrated city, for instance, Antioch, according to some, or Rome, according to others, no doubt St. Luke would have mentioned it, and some of the brethren would have accompanied him, according to custom. From the manner, in which St. Luke expresseth himself, nothing is more natural, than to suppose, that St. Peter, that he might not expose to danger the faithfull at the house where he first called, and where many were assembled, retired to some other place in Jerusalem."

In the year 49. or 50. was assembled the Council of Jerusalem, con-
II

III. Some short time afterwards, as it seems, Peter was at Antioch, as we learn from the journey of Peter to Antioch, after the Council of Jerusalem, according to the general opinion. But B助手 argues, that it was before it. If it was not till after it, (as I rather think,) it could not be long. For Barnabas was now at Antioch. Whereas in a short time after their return thither from Jerusalem, he and Paul parted. Here Peter at first conversed freely with the Gentil converts. But when there came thither from Judea some Jewifh believers, zealous for the law, be separated himself, fearing them of the circumcision. Herein Peter acted contrarie to his own judgement, and declared opinion, through fear of the displeasure of others. St. Paul therefore represents his conduct, as dissimulation, or hypocrifie. What he now did, in compliance with the zealots for the law, was a thing of very bad tendency. St. Paul therefore justly withstood him, and so shewed him to be blamable, that Peter acquiesced. Hereby, as Paul expresseth it, he compelled the Gentils to judaize, or become Jews.

For

The Council of Jerusalem, held to decide upon the question, whether it was needful to circumcise the Gentils, who believed, and to command them to keep the law. At this assembly Peter was present, and in the debate clearly declared his opinion, that the yoke of the law should not be laid upon the neck of the disciples from among the Gentils. As a cogent argument for his opinion, he reminded the assembly, how by divine appointment he had preached the word of the gospel to Gentils, at Cæsarea, and that God, who knew the hearts of all men, had shewn his acceptance of them by giving to them the Holy Ghost, though uncircumcised. By which it had been made manifest, that they might be saved by faith in Jesus Christ, without the rituals of the law.

Whilst Paul was this time at Jerusalem, James, Peter, and John, gave to Paul and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship, that they might proceed in preaching to the Gentils: whilst they, and the other Apostles, still continued in Judea to preach to those of the circumcision. Gal. ii. 6...10.

He goes to Antioch, where he is reproved by St. Paul. St. Paul. Gal. ii. 11...16. I place this journey of Peter to Antioch, after the Council of Jerusalem, according to the general opinion. But B助手 argues, that (s) it was before it. If it was not till after it, (as I rather think,) it could not be long. For Barnabas was now at Antioch. Whereas in a short time after their return thither from Jerusalem, he and Paul parted. Here Peter at first conversed freely with the Gentil converts. But when there came thither from Judea some Jewifh believers, zealous for the law, be separated himself, fearing them of the circumcision. Herein Peter acted contrarie to his own judgement, and declared opinion, through fear of the displeasure of others. St. Paul therefore represents his conduct, as dissimulation, or hypocrifie. What he now did, in compliance with the zealots for the law, was a thing of very bad tendency. St. Paul therefore justly withstood him, and so shewed him to be blamable, that Peter acquiesced. Hereby, as Paul expresseth it, he compelled the Gentils to judaize, or become Jews.

For
For his separating from them, as unfit for converse and communion with the Apostles of Christ, and the believers from among the Jews, implied, that they were not acceptable in the sight of God, nor in the way of salvation: and that in order to be saved, it was needful for them to be circumcised, and keep the law.

It was, as I suppose, soon after the Council, and the year 50. in which Peter came to Antioch. And I imagine, that he now first of all went abroad out of Judea, into Gentile countrieys. It is very likely, that he was desirous to fee the Christian people at Antioch. But hitherto he had been little used to converse with Gentils. And when some zealous Jewish believers came to Antioch from Jerusalem, he was alarmed: recollecting, it is likely, how some at Jerusalem had contended with him after he was come from Cesarea, because he had been with men uncircumcised, and did eat with them. Acts xi. 23. and very well knowing, from long and frequent experience, the prevailing temper of the people of his country. But it is reasonable to think, that Peter never more shewed the like unsteadiness, but was firm ever afterwards.

This is the last time, that Peter is expressly mentioned in the New Testament, excepting his own epistles, and i Cor. i. 12. and iii. 22. From which texts Pearson concludes, that (t) St. Peter had been at Corinth, before St. Paul wrote his first epistle to the church there. But others think that (u) there were some at Corinth, who had heard Peter preach in Judea: and some, who had seen Christ in prison. They who said, I am of Cephas, or of Christ, must be supposed to have been Jews, either by descent, or religion.

I do not think, these words can prove that Peter had been at Corinth, before Paul wrote this epistle. At ch. iii. 6. St. Paul says: I have planted. Apollos watered. He makes no mention of Peter's labours among the Corinthians. Peter may have been at Corinth afterwards, in his way to Rome. But I do not see any proof from this epistle of his having been there.

IV. We

impropriety of the use of the word, Judaizer, now very common among learned moderns, as denoting a man, who is for imposing Judaism upon others.

His Travels, and coming to Rome. We have no where any very distinct account of this Apostle's travels. He might return to Judea, and stay there a good while after having been at Antioch, at the time spoken of by St. Paul in the epistle to the Galatians. However, I formerly quoted Epiphanius, saying, that (x) Peter was often in the countries of Pontus, and Bithynia. And by Eusebius we are assured, that Origen in the third tome of his Exposition of the book of Genesis, writes to this purpose: "Peter (y) is supposed to have preached to the Jews of the dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Bithynia, Cappadocia, and Asia. Who at length coming to Rome, was crucified with his head downwards, himself having desired it might be in that manner."

For the time of Peter's coming to Rome, no ancient writer is now more regarded by learned moderns, than Laëntius, or whoever is the author of the book Of the Deaths of Persecutors. Who says, that (z) Peter came thither in the time of Nero. In so much that (a) Pagi afflents to this account: and has shewn it to be altogether improbable, that (b) St. Peter came thither in the time of Claudius. He likewise (c) observes some difficulties, which they are liable to, who suppose, that he first came to Rome in the reign of Claudius, and afterwards in the reign of Nero. But though Peter did not come to Rome before the reign of Nero, which began in the year of Christ 54. we cannot say exactly the time, when he came thither, as is also (d) acknowledged by the same excellent chronologer.

However, it appears to me very probable, that St. Peter did not come to Rome before the year of Christ 63. or 64. nor till after St. Paul's departure thence, at the end of his two years imprisonment in that city.

The books of the New Testament afford a very plausible, and probable, if not a certain argument for it. After our Lord's ascension we find Peter with the rest of the Apostles at Jerusalem. He and John were sent by the Apostles from Jerusalem to Samaria, whence they returned to Jerusalem. When Paul came to Jerusalem three years after his conversion, he found Peter there. Upon occasion of the tranquillity of the churches in Judea, Galilee, and Samaria, near the end of the reign of Caligula, Peter left Jerusalem, and visited the churches in the several parts of that country, particularly, at Lydda, and Joppa, where he tarried many

(x) Vol. viii. p. 310.
(y) Πάπας δὲ οἰκείοις τοῖς ἐν διασπορᾷ ἱσχαίοις ἔωιν. Οὔτε καὶ ἐν τῆς ἐν ἡμῖν γενόμενοι ἡμέρᾳ, ἀντικινοῦσθε κατὰ κεφαλὴν, ὅτες ἀυτὸς ἄξιος ἀξιόμενος ἄδει. Euseb. H. E. l. 3. cap. i.
(z) . . . et per annos xxv. ufque ad principium Neronianí imperii per omnes provincias et civitates Ecclesiae fundamenta miferunt. Cumque jan Nero imperaret, Petrus Romam advenit, et editis quibusdam miraculis, quæ virtute ipsius Dei, data fibi ab eo poteftate, faciebat, convertit multos ad juditiam, Deoque templum fidele ac stabile collocavit. Quæ re ad Neronem delatà . . . et primus omnium perpecutus Dei servos, Petrum cruci adfixit, et Paulum interiect. De Mort. Persec. cap. 2.
(a) Critic. in Baron. ann. 43. num. iii.
(b) Ibid. num. ii.
(c) Ibid. num. iii.
(d) . . . cum verus ejus adventus annus nos lateat. Id. ann. 54. num. ii.
many days. Thence he went to Cesarea by the sea-side, where he preached to Cornelius, and his companion. Thence he returned to Jerusalem. And some time afterwards he was imprisoned there by Herod Agrippa. This brings down the historie of our Apostle to the year 44. A few years after this he was present at the Council of Jerusalem. Nor is there any evidence, that he came thither barely for that occasion. It is more probable, that he had not yet been out of Judea. Soon after that Council he was at Antioch, where he was reproued by St. Paul.

The books of the New Testament afford no light for determining, where Peter was for several years after that. But to me it appears not unlikely, that he returned in a short time to Judea from Antioch: and that he stayd in Judea a good while, before he went thence any more. And it seems to me, that when he left Judea, he went again to Antioch the chief city of Syria. Thence he might go into other parts of the continent, particularly, Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia, which are expressly mentioned at the beginning of his first epistle. In those countreys he might stay a good while. It is very likely, that he did so: and that he was well acquainted with the Christians there, to whom he afterwards wrote two epistles.

When he left those parts, I think, he went to Rome: but not till after Paul had been in that city, and was gone from it. Several of St. Paul's epistles furnish out a cogent argument of Peter's absence from Rome for a considerable space of time. St. Paul, in the last chapter of his epistle to the Romans, writ, as we suppose, in the beginning of the year 58. salutes many by name, without mentioning Peter. And the whole tenour of the epistle makes it reasonable to think, that the Christians there had not yet had the benefit of that Apostle's presence, and instructions. During his two years confinement at Rome, which ended, as we suppose, in the spring of the year 63. St. Paul wrote four, or five epistles, those to the Ephesians, the second epistle to Timothy, to the Philippians, the Colossians, and Philemon: in none of which is any mention of Peter. Nor is any thing said, or hinted, whence it can be concluded, that he had ever been there.

I think therefore, that Peter did not come to Rome before the year 63. or perhaps 64. And, as I suppose, he obtained the crown of martyrdom in the year 64. or 65. Consequently, St. Peter could not reside very long at Rome, before his death.

It is very remarkable, that (e) Nicephorus, at the beginning of the ninth centurie, in his Chronographie, computes St. Peter's episcopate at Rome to have been of two years duration only. For that passage I am indebted to (f) Basnage, whose argument upon it I have placed below. Nicephorus,

(e) ὁ ἐν ἑαυτῷ ἐπισκοπεῖσαντες ἀπὸ χριστοῦ, καὶ τῶν ἀποστόλων, α Πέτρος ἀποστόλος ἐγέρει.

(f) Laetantius Eusebio paullo antiquior Petrum non Claudio quidem, sed Nerone imperante Romam venisse tradit. ... Neque Laetantio propria chronologia hæc eft. In Nicephori enim Chronographia legitmus: Qui Romae episcopatum gессerunt a Christo et Apostolis. Petrus apostolus anvis duobus. Quibus consequens phorus, therefore, (and probably others likewise,) must have supposed, that Peter did not come to Rome, till near the end of his life.

As the foregoing is the most likely account of St. Peter's travels, which I have been able to form; I do not see any reason to believe, that he ever was in Chaldea. Cosmas, of Alexandria, who thought, that by (g) Babylon at the end of St. Peter's first epistle is meant Babylon in Persia, must have supposed, that this Apostle was in that country. And learned men (b) who understand Babylon in the same sense, take it for granted, that St. Peter travelled into that part of the world. But I do not perceive them to support their opinion by testimonies of ancient writers. Which surely would have been of advantage to it.

And there are some passages of ancient authors, where it would be reasonable to expect an account of such a journey, if there had been in those times any knowledge of it, or well attested tradition about it.

Origen, in the passage cited by (i) Eusebius, and already quoted by us likewise from him, says: "Peter is said to have preached to the Jews of the dispersion in Pontus, Galatia, Bithynia, Cappadocia, and Asia. Who at length coming to Rome was crucified."

Eusebius, in his Chronical Canon, as published by Scaliger, says, in the Greek, "that (k) Peter having founded the church in Antioch, went away to Rome preaching the gospel."

Jerome, in his book of Illustrious Men, in like manner says: "that (l) Peter having been at Antioch, and preached to the Jews of the dispersion in Pontus, and the neighboring countries, went to Rome." In another place Jerome says: "that (m) Christ was with the Apostles in all the places whither they went. He was with Thomas in India, with Peter at Rome, with Paul in Illyricum, with Titus in Cephe, with Andrew in Achaia." Why does he not also say, that Christ was with Peter in Babylon?

Consequens est, Petrum biennium circiter ante mortem iter in urbem direxisse. Secus diuturniorem ei episcopatum vindicasset Nicophorus. Basii. ann. 42. num. x.

(g) See vol. xi. 275.

(i) Vid. Euf. H. E. l. 3. cap. i.

(k) Pateros o kurofaios tiu in antiochia evfrécin theouloios ikeklhsiai tis fylhina apistu evfrétpw to evagíllhs. Chr. Can. p. 204.

(l) Simon Petrus ... princeps Apostolorum, potf episcopatum Antiochenis ecclesiae, et predicationem dispersionis eorum, qui de circumcisione crediderant, in Ponto ... secundo Claudii Imperatoris anno, ad expugnationem Simonem Magum, Romam pergit. De V. I. cap. i.

Ephraim the Syrian says, "that (n) Peter preached at Rome, John at Ephesus, Matthew in Palestine, and Thomas in the Indies."

Gregorie Nazianzen (o) speaks of Paul, "as having for his province all the Gentils in general, Peter Judea, Luke Achaima, Andrew Epirus, John Ephesus, Thomas the Indies, and Mark Italie."

Why do none none of these writers take in Babylon, or Persia, or Chaldea, as the Apostle Peter’s province?

Once more. Says Chrysostom: "This (p) is one prerogative of our city, (Antioch,) that we had at the beginning the chief of the Apostles for our matter. For it was fit, that the place, which was first honored with the name of Christians, should have the chief of the Apostles for it’s Paftour. But though we had him for a master a while, we did not detain him, but resigned him to the royal city, Rome. Or rather, we have him still. For though we have not his body, we have his faith." I might refer to other places of Chrysostom, where he speaks of Peter’s having been at Rome. But why does he not also mention Babylon?

I therefore relye upon the account before given of St. Peter’s travels, as most likely. And in particular I observe, that we have not in ancient Christian writers any good assurance of his having ever been in Persia, or Parthia. A learned writer of our time, who contends that he was there, and that his first epistle was writ at the Assyrian Babylon, acknowledgeth, that (q) from that epistle of S. Peter alone we have any assurance of his having been at Babylon.

V. In the historie of St. Paul I have already shewn it to be probable, that he and Peter suffered martyrdom at Rome in 64. or 65.

Cave (r) likewise, in his Life of St. Peter, writ in English, in 1676, placeth the death of this Apostle in 64. or 65. Nor was his mind much altered, when he published his Historia Literaria in 1688. For there also

(n) See Vol. ix. p. 211.
(o) Orat. 25. p. 438. A.
(p) Εν γαρ κέ τετα πελαιντημα της ημιτερα σπλως, το των αποστολων κερανον λαειν, εν αρχι διδασκαλοι ... Άλλα ... δου ετις τελος κυτηρωμ, άλλα παρεξωρισταιν τη βασιλει τομ. x. in Princip. Ad. Ap. bom. 2. T. 3. p. 70.
(r) "The date of his death is differently assigned by the ancients. ...
That which seems to me most probable, is, that it was in the tenth of Nero, or the year lxv. Which I thus compute. Nero’s burning of Rome is placed by Tacitus under the Consulship of C. Lucanus, and M. Licinius, about the month of July, that is, A. Ch. lxiv. This act procured him the hatred and clamours of the people. Which having in vain endeavored several ways to remove and pacify, he at last resolved upon this project, to derive the odium upon the Christians. Whom therefore, both to appease the Gods, and please the people, he condemned as guilty of the fact, and caused to be executed with all manner of acute and exquisite tortures. This persecution began, as we may suppose, about the end of that, or the beginning of the following year. And under this persecution, I doubt not, it was, St. Peter suffered, and changed earth for heaven." Cave’s Life of St. Peter, sec. xi.
also he supposeth, that (s) St. Peter died a martyr at Rome, in the year of Christ 64, at the beginning of Nero’s persecution. And indeed expressed himself with a great deal of assurance and positiveness.

Jerome concludes his article of St. Peter, saying: “He (t) was buried at Rome in the Vatican, near the triumphal Way, and is in veneration all over the world.” We likewise formerly (u) saw a passage of Caius, about the year 212. where he speaks of the tombs of the two Apostles, Peter and Paul, at Rome. And Chrysostom, in a passage lately cited, supposes St. Peter to have been buried in that city.

VI. I shall now take notice of a few things hitherto entirely omitted, or but slightly touched upon. His Episcopate at Antioch, his having been five and twenty years Bishop of Rome, his children, his wife’s martyrdom, said to have abscended at Rome, the manner of his crucifixion.

1. We have seen several authors, who speak of Peter’s having been at Antioch. Chrysostom seems to have supposed, that (x) he was there a good while. This may be also implied in the passage of Jerome before cited (y) from his Book of Illustrious Men, where he speaks of Peter’s episcopate of Antioch. And in his Commentarius upon the epistle to the Galatians he says, that (z) Peter was at first Bishop of Antioch, and afterwards Bishop of Rome. Eusebius speaking of Ignatius, and his epistles, calls (a) him the second Bishop of Antioch after Peter. Jerome (b) calls Ignatius the third Bishop after Peter. They both suppose Euodius, of whom (c) Eusebius speaks elsewhere, to have been the first Bishop of Antioch, or the first after Peter.

What real foundation there is for all this, is hard to say: whether it be built entirely upon what St. Paul writes Gal. ii. 11 . . . 16. or whether there was some other ground for it.

But, as before said in the account above given of St. Peter’s travels, I think, that St. Peter did not stay long at Antioch, the first time he was there, which is mentioned by St. Paul, but returned to Judea, and after some time leaving that country, he went to Antioch again. Where he might

(a) . . . τὸν κατ’ ἀντίκειμαν εὔτερον διαδόχον διετερος τὴν ἵσινον τιν κεκληρο-μίνος. H. E. l. 3. cap. 36. p. 106. D.

(b) Ignatius Antiochenæ ecclesiae tertius post Petrum Apostolum Episcopus. De V. I. cap. 16.

(c) H. E. l. 3. cap. 22.
might stay a while, and then go and preach in the countrey mentioned at the beginning of his first epistle, and then go to Rome.

2. It has been said, that Peter was Bishop of Rome five and twenty years. This is said by Jerome in (d) his book of Illustrious Men, and (e) in his Chronicle, or his Latin edition of Eusebius's Greek Chronicle, or Chronicle Canon, as it is sometimes called: where (f) he added divers things, not said by Eusebius himself.

But this is inconsistent with the historie in the Acts. Nor is it any where expressly said by Eusebius: though, perhaps, it might be argued from some things said by him. How the origin of this notion is accounted for by (b) Pagis, and (i) Baluze, both Romanists, may be seen in their own words, which I transcribe below. I refer likewise to (k) Bajnace, and (l) Dodwell. In all whom are good observations relating to this point.

Clement

(d) Post episcopatum Antiochenis ecclefiae, et pradicationem dispersionis eorum, qui de circumcisione crediderant in Ponto. ... Romam pergit: ibique viginti quinque annis cathedram faceridotalem tenuit, usque ad ultimum annum Neronis, id est, decimum quartum. De V. I. cap. 7.

(b) Praeflat hic Laætantii citati verba in medium afferre. Apostoli per annos xxv. usque ad principium Neroniani Imperii per omnes provincias et civitates Ecclesiae fundamenta miserrunt. Cunque Jiam Nero imperaret, Petrus Romam adventi. ... Ex his viginti quinque annis, qui ad pradicationem omnium Apostolorum ex æquo pertinent, orta videtur opinio de xxv. annis, qui vulgo tribuuntur S. Petro in sede Romanâ. Pag. ann. 43. num. iii.

(i) Fortassis ergo ex his viginti quinque annis, qui ad pradicationem omnium Apostolorum æque pertinent, orta est opinio de viginti quinque annis, quos quidem veteres, et innumerabile recentiorum agmen, sancto Petro apostolo tribuunt in sede Romana. Sane licet frustra et supervacanæ a nonnullis negari putem adventum ejus ad urbeb Romam, qui clarissimis veterum testimonii comprobatus est, de tempore tamen multum ambigo, cum videam tot tantæque difficultates habere eorum sententiam, qui illum Romam venisse volunt Claudio imperante, ut coaèsti sint duplicare prædicationem ejus in urbe, et duplex item ejus cum Simone Mago certamen comminisci, primo quidem temporibus Claudii, dein principatu Neronis. Quæ res quam aburda sit, cum id a nullo veterum prodictum sit memoria literarum, pervident i tràrum rerum periti. ... Itaque si fas ef sent recedere a vulgari, et in animis hominum insita opinione, ei Laætianam lubenter præferrem; id est, Petrum quidem Romæ prædictae evangeliæ facile concederem, non sub Tiberio Claudio, et vulgo putant, sed sub Nerone Claudio. &c. Steph. Baluze. annot. ad libr. de M. P. cap. 2.

(k) Ann. 42. n. x. xi.

Clement of Alexandria (m) reckons Peter among those Apostles, who had children. According to him, Philip was another. Epiphanius says, that (n) Peter came to Christ after he was married, and had children. Jerome, in his first book against Jovinian, takes notice, that (o) in the Circuits, probably meaning the Recognitions, mention was made both of Peter's wife and daughter. But, says he, that is not a canonical book. And still we have a passage in the Recognitions, where St. Peter's wife is mentioned: but, as (p) Cotelerius observes, what was said of Peter's daughter is wanting. Possibly these things may illustrate the words of Peter, recorded Matt. xix. 27. Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed thee. What shall we have therefore? And indeed Origen, in his Commentary upon St. Matthew says: "It (q) seems, that Peter did not leave nets only, but also a houfe, and a wife, whose mother the Lord healed of a fever, and, as may be supposed, children, and possibly likewise some small estate."

4. Farther, Clement of Alexandria (r), cited also by (s) Eusebius, informs us: "It was said, that the blessed Peter, seeing his wife led forth to death, rejoiced for the grace of God vouchsafed to him: and calling to her by name exorted, and comforted her, saying: Remember the Lord."

If time and place had been mentioned, it would have added to the credibility of the storie. However she might be at Rome, as we know Peter was. And if so, she might suffer about the same time with him. For Nero's persecution took in people of both sexes, and all conditions, as we know from the account given by Tacitus. And we learn from St. Paul, that Peter was attended by his wife in his travels. 1 Cor. ix. 5.

5. It is also said, that "(t) St. Peter being imprifoned at Rome, or being in some imminent danger of suffering, the brethren there entertained him to

---

(n) Μετὰ γὰρ τὸ γῆμαι, καὶ τικία κατείχασι, καὶ πεθανεῖν ἐκείνην, ὑπότυχε τῷ σωτηρί, ἵνα ἐκείνην ἐκδύσωσιν. Har. 30. num. 22. p. 147. B.
(o) Ποίσσωμα αὐτεπὶ καὶ τῶν Πητροῦ διερείσαι, ὡς ἐποιεῖτο σοι σεμπρώνως καὶ σπάσατα, γίνεσθαι, καὶ στοιχεῖον ἔριδον εἰς τῷ ἱερί. Ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς ἢ τοῦ πατρὸς ἢ τῶν πατρῶν, ἢ τῶν πατρὸν ἢ τῶν πατρῶν. Ἐπιφαν. Η. 30. ϊ. v. 168. in.
(r) H. E. l. 3. cap. 30.
(s) Φασὶ γὰρ, τῶν μακαρίων πείρων θεασάμενοι τοῖς αὐτοῦ γυναικῶν ἀγγέλιοι τοῖς ἰκτίοις, ὑπόκειτο τῆς κληρονομείας χάριν. ... ἵππωμεν τὰ ἐν μαλακτρικοῖς καὶ παρακλητικοῖς ἰκτίσματα ἀρονιστικαί. Μέμνησο ὥς ἀπεὶ τοῦ κυρίου. Str 7. p. 735. B.
(t) Idem Petrus postea, vixiu Simone, cum precepta Dei populo seminaret, excitavit animos Gentilium: quibus eum quærentibus, Christianæ animæ deprecæ to confult his safety by flight, and to reserve himself for farther service and useful service. At length he was persuaded, and went out in the dark night. But when he came to the gate, he saw Christ entering into the city. Whereupon he said: Lord, whither art thou going? Christ answered, I am come hither to be crucified again. By which Peter apprehended himself to be reproved, and perceived, that Jesus spake of his death, and that now he was to be crucified in his servant. Accordingly Peter turned back, and gave satisfaction to the brethren. And being soon after taken up, he was crucified.

This story is in Ambrose, Bishop of Milan, in the fourth century. Tillemont (u) has endeavoured to find some grounds for it, or references to it, in more ancient authors. But they are very obscure, and doubtful. Bajnace (x) has some remarks upon it, which may be read by such as have leisure.

6. St. Peter's death, and the manner of it, we saw just now in a passage cited from (y) Origen, and likewise, that when he was to be crucified, he desired, it might be in that way. So likewise Jerome, "that (z) he was crucified by order of Nero, and to crowned with martyrdom, his head downward, and his feet lifted up, saying: He was unworthy to be crucified, as his master was." To the like purpose (a) Prudentius. Chrysostom also several times speaks (b) of Peter's being crucified with his head downwards.

And

gi. . . Intellit ergo Petrus, quod iterum Christus crucifigendus effet in fervulo. Itaque sponte remeavit. Interrogantibus Chriftianiis reponfu:

reddidit, flatimque correptum, per crucem duxit honoravit Dominum Jesum.

(u) S. Pierre. art. 35. et note 39. Mem. Tom. i.

(x) Ann. 65. num. xi.

(y) See p. 424.

(z) A quo et affixus cruci, martyrio coronatus est, capite ad terram verfo, et in sublime pedibus elevatis: affiérens, fe indignum, qui fic crucifigeretur, ut Dominus fuus. De V. I. cap. i.

(a) Primum Petrum rapuit fententia, legibus Neronis,

Pendere juftum praeminente ligno.

Ille tamen veritus cellae decus aemulando mortis

Ambire tanti gloriam magnifi:

Exiguit, ut pedibus merfum caput imprimant fupinis,

Quo spefctet imum flipitem cerébro.

Pel. 51. cap. 12.

(b) . . . atque b c plénius lúctem dvnamin k c mi
tos té phrasos únti auté áptobavien, k t w

c m kata
k

tak

x. l. Crh. in Pr. Ad. hom. 4.

T. 3. p. 93. E.

Pwdeles k
c
k

c

k

m
c apostumhie, dé b d' k

imantics té déspont té

couno té

c

ta

c

x. In Gen. hom. 66.

T. 4. p. 630. A.

O

xrisos

drhován

xos

apokpalam

k

x

xv

k

x

x

x

x

x

x

And it is unquestioned, that (c) among the Romans some were so crucified, to add to their pain and ignominie. Nevertheless some ancient writers, who speak of Peter's martyrdom by crucifixion, do (d) not take notice of that circumstance. Which has induced (e) Bajnage to dispute the truth of it. Allowing, that (f) Peter was crucified in that manner, he thinks it not reasonable to suppose, it was at his own request. And it must be acknowledged, that his reasoning is plausible.

It seems to me, that Peter might be crucified in that manner, and that it might be owing to the spite and malice of those, who put him to death. The saying, that it was at his own desire, may have been at first only the oratorical flight of some man of more wit than judgement. But the thought was pleasing, and therefore has been followed by many.

VII. Some learned men have denied, that Peter ever was at Rome, as (g) Scaliger, (b) Salmasius, (i) Frederick Spanheim, and some others. Mr. Bower is much of the same mind. His words are: "From (k) what has been hitherto said every impartial judge must conclude, that it is at best very much to be doubted, whether St. Peter ever was at Rome." Nevertheless there have been many learned men among the Protestants, as well as Romanists, whose impartiality was never questioned, who have believed, and argued very well, that Peter was at Rome, and suffered

(c) Vid. Bajnag. ann. 65. num. xiv.

(e) Ubi supra. num. xiv.
(f) Concepto, ut plures testantur, sublimibus Petrum veftigiis affixum cruci, quin ex Pretoris mandato irrogatum hoc supplicii, quo pereunt addeetur dolor et ludibrium, non credere non possumus... Præpoftera fane et vana ea videtur esse modéstia, quam ascribunt Petro... Neque priscorum aliquem martyrum, qui in crucem aci fuerunt, similis unquam incedit humilitas... Præterea certo certius est, atrocius eorum fuifìe supplicium, qui inverfo, quam qui reño capite fugebantur cruci... Martyris autem est, imperatam sibi mortem perferre fortiter, non vero poscere, ut intendantur a carnißce tormenta. Id. ib. num. xv.

(k) History of the Popes. Vol. i. p. 5.
fered martyrdom there. I refer to some: (l) Cave, (m) Pearson, (n) Le Clerc, (o) Bajifle, (p) Barratier.

I shall therefore remind my readers of some testimonies of ancient writers, relating to this matter, making also a few remarks upon them. And then let every one judge.

I begin with Clement of Rome, who wrote an epistle to the Corinthians, before the year of Christ 70. as some think, or about the year 96. as others suppose. In that epistle are these expressions. "But (q) not to " induct any longer, says he, upon examples of former times, let us come " to those worthy, that are nearest to us, and take the brave examples " of our own age. Through zeal and envie they who were the most " righteous pillars of the Church (r) have been perfecuted even to a " cruel death. Let (s) us set before our eyes the excellent Apostles, " Peter through unrighteous zeal underwent not one or two, but many " labours, till at laft being martyred he went to the place of glorie that " was due to him. Through (t) zeal Paul obtained the reward of pa- " tience. Seven times he was in bonds, he was whipped, he was fto- " ned. He preached both in the Eaft and in the Weft. And having " taught the whole world righteoufsneife, and (u) coming to the borders " of the Weft, and suffering martyrdom under the Governours, so he " departed out of the world, and went to the most holy place, being a " moft eminent pattern of patience.

" To (v) these men, who lived a divine life, was joyned a great mul- " titude of choice ones, who having undergone through zeal many re- " proches and torments, became an excellent examplè among us."

From these passages I think it may be justly concluded, that Peter and Paul were Martyrs at Rome in the time of Nero's perficution. For they suffered among the Romans, where Clement was Bishop, and in whose name he was writing to the Corinthians. They were Martyrs, when many others were an example, or pattern, of a like patience among them. To these Apostles, says Clement, was joyned a great multitude of choice ones, or elect, that is, Christians. This is a manifeft description of Nero's perfecution at Rome, when a multitude of Christians there were put to death

(l) Hist. Lit. in Petro.
(m) De Successione primorum Romae Episcoporum. Diff. i. cap. viii. et vili.
(n) Hist. Ecc. ann. 67. n. i. et ann. 68. n. 1. 2.
(o) Ann. 64. num. ix. x. xi.
(p) De Successione Episc. Roman. cap. i.
(q) Clem. ep. ad Cor. cap. v. vii.
(r) ... idiwxbasv xj iews basaty deixi.
(i) Aúwomai peró órhalwv iewov tis ágavhis aporólov. Pétres dia ákono ádikoi.
... k' étow marturiasai ískypéthi ejc tis órhalwvntos tovón tis dózis.
(1) Dia ákono tis vàldos áskypéthn basatov diá xuv.
(n) Kai iet to tírra tis óustov iewov, k' marturiasai ískp tis òpovnov, útwv áskypéthn tis koúrfais k' ejc tis ágion tovón áskypéthn, úskypéthn iewovntos mágístov úskypéthn.
(x) Tátois tòis àdlevon, òtwv politeusamíonov suipórfisíthi poló polýsos iklak- " tov, òtwv iewov, àkíakíos k' básiosois dia ákono òskypéthntos úskypéthntos áskypéthntos áskypéthntos.
death under grievous reproaches, and exquisite torments, as we are assured by Tacitus. These were joyed to the excellent Apostles, Peter and Paul, before mentioned. Therefore Peter and Paul had suffered at that place, and at that time: and, as it seems, according to this account, at the beginning of that persecution. Which may be reckoned not at all improbable.

When Clement says, that Paul suffered martyrdom under the Governours, he may be understood to mean by order of the magistratie. It cannot be hence inferred, that Peter and Paul did not die by Nero's order, or in virtue of his edict against the Christians. It should be considered, that Clement is not an historian. He is writing an epistle, containing divers exhortations. It was not needfull for him to be more particular. He does not name the city, in which either Peter, or Paul died, nor the death, which they underwent. But he intimates, that they suffered a cruel death, together with many choice ones among them. Which must mean Rome. And he plainly represents these Apostles as Martyrs, who had suffered through envie and unrighteous zeal. The place and the manner of their death were well known to the Christians at Corinth, to whom Clement was writing.

If we consider, where Clement was, he may be reasonably excused from naming the Emperour, or being otherwise more particular. This epistle was writ soon after some troubles, which the Christians at Rome had met with, as appears plainly from the beginning of it: meaning, it is likely, either the persecution of Nero, or of Domitian, the next peructor of the Christians. It is not at all strange, that at such a time Clement should think himself obliged to circumpection in the manner of his expressions.

Indeed the primitive Christians were always very carefull, not to speak disrespectfully of Heathen Princes, or other Magistrates, how much ever they suffered from them. The epistle begins in this manner. The calamities and afflictions, brethren, which have befallen us, have somewhat retarded our answer to your inquiries. Those afflictions intend, as before said, the persecution of Nero, or Domitian. And if so, certainly there is much mildness in the expressions. But a very different file is used presently after in speaking of the diffension, which there was among the Christians at Corinth. It is called a wicked and ungodly sedition, unbecoming the elect of God, fomented by a few rash and self-willed men.

Bp. Pearson has argued from this place, that (y) Peter and Paul did not die by order of Nero himself, but by order of the Prefects of the City, when Nero was absent, and, particularly, on Febr. 22. in the year of Christ 68. and the last year of Nero. And he says, that (z) the Greek word,

(z) Quod si Romam diserte non expresserit, Neronem certe multo minus delineavit. Dicit enim Paulum ίτι των ἱερεῶν. Neque enim ἱερεῖος Imperatores dixit sunt; sed qui sub Imperatore, in provinciis præfetim, Praefidum loca sub variis nominibus obtinebant. Neque hæc vox tantum in provinciis solennis fuit, sed etiam Romæ. . . Tales erant Romæ, ultimo Neronis word, which I have rendered Governours, or Magistrates, never denotes the Emperour, but only the Prefects of the city, or of the provinces.

But Pearson was very unhappy in that observation. For Nero was at Rome in the begining of the year 68. Pagi (a) and Baines (b) have shewn, that whereas Nero was absent from Rome almost two years, the greatest part of 66. and 67. he arrived at Rome from Greece in December 67.

And the word, which I have rendered Governours, is often used, not only for Prefects, but also for Kings, and Emperours, or other supreme magistrates. Of (c) which I place several instances in the margin.

However, both the noun and the verb are general words, and are used concerning Governours supreme and subordinate. As is apparent from that well known text. Luke iii. i. Now (d) in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Caesar, Pontius Pilate being Governour of Judea. As the words are well rendered in our version. But, literally, they might be translated in this manner. Now in the fifteenth year of the government of Tiberius Caesar, Pontius Pilate being Governour of Judea.

As for the word being in the plural number: it is no uncommon thing to prefer that to the singular, when we are obliged to be cautious, and intend, as I suppose Clement did, to speak in a general way. In short Clement shews, that Peter and Paul had died by martyrdom, and not in a tumult of the people, but by order of the magistrate, meaning the Emperour, though he is not named.

So that I must take the liberty to say, that Pearson's observation, that Peter and Paul were put to death, not by Nero, but by the Prefects of Rome, or some other great officer, in the absence of the Emperour, appears

(a) Ann. 67. num. ii.
(b) Ann. 66. num. vi. et 67. n. v.
(c) 1 Kings xv. 13. it is said of Asa: And also Maachah, his mother, he removed from being Queen. In the lxx. it is thus: Καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν μετὰ εὐαγγελίζεσθαι τὴν μητέραν έν θεσσαλίων. 2 Chron. vii. 18. When God appeared to Solomon, he said: Then will I establish the throne of thy kingdom. Thou shall not fail thee a man to be Ruler in Israel. Οὐ τι σαρακάτω νος έν θεσσαλίων τού βασιλέως αὐτοῦ νος έν εὐαγγελίζεσθαι.
(d) 2 Chr. ix. 26. And he reigned over all the Kings from the river. Καὶ τού θεσσαλίων πάντων τού βασιλέως αὐτοῦ νος. When St. Matthew ch. ii. 6. quotes the words of the Prophet Micah: Out of thee shall come a Governour, έν θεσσαλίων, that shall rule my people Israel: he does not mean a Governour of inferior rank, but the Messiah himself. I shall add only a like instance or two from Josephus, and from a Greek classic, though many might be mentioned. μισχης ὀν τις διδασκαίηται τῆς θεσσαλίων γεγομένων. Joseph. Ant. l. 20. cap. x. sect. ult. n. 2. ὁ διδασκαίηται μιν ὀν τῆς θεσσαλίων γεγομένων. D. B. l. l. 2. cap. 14. n. 4. τον περιστέρεον αὐτῶν ἀποδίδει έφωνεών γεγομένων. Dion. Hal. l. 4. cap. 4. p. 202. ed. Hudson.

(d) En ὀν τις διδασκαίηται τῆς γεγομένων τιθεῖται κάσαταις, γεγομένων τετίται πελάται τῆς θεσσαλίων.
pears to be of no value. And it is destitute of all authority from historie. For we shall see, as we proceed, that the death of these two Apostles is continually ascribed to Nero by all who speak distinctly about it.

One thing more I must take notice of. From these passages of Clement it has been argued, that Peter never was at Rome, in (e) this manner. "Clemens Romanus, (who was personally acquainted with the Apostles, and knew very well where they traveled,) writes a letter from Rome to Corinth, and mentions St. Paul’s traveling very far to spread the gospel: but in the same section, though he mentions St. Peter’s sufferings and martyrdom, yet he says nothing of his traveling much, nor one word of his ever having been at Rome." Upon which I beg leave to observe, first. It seems to me, that Clement says, Peter and Paul suffered martyrdom at Rome. For speaking of the great multitude of the elect, who had been an excellent example of patience among them, meaning the Romans, he says, they (f) were joined to or with the good Apostles, before mentioned. Therefore the Apostles had suffered in the same place. Certainly Clement, who wrote this, did not think, that Peter died at Babylon in Mesopotamia, and Paul at Rome in Italie. Secondly. The reason, why Clement so particularly mentions St. Paul’s travels, probably, was, because the extent of his preaching was very remarkable. And it is likely, that Clement refers to Rom. xv. 19. Thirdly. His omitting to speak of Peter’s travels is not a denial of his having traveled a great deal. Nor does it imply, that he had not been at Rome. St. Paul must have been twice in the West, and at Rome, if he suffered martyrdom there. But Clement does not say so, though he knew it very well. As did the Corinthians likewise. But when we speak or write of things well known, (as these things were at that time,) there is no need to be very particular. It was sufficient, if Clement mentioned such things, as would render his exhortations effectual.

I shall now transcribe below (g) some like observations of Pearson, in his confutation of Salmasius.

Upon

(e) See Dr. Benfon’s Preface to St. Peter’s first epistle, sec. iii. p. 157. 2d. ed.

(f) τέτοιοι . . . συνθροίσθη πολύ πλήθος ἱκλεκτών.

(g) Denique manifestum est, nihil hic a Clemente de Urbe, vel de Imperatore diserte et expressim dictum esse, quia a Romanis ad Corinthios scriptit, qui haec omnia, non minus quam ipsce, noverrunt. Ima Clemens mentionem loci non fecit, non quia ipsce ignorabat, sed quia illi cognoverunt. Nam si ignorasset quo in loco, quia in regione, aut quia in orbis parte, mortuus est Petrus, quomodo afferrere potuit, eum martyrio coronatumuisse? . . . Proculdubio hic loci omiissio non ex ignorantia cujufpiam, aut scriptoris alterius, sed ex certissimâ omnium, ad quo spectatbat haec epistolà, tum Romanorum, tum Corinthiorum, aliorumque fidelicium cognitione et explorata scientiâ, quæ ulteriorum expositionem minime requirebat. Ac tandem argumentum hoc negativum ex Clemente producunt, non eorum sed nostrum est. Clemens optime novit, et ubi, et quomodo passus est S. Petrus. Idem etiam bene noverrunt tum Romanì, tum Corinthì. Aliter eos eâ de re certiores fecisset-Clemens. Pearson. de Success. prim. Romæ Epis. Diff. i. cap. 8. sec. ix.
Upon the whole, I cannot but think, that these passages of Clement bear a testimonie to the martyrdoms both of Peter and Paul, and that at Rome, which cannot be evaded.

Ignatius, about 108. writing to the Romans, says: "I (h) do not "command you, as Peter and Paul. They were Apostles. I am a "condemned person." Ignatius must have supposed, that the Christians at Rome had been instructed by Peter, as well as by Paul. The observations of (i) Pearson, and (k) Barratier, upon this place, which I put below, appear very just.

The Preaching of Peter, or of Peter and Paul, quoted by several ancient writers, (as has been shewn in this work,) though not as a book of authority, composed (l) about the middle of the second century, or sooner, makes mention of Peter's being at Rome, in this manner, as cited by Latantius. "After (m) his resurrection Christ opened to his disciples all things that should come to pass, which things Peter and Paul preached at Rome." And what follows. There (n) is another large quotation of this book in the Author of Rebaptizing, writ about 256. where it is supposed, that Peter and Paul were together at Rome.

Dionysius, Bishop of Corinth about 170. in a letter to the church of Rome, inscribed to Soter their Bishop, as cited by Eusebius, takes notice, "that (o) Peter and Paul going to Italie, taught there, and suffered martyrdom about the same time."

Irenæus about 178. speaks of the church of Rome, "(p) as founded and

(h) Οἱ χ' ὡς πίπτες κάπολος διακαίσομαι ὑμᾶν. Εκάνοι ἀπότολοι, ἵνα κατακεῖτος. Ad Rom. cap. 4.

(i) Quod enim ex his verbis ad Romanos scriptis apertius, quam fan cellimum Martyrem in ea fententia fuisset, quod Petrus, non minus quam Pau-

(ii)

(k) Ignatius, . . Romanis scribens, negat se ipsis, tanquam Petrum et Paulum, praecipere velle. Cur Petrum et Paulum unà nominat, nisi quo uterque Romæ fuerit? Cur Petrum, si cum Romanis nullum nexus habuerit? Si enim Romæ non fuerit, tum Romanis non scripserit, nil magis cum iis commune habeat, vel iis præceperat, quam Iacobus, vel Judas, vel Joannes. Manifestum est, Ignatium Romanum Petri iter novisset. Barrat. ubi supr. num. iii. p. 5.

(l) See note (f).

(m) Sed et futura aperuit illis omnia, quæ Petrus et Paulus Romæ prædi-
l. 4. cap. 21. p. 422.

(o) Omoios διό κάθε τι αὐτον ὠμός διδαξαντις έμας τετάνεσαν κατά τοῦ άπότου κα-

(p) Sed quoniam valde longum est in hoc tali volumine omnium ecclesiarum enumerare succedentes; maxima, et antiquissima, et omnibus cognita, a gloriosissimis Apostolis, Petro et Paulo, Romæ formatae et constituta ecclesiae, eam quam habet ab Apostolis traditionem, et annuntiatam omnibus fidem. sec. Adv. Haer. l. 3. cap. 3.
and established by the two great Apostles Peter and Paul." In another place he says, "that (q) Matthew wrote his gospel, whilst Peter and Paul were preaching at Rome, and establishing the church there." Irenaeus, who was as likely to know as most, had no doubt about these things. And some of his arguments with heretics are partly built upon them; well knowing, that they could not be contested, and that they were generally allowed.

According to Clement of Alexandria, who flourished about the year 194. St. Mark's Gospel (r) was writ at the desire of St. Peter's hearers at Rome.

Tertullian, about the year 200. and after, often speaks (s) of Peter being at Rome, and teaching there, and suffering martyrdom together with Paul, or about the same time.

Caius, about 212. observes, that (t) in his time were to be seen at Rome the tombs of the Apostles, Peter and Paul, who had established that church.

Origen, about 230. as cited by Eusebius, says, that (u) Peter having preached in Pontus, Galatia, and other places, at length came to Rome, where he was crucified.

Cyprian (x) at Carthage, about 248. and afterwards, always supposed the church of Rome to have been established by Peter. So (y) likewise does Firmillian, in Cappadocia, in his letter, writ in 258.

Laelantius

Videamus quod lac a Paulo Corinthii hauserint... Quid etiam Romani de proximo sinent, quibus evangelium et Petrus et Paulus sanguine quoque suum signatum reliquerunt. Adv. Marcion. l. 4. cap. 5. p. 505. B.
Orientem fidem Romae primus Nero cruentavit. Tunc Petrus ab altero eingitur, quem cruci addringit. Tunc Paulus civitatis Romanae consequitur nativitatem, quam illic martyri renacitur generofitate. Scorpia. cap. 15. p. 633. B.
(t)... iu@xiis ta te@pia. taw ta@tw ioe@um@wn inkh@fai. Ap. Euseb. H. E. l. 2. cap. 25. p. 68. in... And see in this work Vol. iii. p. 371.
(x) Fa@tw e@t autem Cornelius episcopus de Dei et Christi ejus judicio... cum nemo ante fe fa@tw e@ft, cum Fabian locus, id eft, cum locus Petri, et gradus cathedrae facerdotalis vacaret. Cyprian. ad Antonian. ep. 55. p. 104.
(y) Atque ego in hac parte ju@te indignor ad hanc tam apertam et mani- fe@lam
Laurentius (z) about 306. in his Institutions, ascribes the death of Peter and Paul to Nero at Rome.

The same Laurentius, or whoever is the Author of the book of the Deaths of Persecutors, is very clear, that (a) in the reign of Nero, Peter, came to Rome, and that by his order Peter, was crucified, and Paul also put to death.

Eusebius, both in his Demonstration, and in his Ecclesiastical Historie, bears witness to the same things. Not now to insist on his Chronicle. In the former (b) he says, "that Peter was crucified at Rome with his "head downward, and Paul beheaded." In his Ecclesiastical Historie, speaking of Nero, "as (c) the first persecutor of the Christians, he says, "that he put to death the Apostles, at which time Paul was beheaded at "Rome, and Peter crucified, as historie relates. And the account, he "says, is confirmed by the monuments still seen in the cemeteries of "that city, with their names inscribed upon them." And what follows. In another chapter of the same work he says: "that (d) Linus was the first Bishop of Rome after the martyrdom of Paul and Peter." It is needless to refer to any more of the many places of this learned Bishop of Casarea, where he appears to have been fully persuaded, that these two Apostles accomplished their martyrdom at Rome.

Athanasius (e) supposes both Peter and Paul to have suffered martyrdom in that city.

Ephraim the Syrian, about 370. says, that (f) Peter taught at Rome.

Epiphanius, as may be remembered, says, "that (g) Matthew wrote first, festeam Stephani futubtitam, quod qui sic de episcopatus sui loco gloriatur, et fe succeditionem Petri tenere contendit... multas alias petras inducat... Stephanus, qui per succeditionem cathedram Petri habere fe praedicat, nullo adversus haereticos zelo excitatur. Firmilian. ep. Cyprian. 75. p. 225.

(z) Itaque poft illorum obitum, cum eos Nero interemisset, Judaeorum nomen et gentem Velphanianus extinxit, fecictque omnia, que illi futura praedixerat. Instruct. l. 4. cap. 21. p. 423.

(a) Cumque jam Nero imperaret, Petrus Romam advenit... et convertit multos ad futubtiarn... Qua re ad Neronem delata... et primus omnium persecutus Dei servos, Petrum cruci adfixit, et Paulum interficit. De Mort. Persic. cap. 2.

(b) Qui sepetes de ipse brunus cat a kefalhs saugetai, saunlos de ipse stropemetai. Dem. Ev. l. 3. p. 116. C.

(c) Tauny gn ynt omos theomekoiv in tois malis pevetos anakhrnevtheis, ipi tois kata tov exosolov iptebo syphai. Pauilos de ynt anputy brumie nivai kefalois, yf petes sepetos atukhov aieokoloptohvai kata xtvov iotevetai. k. l. H. E. l. 2. c. 25. p. 67. Vid. et l. 2. cap. 22. sin. p. 62. D.

(d) Tais de xmpowv inkolosia meta tiv senvo, yf petes martojs, pevetos kpletos tiv 7iptnpv nivos. H. E. l. 3. cap. 2.

(e) Pentes de y dike tov fowov tov vouds kresttopwv, yf saunlos in epagwv xkalwvthi, kai funwv, anapxhov, yf epwv de ymavvas martojs, yf anapxhov tiv 7iptnpwv. Apol. pro fuga Jud. p. 331.

(g) See vol. viii. p. 303. from Har. 51. num. vi.
first, and Mark soon after, being a companion of Peter at Rome." In another place (b) he speaks of Peter and Paul, as the first Apostles and Bishops of Rome. After whom, he says, were Linus, Cletus, Clement.

Jerome's opinion is well known from his article of St. Peter, in his book of Illustrious Men, where he says, "that (i) Peter was crucified at Rome in the fourteenth year of Nero's reign:" and from (k) his chapter of St. Mark, "whom he calls the disciple and interpreter of Peter, and says, that at the desire of the brethren at Rome he wrote a short Gospel, according to what he had heard from Peter." Not now to refer to any other places.

We lately saw, how (l) Chrysostom says, that Peter having been at Antioch, afterwards went to Rome. In another place he says, that (m) after Peter and Paul Ignatius also suffered martyrdom at Rome. And he thinks it a wise disposition of Providence, that so many should bear the most signal testimonie to truth in a place, which was then the chief seat of impiety and superstition.

According to Sulpicius Severus, who wrote about the year 401. Paul (n) and Peter suffered martyrdom at Rome in Nero's persecution.

Prudentius, about 405. has several times celebrated the martyrdoms of Peter and Paul at Rome. One place was transcribed from him not long (o) ago.

To him I subjoin P. Orosius (p) about 416.

And Theodoret, about 423. well observes, that (q) though Nero put to death two of the principal Christian Lawgivers, Peter and Paul, he could not abolish their laws.

I omit Augustin, and many others, who speak to the like purpose. But I would add, for shewing how general this tradition is, that Abdius Babylonius, as he is called, in his Apostolical Historie, supposes Peter (r) to have been at Rome, and to have suffered martyrdom there.

Nor can any of my readers forbear to recollect the general, and almost unanimous

(b) 'Ev évµην γαρ γεγόνασθα των πετρος καὶ απώλεος οἱ απόστολοι καὶ πίστεοι, τεταλισμένοι καὶ τοιούτου. Ἡρ. 27. num. vi.

(i) See Vol. x. p. 130.

(k) The same. p. 92.

(l) See before. p. 427.

(m) Οἱ δὲ τὴν εὐφόρην ὀψωτέρας, ἄτε σωλήνας τότε ἀποδείκνυσι αὐτὸς οἶκος, καὶ εὐσέβειας ἱεροποιοῦν ἐν συνόδῳ, διὰ τύχη καὶ ἐντυποστήριον βαθύτατον. Αὔτη μὲν ἡ πίστις καὶ τάξις, οὐτῶς οὖσα προκειμένη ἡ μελέτη. Chr. hom. in S. Ignat. Mart. I. 2. p. 599. A.

(o) See before. p. 431.

(p) Nam primus Romæ Christianos suppliciiis et mortibus adsecit, ac per omnes provincias pari persecutione excruciatu imperavit. Ipsiique nomen extirpare conatus, beatissimos Christi apostolos, Petrum crucere, Paulum gladio occidit. Oros. Hift. l. 7. cap. 7.

unanimous testimonies of ancient writers concerning St. Mark: that he was a disciple of St. Peter, that his Gospel is the substance of St. Peter's preaching, and that it was writ at Rome.

It is not needful to make many remarks upon this tradition. But it is cæfie to observe, that it is the general, uncontradicted, disinterested testimony of ancient writers, in the several parts of the world, Greeks, Latins, Syrians. As our Lord's prediction concerning the death of Peter is recorded in one of the four Gospels, it is very likely, that (s) Christians would observe the accomplishment of it. Which must have been in some place. And about this place there is no difference among Christian writers of ancient times. Never any other place was named, beside Rome. Nor (t) did any other city ever glory in the martyrdom of Peter. There were in the second and third centuries disputes between the Bishop of Rome and other Bishops and churches about the time of keeping Easter, and about the baptism of heretics. Yet (u) none denied the Bishop of Rome to have what they called the chair of Peter.

It is not for our honour, nor our interest, either as Christians, or Protestants, to deny the truth of events, ascertained by early and well attested tradition. If any make an ill use of such facts, we are not accountable for it. We (x) are not from a dread of such abuses, to overthrow the credit of all histories. The consequence of which would be fatal.

Fables and fictions have been mixed with the accounts of Peter's being

(s) Non infirmanda esse eâ de re antiquitatis testimonii, multa moment. 1. Convenientissimum fane fuit sciri locum, ubi Petro mors ob lacta eit, ad illustrandum Chrifti de servi fui martyrio oraculum. 2. Locus autem in ignoratione jacet, si in Romana civitate Petrus cruci fuffixus non fuit. Bafnag. ann. 64. n. x.

(u) Cum gravissimos in adversarios inciderint olim Epîscopi Romani, Cyprianos, Firminianos, alióque bene multit, nonne eorum aliquid eam perftinixisset: et gloriationem, quâ Romana fæ efferebat ecclefiæ, utpote quæ nunc præfentia Petri, fanguineque flaverit, eft ad ravin utque utroque ornamento superbiret? Id ib.

(x) Neque ullâ unquam traditio fuit, quæ majore tellium numero cingatur: ut de Petri in urbem adventu dubitari non posset, quin omnia historiæ fundamenta conveallatur. Bafn. ann. 64. n. ix.

Verum hi omnium veteranum patrum testimonii reffelluntur. ... Quæ, malum, impudentia eit, id quidem quod nemo veteranum dixit, temere affirmare: Petrum icilicet sedem fixisse Babylone: id vero quod veteres omnem ecclesiætici scriptores difertissime prodiderunt, adventum videlicet Petri Apoftoli in urbem Romam pertinaciter negare. Atqui nihil in tota historia ecclesiastica illustrius, nihil certius, atque telliator, quam adventus Petri Apoftoli in urbem Romam. Vals. Annot. ad Eusæb. l. 2. c. 15.
being at Rome. But they are not in the most early writers. They have been added since. And it is well known, that fictions have been joined with histories of the most certain and important facts.

The two traditions, concerning Peter's being at Rome and Paul's preaching in Spain, ought not to be compared together. They are not at all alike. The later is not attested by so many, nor so early writers, as the other. And is, probably, a mere conjecture, without any foundation, but the words of Rom. xv. 28. Which are no proof at all.

This argument may be censured by some as prolix, and even needless. But as some, of our own times, as well as formerly, have denied, or disputed this point; I have thought it expedient, to let my readers see the evidences of what appears to myself, as well as to many other Protestants, very certain: that St. Peter was at Rome, and suffered martyrdom there.

C H A P. XIX.

The two Epistles of St. Peter.

I. Their Genuinnesse shewn from Testimonie, and internal Characters. II. The People, to whom they were sent. III. The Place, where. IV. The Time, when they were writ. V. Remarks upon 1 Pet. v. 13.

lesting writ the historic of the Apostle Peter, I now proceed to his epistles. Concerning which three or four things are to be considered by us: their genuinnesse, the persons to whom they were sent, the place where, and the time when they were writ.

I. The first epistle was all along received by catholic Christians, as authentic, and genuine. This we learn from (a) Eusebius. Who likewise says: "Of (b) the controverted books of the New Testament, but yet well known, and approved by many, are that called the epistle of James, and that of Jude, and the second of Peter, and the second and third of John." And in another place: "One (c) epistle of Peter, called the first, is universally received. This the Prefbyters of ancient times have quoted in their writings, as undoubtedly genuine. But that called his second, we have been informed, [by tradition,] has not been received as a part of the New Testament. Nevertheless appearing to many to be useful, it has been carefully studied with the other scriptures." By which, I think, we may be assured, that a great regard was shewn to this epistle by many Christians in the time of our learned Ecclesiastical Historian.

Jerome

(b) Vol. viii. p. 96.
(c) P. 99.
Jerome says: "Peter (d) wrote two epistles, called catholic: the second of which is denied by many to be his, because of the difference of the title from the former."

And Origen before them, in his Commentaries upon the Gospel of St. Matthew, as cited by (e) Eusebius, says: "Peter (f) on whom the "church is built, has left one epistle [universally] acknowledged. Let "it be granted, that he also wrote a second. For it is doubted of."

What those learned writers of the third and fourth centuries say of these two epistles, we have found agreeable to the testimonies of more ancient writers, whom we have consulted. For the first epistle seems to be referred to by (g) Clement of Rome. It is plainly referred to by (h) Polycarp several times. It is also referred to by the (i) Martyrs at Lyons. It was received by (k) Theophilus, Bishop of Antioch. It was quoted (l) by Papias. It is quoted in the remaining writings of (m) Irenæus, (n) Clement of Alexandria, and (o) Tertullian. Consequently, it was all along received. But we do not perceive the second epistle to be quoted by (p) Papias, nor (q) by Irenæus, nor (r) Tertullian, nor (s) Cyprian.

However, both these epistles were generally received in the fourth, and following centuries by all Christians, except the Syrians. For they were received by Athanasius, Cyril of Jerusalem, the Council of Laodicea, Epiphanius, Jerome, Rufin, Augulfin, and others. As may be seen in the alphabetical table, in St. Peter, at the end of the twelfth volume, to which the reader is referred.

Such are the testimonies of ancient writers concerning these two epistles. If we consult the epistles themselves, and endeavor to form a judgement by internal evidence; I suppose, it will appear very probable, that both are of the same author. And it may seem somewhat strange, that any of the ancients hesitated about it, who had the two epistles before them. For with regard to some of the most ancient writers, it may be supposed, that the second epistle had not been seen by them, it not having come to their hands together with the first.

The first epistle being allowed to be St. Peter's, we can argue in favour of the other also after this manner. It bears in the inscription the name of the same Apostle. For so it begins: Simon Peter, a servant, and an Apostle of Jesus Christ. And in ch. i. 14., are these words: Knowing, that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ has shewed me. The writer of this epistle may have had a particular revelation concerning the time of his death, not long before writing this. But it is probable, that here is a reference to our Lord's predictions concerning St. Peter's death, and the manner of it, which are recorded in John xxii. 18. 19.

From

(d) Vol. x. p. 130.  (e) H. E. l. 6. cap. 25. p. 227. A.
(f) See Vol. iii. p. 236.  (g) See Vol. i. p. 97. and 100.
(b) Vol. i. p. 215. 218.  See also p. 192.
(p) Vol. i. p. 250.  (q) Vol. i. p. 374. 375. 381.
From ch. i. 16. 17. 18. it appears, that the writer was one of the disciples, who were with Jesus in the mount, when he was transfigured in a glorious manner. This certainly leads us to Peter, who was there, and whose name the epistle bears in the inscription.

Ch. iii. 1. This second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you: in both which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance: plainly referring to the former epistle, which has been always acknowledged for Peter's. These words are express. But it might have been argued with some degree of probability from ch. i. 12. . . . 15. that he had before writ to the same persons.

Once more, ch. iii. 15. 16. he calls Paul brother, and otherwise so speaks of him, and his epistles, as must needs be reckoned most suitable to an Apostle.

The writer therefore is the Apostle Peter, whose name the epistle bears in the inscription.

So that we are here led to that observation, which Wall placed at the head of his notes upon this second epistle. "It is," says (t) he, a good "proof of the cautiousneffe of the ancient Christians in receiving any "book for canonical, that they not only rejected all those pieces forged "by heretics, under the names of Apostles: . . . but also, if any good "book affirmed by some men, or by some churches, to have been writ-"ten, and sent by some Apostle, were offered to them, they would not," "till fully satisfied of the fact, receive it into their canon." He adds: "There is more hazard in denying this to be Peter's, than there is in "denying some other books to be of that author, to whom they are by "tradition ascribed. For they, if they be not of that Apostle, to whom "they are imputed, yet may be of some other Apostle, or apostolical "man. But this author is either the Apostle, or else by setting his "name, and by other circumstances, he does designedly personate him. "Which no man of piety and truth would do." And then he con-"cludes: "This epistle being written by him but a little before his death. "ch. i. 14. and perhaps no more than one copy sent; it might be a good "while, before a number of copies, well attested, came abroad to the "generality of the Christian churches."

What has been just said is sufficient to confute the opinion advanced by Grotius, that (u) this second epistle was writ by Simeon, Bishop of Jerusalem after James, the Lord's brother. Indeed that opinion cannot be admitted. It is destitute of all authority from antiquity, and is incompetent with the whole tenour of the epistle itself, or at least with many things in it. As has been well observed by (x) Vitringa, and has been now shewn by us.

Jerome, in his article of St. Peter, in his book of Illustrious Men, as already

(t) Critical Notes upon the N. T. p. 358. 359.
(u) Scriptorem autem hujus epistolor eft Simeonem, Episcopum poit Jacobi mortem Hierofolymis, ejufdemque Jacobi, cujas epistolam habe-"mus, luciferorum et imitatorum, &c. Grot. in 2. ep. S. Petri.
(x) Verum quacumque etiam specie f females commendet confection tanto furo-"tiana, haftenus animum inducere non potui, ut eam probem. Epiftola Petri posterior talis eft, ut scripta cenfere nequeat ab impostore. Eft enim gravis, et suauo virtudigniffima. Quod si ita eft, certifice Petro erit vindicanda, quia already seen, says: "Peter (γ) wrote two epistles called catholic: the second of which was by many denied to be his, because of it's differing in style from the former." Of (z) this he speaks likewise in his epistle to Hedibia. Basnag (a) says, he is not able to discern such difference of style in the two epistles. However, Dr. Sherlock, now Bishop of London, has largely treated of this point in his Dissertation concerning the authority of the second epistle of St. Peter. Who observes, p. 203. "that the first and third of the three chapters, into which the epistle is now divided, agree in style with the first epistle. The only difference is in the second chapter, the style of which is no more like to that of the other two, than it is to that of the first epistle. The occasion of this difference seems to be this, that in the second chapter there is a description of the false prophets and teachers, who infested the Church, and perverted the doctrines of the gospel. Some ancient Jewish writer had left behind him a description of the false prophets of his own, or perhaps earlier times. Which description is applied both by St. Peter and St. Jude to the false teachers of their own times." It is added by his Lordship, p. 204. "St. Jerome supposed, and others have followed his opinion, that St. Peter made use of different interpreters, to express his sense in his two epistles. But had that been the case, the difference of style would have appeared in the whole, and not in one part of it only. Which is the present case. And I see no reason to think, that St. Peter did not write both his epistles himself."

That is the account, which his Lordship gives of the difference of the style. Which all will allow to be ingenious, whether they admit it to be right, or not. For some may think, that (b) all this difference of style arises from the subject treated of in the second chapter.

I conclude therefore, that the two epistles, generally ascribed to the Apostle Peter, are indeed his.

Mr. Oftervald, of Neufchatel, speaking of the first of these epistles, says: "It contains very weighty instructions, and is one of the finest books of the New Testament." Of the second he says: "It is a most excellent epistle, as well as the foregoing, and is writ with great strength and majesty."

Certainly,

quia preter praefationem, non temere rejiciendam, alia per hanc epistolam sparsa sunt, quae personam Petri nobis dignitatem quasi monstrant, ut cap. i. 18. iii. 15. Vitring. observat. Sacr. l. 4. cap. g. num. xliii.

(γ) Scripsit duas epistolae, quae catholice nominantur: quorum secunda a plerique ejus effe negatur, propter illi cum priore diffidentiam. De V. i. cap. i.

(b) Concerning this see more hereafter in the Remarks upon St. Jude's epistle. chap. xxi. near the end.
Certainly, these epistles, and the discourses of Peter recorded in the Acts, together with the effects of them, are monuments of a divine inspiration, and of the fulfilment of the promise, which Christ made to him, when he faw him, and his brother Andrew employed in their trade, and casting a net into the sea: Follow me, said he, and I will make you fishers of men. Matt. iv. 18.

To whom sent.

II. Concerning the persons, to whom these epistles were sent, there have been different opinions among both ancients and moderns.

Eusebius (c) speaking of St. Peter's first epistle, as universally acknowledged, says: "It is inscribed by him to the Hebrews, scattered throughout Pentus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia." They who are desirous to know Jerome's opinion, may consider what is transcribed from him Vol. x. p. 130. . . . 133. For he does not seem to me to have any settled judgement about the persons, to whom Peter wrote. Didymus, of Alexandria, supposed, (d) St. Peter's first epistle to have been sent to Jews scattered abroad in several countries. To the same purpose Oecumenius, not only in his argument of the epistle, referred to by me (e) formerly, but also in his commentator (f) upon the beginning of the epistle.

Among the moderns not a few are of the same opinion, as Beza and Grotius in their notes upon the first verse of the first epistle, and Mill (g) in his Prolegomena. Cave says, St. Peter's (h) two epistles were writ chiefly to Jewish Christians. Tillemont, speaking of the first epistle, says, it (i) is addressed particularly to the converted Jews, in those countries, but it speaks also to the Gentils, who had embraced the faith.

But though some of the ancients, as just seen, say, that St. Peter wrote to the believers of the circumcision, we have in the course of this work observed divers others, who say, he wrote to Gentils: as (k) the Author of the Calling of the Gentils, by some supposed to be Prosper of Aquitaine: the (l) Author of the Divine Promises and Predictions: (m) Junilius. Cassiodorus in one place (n) speaks of Peter's writing to the Gentils, in another (o) to believing Jews. Augulfin has twice said, that (p) Peter wrote to Gentils. In like manner another author (q) in a sermon rejoined with his works, who may be supposed to have been his disciple. Gregorie the i. Bishop of Rome, expresseth himself, as if he thought, that

(c) See Vol. viii. p. 103.
(e) Vol. x. p. 414.
(f) Τοῖς ἐκ σεπτιμίας δυτος ἐπισταλεν, ὡς ὃ πανάριος ἐκχώσει αλλ' ἐκείνος ἠφίσας πασι τοῖς ὑπὸ τὴν ὅικημίαν κατακοῦσιν ἱεράς ἀνάκτοις διηδοῦσαι τοις. Oυτος ἐι ἄφωριμος τοῖς κλίμασι πάντων. κ. l. Oecum. T. 2. p. 482. C. D.
(g) Num. 60.
(h) Reliquit post se epistolae duas, Judæis Christianis praecipue inscriptas. H. L. T. i. p. 5.
(i) Il l'adresse particulièrement aux Juifs convertis dans toutes ces provinces, quoique elle parle aussi aux Gentils qui avaient embrassé la foi. S. Pierre art. 33. Mem. T. i.
(l) P. 139.
(m) P. 297. 299.
(n) Vol. xi. p. 308.
(o) P. 313.
(p) Vol. x. p. 248.
(q) The same.
(r) St. Peter's epistles were sent to all Christians in general, both Jews and Gentils, in the countrey mentioned at the beginning of the first epistle. Bede, in his prologue to the seven catholic epistles, largely cited by us formerly lays, that (f) St. Peter's epistles were sent to such as had been proselyted from Gentilifin to Judaffin, and after that were converted to the Christian Religion. He speaks again to the like purpose at the beginning of his Exposition of St. Peter's first epistle. But the Greek word, rendered by us frangers, is not equivalent to proselytes: as was observed long ago by (s) Oecumenius upon the place, and since by (t) Bafsnage.

Mr. Wetstein argues from divers texts, that (u) the first epistle was sent to Gentils. Mr. Hallett in his learned Introduction to the epistle to the Hebrews observes: "Some, says he, go upon the supposition, that St. Peter's epistles were written to Jews. But it seems to me abundantly more natural to suppose, that they were written to Gentil Christians, if we consider many passages of the epistles themselves." Where (x) he proceeds to allege many passages, and, in my opinion, very pertinently. Some of which will be also alleged by me by and by.

Dr. Sykes (y) has lately declared himself in favour of the same sentiment, and argued well for it.

Mr. Bafsnage supposed, that (z) St. Peter's epistles were writ to Jews and Gentils, chiefly the former.

To

(r) Vol. xii. p. 353. 354.
(f) The same. p. 388.
(s) Σημάδια σε το θύμα το ταυτό τω προσηλυτῷ. x. l. Oecum. Vol. 2. p. 483 D.
(x) See his Introduction. p. 23. . . . 25.
(y) "This epistle of St. Peter, says he, was writ to the strangers scattered through several parts of the lesser Asia. And it is plain, that he meant by them Gentils converted in those parts of the world to Christ. He does not mean Jews, but such as were elect, according to the foreknowledge of God the Father. Such, of whose salvation the Prophets inquired, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto them, ch. i. ver. 10. such, for whom Christ was manifested in those last times. ver. 20. such as were λαος εις πιστεουν, an acquired people, who had not obtained mercy: ch. ii. 9. 10. as sheep going astray, but now returned. ver. 25. as men, who in the time past of their life had avowed the will of the Gentils. iv. 3. These are marks sufficient to describe the people, to whom St. Peter wrote. . . . The Gentils were now begotten in Christ to a lively hope. They were become now what the Jews formerly were, a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people. &c." The Scripture doctrine of the Redemption of Man by Jesus Christ.Cb. iii. sec. 252. p. 62. 63. see likewise ch. iv. num. 832. p. 306. 307.
To me it seems, that St. Peter’s epistles were sent to all Christians in general, Jews and Gentils, living in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia: the greatest part of whom must have been converted by Paul, and had been before involved in ignorance, and sin, as all people in general were, till the manifestation of the gospel of Christ.

That St. Peter wrote to all Christians in those countreys, is apparent from the valedictorie blessing, or wish, at the end of the epistle. 1 ep. v. 14. Peace be with you all that are in Christ Jesus. Lewis Cappell, who thought, that St. Peter’s first epistle was writ to Jewish believers, allows, that (a) the second epistle was writ to all Christians in general, and particularly to Gentiles, induced thereto by the comprehensiveness of the addresse at the beginning of that epistle: to them that have obtained like precious faith with us. He should have concluded as much of the first epistle likewise. For they were both sent to the same people, as is evident from St. Peter’s own words. 2 ep. iii. 1.

Moreover, the inscriptions of the first epistle seems to be as general, as that of the second. Let us observe it distinctly.

To the elect, i.e.λητοί. Says Wall upon the place: “He useth the word ἱερατικοί, choice ones, just as St. Paul does the word ἀγιοί, saints, for the word Christians. And as St. Paul directs almost all his epistles to the saints, that is, the Christians, of such a place; so St. Peter here, to the elect, or choice ones, that is, Christians, sojourning in the dispersions of Pontus, Galatia, and Bithynia.”

Strangers, παρεστίθμοις. Good men, though at home, are strangers, especially, if they meet with opposition, trouble, and affliction, as those Christians did, to whom St. Peter is here writing. For he speaks of their trials, and temptations. ch. i. ver. 6. 7. and exhorts them. ch. ii. 11. as sojourners, and strangers, ὡς παρεστίθμοι, to abstain from fleshly lusts. Says Oecumenius upon ch. i. ver. 1. 2. “He calls (b) them “strangers, either on account of their dispersion, or because that all “who live religiously, are called strangers on this earth, as David also “says: I am a sojourner with thee, and a stranger, as all my fathers were.” Pf. xxxix. 12.

Scattered throughout Pontus . . . or, of (c) the dispersion of Pontus, Galatia . . . So he calls them, not because they had been driven out from their native countrey, but because he writes to the Christians of divers countreys, who also were but a few, or a small number, in every place, where they dwelled.

This

(b) Εκλεκτοι παρεστίθμοι, To παρεστίθμοι, ὧτε διὰ τὸν διαστόρα, εἶπεν, ὥς ἵνα πάντες ὁι κατὰ βίον ζῶντες παρεστίθμοι λέγωνται τῆς γης ὡς ήδ' ἑκατά χριστιᾶς θεοι τοιαύτα τοις. Ος. T. 2. p. 483.

(c) Εκλεκτοί παρεστίθμοι διαπαθεῖς πότερν . . .
This may suffice for shewing, that these two epistles were sent to all Christians in general, living in the countreys, mentioned at the beginning of the first epistle.

I shall now shew, that these Christians were for the most part of gentil stock and original.

1 Pet. i. 14. As obedient children, not fashioning yourselves, according to the former lusts in your ignorance. This might be very pertinently said to men, converted from Gentilism to Christianitie. But no such thing is ever said by the Apoflles, concerning the Jewish people, who had been favored with Divine revelation, and had the knowledge of the true God. And ver. 20. and 21. he says, that through Chrift they did now believe in God. Therefore they were not worippers of God, till they were acquainted with the Chriftian revelation. In like manner ch. ii. 9. St. Peter speaks of those to whom he writes, as having been called out of darkness into God's marvellous light. Moreover, they once were not God's people. ver. 10. Which in time past were not a people, but are now the people of God: which had not obtained mercy, but now have obtained mercy. Words resembling those of St. Paul, Rom. ix. 24. 25. where he is unquestionably speaking of Gentil converts.

There are also other expressions, which plainly shew, that these persons had been Gentils, and had lived in the sins of Gentilism. ch. i. 18. Forasmuch as ye know, that ye were redeemed from your vain conversation, received by tradition from your fathers. And ch. iv. 3. For the time past of our life may suffice us, to have wrought the will of the Gentils: when we walked in lasciviousnesse, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banqueting, and abominable idolatries. St. Peter does not charge himself with such things. But they to whom he writes had been guilty in those respects. And by way of condescension, and for avoiding offence, and for rendering his argument more effectual, he joyns himself with them.

Once more, when St. Peter represents the dignity of those to whom he writes, upon account of their Chriftian vocation, ch. ii. 9. as a chosen generation, a peculiar people, a royal priesthood: certainly, the expressions are most pertinent, and emphatical, if understood of such as had been brought from Gentilism to the faith of the gospel, as indeed they plainly were. For he there says, they were to shew forth the praises of him, who had called them out of darkness into his marvellous light.

To all which might be added, what was hinted before, that the persons, to whom Peter writes, were for the most part the Apostle Paul's converts. This must be reckoned probable from the accounts, which we have in the Acts of St. Paul's travels and preaching. Whence we know, that he had been in Galatia, and the other countreys, mentioned by St. Peter at the beginning of his first epistle. Moreover he observes 2 ep. iii. 15. that his beloved brother Paul had written unto them. We may reasonably suppose, that he thereby intends St. Paul's epistles to the Galatians, the Ephesians, and Colossians, all in those countreys, and for the most part Gentil believers. Nor do I see reason to doubt, but that Peter had before now seen, and read St. Paul's two epistles to Timothy. And if we should add them, as here intended also, it would be no prejudice to our argument. For those epistles likewise were designed for the use and benefit of the churches in those parts.

Vol. II. Ff

To me these considerations appear unanswerable. I shall therefore take notice of but one objection only, which is grounded upon ch. ii.

12. Having your conversation holy among the Gentils: that whereas they speak against you as evil-doers, they may by your good works, which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation.

Upon the first clause in that verse Beza says, that (d) this place alone is sufficient to shew, that this epistle was sent to Jews. But, I think not. From St. Paul may be alleged a text of the like sort. 1 Cor. x. 32. Give no offence, neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentils, [καὶ ἰδιωταί,] nor to the Church of God. It might be as well argued from that text, that the Corinthians were by descent neither Jews, nor Greeks, as from this, that the persons, to whom St. Peter wrote, were not originally Gentils. In the text of St. Paul, just alleged, by Jews, and Gentils, or Greeks, are intended such as were unbelievers. So it is likewise in the text of St. Peter, which we are considering: as is apparent from the later part of the verse, above transcribed at large. St. Peter had a right to distinguish those, to whom he writes, from the Gentil people, among whom they lived: as he had at the beginning of his epistle called them elect, or choice ones, and strangers, and they likewise went by the name of Chriftians, as we perceive from ch. iv. 16.

St. Peter's two epistles, then, were sent to all Chriftians in general, living in those countreys: the greatest part of whom had been converted from Gentilism, or Heathenism.

The Place, where they were writ. III. Our next inquirit is, concerning the place, where these epistles were writ:

At the end of the first epistle St. Peter says: The church that is at Babylon, elected together with you, saluteth you. Which text, understood literally, has been thought by some to denote Babylon in Assyria, or Babylon in Egypt. By others it is interpreted figuratively, and supposed to denote Jerusalem, or Rome. So that there are four opinions concerning the place, where this epistle is dated. All which must be considered by us.

1. Pearson by Babylon supposes to be meant (e) a town, or city, of that name in Egypt. But it seems to me, that (f) little can be said for this opinion.

(d) Inter Gentes, in τοῖς ἰδιωταῖς.] Vel unus hic locus tribusbus illis dispersis prorie fuifse insequam hanc epistolam convincit. Beza. in loc.

opinion. Babylon in Egypt is an obscure place. It was a frontier town, or strong castle, with a garrison, as it is described by (g) Strabo: in whole time, the reign of Tiberius, was quartered one of the three Roman Legions, appointed to keep the Egyptian people in order. In such a place, as may be supposed, there (b) were but few Jews, and not many inhabitants of any fort, befide soldiers. This opinion likewise is altogether without the authority of ancient Chriftians. If St. Peter had writ an epifle in Egypt, in all probability, it (i) would have been dated at Alexandria. But there is not in early antiquity any intimation, that (k) the Apostle Peter was at all at Alexandria, or in any part of Egypt. If St. Peter had been at Babylon in Egypt, and had founded a church there, it would have been a church of great renown among Chriftians: whereas (l) there is not for the firt four centuries any notice taken of a church, or Bifhop in that place.

Le Clerc, who (m) follows Pearson, fays, in his notes upon 1 Pet. v. 13. “Thereby (n) is to be underftood, not Babylon, which lay on the eaf side of the Euphrates, and where Peter never was, but a city in Egypt,

(g) Ἀναπλίσαντι δ' εἰς Ἐβαυλῶν Φιλονευμον... νυν δ' εἰς στρατοπεδῖον ἑνὸς τῶν τεσσαράκτων τῶν Φιλονευμῶν τῆς Ἀιγύπτου. Strab., l. 17. p. 807. al. p. 1160.

(i) Si Petrus in Αἰγυπτιακα Babylonem verfatus est, cui probabile fiet, non petiviffe Alexandriam, civitatem totius orbis fecundum Romam nobiliflimam, magnoque Judæorum numero frequentem: cum Alexandriae in vicinia efta- ret Babylon, et moris eft Apoftolorum, aliqua in regione veftigium ponentium, Metropoles adire, ut majus theatrum habaret evangelii praedicatione, quam inde veluti ex fonte manabat uribus provincialibus irrigandis. Id. ibid.

(k) Quod vero in Αἰγυπτο unquam verfatus fuerit, ne levißima quidem anticoquitatis umbra obtendit potefl. Cav. de Petro, H. L. p. 6.

(m) Vide ejus H. E. anno. 61. num. vii. et Annot. ad Hammondi Præmonitionem in 1 Petri epiftolam.

(n) Il faut entendre non la Babylon, qui étoit à l’orient de l’Euphrate, et ou S. Pierre n’a jamais été; mais une ville d’Egypte, qui se nommoit ainfî, et qui n’étoit pas loin de lieu ou eft bâti le Caire. Le Clerc. fur 1 ep. de S. Pierre, v. 15.
gypt, so called, and lying not far from the place, where now is Cairo." But what proof is there of Peter's ever having been in Egypt, more than of his having been in Assyria?

2. Lewis Cappell conjectured, that (e) by Babylon is to be understood Jerufalem. But it is a mere conjecture, quite destitute of foundation in antiquity. And therefore, in my opinion, no more to be received, than the preceding interpretation.

3. Divers other learned men think, that by Babylon is meant Babylon in Assyria. So (p) Beza, (q) Lightfoot, (r) Bajnage. Cave, who supposed, (s) the first epiftle of St. Peter to have been writ at Babylon in Assyria, thinks, that (t) his second epiftle was writ at Rome.

They who reject this opinion, say, that (u) the Assyrian Babylon was at that time almost deserted. On the contrarie, they who embrace it, say, there (x) were multitudes of Jews in that countrey. Which may be true. For there were many Jews in moft countreys. But it would have been more to the purpose, to produce some evidence from antiquity, that Peter was in that countrey. The primitive Christians had in their hands St. Peter's firft epiftle. And it was universally received, as his. And it is dated at Babylon. And yet ecclefiatiical historie affords no accounts, that this Apoftle was in Assyria, or Chaldea. Is not this a proof, that (y) there was not any very ancient tradition, that he was in that

(q) See his Sermon upon 1 Pet. v. 13. Vol. 2. p. 1141. . . 1147. and many other places in his works.

(r) Bajnage. Ann. 46. num. xxvii.

(t) Epiftola secunda Romae, ut videtur, paullo ante mortem scripta. Id. ibid.

that country? We just now observed passages of Origen, Epiphanius, Gregorie Nazianzen, Jerome, Chrysostom, relating to St. Peter’s travels. But none have mentioned Babylon, as a place, where he traveled, and preached the gospel.

Says Mr. Beaufobre: “As (z) Peter was the Apostle of the Jews “scattered abroad among the Gentils, St. James having stayed in Judea, “he went to Babylon, where a great number of the Israélites had re“mained.” But may I not take the liberty to ask a question, and say: Who afflicted to these Apostles those several provinces, with such limitations? St. James itaid in Judea. It is allowed. We are certain of it from the history in the Acts. Neverthelefs he did not confine his regards to the Jews in the land of Israel. For he wrote an epifle, addressed to the twelve tribes scattered abroad. And if Peter also was an A-nostle, chiefly, of the circumcision; it was not of those only, who were in Gentil countrys, but of those likewise, who were in Judea: where, as I apprehend, he spent the greatest part of his life, even after our Sa-viour’s ascension.

Mr. Beaufobre says, “Peter went to Babylon, where a great number of Israélites had remained.” That is, he imagined, that he did so. And it was fit for him fo to do. As Bajnage, in a passage (a) cited not long ago, says: “There was a multitude of Jews in Assyria, where was Babylon. Nor could he any where more successfully execute his apostolical commission.” And because we imagine, that Peter might very fitly preach the gospel in Assyria, we conclude, that he went thither. But such reafonings, if calmly considered, are of no weight. It would be much better to allege some ancient testimonies, in behalf of St. Peter’s Journey into Assyria, or Parthia.

Mr. Wetstein thinks, that St. Peter’s first epifle was writ in the country of Babylon, in Mesopotamia. As there is somewhat new in his argument, I place below (b) a large part of it. In particular, he says, that when

Negant enim, Petrum Romæ fuiffe: quod teftatur antiquitas. Affirman-tem autem Babylone fuiffe, vel in Ægypto, vel in Chaldae. Quod nulla prodi-

(z) Comme il étoit l’Apôtre des Juifs disperfez parmi les Payens, S.

Jacques étant demueré en Judée, il alla à Babylone, et dans les provinces voifines, où il étóit relé un bon nombre d’Israelites. Hist. de Manich. l. 2.

cb. 3. T. i. p. 181.

(a) See p. 452. note (x).

(b) Cur Babylon in Italia potius, aut Ægypto, quam in Mesopotamia, fit querenda, cauffiam non video. Veteres quidem Romam intelligunt. . . .

Quod recentiores obseruant, Babylonom proprie dicitam, quo tempore Petrus hæc scriberat, habitaram non fuiffe, verum etf. At (praeterquam quod et

Stephano Byzantino et Lucano confiant, etiam Seleucian eo tempore nomine Babylonis fuiffe appellata,) possumus Babylonom interpretari non urbem, sed totam regionem. . . Huic observationi addo aliam, quæ licet mihi nunc primum in mentem venerit, fuum tamen apud me pondus habet. Nimicum ubi de pluribus vel provinciis vel urbis loquimur, vel ubi ad plures scribi-mus, ordinem naturæ convenientius et simplicius videtur, ut incipiamus non ab

when a person writes to the people of several cities, or countreys, it is natural to begin with that which is nearest to him. So does Paul. Col. iv. 3. and St. John in Patmos. Rev. i. and ii. The like order, says he, is also accurately observed by St. Peter, if he wrote from Mesopotamia, not if we suppose him to have writ from Italie, or Egypt.

But such observations, though ingenious and plauflible, are not demonstrative and decisive, even when they are just and right. Which cannot be said of this. For supposing St. Peter to have been in Mesopotamia, the countrey, nearest to him, would be Cappadocia, as lying more caftward, and more southward, than the two first named. Certainly Pontus and Galatia were farther off from Mesopotamia, than Cappadocia. The truth is: St. Peter begins at the north, and so goes round. And that way of beginning does as well suit Rome, as Babylon, so far as I can see.

Befide all this, there offers an argument, which appears to me decisive. If the Affyrian Babylon was not now subiect to the Romans, but to (c) the Parthians: which I suppose to be allowed by all: it cannot be the place, intended by St. Peter. For the people, to whom he writes, were subiect to the Romans. And at the time of writing this epifle he must have been within the territories of the fame Empire. 1. ep. ii. 13. 14. Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man, for the Lord’s fake: whether it be to the King, or rather Emperour, as formerly (d) shewn, as supreme: or unto Governours sent, (from Rome,) by him, for the punishment of evil-doers, and for the praise of them that do well. Again, ver. 17. Honor the King: or rather, the Emperour. If St. Peter had not now been within the Roman territories, he would have been led to express himself in a different manner, when he enforced obedience to the Roman Emperour.

This argument appears to me very obvious. And yet I do not know, that it has ever been thought of by any before. Which makes me almost fufpect the validity of it: though I cannot discern, where the defect lies.

St. Peter requires subje&ion to Governours, sent by the Emperour: undoubtedly, meaning from Rome. I suppose, that way of speaking might be properly used in any part of the Empire. But it might have a special propriety, if the writer was then at Rome. Where indeed, in all probability, Peter then was.

4. So that we are now come to the fourth opinion concerning the date of this epifle. Which is, that by Babylon St. Peter figuratively means Rome.

(c) Vid. Strab. l. 16. p. 1081. in al. p. 745.

(d) See the first Part of this Work. Book i. cb. 2. §. xi. near the end. Or p. 176. of the third edition.
This is the opinion of (e) Grotius, and (f) Whitby, and (g) Valefius, and all the learned writers of the Roman communion in general.

These have, confessedly, in their favour, the testimonie of antiquity. Which is no small advantage.

Eufebius having given an account of St. Mark's Gospel, and of it's having been writ at the request of St. Peter's hearers at Rome, adds: "And (h) it is said, that Peter mentions this Mark in his first epiftle, "which, they say, he wrote at Rome: and that himself calls that city "Babylon figuratively in those words: the church that is at Babylon salutes "you, as does Mark my son."

This interpretation some suppose Eufebius to ascribe to Papias. But (i) Spanheim denies it. And perhaps it is not certain. Whether Papias said so, or not, it was the prevailing opinion in the time of Eufebius.

Jerome in his book of Illuftrious Men, in his article of St. Mark, transcribes the just cited passage of Eufebius, but expresseth himfelf more poftively. "Peter (k) makes mention of this Mark in his firft epifte, figuratively denoting Rome by the name of Babylon. The church which is at Babylon, elected together with you, saluteth you, as does Mark my fon."

(f) See him upon 1 Pet. v. 13.

(h) Tē δ' μάρκη γνωμονεῖν τὸν σείτεριν τῇ σφοτέρᾳ ἐπιγορα, ὡς καὶ συντάξας φασίν ἐπι' ἀυτῆς εἰσαγωνίαςα σχολαί τοὺς τὴν ἀυτὸν τῷ σείτερι τριπλακίτηρον βαβυλώην, περιτύπωντα διὰ τῶν τε: ἀπαζζεῖν υμᾶς ἵνα βαβυλώην συνεκλητῇ, καὶ μάρκος κῦν ἑος μου. Euf. H. E. l. 2. c. 15.

Bede (l) by Babylon understood Rome, as did (m) Occumenius. However, it may be here properly recollected, that (n) formerly we saw an author, Cosmas of Alexandria, in the sixth century, who hereby seems to have understood Babylon in Assyria.

This opinion concerning the place of writing this epistle is much confirmed by the general tradition of the ancients, that St. Mark's Gospel was writ at Rome, at the request of Peter's hearers, and that Mark here mentioned is the Evangelist. Nor is this contradicted by Cosmas, but confirmed by him. For he expressly says, "that (o) Mark, the second Evangelist, wrote his Gospel at Rome by the direction of Peter."

They (p) who reject this interpretation, affect to slight Papias: whereas there is no good reason for it. If he said so, certainly his testimony would be of some value. But we do not clearly perceive, that this was in Papias. However, it is said by Eusebius. It was then a common opinion. Nor did he know of a better.

Others infatuate likewise, that (q) the reason, why Jerome was willing to confound Rome with Babylon, was, that he was out of humour with the people of Rome. Which seems to me to be groundless. Jerome only transcribes what he had found in Eusebius. They who reject the accounts of those two learned ancients should by all means produce some evidence, that Peter was in Mesopotamia. We have good assurance, that St. Mark's Gospel was writ at Rome, and that Peter preached, and suffered martyrdom there. His two epistles therefore, probably, were writ in the same city, a short time before the period of his life.

Mill varies. In his note upon the place he is for Babylon in Egypt. But in his Prelegomena (r) he is for Rome, and argues well enough

(m) Βαγγελια δι της γονιμιας της αποστολος και λεγεται Εορονιας. Occum. in loc. Tom. 2. p. 526. A.

(n) See Vol. xi. p. 275. and 283.

(p) Quod si, ut Rufin us interpretatur, tette Papia nititur, infirmo fane tibicie simile est. Nec temere ad tropum in nominibus urbium aut regionum est recursum, nisi ubi propria vocis significatio locum habere non potest. Weis. N. T. Tom. 2. p. 697.

(q) C'est une imagination de Papias, que les anciens ont adopté avec trop de facilité, et que S. Jerome aurait rejetée avec mepris, si dans la mauvaise humeur ou il étoit contre Rome, il n'eut été bien aise de la confondre avec Babylonie. Beauf. Hist. Manich. l. 2. cb. 3. T. i. p. 181.

It may be best for me now to conclude this argument with a part of Whitby's note upon 1 Pet. v. 13. which is very agreeable also to the note of Eftius upon the same text. "That Babylon is figuratively here put "for Rome, is an opinion so early delivered by Papias, and which after-"wards so generally prevailed, (as we learn from Eusebius, Jerome, and "Oecumenius,) that I subscribe to the note at the end of this epistle, "iyepafJi and 8oµµ, it was written from Rome, filled also Babylon by the "author of the Revelations, ch. xvii. and xviii. For the Apostle, at the "time of writing it, must be at Rome, figuratively, or at some city, pro-"perly, called Babylon. Now as it is uncertain, whether St. Peter ever "was at Babylon in Chaldea, or in Egypt, and improbable, that he "made any considerable stay there: so it is very improbable, he "should do it, when near his end. At Rome, and Antioch, where "he confessedly resided, church-historie is copious in giving an ac-"count of his successors in those Sees. But who can fhow any "thing of this nature, with reference to either of those Babylon's? "&c. &c."

IV. The only thing remaining to be observed by us is the Their Time. time of writing these two epistles. Which I think to be the year 63. or 64. or at the latest 65. I suppose, Paul to have left Rome in the spring of the year 63. St. Peter was not then come ther. If he had been there, he would have been mentioned by St. Paul in some of his epistles, writ near the end of his imprisonment at Rome. However, not very long after St. Paul was gone, St. Peter might come ther. Here, I suppose, he preached for a while freely, and with great success. And it appears to me probable, that both these epistles were writ at Rome, not long before the Apostle's death.

That he was old, and near his end, when he wrote the second epistle, is apparent from Ch. i. 14. And that the first epistle to the same Chrifli-tians had not been writ long before, may be argued from the apologie, which he makes for writing this second epistle to them. ch. i. ver. 13.

... 15. Wherefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though ye know them, and be efiabilished in the present truth. Yea I think it meet, as long as I am in this tabernacle, to stir you up by way of remembrance. Knowing, that shortly I must put off this my tabernacle, even as our Lord Jesus Christ has shewed me. Moreover, I will endeavour, that you may be able after my decease to have these things always in re-membrane.

It is not unlikely, that soon after the Apostle had sent away Silvanus with the first epifile, some came from those countreys to Rome, where was a frequent and general refort from all parts, bringing him informations concerning the state of religion among them. Which induced him to write a second time for the eftablishment of the Chriflians, among whom he had labored. And he might well hope, that his laft words, and dying testimonie to the doctrine, which he had received from Chrift, and had taught for many years with unshaken ftedfastneffe, would be of great weight with them.

V. I have now gone through the four inquiries, propofed at the beginning of this article. I shall here add Remarks upon 1 Pet. v. 13. only only a few remarks upon 1 Pet. v. 13. The (s) church that is at Babylon, elected together with you, saluteth you. And so does Mark, my son.

The word church is not in the original, but is inserted in the translation. The same word is supplied in (t) Oecumenius, and (u) in the Latin, and other ancient versions, with the approbation of (x) Grotius, and many others. But Mill (y) in his notes upon this text, where he understands the word Babylon literally, of a city of that name in Egypt, argues, that thereby is intended St. Peter's wife, or some honourable Christian woman, of the city of Babylon, where he then was. Which conjecture is countenanced by (z) Wall.

Dr. Heumand proceeds farther. First, he says, that (a) by Mark my son, we are to understand Peter's own son, which he had by his wife. And (b) then by elected together with you, is to be understood, an excellent Jewish woman of Babylon in Assyria, whom, with many others, Peter had there converted to the Christian faith, and afterwards married: his first wife, mentioned Luke iv. 38. by whom he had Mark, being dead.

But

(s) Ασπασεις η εις βαβυλωνι συνεκλιτη, κα μαρκος δ διες μω. (t) Ασπασεις εις βαβυλωνι συνεκλιτη.
(u) Εκκλησια πραβγυντ Λιν. [in margine, manu recentiori:] Oecumen.

Vulg. Syr. Arab. Αθηπο. ex interpretamento. Mill. in loc.

(y) Nempe pro indubitato fumitur, ecclesiam Babyloniorum hic intelligi. Atqui vero, si de ecclesia hic sermo, quom nulla ejus mentio facta fit in precedentibus, aperte dixisset Petrus εκκλησια in βαβυλωνι... Mihi quidem vehe-mens suspicio est, per των in βαβυλωνι συνεκλιτη, intelligi hic Petri uxorem, fidei simul sufceptae, vitae, laborum, sociam: quam Babylonae Αγyptiacac tunc, cum hac firberentur, egerit... Si dicas, illud in βαβυλωνι denotare potius feminam aliquam, quam fixam femed habuerit in Babylon, nihil equidem repugno. Etsi in βαβυλωνи five uxor Petri, five etiam opulenta quaedam ac illustri loco nata femina apud Babylonios, quam Apostolum hospitio exceperit: certe nihil hoc loco de ecclesia Babyloniorum. Mill. in loc.

(z) "The word church is not in the Greek, but put in by the translators, as understood in the Greek... Dr. Mill thinks it to mean Peter's wife, who being now at Babylon with her husband, did salute those Christians, to whom the epistle was written. And then the reading of the words will be: She who is your fellow-Christian at Babylon saluteth you." Wall. p. 357.

But it appears to me very unlikely, that St. Peter should send sul-tations to the Christians of several countreys from a woman, not named by him. Beza says well, that (c) St. Peter omits the noun, church, as is often done with regard to words of common use.
What was the senfe of Christians in former times, appears from Oecumenius, and the versions taken notice of above. The same senfe apppears in (d) the Complexions of Caffodorius, and (e) the Exposition of Bede.

With regard to St. Mark, Oecumenius says, "that (f) Peter calls him his son according to the spirit, not according to the flefh. Him he permitted to write the Gospel. But some, as he adds, have presumed to call Mark son of Peter according to the flefh, arguing from Luke's histoire, in the Acts of the Apoftles: where Peter, having been delivered out of prison by an angel, is laid to have come to the house of Marie, the mother of John, whose surname was Mark, as (g) if he had then gone to his own house, and his lawful wife."

That is a wrong deduction from the words of Acts xii. 12. But we hence perceive, that thofe people suppoled Mark, the Evangelift, to have been the same as John, surname Mark.

And I would also farther observe here, by the way, "that (h) Oecumenius computes Silvanus, by whom St. Peter sent this epiftle, and who is mentioned ch. v. 12. to be the fame, who is several times mentioned by St. Paul in his epiftles, particularly 1 Theff. i. 1. 2 Theff. ii. 1." Who likewise, very probably, is the fame as Silas, often mentioned in the Acts.

Oecumenius there calls Silvanus a moft faithful man, zealous for the progress of the gospel. Indeed all muft be fenfible, that he was an excellent man, who from generous principles attended the Apoftles of Chrift in the the journeys undertaken by them, in the servicio of the gospel. His deputation from the Apoftles, and Elders, and Church of Jerusalem, with their letter to the Christians at Antioch, is very honourable to him. Acts xv. 27: 32. His stay there, and Paul's choffing him for his companions in his travels, when he and Barnabas separated, farther affure us of his juft sentiments concerning the freedom of the Gentils from the yoke of the law, and of his zeal for promoting true religion.

(c) Ecclesia nomen omittit, ut in vocabulis communi ufu tritis fieri solet.
Bex.
(d) Salutationes quoque ecclesiae, quam de Babylonia, id est, de seculi illius, confusione, dicit electam, et Marci filii sui pia institutione transmittens.
Cassid. in loc.
(e) Expof. in 1 Petr. cap. v.
(f) Maexon de vocata stmobama kalri, alla de katad saxe. Oecum. T. 2.
p. 526. A.
(g) ... oix eis tyn iatov oikias epantibota, j tyw oymipri stvynov. Ib. B.
(h) Pisos uphexallontos de silouamios owtos, kai sevri to tynvgma iyovmvw agynxorosmos, inge kai stmolos auvtw moumew, kai synergon auvtw metat timobias in taic ictsoiai stxalkevami. Pavilos ligoj kai silouamios kai timobies.
Oecum. ib. p. 525. D.
The three Epistles of St. John.

I. Their Genuinness shown from Testimonie, and internal Characters. II. The Time of writing the first of these Epistles. III. The People, to whom it was sent. IV. Observations upon the second Epistle. V. upon the third VI. The Time, when they were writ.

I. HAVE already writ the historie of St. John, one of Christ's twelve Apostles, and an Evangelist. I have also observed what is needfull concerning the Gospel, writ by him. We are now to consider his Epistles.

The regard shewn to them by the ancients, may be soon perceived by recollecting briefly what has been largely alleged by us from them in the several volumes of this work.

St. John's first epistle is referred to by Polycarp. Vol. i. p. 118. is quoted by Papias. 242. 250. 253. and is referred to by the Martyrs of Lyons. 340. His first and second epistles are quoted by Irenæus. 375. They were also received by Clement of Alexandria. ii. 473. 509. 511. 512. And says Origen: "John, beaside the Gospel, and Revelation, has left us an epistle of a few lines. Grant also a second and a third. For all do not allow these to be genuine." Vol. iii. 236. Dionysius, of Alexandria, receives John's first epistle, which he calls his Catholic Epistle, § ιενωτολ δαβολιν. He likewise mentions the other two, as ascrib'd to him. Vol. iv. 672. ... 674. The first epistle was received by Cyprian, and, probably, the other two likewise. p. 832. ... 836. The second epistle is quoted by Alexander, Bp. of Alexandria. Vol vii. 250. Eusebius says: "Beside his Gospel, his first epistle is universally acknowledged by those of the present time, and by the ancients: but the other two are contradicted:" that is, doubted of by some. Vol. viii. 95. See also p. 96. 97. and 157. 158. All the three epistles were received by Athanasius. p. 227. by Cyril, of Jerusalem. p. 270. by the Council of Laodicea. p. 292. by Epiphanius. p. 304. 310. All three were received by Jerome. Vol. x. 77. but the two last were doubted of by some in his time. p. 99. 100. All three were received by Rufin. p. 187. by the third Council of Carthage. p. 194. by Augustin. p. 211. 248. and by all those authors, who received the same canon of the New Testament, that we do. They are in the Alexandrian manuscript. Vol. xi. p. 240. All three are also in the catalogues of Gregorio Nazianzen. ix. 133. and of Amphilochius. p. 148. But this last observes, that some received one of them only. And indeed, it is acknowledged, that but one epistle of St. John is received by the Syrian churches. Vol. ix. 191. ... 196. 217. Nor were any more received by Chrysostom. Vol. x. 313. 337. ... 339. Venerable Bede, near the beginning of the eighth century, in his Exposition of the second epistle, says: "Some (a) have thought this, and the fol-

(a) Quidam putant, hanc et frequentem epistolam non esse Joannis Apostoli, fed
"lowing epistle not to have been writ by John the Apostle, but by another, a Presbyter of the same name, whole sepulchre is still shewn at "Ephesus; whom also Papias mentions in his writings. But now it is "the general consent of the Church, that John the Apostle wrote also
"these two epistles: forasmuch as there is a great agreement of doctrine "and stile between these and his first epistle, and there is also a "like zeal against heretics." They who are desirous to see more quotations of ancient writers, may consult the Table of principal matters, in the twelfth Volume, in St. John, Catholic Epistles, and Authors, who had the same canon of the N. T. with that, which is now generally received. Which article may be found under Canon of the scriptures of the N. T.

All the three epistles are now generally received as St. John's in these parts of the world. And with good reason, as seems to me. Said Origen:
"He has also left an epistle of a very few lines. Grant also a second, and a third." That is very right. One epistle was received by all, as certainly genuine. And it is not worth the while to contend about the other two, when they are so very short, and resemble the first in sentiment, phrase, and manner of writing, as is well observed by (b) Mill. And of the second epistle, which consists of only thirteen of our verses, eight may be found in the first, either in sense, or expression. The title of Elder at the beginning of these two epistles, affords no just exception. It (c) is a very honourable character, well becoming John as Apostle, and now in years, residing in Asia, as superintendent of all the churches in that country. And St. Peter speaks of himself in the same character, in his epistle universally acknowledged.
ch. v. 1.

Dr. Heumann supposeth, that (d) here is a reference to St. John's great fed cujusdam presbyteri Ioannis, cujus sepulchrum uoque hodie monstratur in Epheso. Cujus etiam Papias, auditor Apostolorum, et in Hierapoli Epif-copus, in opulcis suis fapere meminit. Sed nunc generalis Ecclesiæ confensus habet, quod has quoque epistolæ Ioannes Apostolus scrip-serit, quia revera multam verborum et fidei similitudinem cum prima ejus Joan.

(b) Epistolæ autem iflas habere autorem Ioannem . . . ex eo plane conflat, quod in illis omnibus eadem parvis sint voixata, idem genus et charæcter dictionis. Secundæ, certe ellenicæ, (neque enim continet ultra tredecim versus ex hodiernis nostris,) octo quidem vericulorum cum fensus, tum ipse sentent, extant in epistolæ prima . . . Epistola autem tertia, ejusdem omnino coloris ac charæcteris cum secunda, per omnia sapit Ioannem Apostolum.

(c) Quod aliqii Ioanni cuidam alteri, Presbytero vulgo dicio, adscriptas volunt has duas epistolás, ei nequitium vident, quam fortiter contra illos militet illud ἐν τοῖς ἐφεσις κατ' ἵκος: quiue privato homini, vel etiam Epifcopo, haudquaquam conveniat . . . Imo vero Apostolo nostro peculiariter adaptatum et accommodatum erat: utpotè qui jam nonagenarius fuerit, om-et Lampe Prolegom. in Joan. i. i. cap. 7. num. viii.

(d) Deinde articulo ὃ docet Joannes, nomen hoc sibi cum nemine commune esse, great age, at the time of his writing these two epistles. And he thinks, that St. John was then as well known by that title, as by his name. The Elder therefore is as much, as if he had said: The aged Apostle. And he refers to Woffius, and others, who had before said the same, or what is to the like purpose.

The want of a name at the beginning is no objection. It is rather an argument, that they are his: that being agreeable to St. John, who prefixes not his name, to that epistle, which is unquestionably his.

And say Beaufobre and Lenfant in their preface to the second and third epistles: “It is certain, that the writer of the third epistle speaks with an authority, which the Bishop of a particular church could not pretend to, and could not suit John the elder, even supposing him to have been Bishop of the church of Ephesus, as the pretended Apostolical Constitutions say he was appointed by John the Apostle. For if Diotrephes was Bishop of one of the churches of Asia, as is reckoned, the Bishop of Ephesus had no right to say to him, as the writer of this epistle does ver. 10. If I come, I will remember his deeds which he does. That language, and the visits made to the churches, denote a man, who had a more general jurisdiction, than that of a Bishop, and can only suit St. John the Apostle.”

II. That may suffice for shewing the genuinnesse of the three epistles. Let us now make some remarks upon each of them, beginning with the first: Concerning which there are two inquiries, that may be proper: the time when, and the persons to whom it was writ.

Gratius thought this (c) epistle to have been writ in Patmos, before the destruction of Jerufalem. Hammond and Whitby likewise were of opinion, that it was writ, before that great calamity befell the Jewifh nation. Dr. Benson (f) is inclined to place it in the year of our Lord 68. of Nero 14. that is, after the Jewifh war was broke out, and not long before the destruction of Jerufalem. Mill (g), and Le-Clerc (h) who follows him, place this epistle in the year 91. or 92. Basnage (i) speaks of this epistle at the year 98. and Baronius (k) at the year 99. Beaufobre and Lenfant in their preface to this epistle express themselves after this manner: “Although we cannot say any thing certain concerning the time, when St. John wrote this epistle: we may be satisfied, that it was near the end of esse, adeoque vifo τοις πιστευτοις titulo flatim scriptorem harum literarum agnoviffe... Nihil proinde refiat, quam ut statuamus, a Joanne ifto titulo indicari ætatem fumam prove&tilde;fiam, morisque tum fuisse, eum appellandi honoris ac reverentiae caufa Senem, five Seniores, vel etiam Senem Apostolam... Greca proinde hac, 'O Πστευτος Ιάιω, melius reddi Latine non possum, quam hoc modo: Grandævus Apostolus falutem dicit Caio... Heunan.

(c) Puto autem scriptam, ut alibi dixi, ex Patmo hanc epiffolam, non multo ante excitidium Hierofolymitanum. Grat. Pr. in i ep. Joan.
(f) Preface to St. John’s first epifele, §. iv.
(g) Proleg. num. 143. 150.
(h) H. E. an. 91. num. i.
(i) Ann. 98. num. iv.
(k) Ann. 99. num. viii. x.
the first century, when the Apostle was far advanced in age." Du Pin (l) says, it is not known, when it was writ, but most probably, near the end of the Apostle's life. Mr. Whiston (m) thought, this, and the other two epistles of St. John, to have been written not long after each other, about the year of Christ, 82. or 83. Mr. Lampe (n) supposeth this first epistle to have been writ after the Jewifh war, before St. John's exile in Patmos, and, probably, some good while before it. Consequently, he and Mr. Whiston do not differ greatly about the time of this epistle.

I must likewise say, though the exact time is not known, I am of opinion, it was not writ till after the Jewifh war was over. My reason is, that the arguments alleged, for proving it to have been writ sooner, are not satisfactory. And in examining them, perhaps, some things may occur, affording hints of a later date.

One argument is taken from ch. ii. 18. it is the last time, or hour: meaning, as (o) some interpreters think, the last hour of the Jewish state and constitution. Nevertheles, there (p) are learned men, who do not assent to that interpretation. Grotius himself owns, that (q) the phrase is sometimes used concerning the world, or mankind in general, as well as the Jews. And Mr. Lampe, who supposeth the phrase to relate to the divine judgement upon the Jewifh People, says, it (r) might be used not only at the time when it was inflicting, but also after it was accomplished. Which he supposeth to be meant by those expressions. ch. ii. 8. the darkness is past, and the true light now shineth: [though (s) Wolfius thinks no

(l) Diff. Prelim. l. 2. ch. 2. §. xi.

(o) Ultima bora: id est, ultimum tempus, ubi ad Judæos fermo est, significat tempus, proximum excidio urbis, ac templi, et reipublicæ Judæorum. Grot. annot. in 1 ep. Jo. ii. 18.

(s) fed non video, quomodo imminens illud judicium argumentum esse posset, quo Apollollus ad inculcandum et urgendum amorem mutuum uti voluerit. Tenebræ omnino inferunt prælimam et Judæorum et Gentilium conditionem, per quam non solum erroribus, sed et vitis ita erant immeriti, ut eis σχέτως appellari potuerint. Wolf. Curæ in 1 Jo. ii. 8.
St. John's three Epistles: Ch. XX:

no such thing there intended.] And therefore, he says; he (t) does not acquiesce in the reasons alleged by Grotius and Hammond, to prove, that this epistle was writ before that event.

Let me add here also a part of Wall's note upon ch. ii. 18. which to me appears not amis. "The saying of St. John, it is the last time, is "spoken as a great many such sayings of St. Paul, and the other Apo-" files, had been, according to the general charge, given by Christ to the "Apostles, and to all other Christians, to live in a continual expectation "of the judgement. They that interpret it otherwise, of the destruc-"tion of Jerusalem, as Grotius, and Hammond, are forced to suppoze "this epistle to have been written just before that destruction, about the "year 69. ... Nor are St. John's words here like those of any one, "that was foretelling that event: but rather of one that was speaking "of the present state of the Christian religion."

Again, it is argued, that (u) the Apostle might refer to the calamities of the Jewish People in those words ch. ii. 17. The world passeth away," and the left thereof. "But those are only general expressions, representing the uncertainty of all earthly things. And therefore afford not any argu-"ment, that the Apostle had therein a regard to affairs in Judea. "For, if he had, his expressions would have been more distinct, and particular.

Thirdly, an argument is also brought from ch. ii. 13. I write unto you, "fathers, because ye have known him that is from the beginning. "Whereby St. John has been suppos'd by some to intend some aged Christians, who had seen Jesus Christ upon earth. Which is more likely to have been the case of some in the year 68. about thirty five years after Christ's ascen-"sion, than many years afterwards. To which I answer, that (x) by him "that is from the beginning, probably, is intended God the Father, not Jesus Christ. It is equivalent to what is afterwards said of others, in the same verse. I write unto you, little children, because ye have known the Father. "But it would not stand so well, to say: I have written unto you, fathers, "because ye have known the Father. See also ver. 14.

Fourthly, it is (y) argued to the like purpose from ch. ii. 7. I write "no new commandment to you, but an old commandment, which ye had from the beginning. But thereby may be meant no more than the commandment, which

(t) Grotius et Hammondus ante excidium Hierosolymitanum scriptam esse sulpicantur. Quod tamen loca adducit non evincunt. Licet enim excidium illud in aetum datum esset, dici tamen etiamnum poterat, quod hora illa ul-"timana venterit. Id. ib. not. (b).

(u) Unde etiam per mundum transuntem cum suis cupiditatibus ad idem ex-"cidium Reipublicae Judaicae reficere Evangelista potuit. Lampe ib. p. 105.

CH. XX.

St. John's three Epistles.

which ye had from the beginning of your being Chrifians: or from the time, when you were firft converted to the Christian Religion, whenever it was. And, as (z) Wolfius observes, none of those to whom St. John wrote, in any part of his life, were very far distant in point of time, from the firft preaching of the gofpel.

Since therefore there are no expressions in the epifle, declaring the time of it, or clearly referring to the calamities attending the downfall of the Jewifh State; it appears to me probable, that it was not writ till a good while after that event, about the year of Chrift 80. or later.

III. We are next to confider, to whom this epifle was fent.

And here I obferve: As the writer does not at the begining prefix his name, nor any where elfe mention it in the epifle: fo neither does he defcribe, or characterize the perfons to whom he writes by the name of their city, or countrey, or any fuch thing.

The firft expression of addrefs is that in ch. ii. 1. My little children, thefe things write I unto you, that ye fin not. And the epifle concludes with thefe words: Little children, keep yourselves from idols. And he feveral times calls the Chrifians, to whom he writes, little children, as ch. ii. 12. 18. iii. 7. 18. iv. 4. v. 21. Our Lord fpoke to the disciples in a like manner. John iii. 33. and xxii. 5. It is a tender and affectio-nate appellation, denoting paternal authority, love, and concern. As an Apofle it might be used by St. John in any part of life. Never-thelefs it feems to imply, together with apoftolical authority, advanced age.

Some have thought, that this epifle was writ to Parthians, or Jewifh believers in that countrey. We have seen feveral ancient Latin authors, who fpeak of it, as inscribed to Parthians. So (a) Auguftin, (b) Caffiodorus, and (c) Bede. I have already fpoken of this, and have referred to divers learned moderns (d) whose opinions deferve to be taken notice of. I fhall now add Mr. Whifton's thoughts relating to this point, taken from his Commentarie up St. John's Epifles, publifhed in 1719. "None of these three epifles of St. John, fays he p. 5. 6. were written to the Parthians, as fome later Latin writers have fuppoled: but rather to the Chrifians or churches of Asia, near Ephefus." "This he argues from the perfect filence of all true antiquity, as to St. John's ever preaching in Parthia: and from the account, which we have in Eusebius from Origen, that Parthia was St. Thomas's province, and Asia St. John's: as also from the account in the Recognitions ix. 20. that Thomas

(z) Quod ad alteram rationem attinet, nullus eorum, qui Joannis etate ad Chrifi cognitionem adduxit sunt, ab originibus evangelii nimium remo-vebitur, five illi ante, five poft excidium Hierofolymitanum eo pervenerint. Omnes enim sub originibus ejs eam adepti cenferi debent, quippe quibus Johannes, ut autem; earum, testis et praeceps, aducerit. Wolf: ubi supr. p. 244.

(a) Vol. x. p. 248. (b) Vol. xi. p. 308.

(c) The fame. p. 338. (d) See Vol. x. p. 249.

Vol. II.

G g
"Thomas really preached the gospel in Parthia, without a syllable of St. John thereto relating. All which, says he, makes it plain, that this pretended direction, of any of St. John’s epistles to the Parthians, stands upon no good authority at all. And it is not improbable, that the occasion of this error was barely a false reading in some ancient manuscript, where τὸν καθὼς was read for τὸν καθὼς: to the Parthians, for to the Virgins. Which latter inscription might easily be applied to the first epistle. For as it is chiefly addressed to young Christians, yet uncorrupted, both as to fleshly and spiritual fornication, such as in St. John’s Revelations are called καθὼς virgins: so was the second epistle antecedyantly affirmed by some to be written, to the Virgins: as we learn from Clement of Alexandria, in Caffidorius:" that is, from Clement’s Adumbrations upon the Catholic Epistles, translated by order (e) of Caffidorius. For there (f) the second epistle of St. John is said to be writ to virgins.

And before, at p. 4. of the same Commentarie, Mr. Whiston observes: "St. John says nothing in his first epistle, by which we can directly gather, to whom it was sent: though it seems most probably to belong to his own Asiatic churches."

As I have quoted Clement, I must not omit the observation of Lensfant and Beaufobre: "Clement (g) says, that the second epistle of St. John was directed to virgins, undoubtedly intended by the means of this Lady. But there is nothing in the epistle, which suits virgins, more than other Christians."

Mr. Lampe says: "This (h) first epistle is writ to believers, as is abundantly manifest from the whole scope of the epistle. We also, says he, easily admit, that Jewish believers are especially regarded. Nevertheless we think, that St. John directed it to all believers of his time in general: forasmuch as there appears not in it any expression of limitation."

Du Pin says: "Though (l) there is no inscription, it appears from the beginning of the second chapter, that it is addressed to many Christians. And there is no proof, that it is sent to Jews, rather than to Gentils."

On the other hand Dr. Benson (m) thinks, "that the Apostle wrote this epistle to the Jewish Christians in Judea and Galilee."

But the former opinion appears to me more probable. For it is always called a catholic epistle. So it was called by Dionysius of Alexandria,

(e) See in this work cb. 22.
(f) Secunda Joannis epistola, qua ad virgines scripta est, simplicissima est. Scripta vero est ad quandam Babyloniam Electam nomine. Adumbr. in ep. 2. Joan.
(g) As before. p. 584.
(h) Ad fideles eum scripsisse, abunde patet ex fecopo epistolæ, cap. i. 4. totoque ejus argumento. Facile etiam admittimus, spectatim fideles ex Hbreis innui. Universis tamen credentibus fui temporis Joannem hanc epistolam definitasse putamus, quia nulla restrictionis occurrerit mentio. Lamp. ibid. num. iii. 105.
(l) Diflerta. sur la Bible. 1. 2. cb. 2. §. xi.
(m) See his preface to St. John’s first epistle, sec. iv.
The editor states that Chapter XX of St. John's three Epistles appears to be a continuation of the preceding verses. The section emphasizes the importance of loving one's neighbor and avoiding the allurements of the world. The Epistle is addressed to the churches in Judea, with a focus on the need for unity and the importance of the Advocate, Jesus Christ. The text discusses the coherence of the epistles and their role in guiding believers. It also touches on the coherence of the world Gentiles and the need for caution in avoiding the temptations of the world. The passage highlights the importance of maintaining spiritual health and the role of the Advocate in guiding the faithful.

The text is a continuation of the Epistle, addressing the need for unity and the importance of the Advocate, Jesus Christ. The section emphasizes the need for believers to avoid the allurements of the world and to maintain spiritual health. The Epistle is addressed to the churches in Judea, with a focus on the need for unity and the importance of the Advocate, Jesus Christ. The text discusses the coherence of the epistles and their role in guiding believers. It also touches on the coherence of the world Gentiles and the need for caution in avoiding the temptations of the world. The passage highlights the importance of maintaining spiritual health and the role of the Advocate in guiding the faithful.
limit what the Apostle fays to Jewish Christians. And that this Apostle does frequently joyn himself with thofe, to whom he writes, with a like view to that above mentioned, must be evident to all, who read this epifle with attention. See ch. i. 6. io. ii. 3. iii. 14. 18.
... 22.

However for the fake of such as are really inquisitive, I shall here subjoyn the note of Oecumenius upon thofe words: *not for ours only, but alfo for the fins of the whole world." This (q) he faid, either becaufe he wrote to Jews, and intended to shew, that the benefit of repentance was not restrained to them, but extended to Gentils alfo: or elfe, that the promise was not made to the men of that time only, but likewise * to all in future times."

Observations upon IV. St. John's second epifle is thus infterbed: *The the second Epifle.
Elder to the elect Lady, and her children." Which has been differently understood by ancients and moderns: whose opinions may be seen in (r) Wolfsius, and in Dr. Benfon's preface to the second and third epiftles of St. John, and briefly in Beza, whom (s) I tranfcribe below.

Some have hereby understood the Christian Church in general. So (t)Jerome. But that, as Beza well obferves in the place juft tranfcribed, is a way of speaking, of which no like instance can be found. And it is inconfiftent with what is faid in the conclusion of the epifle, where the writer speaks of coming to fee her, and fends her the falutations of the children of her elect fitter.

Cajfiodorus here (u) understood a particular church.

Mr.

(q) Tēto dī iūsu, ὑπο τίνι πρὸς ἰσθαίνως ὑγραφε, κά ὡς μὴ μένοις ἐκείνοις περικλείη ἡ τις μετανιών, ἀλλά καὶ σερεῖ τὸ ἑθνὴ ἐξαπλωσά τὰ τοὺς, ἦ ὅτι μὴ τοῖς κατ' ıκεῖνον καιρῷ ἡ ἐπαγγελεῖα μίνο, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς μιτιπιτα πᾶσι. Oecum. in 1. ep.
Joan. p. 565.

(t) Eleſthae Dominae. Nonnulli Eleſthae nomen proprium efse volunt. Quod non probo. Dicendum enim efiic Κορίς χελουτη, Dominae Eleſthae. Allii hoc nomine volunt Eccleſiam Christianam in generе signifiari. Quibus repug-nat primum, quod hoc dicendi genus fit prorufus inuifitum. Deinde, quod in extremis duobus verfibus difterfe pollicetur, ʃe ad eam et filios ipfu ventturum, additque filiorum fororis falutem, quam et ipsam eleſtam vocat. Puto igitur incriptam eſse epifolam praeflanti alicui feminae, quorum nonnullae eceleſias fuis opibus paffim fullentabant: et eleſtam illam vocari, id eft, eximiam, addita Dominae appellatione ... ficut Lucas Theophilum, et Paulus Fefium καρποφορον, id eft, potentifimum, vel praefentifimum, compellant. Neque enim ab ejusmodi honetis titulis Chriftiana Religio abhorret, quatenus quidem juftum ac fas eft. Perinde eft eſtir, acfi scriptum eſt: Eximiae ac praeflanti dignitate Domine. Atenim cur nomen proprium non addidit?
Nempe fatì inter fε noti ac familares erant. Quamobrem etiam ne nomen quidem fuum exprimendum putavit. Bez. in Joan. ep. fecund.

(u) Legimus in Carminis libro ... Una eft columba nos. ... Ad quam scribit idem Joannes epiftolam: Senior eleſthae dominae, et filitis ejus ... Ad

St. John's three Epifles. Ch. XX.
Mr. Whiston (x) says: "St. John's second epistle was not writ to a particular Lady, but to a particular church: and, not improbably, to the church of Philadelphia." Which last I take to be said without any good foundation.

Oecumenius, in his comment upon the last verse of this epistle, says: "Hence (y) some argue that the epistle was sent not to a woman, but to a church. About which, he says, he does not choose to dispute." But in his introduction, or comment upon the beginning of the epistle, he says, "St. (z) John did not scruple to write to a faithful woman: forasmuch as in Christ Jesus there is neither male, nor female." And before he speaks (a) of this epistle being writ to a particular woman.

In the Adumbrations of Clement of Alexandria, as we now have them in Latin, this (b) epistle is said to be writ to a Babylonian woman, or virgin, named Eleœta.

And of late many learned men, whose (c) arguments I place below, choose to read this inscription thus: To the Lady Eleœta, or Ecleœta. But in my opinion the conclusion affords an objection. For it is not very likely, that two sisters should both have one and the same name. So it may be sometimes: but very seldom, as I imagine. This was a difficulty with (d) Wolfius, and (e) Tillemont.

Dr.

(x) As before p. 12.

(y) Διὰ δὲ τοῦ προσθαναυτα, ἀσταθέτου τις δὲ τα τίνα τῆς ἀδελφῆς, σὺ τῆς ἐκλεκτῆς, βυθοπλαστὶς των βασιλείων, ὡς κ' ἐπὶ τοῦ γυναικῆς ἐπιστολῆς, ἀλλὰ ψωτὸς ἐκλεκτών, �前所未有 τῷ κυβερνήτῃ, ὦς κ' ἐπὶ τῷ κυβερνήτῃ. Οἰκ. Τ. 2. p. 612.

(z) Πρὸς δὲ γυναικᾶς γράφων σωστὸν εὐθὺ υπεστίλατο, Δώτε ἐν χριστῷ ἐνδόθεν ὅπως ἀπιστεύης εἰς θεόν. Ἱβ. p. 606. C.

(a) . . . καθιστεὶς προσθαναθετεὶς ἡμῶν ἐν τοῖς ταύτας γράφεις κ' ἐπὶ τοῦ γυναικῆς, κ' ἐπτερον γαϊδον, ἢς καὶ αὐτόν, ἢς ἑπτερα καὶ τοῖς γυναικῶν πίναν. Ἰδ. p. 605. B.

(c) Εὐκλεητὴς quoque litera maiuscula scribitur apud Wechelium, et in editione R. Stephanii, quam fecutus est Milliius, quamvis ipse eo nomine Christianam feminam indicari existimetur. Wolf. in 2 ep. Jo. p. 323.

(d) Eleœtam proprii nominis vocabulo vix habuerim, per comma 13. ubi matronæ hujus foror itidem ιναληθή appellatur. Quod ut illius aetatis moribus non respondet, ita foror illa ιναληθή, tanquam Christiana commode vocari poterat. Wt. ib. p. 325.

Dr. Heumann supposeth, that (f) this woman's name was Kuria, or Kyria, and renders the inscription after this manner: To the elect Kyria. Which opinion is embraced by (g) Dr. Benson. But (b) Wolfius is not quite satisfied with it.

Tillemont has observed, that (i) in the Synopsis of Athanasius κυρία seems to be taken for a proper name. But that is not clear. 'The expression is ambiguous, and may be as well rendered: the (k) Elder writes to a Lady, and her children, as to Kyria, and her children. So (l) likewise thought Wolfius.

Before I proceed, I must detain the reader, whilst I observe, that the article of the Synopsis, quoted by Tillemont, is exactly the same with the Hypothesis, or Argument, prefixed to St. John's second epistle in (m) the second tome of Oecumenius. However, I do not suppose it to be really Oecumenius's. I allow it to be a part of the Synopsis, generally thought to have been composed by Athanasius, Bishop of Alexandria in the fifth century, as (p) formerly shewn.

Oecumenius himself seems to me to have supposed, this epistle to have been sent (q) to a Christian woman, whose name is not known. However in one place, in his prologue, he has these expressions: "He (r) calls her elect, either from her name, or on account of the excellence of her virtue."

Finally, then, others understand this inscription agreeably to our own translation: The Elder to the Elect Lady, and her children. This (s) has hitherto been the common opinion, and is favoured by (t) Beza, (u) Mill, (x) Wall, (y) Wolfius, (z) Le Clerc, and others. And Tillemont in

(g) See bis Preface to the second and third epistles of St. John, chap. iv.
(k) Τάυτα ως περιστερίως γράφει κυρία και τοις τίκνων αυτής. Athen.
(l) Mihi quidem id ex phrafi ita non admodumiquet. Wolf. ib. p. 323.
(m) Oecum. T. 2. p. 603.
(q) Aυ δια την κυριακη ταυτην ιπαινετουτ. λ. 4. Οecum. Tom. 2 p. 606. D.
(r) Exliptikoi δι' η ἀπο τοις ενόματος, η ἀπο τῆς ιπαινετου της αρετής φιλοτιμίας. Kap. Id. p. 606. B.
(t) See before note (i) p. 468.
(u) Prolegom. num. 151.
(x) Critical Notes upon the N. T. p. 378.
(y) Ubi supra. p. 306.
(z) Quoque ce mot puiffe être un nom propre . . . il est ailez vraisemblable, que c'est ici un nom appellatif, qui signifie, que c'estoit une Dame Chrétienne, a qui S. Jean écrivoit, et qui étoit connue à ceux qui lui devoient rendre cette lettre, &c. Le Clerc Remarques sur la 2 ep. de S. Jean.
in the place before referred to says: "The second epistle of St. John is inscribed to ἡλληνῶν κυρία. St. Jerome translates the word κυρία by Domine, Lady. And it is difficult to translate otherwise in the fifth verse, where St. John repeats the same word.

It is not easy for me to decide in such a variety of opinions, each one of which is supported by great patrons. The arguments for a proper name, either of Eclesta, or Kyria, are plausible, and specious. But it is an objection of some moment, that this notion was little, if at all known to the ancients. If it had, they would not have supposed, that St. John here writes to the church of Christ in general, or to some Christian church in particular. The Latin Adumbrations of Clement of Alexandria, as they are called, are not very material. The passage of the Synopsis, quoted by Tillemont, is ambiguous. Occumenius has just mentioned the opinion, that Eclesta might be the name of the person, to whom St. John wrote. But he does not seem to adhere to it, as has been observed by (a) Eus. Nor is there any notice taken of this interpretation by Jerome, or Cassiodorus, or Bede, authors, in which it would be very likely to be found, if it had been known in ancient times. And why it should not have been known, if there is any foundation for it, would not be easily shewn. That Jerome did not take κυρία to be a proper name, appears not only from the Latin version of this epistle, but likewise from his book of the Interpretation of Hebrew names: where, as formerly (b) observed, there are no proper names collected out of the second epistle of St. John, though there are out of his other two epistles, and indeed from all the seven Catholic Epistles, excepting only this one of St. John's second epistle.

V. The third epistle of St. John is thus inscribed: The Elder to the beloved Gaius. There (c) seem to be two of this name mentioned in the Acts, and St. Paul's epistles. In the disturbance at Ephesus, it is said: Having caught Gaius and Aristarchus, men of Macedonia, Paul's companions in travel, they rushed with one accord into the theatre. Acts xix. 29. And among the same Apostle's fellow-travellers,

(b) See Vol. x. p. 78.

(c) Gaius quidam inter comites ejus nominatur in tumulu Ephesino. Act. xix. 29. qui Derbæus videtur dici Act. xx. 4. Habebat etiam Corinthi hospitatem Gaium. Rom. xvi. 23. quem ipse baptizaverat. 1 Cor. i. 14. An hi sint idem inter se aut cum Gaio Ioannis, quis dispicio? Beda, Pséudo-Dexter, Lyranus, aliique, affirmant . . . Id quoque novum procreare dubium potest, quod Gaius Paulinus Corinthi sedem ac domicilium habuerit, noster vero proculdubio in Asia habitaverit, brevi ab Apostolo visitandus, de cujus extra Asia post eceffum Neronis itineribus tota antiquitas filet. Lampe Proleg. in Ioan. l. l. cap. 7. num. xii.
travellers, who accompanied him in his journey toward Jerusalem, is mentioned Gaius of Derbe, xx. 4. There is another Gaius, who appears to have been an inhabitant of Corinth. 1 Cor. i. 14. Rom. xvi. 23. I see no reason to think, that Gaius, or Caius, to whom St. John writes, was one of them. He seems to have been an eminent Christian, who lived in some city of Asia, not far from Ephesus, where St. John chiefiy resided, after his leaving Judea. For at ver. 14. the Apostle speaks of shortly coming to him. Which he could not well do, if Caius lived at Corinth, or any other remote place. Grotius thought him to be a good Christian, who (d) lived in one of the churches, or cities mentioned in the Revelation.

Mr. Whiston (e) supposes, Caius to have been Bishop of Pergamos. Mill (f) was inclined to be of the same opinion. But this is said only upon the ground of the pretended Apostolical Constitutions, which in this case are of no authority at all.

Dr. Heumann (g) in his Commentarie upon this epistle of St. John has some curious and uncommon observations. He (g) does not choose to trouble himself with inquiring, who Caius was: the knowledge of which, he thinks, would be of no great use. It is sufficient, that we know him to have been a good Christian. Nevertheless he appears to slight the opinion, just mentioned, that (h) he was Bishop of Pergamos. And he argues likewise, that (i) he is different from those of the same name, mentioned in the Acts, or St. Paul's epistles. And indeed it cannot be thought strange, that in the times of the Apollos, there were several Christians of this name: which seems to have been as common a name among the Greeks and Romans, as any name whatever.

Dr. Heumann says, that (k) Diotrephes, mentioned by St. John ver. 9. and said, to love to have the pre-eminence, was not a Heathen Magistrate, nor a heretic, nor a Bishop, but a Deacon in the church, to which he belonged. Upon which I observe.

It was easy to shew, that Diotrephes was not an Heathen Magistrate.

Dr. Heumann seems likewise to have proved, that (l) Diotrephes was not an heretic. For, as he argues, if Diotrephes had been a corruptor of the

(d) Vixit hic Caius in aliqua ecclesiariam, quarum mentio in Apocalypsi. Grat. in 3 ep. Joan. ver. 1.
(e) Commentarie upon St. John's Epifles. p. 14. 15. 86.
(i) P. 277. 278. (k) Ibid. p. 306. 307.
(j) Nunc ille Diotrephes quis fuerit, investigandum venit. Erasminus novæ hæresis autore vocat in Paráphrasi. Ac ita jam olim fentin Beda. Quod si enim corruptor doctrine u apolistae the true Christian doctrine, it would have been the duty of the Apostle, to caution Christians against familiar converse with him: in like manner as he does in the tenth and eleventh verses of his second epistle. Moreover, in that case, the Apostle would have signified his errors, and would have directed men to beware of the leaven of Diotrephes. But this he has not done. He only reproves his pride, want of hospitality, and a perverse contempt, not of the Apostle’s doctrine, but of his direction for receiving strangers. He also quotes (m) Calovius, as speaking to the like purpose.

And the late Mr. Moisheim, who, as I suppose, had not seen Dr. Heumann’s Dissertation, and gives a very different account of this epistle, in several respects, allows, that (n) Diotrephes was not a heretic. So likewise argued Mr. Lampe (o) before either of them.

But I cannot say, that Dr. Heumann has proved, Diotrephes not to have been a Bishop. For I think, that every thing said of him in this epistle implies his being Prefident, or chief director of things in the church, to which Caius belonged. However, we will consider his arguments.

In the first place he says, the (p) principal reason, why learned men have thought Diotrephes to be a Bishop, is because they have understood those words at ver. 10. and casteth them out of the church, of excommunication. But those words, he says, are capable of another sense. They seem rather to mean, that by ill treatment he forced those strangers to leave the church, to which they had applied for relief, and to go elsewhere. But

(m) Etiam Calovius ad h. 1. hac de cauſa negat, Diotrephen fuifte hæreticurn. Si hæreticus fuiſſet, inquit, gravius fìne dubio aucturus adversus eum, et Caium, aliusque, de sæductione ipsius cavenda moniturus fuiſſet Joannem. Quod argumentum acceptit a Cornelio a Lapide, cujus pene omnes sunt annotationes, quas ad hanc Joannis epifolam exhibet Calovius. Heuμan. ib. p. 303. note (z).

But granting, this interpretation to be right; Diotrephes might nevertheless be Bifhop. For that ill treatment might be owing to an abuse of his episcopal power and authority.

Again, says Dr. Heumann, the (q) fault of Diotrephes lay in seeking pre-eminence. Which shews, he was not Bifhop. For then, he would have had pre-eminence. Nor does a man seek what he has already.

But I cannot perceive, that observation to be very material. For a Bifhop may shew improper love of power and pre-eminence by arbitrarie proceedings in the society, over which he precludes, and by an arrogant behaviour toward neighboring Bifhops or Superintendents, his equals, and, perhaps, in some respects his superiors.

Finally not to take notice of any other arguments of this kind, Dr. Heumann thinks, that (r) Diotrephes was Deacon, and had the charge of the flock or treafurie of the church, to which he belonged, and therefore he was not Bifhop.

But neither do I see the force of this argument. For Diotrephes might have the difpofal of the church-flock, and yet be Bifhop. For in ancient times it was a part of the Bifhop's office and care, to fee, that the revenues of the church were managed, and difposed to the beft advantage. This appears from (s) Justin Martyr, and (t) Cyprian. They who de-

(q) Ac vel verbum φιλοτέμων demonstrat nobis, eum hand suiffe Epif-

(r) Jam cum clarifime cognoscamus, nec hæreticum, nec epifcopum, nec presbyterum, nec ethnicum f cilicet reipublicæ rectorem, suiffe Diotrephen, via fatis aperta eft ad perfornam ejus inveniendam. Statim enim mentem noftram hæc subit quaefio: An forte fuit illius ecclefiae diaconus, hoc eft, honorum ecclefialiscorum administrator? Hoc enim officium certis hominibus jam initio Christianæ Ecclefiae demandatum suiffe, ex Ab. vi. notum eft. Ac fane facilis nunc et perspicuus nobis videtur totus hic locus nofter. Praerat f cilicet ærario ecclefiaflico Diotrephen. Erat ejus pauperibus inde erogare pecunias. Advenas autem fratres ideo non sublevabat, quod vix ecclefiae illius pauperibus alendis fatis videretur suppetere. Id caufatus aliò difcéedere, aliorum auxilium implorare jubebat: imo dum nihil ipsi fuppere-datatibus, cogerat hoc ipfo eos in τῆς ἱκκλησίας, ex illa ecclefia, excedere, atque ita erat inεξαλλόν αὐτῶς in τῆς ἱκκλησίας. Erant, qui exulibus his ex ærario dari aliquid volebant. Verum non audiebat hos providus f cilicet ec-conomus, sed fiam sequi fententiam cupiebat ceteros Christianos omnes. Atque ita erat φιλοτέμων (five ut Petrus loquitur, κατακερυών) αὐτῶν. Quid? Tam prudens et juftus fìbi videbatur ecconomus, ut ne Joannis qui-dem Apostoli præcepto morem gereret, ratus f cilicet, eum, sì hic eflit, ærarilque rationes haberet cognitas, aliter fenfurum. Bonum doctorem esse Jo-annem, non negabat: bónum eum esse ecconomum, prudentemque in polticis rebus confiliatorem, id vero negabat. Imo eo femeitas provhebat, ut ludicra maledícta effudiret in virum fanétiffimum, et fortasse fenum appella-

(i) Οἱ ἑκτικεῖς δὲ καὶ βολήμενοι, κατὰ απραίρειν ἰκασὶ τῶν ἔως, ὅ βοίναιται δίκαιοι· καὶ τὸ συλλυγόμενον σώρα τῷ σφοτείτις αὐτοτικίς, καὶ ἰκα

τοῖς ἐπικελεύσις ἐν χείρας... καὶ τοῖς παρεστίδωμοι τις εἴδως. κ. λ. Ἀπο

(ii) ... et fipendia ejus Episcopo dispensante perciperent. Cypr. ep. 41. al. 38.
fire to see more proofs, may consult (u) Bingham. Since then we allow, Diotrephes to have had a right to concern himself in the disposal of the church-flock, it need not affect Dr. Heumann's main argument, whether he was Bishop, or Deacon.

To me, then, it seems, that Diotrephes was Bishop in this church, and that Caius was a man in a private station, of good substance, and a liberal disposition. St. John says, ver. 9. "I wrote unto the church: or rather (x) I would have writ unto the church, and at the same time to Diotrephes: But Diotrephes, who loveth to have the pre-eminence, receiveth us not. For that reason St. John sent this letter to Caius.

Let us now consider, what was the cafe, to which St. John refers in this epistle, and what was the fault of Diotrephes. Concerning this there have been various sentiments of learned men. Gratus supposed (y) these strangers here spoke of to be believing Jews, whom Diotrephes, a Gentil, would not receive, because they were Jews, or because they were for joining the rites of the law with Christianity. To the like purpose (z) Le Clerc, and (a) Beaufobre. This opinion is much disliked by (b) Dr. Heumann. Mr. Moßeim (c) likewise argues against it, as an opinion, quite destitute of foundation in antiquity.

Others think, that Diotrephes was a Jew, and zealous for the law, and that he would not receive those strangers, converts from among the Gentils, because they did not take upon them the observation of the rites and ceremonies of the law of Moses. This opinion is mentioned by (d) Lampe. But he argues well against it.

And

(u) Antiquities of the Christian Church. B. i. ch. iv. p. 3. 6.

(x) Scrip. 7. 8. 49. num. ii. Vid. et Grot. in loc.

(y) Is vero ex illo erat hominum genere, qui Judæos, quamquam Christum professo, si legis ritus observabant, (quod in Judæ Chriistiâni faciebant ad hac ufque temporâ, ut Sulpicius nos docet) ad suos cœtus non admittabant. Grot. in ep. 3. ver. 9.

(z) Nolebat autem Christianos circumcisis ab incircumcisis seu Gentilibus, in ecclesiâm admissi. Cleric. ib.

(b) Heumann. ubi supr. p. 303. not. (a).

(d) See before, p. 473. note (a).
And indeed both these opinions were confuted before, when we shew ed, that Diotrephes was not a heretic, or that there is no reafon to think him fo.

It has been of late a common opinion among learned men, that (e) St.
John here speaks of some, particularly Jews, who had gone out into the world, to propagate the Christian Religion. Who had acted upon a generous and difinterested principle, refuting to take any thing from those, among whom they labored, and whom they had converted to the Christian faith. And they think, that St. John commends Caius for encouraging fuch teachers, and blames Diotrephes for not receiving and helping them. But that opinion appears to me without foundation. For I fee nothing that should lead us to think preachers here spoken of, but only ftrangers in want.

Ver. 5. Beloved, says St. John to Caius, thou doft faithfully whatfoever thou doft to the brethren, and to ftrangers: “that is, to the members of the church, to which he belonged, and to ftrangers, who came to the city, where he dwelt: whom he had received civilly, and courteoufly, and relieved generously, if they were in want.”

Ver. 6. Which have born witness of thy charity before the church.
“Some fuch persons, or fome members of that church, had been at the place, where St. John refided. And before the church they declared his good temper and liberality.” Whom if thou bring forward on their journey, after a godly fort, thou fhalt do well. “And it will be very com-mandeable in you, if after this any other fuch persons fhould come to your city, you fhall act in a like manner to them alfo, receiving them kindly, and forwarding them in their way. This will be very becoming your Christian profession.”

Ver. 7. Because that for his name’s fake they went forth taking nothing of the Gentils.

We learn from Bede, that (f) there were in ancient times two interpretations of these words. “For the name of Chrift they went forth to preach the gospel. Or, for the faith of Chrift, and the profession of his name they had left their native countrey, or had been expelled from it.”
This (g) is the fentence, for which Dr. Heumann contends, and therefore often calls these ftrangers exils.

(e) Tertiam epiftolam scriptit Gaio cuidam. . . Hominis liberalitatem laudat, qui præcones quosdam evangelicos, e Judæa gente, qui a Gentilibus nihil accipere voluerant, opibus suis adjuviftet. Cleric, ubi supr.

Diotrephen duplici nomine S. Ioannes objugatur: primum ideo, quod im-perium sibi arrogaret in ecclesia . . . deinde propteræa quod durum se ac inhumanum fratibus bene de religione Chriilianæ promeritis exhiberet.
Egreffì erant quidam ex eæt, cujuj membrum Diotrephes erat, ad propa-175.

(f) Duabus autem ex caussis pro nomine Domini sunt profeéti, aut ad pradìcandum videlicet nomen ejus propriè fponte venientes, aut propter no-minis fancti fidem et confessionem a civibus seu contribubibus suis patriæ ex-

(g) Nam exules illi Chriilianæ et patria sua cum egreffì sunt, nihil quicquam fuorum honorum acceperunt ab hostibus suis Ethnicis, sed coaætì sunt abire fine ullo vita subsidio. Heumann, ubi supr. p. 327.
He supposeth these strangers to have been Gentil converts, who had forsaken their native country, or had been driven out of it, destitute of all things.

However this place may be understood partly otherwise: "That we, who are Christians, ought to love these strangers in their difficulty, especially because they have not fought for relief among unbelieving Gentils: though some even of them might have been disposed to give them assistence."

Grotius (b) explains the place in that manner. The same senfe is likewise in Eslius. Whole (i) note upon this text I shall now transcribe at large, it being well fuited to illustrate this epiftle.

Ver. 8. We therefore ought to receive such, that we might be fellow-helpers to the truth. "It should be an allowed maxim, that we are to shew kind-nesse to such: otherwife, we do not act the part of Christians, who ought to encourage thofe who have a zeal for truth."

Ver. 9. I wrote to the church. Or I should have writ to the church, and therein to Diotrephes. But Diotrephes, who loveth to have the pre-eminence among them, receiveth us not. "I know, he would not pay a regard to my directions."

Ver. 10. Wherefore, if I come, I will remember his deeds, which he does. That is I (k) will remind him of his actions, and reprove, and admonifh him, in order to his amendment, of which I do not despair," prating againft us with malicious words. He proceeded fo far as to speak of the Apostle in a petulant manner. Perhaps, he faid, that though St. John did well in giving out general rules for the practive of piety; yet he had no right to intermeddle in particular cases, concerning which every one should

(b) Μηδε λαμβανοντες απο των εθνων... In manucripto απο των εθνων... Potuerant in ista calamitate adjuvari misericordià των εθνων, extraneorum. Sed maluerunt omnia Christianis debere. Grat. ad ver. 7. Nos ergo. Nos Christiani ubique locorum δειλιμαν εσελκανων... Manuscriptus, υπ' επιστολει, τοις... id vero est, opitulari. Id. ad ver. 8.

(i) Quod ait Apostolus, iflos profectos pro nomine σεφος Χριστι, potest bifariam exponi, ait Βεδα, videlicet, aut ut prædicaturs evangeliuem ejus fponde fint præfeti ad Gentiles convertendos, aut ut propter fidem et confessionem nominis Christi per Contributus suos patria fuerint expulsi. Similiter, quod sequitur, nihil accipientes a gentibus, ambiguum est, an de gentibus ad fidem Christi jam converfit accipiendum sit, an de nondon converfit. Et uterque fenfus fua nititur probabilitate. Illo modo fenfus est, quod hi quamvis anuntiarent, et deinceps forent annuntiatur gentibus evangeliolum feu fidem Christi, effentque jam complures gentilium eorum prædicatione converfiti, nihil tamen ab iis exigere, vel accipere voluerint necessariæ suffentionis, hac féliceret de caufa, ne quod orthodoxum darent evangeliolum Christi... De gentibus autem non converfiti fì fermo fìt, tunc significatur, quod ifi peregrini, quamvis egerent, quacumque tantum ex caufa, nihil tamen ab hujuflmodi gentilibus accipere, nedum petere, voluerint: ne iì scandalizarentur, et longius a Christiana religione averterentur. Dixifent enim: Eccle nulla est charitas inter Christianos. ... Utroque expositio bene probabilis est. Nec fatis liquet, utra fit præferenda. Ed. in 3. Ioan. ver. 7.

(k) Certe nihil aliud fìbi vult Apostolus, quam se more suo mollifimum placidiffimumque in modum admonitum esse Diotrephen peccati sui, recte tamque eum revocaturum in viam. Human. ibid. p. 309.
should judge for himself. And not content therewith, neither doth he himself receive the brethren, and forbiddeth them that would, and casteth them out of the church. "Nor is that all. For he not only refuseth to receive and entertain these brethren, but he also discourageth those who would relieve and entertain them. And thus he obligeth these strangers to leave your church, and go elsewhere."

By these last words most interpreters understand, St. John to say, that Diotrephes excommunicated, or cast out of the church, the brethren, members of it, who were for receiving these strangers. But Dr. Heumann says, that (l) by the persons, whom Diotrephes cast out of the church, must be understood these strangers, not the members of the church. For, as plainly appears, Caius was not excommunicated, though he had done what was opposed by Diotrephes. Nor need it be supposed, that all the strangers, here spoken of, were obliged to leave that place, or society. Diotrephes, it is true, discouraged their reception, and some might remove elsewhere. Others of them, however, might continue their abode there, encouraged by Caius, and some other pious members of this church, who did not submit to the reasons, or the orders of Diotrephes.

In this interpretation it is supposed, that casting out of the church refers not to the persons last mentioned, who would receive these strangers, but to the strangers whom Diotrephes would not have to be received. And Beaujobre says, the (m) place may be so understood. Dr. Heumann blames him for not saying, that (n) it ought to be so understood.

There

(l) Universalis videlicet, qui hanc tractarunt epistolam, fibi persuauerant, describi his verbis illud pæne ecclesiasticæ genus, quod excommunicatio vocari solet. Facile quidem poterat hic error agnosci. Nam primo, Caium, id, quod fieri nolebat Diotrephes, facientem, ab ipso non fuiffe excommunicatum, in propatulo est. Sed aeg., rem totam intueamur propius. Initiio igitur considerandum, quoniam ecclesiæ ejecteret Diotrephes. Ab omnibus, si Beaufoibrum excipimus, hoc referunt ad propinquius, τῶν θεοματίων, hoc est, eos, qui volebant exules hofpitio excipere. Cum vero jam graves attulimus caussas, cur non credi possit hos excommunicationes ejusce die ecclesiæ, sequitur, ut statuatam, haec verba, in τῶν θεοματίων ικέαλλει, pertinere ad remotiis, ad fratres exules. His felicit, dum nec ipse e Bera alicui imperiebat, et aliis, quoque, ut nihil ipsius darent, suadebat ac persuadebat, hoc ipso migrare eos cogebat alio, atque ita e sua expellebat ecclesiæ. Non erat igitur nofro loco necessee excommunicationem tribuere Diotrephi. Sed fatis evidens est, id eum effectum esse, quod omissem priorum exulion receptionem necessario consequatur, ut videlicet extint eccle sia, aliamque pereat, opum pariter et mifericordiae abundantiorem. Apparet hinc etiam facile, cum volentes exulum misereri καλών hic dicitur Diotrephes, non credi eum debere id vetuisse pro imperio, sed allatis duntaxat caussis, cur fieri id non oportebat, multos ab hoc pietatis officio revocaee. Atque hoc ipsum nos admet, verbo, ικέαλλει, non necessario significari, omnes illos exules revera abire coactus, sed id etiam recte ufurpari de conatu Diotrephis id eficiendi. Heumann. ibid. p. 310. ... 313.

(m) Les chaffé de l'eglise. Cela se peut rapporter ou aux freres, ou à ceux qui les reçoient, ou aux uns et aux autres. Sur. ver. 10.

(n) Hic enim in Gallica sua N. T. versione animadvertit, hæc verba etiam ad remotius referri posse, hoc est, ad fratres exules. Debebat vero indulgere meditationi, nec id relinquire dubium et incertum. Heumann. ib. p. 311. note (p).
There have been various conjectures of learned men concerning the reasons of Diotrephes’s conduct, which I do not choose to take notice of now. Dr. Heumann supposeth, that Diotrephes had the dispoſal of the revenues of the church. There came to the place strangers, who needed relief. But Diotrephes opposed the distribution of any of the common flock, and also discouraged such, as were willing to affit them with their own. For all which, as may be suppos’d, he assigned some reasons. This appears to me to have been the whole of the affair.

But whether these strangers were Jews, or Gentils, I cannot say. There might be some of both. Gratius (r) and Lampe (p) think, they were Jews, who had been driven out of Palaſtine, or had been reduced to want by the general and grievous calamity of that country, and had come into Asia with hopes of relief, and for the fake of a settlement. Heumann, as before seen, says they were Gentils. For certain they were Christians. And St. John, I think, says, that we ought to receive such, whether they be of Jewish or Gentil flock, that we may be fellow-helpers to the truth: “that we also may serve the interests of truth, for the sake of which these persons have suffered the losſe of all things.”

Ver. 11. Beloved, follow not that which is evil, but that which is good. Here the Apostle exhorts Caius to persift in his good conduct, and to be upon his guard, not to be influenced by any bad examples.

In the 12. verſe he recommends to him Demetrius, by whom, as may be suppos’d, this letter was carried.

In the 13. and 14. verſes he sends salutations, and speaks again of coming to the place, where Caius dwelled, and of speaking with him face to face. Which I suppos’d he did.

And I please myself with the suppoſition, that his journey was not in vain. I imagine, that Diotrephes submitted, and acquiesced in the advices and admonitions of the Apostle. Of this I have no certain assurance. However I may add: that neither does any one else know the contrarie.

VI. Concerning the time of writing these two epistles nothing can be said with certainty. Mill (q) placeth them about the same time with the firſt, in 91. or 92. Whifton (r) likewise supposeth, that they were all three writ about the year 82. or 83. I imagine, that St. John was somewhat advanced in age, and that he had resided a good while in Asia, before he wrote any of these epiftles. Consequently, I am dispos’d to think, that these two were not writ sooner than the firſt. And as it was before (s) argued, that the firſt epistle was writ about the year 80. these two may be reckoned to have been writ between the years 80. and 90.

(o) Τηρ τῷ ὑματος αὐτῷ ζέλαθον id eft, a Judæa, ejeft funt per Judaeos incredulos ob Christum. Grat. ad ver. 7.

(p) Unde collegimus, peregrinos hos, quorum caufam Ioannes tam impenie egit, siffit Judæos ex Palaſtina cum eo profugos, qui pro se aliſque per totalem regionis illius devallationem ad fummam eſeſulantem redactis, opem eccleſiarum Asia florentium implorabant. Lamp. Proleg. l. i. c. 7. num. xxvi.

St. Jude, and his Epistle.

I. His Historie. II. Testimonials to the Genuinnesse of the Epistle. III. To whom it was sent. IV. The Time, when it was writ.

I. The writer describes himself in this manner at the beginning of the epistle. ch. i. ver. 1. Jude (a) the servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James. Those two characters lead us to think, that he was one of those called the Lord's brethren, and that he was an Apostle. Our Lord's brethren, as enumerated in Matt. xiii. 55. are James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas. In Mark vi. 3. James, and Joses, and Judas, and Simon. And in the catalogues of the Apostles these, Matt. x. 3. James the son of Alpheus, and Lebbeus, whose surname was Thaddeus. Simon the Canaanite. Mark iii. 18. James the son of Alpheus, and Thaddeus, and Simon the Canaanite. Luke vi. 15. 16. James the son of Alpheus, and Simon Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James. Acts i. 13. James the son of Alpheus, and Simon Zelotes, and Judas the brother of James.

Thus he appears to have been sometimes called Judas, at other times Thaddeus, or Lebbeus. As I do not inquire into the meaning and origin of these names, I refer to (b) others. I only observe, that it was no uncommon thing among the Jews, for a man to have different names, as Simon, sometimes called Simeon, at other times Peter, or Cephas. And Thomas was also called Didymus.

Jude, a servant of Jesus Christ. He does not thereby deny himself to be an Apostle. St. Paul does not always take upon himself that character at the beginning of his epistles. It is wanting in his two epistles to the Thessalonians, in the epistles to the Philippians, and to Philemon. The epistle to the Philippians begins in this manner. Paul and Timotheus, servants of Jesus Christ, to all the saints in Christ Jesus, which are at Philippi.

It follows. And brother of James: meaning James, sometimes called the Lord's brother, and son of Alpheus, one of the twelve Apostles. And he does fitly style himself, as that James was the eldest brother, and was of note among the Apostles, after our Saviour's ascension, and in great repute among the Jewish believers. As appears from Acts xii. 17. xv. xxi. 18. . . . 25. and Gal. i. 19. ii. 9.

We have no account of Jude's vocation to the apostleship. Nor is there any thing said of him particularly in the Gospels, except what is related in John xiv. 21. 22. 23. in the account, which that Evangelist has given of our Lord's most excellent and affectionate discourses with the disciples a short time before his last sufferings. He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he is it that loveth me. And he that loveth me, shall be loved of my Father. And I will love him, and will manifest myself to him. Judas saith unto him, not Iscariot: Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifest thyself to us, and not unto the world! Jesus answered, and said unto him: If a man love me, he will keep my words. And my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.

(a) Ιωάν, ιησοῦ χριστοῦ δοῦλος, ἀδελφὸς Ἰακώβου.

This disciple still had the common prejudice concerning the kingdom of the Messiah. And he asks our Saviour with surprize, how he could speak of manifesting himself to a few only, when he was about to set up an universal monarchy in great power and splendour? Our Lord tells him, (what he might have known before,) that his kingdom, as Messiah, was spiritual, a kingdom of truth and righteousness: and that the blessings and privileges of it were peculiar to good men, who obeyed the precepts of true religion, which had been taught by him. Such would be accepted, and approved by himself, and by his heavenly Father, in whose name he had spoken. This they would all know, when they should come again among them, after his resurrection, and when the gift of the Spirit should be bestowed upon them, and others his followers.

As there is little said of Jude in the historie of our Saviour before his resurrection, so St. Luke in the Acts has inferred nothing particularly concerning him after it. However it is unquestionable, that he partook of the plentiful effusion of the Holy Ghost at the Pentecost next after our Lord’s ascension: and that he joined with the other Apostles in bearing an open testimonie to our Lord’s resurrection at Jerusalem: and that he had a share with them in the reproaches and other sufferings, which they endured upon that account.

It may be also reasonably supposed, that for a while he preached the gospel in several parts of the land of Israel, and wrought miracles in the name of Christ. But what they were, we cannot say, because they are not recorded by St. Luke, nor any other credible historian near the time.

As his life seems to have been prolonged, it may be also reckoned very likely, that he afterwards left Judea, and went abroad, preaching the gospel to Jews and Gentils in other countrys. But we have no account of his travels, that can be relied on. Some have said, that he preached in Arabia, Syria, Mesopotamia, and Persia: and that he suffered martyrdom in this last mentioned country. But of these things there remains not any credible historie.

Indeed, it may be questioned, whether St. Jude was a martyr. It was formerly observed by (c) us, that Heracleon, a learned Valentinian, as cited by Clement of Alexandria, reckons (d) among Apostles, who had not died by martyrdom, Matthew, Philip, Thomas, and Levi. And it was then said, that by Levi, Heracleon, probably, meant Lebbeus, that

(c) See p. 33. not. (b).

(d) ου γαρ σειτες δι αυτους αρμοδιοτατα της δικα της δανας αρμοδιων, ι η κηρυα ι ει αμ ρατοικος, φιλιππος, θωμας, λευι ει αλλοι σεβλοι. Herac. ap. Clem. A. Str. i. 4. p. 502.
is, Judas. Which is allowed by (e) Dodwell, and some other learned writers, to whom he then referred. Nor does Jerome, in his article of St. Jude, in his Catalogue of Ecclesiastical Writers, say any thing of his having died a Martyr.

Jerome, in his commentarie upon the tenth chapter of St. Matthew, where is the catalogue of the Apostles, says, "that (f) the Apostle Thaddeus, called by the Evangelist Luke, Jude the brother of James, was sent to Edessa to Agbarus King of Osroene." But Eusebius, in his account of that affair, says, "that (g) Thomas, one of the twelve sent to Edessa Thaddeus, one of Christ's seventy disciples, to preach the gospel in those countrieys." And in the preceding (h) chapter, where he speaks of Christ's seventy disciples, he reckons Thaddeus, who went to Edessa, one of them. Whence it came to pafs, that Jerome called him an Apostle, and reckoned him one of the twelve, is (i) not easie to say. But I imagine, that what he says in his Commentarie upon St. Matthew, is an inaccurate, owing to his writing in haste. This conjecture receives confirmation hence, that in the article of St. Jude, in the catalogue above mentioned, he says nothing of that journey.

Before I proceed any farther, I must take notice of (k) a Dissertatio of the learned Theodore Hafaeus: in which he argues, that Judas, called Lebbeus, and Thaddeus, is the same as Levi, of whose call St. Mark ch. ii. 13. . 17. and St. Luke ch. v. 27. . 32. give an account.

He supposeth, that St. Matthew ch. ix. 9. . 13. gives an account of his own call to be an Apostle, and that St. Mark and St. Luke give an account of the call of another Publican, named Levi, or Lebbeus, or Judas.

Upon which I observe.

1. That is a very forced interpretation. The whole historie, and all the circumstances of it, shew, that one and the same person is spoken of by all the three Evangelists. And the coherence renders it indubitable. The same things precede and follow in those several Evangelists: as may be perceived by any one, who compares them.

2. So far as we can find, it has been the opinion of the most ancient and learned Christian writers, that Matthew and Levi are two names of one and the same man. So thought (l) Eusebius. So likewise (m) Jerome.

(e) Diff. Iren. i. num. xxiv.
(g) H. E. l. i. cap. 13. p. 32.
(h) Cap. 12. p. 31. A.
(m) Primus omnium Matthaeus est Publicanus cognomento Levi, qui Evangelium

Matthæus, qui et Levi, ex Publicano Apostolus. De V. I. cap. 3.

†† See note (\(m\)).

\(q\) Nam observabam, Matthæum nunquam dici Levin, vel Levin vicissim appellari Matthæum, &c. Haf. ubi supra p. 477.

Hæc igitur idæas vel legeat, vel ipse hæc dixit, vel idæas habeat. Chrys. in Matt. hom. 32. al. 33. Tom. 7. p. 369.

cient Christians. Some of whom I have quoted below. Nevertheless St. Luke has never told us, that Judas was surnamed Thaddeus, or Lebbeus. Nor has St. Matthew, or St. Mark said, that Thaddeus, or Lebbeus, was also called Judas.

These observations, as seems to me, are sufficient to confirm the common opinion. However I will add a thought or two, of less moment.

4. St. Matthew, in the catalogue of the Apostles, placeth himself in this manner. ch. x. 3. and Matthew the Publican: ε' μαθαυζον δε τηλωνι. May it not be hence argued with probability, that he was the only Publican among the Apostles, and that there was no other?

5. If we were to form a conjecture concerning the employment, that was followed by Jude, before he was an Apostle, it (s) would be that of an husbandman. In the Apothetical Constitutions the Apostles are made to say: "Some (t) of us are fishermen, others tentmakers, others husbandmen." Undoubtedly several of the Apostles were fishermen. But by the later part of the sentence no more may be meant, than that there was among them one tentmaker, even Paul, and one husbandman, intending, perhaps, St. Jude. For Hegesippus, as quoted by Eusebius, writes, "that (t) when Domitian made inquiries after the posterity of David, some grandsons of Jude, called the Lord's brother, were brought before him. Being asked concerning their poiseffions, and substance, they assured him, that they had only so many acres of land, out of the emprovement of which they both paid him tribute, and maintained themselves with their own hard labour. The truth of what they said was confirmed by the callousness of their hands. Being asked concerning Christ, and his kingdom, of what kind it was, and when it would appear; they answered, that it was not worldly and earthly, but heavenly and angelical: that it would be manifested at the end of the world: when coming in great glory he would judge the living and the dead, and render to every man according to his works. The men being mean, and their principles harmles, they were dismissed."

Hence some may argue, that St. Jude himself had been an husbandman. And from this account, if it may be relied upon, we learn, that this Apostle was married, and had children.

That may suffice for the history of St. Jude.

II. In the next place I am to observe the evidences of the genuinnesse, and canonical authority of the epistle ascribed to him.

Somewhat relating to this point has been already said in the xv. chapter, concerning the Catholic Epistles in general. To which chapter therefore the reader is referred, though I may here transcribe some things from it, for shewing the authority of this epistle in particular.

It should be remembered, that Eusebius having enumerated the books of Scripture, universally received from the beginning, and among them the

(2) ετι δε περιθανει αι απο γνως τι κυριω οιων ειδα, τι κατα σαρκα λεγονειν αυνι αδικησοντας, οις ιδηπατορινων, οις ιν γνως οτας δαεδι. Enseb. H. E. L. 5. cap. 20.
the first epistle of Peter, and the first epistle of John, he adds: "And (u) among the contradicted, but yet well known to the most, (or approved by many,) are that called the epistle of James, and that of Jude, and the second of Peter, and the second, and third of John." So that in his time this epistle was well known, and received by many, though not by all.

This epistle is no where expressly cited by Irenæus, who wrote about the year of Christ 178. Whether he has at all referred to it, was considered formerly. And the reader is referred to what was then (x) said.

Clement of Alexandria flourished about the year 104. Eusebius giving an account of his work, says, "that (y) in his Institutions Clement had given explications of all the canonical scriptures, not omitting those which are contradicted. I mean the epistle of Jude, and the other catholic epistles."

That work, entitled Institutions, is lost. But we have in Latin a small treatise or fragment, called Adumbrations, supposed to be translated from the Institutions. Here are notes upon the epistle of Jude: in which is an observation concerning the modestie of the writer: "that (z) Jude, who wrote a catholic epistle, did not tire himself at the beginning of it, brother of the Lord, though he was related to him, but Jude, the servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James."

Which observation serves to shew, whom Clement took to be the writer of this epistle. He supposed him to be one of them, who are called the Lord's brethren. Matt. xiii. 55. Mark vi. 3, and an Apostle. See Luke vi. 16. In that Adumbration follow brief remarks upon almost every verse of the epistle, except the last, or 25. verse.

It might be observed likewise, that in that place Clement declares his opinion concerning those called the Lord's brethren, that they were children of Joseph.

This epistle is also quoted expressly by Clement in two of his works, which remain entire, the Pedagogue or Instructer, and the Stromata or Miscellanies.

In the Pedagogue he speaks to this purpose: I will (a) that ye should know, says Jude, that God having once saved the people out of Egypt, afterwards destroyed them that believed not. And the angels, which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he (b) has referred in everlasting chains under darkness, unto the judgement of the great day. And afterwards, (u) See before p. 364.

(y) . . . μη δια τας αντιλεγομενας παρειλθων την ειδη λειμων τας λοιπας καθολικας ειπτολας. H. E. i. 6. cap. 14. in.
(a) Pæd. l. 3. p. 239.
(b) . . . δεσμοις ειδιοις υπο ζησον αγιων [al. αγιων.] αγγελων τετηφεγμιν.
wards, he emphatically describes the characters of those who are judged.

Woe unto them, for they have walked in the way of Cain, and ran greedily in the error of Balaam for reward, and perished in the gain-saying of Core..."

Jude, ver. 5. 6. and 11.

In his Stromata Clement writes to this purpose: "Of (c) these, and the like heretics, I think, Jude spake prophetically in his epistle: Likewise also these dreamers, and what follows to, And their mouth speaketh great swelling words:" that is, from ver. 8. to ver. 16. And that manner of quoting shews, that the epistle was in the hands of many people, or of all Christians in general, to be consulted by them.

They have been thus prolix in rehearsing these passages of Clement. For they appear to me a sufficient proof of the antiquity, and genuineness of this epistle: or that it was writ by Jude, one of Christ's twelve Apo-files. However I would also refer those of my readers, who are willing to look back, to Clement's testimony to this, and the other catholic epistles, as formerly observed in (d) his chapter.

In Tertullian, about the year 200. is but one quotation of this epistle,
But it is very express. "Hence (e) it is, says he, that Enoch is quoted by the Apostle Jude," Intending the 14. verse of the epistle, and making no doubt, that the writer was an Apostle.

In Origen, about the year 230. are divers plain quotations of St. Jude's epistle.

In his Commentaries upon St. Matthew, which we still have in Greek, having taken notice of the words of Matth. xiii. 55. 56. . . beside other remarks, he says, "that (f) James is the name, whom Paul mentions in the epistle to the Galatians, as having been seen by him." Gal.
i. 19. He also observes a passage, said to be in the Antiquities of Je-phus, relating to the same James. Then he adds: "And (g) Jude wrote an epistle, of few lines indeed, but full of the powerful words of the heavenly grace, who at the beginning says: Jude the servant of Jefus Christ, and brother of James." These passages are of use to shew us, whom Origen took to be the writer of this epistle.

Again, in the same Commentaries. "And (b) in the epistle of Jude:
To them that are beloved [or sanctified] in God the Father, and preferred in Jefus Christ, and called.

Once more, in the same Greek Commentaries upon St. Matthew's Gospel,

(c) ἐπὶ τῶν, δῆμαι, καὶ τῶν ὄμοιών αἵρεσιν σφηκτικῶς ἵσταν ἐν τῇ ἐστίσει ἐπίκειναι. Ομοίως μίνιοι καὶ ἔτοι ἐνυπνικόμενοι· ἐκ γὰρ ὑπὲρ τῶν ἀληθίων ἱπταμένων ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ, καὶ τὸ σώμα αὐτῶν λαλεῖ ὑπόθεσις. Strom. l. 3. p. 431. A. B.

(e) Ecoc accidit, quod Enoch apud Judam Apololium testimonium perhibet.
De Cultu Fem. l. 1. cap. 3. p. 172. A.

(f) Ιακωβεος δὲ ἐστιν δοῦτος, ὁ λόγις σωφρονὸς ἐδώκεν ἐν τῷ σώρῳ γαλάτας ἵπτισκόν,

(g) Καὶ ἤθες ἤγαγεν ἐπιστολῇ, ἀληθείας μὲν, αἰτίομαι καὶ τῶν τῶν ὄρατων καθίστω ἰδιωμάτων λόγων, ὅσα ἐστὶν τῷ σφηκτικῷ εἰρήκων· ἱστάς ἐν Χριστῷ ἰδοὺς,

(b) Καὶ ἐν τῇ ἱδέᾳ ἐπιστολῆς, τοῖς ἐν δια ἀπετικαθημένοις καὶ ἵστα ἤγαγεν τῆς ἱπτ τικῆς, καὶ ἀκολούθως Ιδ. p. 332. A. al. 607. C.
Gospel, having quoted 1 Pet. i. 12. he says: “But (i) if any one receives also the epistle of Jude, let him consider what will follow from what is there said: And the angels, which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he has referred in everlasting chains under darkness, unto the judgement of the great day.”

This epistle is also quoted in those works of Origen, which we now have only in a Latin translation. But forbearing to take farther notice of them here, I refer to the account formerly given at large of Origen’s testimonie to the Scriptures, in (k) the third volume of this work.

Upon the whole we perceive, that there were some in his time, who doubted of, or denied the authority of this epistle. But himself, as seems to me, admitted the genuinnesse and authority of it. For he quotes it expressly, without hesitation, as writ by Jude, one of the Lord’s brethren, and brother of James, consequently Apostle. And he says, that it was full of the powerful words of the heavenly grace.

I have not observed any notice taken of this epistle (l) in the writings of Cyprian, Bishop of Carthage, about the year 248, and afterwards.

It is quoted by the Anonymous Author against the Novatian Heretic, who wrote about the year 255. But he does not name St. Jude. His words are: “As (m) it is written: Behold he cometh with ten thousands “of his angels, to execute judgement upon all, and what follows,” that is, the 14. and 15. verses of the epistle.

Eusebius flourished about the year 315. I have already transcribed from him a (n) passage concerning the catholic epistles, and among them concerning St. Jude’s, which ought to be recollected here. There is another taken from him, at (o) the beginning of this article. And I shall here put down again a third passage transcribed above in the chapter of (p) the epistle of St. James. Where having given an account of the martyrdom of St. James, he says: “Thus (q) far concerning James, who is said to be the writer of the first of the epistles, called catholic. But it ought to be observed, that it is spurious: [that is contradicted:] Forasmuch as there are not many of the ancients, who have made mention of it: as neither of that called Jude’s, which likewise is one of the epistles called catholic. However we know, that (r) these also are

(n) See p. 1. 363.
(o) P. 484. 485.
(q) H. E. l. 2. c. 23. p. 66. C.
(r) Ομοι δε ιομεν σταυτας μετα των λοιπων διευθυνομεναις εκκλη-φισις. Ibid.
are commonly used [or publicly read] in most churches together with the rest."

That passage needs no comment. This epistle was generally received in the time of Eusebius, though not by all.

Lucifer of Cagliari in Sarðinia, about 354. has quoted (z) almost the whole of this epistle. He quotes it expressly, as (z) writ by the excellent Apostle Jude, brother of the Apostle James.

I need not particularly mention more authors. For after the time of Eusebius, seven catholic epistles were generally received by all Christians, Greeks and Latins. St. Jude's epistle therefore, as well as the rest, was received by Athanasius, Cyril of Jerusalem, Epiphanius, Didymus of Alexandria, Jerome, Rufin, the third Council of Carthage, Augustin, Isidore of Pelusium, Cyril of Alexandria, and others, whose names may be seen in the alphabetical Table in the twelfth volume, under the article of Seven Catholic Epistles. But (v) it was not received by the Syrians.

And it may not be amiss to observe here, that we have found this epistle oftener quoted by writers, who lived before the time of Eusebius, than the epistle of St. James.

Of the authors above named there are two, of whom I would take some farther notice.

Epiphanius, about 368. in his Heresie of the Gnostics, expressly "cites * the catholic epistle of the Apostle Jude, brother of James, and of the Lord, writ by inspiration." This epistle is received by Jerome, as writ by the Apostle Jude, as may be recollected by thoé, who have read his chapter in the tenth volume of this work. Where, (x) in his letter to Paulinus, he says: "The Apostles James, Peter, John, Jude, wrote seven epistles, of few words, but full of sense."

And in the chapter of St. Jude, in his catalogue of Ecclesiastical Writers, he says: "Jude (y) brother of James, left a short epistle, " which is one of the seven called catholic. But (z) because of a quotation from a book of Enoch, which is apocryphal, it is rejected by many. However at length it has obtained authority, and is reckoned among the sacred scriptures."

There is some inaccuracy in Jerome's manner of expression. For a book to be at the same time rejected by the most, or many, and to be reckoned among the sacred scriptures, are inconsequent. But it might have been properly said: "that whereas it had been rejected by many, because of a quotation

(s) See Vol. ix. p. 42. 43. Lardner.
* Ως κε πασι τοτεν ομοια ικινηθη τη αγιν ειναι εν τω ουρανω, ηθα, ληγεν δι ει την αναμνησι καθολικη εισοδη, ηθας δι εις τον ουρανος εικωμαι, εν ικινηοι κενης ινθομενης. H. 26. n. xi. p. 92. D.
(x) Vol. x. p. 77. Lardner.
(y) P. 133.
(z) Et quia de libro Enoch, qui apocryphus est, in ea assumitur testimoniun, a plerisque rejectur. Tamen auctoritate vetustate jam et usu meruit, et inter sanctas scripturas computatur. De V. I. cap. iv.
quotation from an apocryphal book; it had at length obtained authority, and was reckoned among the sacred scriptures.”

Many learned men (a) have carefully considered this difficulty. But as the ancients overcame it, and at length admitted the authority of this epistle, perhaps it might have been passed over, as a thing of no great consequence. Indeed, if there is a credible testimonie to any book, or epistle, that it was writ by an Apostle, such a passage need not cause much hesitation. Origen has an observation in one of his Latin tracts. “St. Paul (b) says: Α᾿ ιαμάνες καὶ Μαμβρές υπόστρωδος Μωΐς. This is not found in the public scriptures, but in a secret book, entitled Ιαμάνες καὶ Μαμβρές. For which reason some have been so daring, as to argue against that epistle of Timothie, though in vain.” For certain such an objection could be of little weight against so well attested a writing, as St. Paul’s second epistle to Timothie. Nor ought it to weigh much in this case.

I might conclude here. But for the sake of some, shall add the two following observations.

1. It is not certain, that St. Jude cites any book. He only says, that (c) Enoch prophesied, saying, the Lord cometh with ten thousands of his saints. Which (d) might be words of a prophesie, preferred by tradition, and inserted occasionally in divers writings. Nor is there good evidence, that in St. Jude’s time there was extant any book entitled Enoch, or Enoch’s Prophecies, though there was such a book in the hands of Christians in the second and third centuries. Moreover St. Jude might ascribe to Enoch what it is reasonable to believe was the import of his prophesie.

I transcribe here an observation, which I have met with: “Saint Jude in

(a) Beaufobre and Lenfant in their preface to the epistle of St. Jude. Dr. Benson in his preface to this epistle, sect. i. and many others.

(d) Alii denique verifimilius arbitrantur, habuisse Judam ex nota et confessa eo tempore traditione; quam veram esse Spiritu magistro cognovit, dignamque judicavit, quam sua habe epistolæ confcrari æternitati. Cui fententia ego quoque habetns acutiusco. Wif. ubi supr. wnum. xli. p. 503.
in his (e) epistle, from the circumstances of the men, and the manners of the people, to whom Henoch preached, gathered what might be the sum of Henoch's preaching, in this fort. Behold, the Lord cometh. How? As at the giving of the law, with thousands of his angels, to give judgment against all men, and to rebuke all the ungodly among them of all their wicked deeds, which they have ungodly committed, and of all their cruel speakings, which wicked sinners have spoken against him. Upon which words the Greeks, not knowing the course of the Hebrews in their feigned speeches, imagined, that Henoch left a book of his preaching behind him."

Grotius (f) has somewhat to the like purpose.

And J. H. Heidegger (g) approved of this manner of interpretation. He supposes, St. Jude to refer to the words of Moses. Gen. v. 22. and 24. And Enoch walked with God. Cocceius, also, as cited (h) by Witsius, argued not very differently, though Witsius did not fully approve of it.

I shall add a thought or two confirming that method of interpretation. St. Peter 2 ep. ii. 5. calls Noah, a preacher of righteousness: referring, I suppose, to the history in Genesis, though it is not expressly laid there. And at ver. 7. 8. he says of Lot, that he was vexed with the filthy conver-

Quod tunc Enoch aut dixit, aut dicere potuit, imminente diluvio, idem Judas ad ingentem illam internecionem, quæ Judæis contumacibus imminebat, referre commode potuit. Id. ib. ad ver. 15.

(g) Di finguendum accurate est inter fundamentum prophetiae, et ejus formulam. Fundamentum quod attinet, est illud totum igitur. Alterum est, quod scriptum est, Henochum cum Deo ambulasse. Ex eo Judæ proclive fuit conficere Enochum non pro se tantum quæsivisse Deum, sed etiam alios propitio terrere ultimis judicij ab impietate et injustitia deterruisse: neque potuisse cum Deo ambulare, vel piii viri officio defungi, nisi judicium Domini venturi cum myriadsibus angelorum hominibus suo ætatis annunciatum. Cum igitur non potuerit non loqui de judicio Domini superventuro impis, et ii, de quibus S. Judas loquitur, sint ultimi temporis, conficet, Enochum diu ante diluvium de ipsis prophetasse. . . Porro quod formulam attinet prophetiae, cujus fundamentum ita in Scripturis offendimus, illam ex eis verbis contextum Judas, in quorum virtute eam latere per omnem universitatem, intellectiam etiam sibi vertere. Heid. ubi supra. num. x. p. 277.

conversation of the wicked: and that dwelling among them, in seeing and hearing, he vexed his righteous soul from day to day, with their unlawful deeds. These things are not expressly said in the book of Genesis. Nevertheless I make no question, but the Apostle refers to what is there said, and deduceth these things thence, and not from an apocryphal, or any other writing whatsoever.

There is no necessity therefore to suppose, that St. Jude quoted a book called Enoch, or Enoch's Prophecies.

2. Allowing St. Jude to quote such a book, he gives it no authority. It was no canonical book of the Jews. That is certain. Consequently, if there was such a book among them, it was apocryphal. But though it was so, there might be in it some right things. These St. Jude might take, without approving the whole of it. To this purpose (i) Jerome has argued largely, and very well, in his Commentarie upon the epistle to Titus, upon occasion of St. Paul's quotation of Epimenides. Tit. i. 12. And Cave says, "It (k) is no more strange, that St. Jude should quote an apocryphal book, than that St. Paul should put down James and Jambres for the two Magicians of Pharaoh that opposed Moses. Which he must either derive from tradition, or fetch from some uncanonical author of those times, there being no mention of their names in Moses his relation of that matter."

As I have said so much about this text, I am induced to take notice of some other like things in this epistle.

Says St. Jude ver. 8. and 9. Likewise also these filthy dreamers defile the flesh, despise dominion, and speak evil of dignities. Yet Michael, the archangel, when contending with the devil, he disputed about the body of Moses, dared not [chose 4+ not] to bring against him a railing accusation, but said: The Lord rebuke thee.

Origen, in the third century, supposed, that (l) St. Jude might refer to a book, called the Assumption, or Ascension of Moses, though it was not a book of authority. But indeed, there is no good reason to think, that there was any such book extant in the time of St. Jude. It is more probable, that it was forged afterwards. Some therefore have imagined, that St. Jude took this passage from some more valuable Hebrew author, of whom however we have no knowledge.

But

(k) Life of St. Jude, in English, p. 205.

(l) See Dr. Lardner's edition of this work vol. iii. p. 271. a citation from Origen's books of Principles.
But to me it is apparent, that St. Jude refers to the vision in Zach. iii. 1...3. And he shewed me Joshua the High-Priest, standing before the angel of the Lord, and Satan standing at his right-hand to resist him. And the Lord, [that is, the angel of the Lord, before-mentioned] said unto Satan: The Lord rebuke thee. And what follows. The text of St. Jude is parallel with 2 Pet. ii. 11. Whereas Angels, which are greater in power, bring not railing accusation before the Lord. Here also is a plain reference to the vision in Zacharia. The thing itself, and that circumstance, before the Lord, answering to the expression in Zacharia, standing before the Lord, or before the angel of the Lord, put it, as seems to me, beyond question.

Campegius Vitringa (m) has some curious observations upon this text of St. Jude. Instead of the body of Moses, he would read the body of Joshua. That is ingenious. Nevertheless the common reading may be right, and may be explained very agreeably to the passage of Zacharia. For, according to an interpretation of that vision, formerly (n) taken from Ephraim the Syrian, Joshua, the High-Priest, there denotes the Jewish People. Whom St. Jude might call the body of Moses, as Christians are called the body of Christ by St. Paul. 1 Cor. xii. 20. 25. 27. Eph. i. 23. and iv. 12. 16. Col. i. 18. The same interpretation was proposed some while ago, and well supported in a Dissertation of a learned writer, who was not acquainted with Ephraim (n). Once more. St. Jude says ver. 6. And the angels, which kept not their first estate, but left their own habitation, he has referred in everlasting chains under darkness unto the judgment of the great day. To which there is a parallel place in 2 Pet. ii. 4. The learned writer, above quoted, observes, that (o) neither here have these Apostles a reference to any Jewish apocryphal book: but to some text of Sacred Scripture, or of the Old Testament. But he then deferred shewing the place. Nor do I know, that

(m) Probabile nobis videtur, Judam scripsisse ἄγγει τῇ ἵνῳ σώματος, et hodiernam lectionem esse a manu imperitióris bibliographi, qui cum nihil in Scripturis memorabile legisset de corpore ῥυφα, fed contra ex Historia Sacra intellexisset, quid circa corpus Moctis singulare accidisset, nec interea de loco Zacharíæ cognitaret, ῥυφα nomen in illud Mois commutavit. Sed quam certum est, Judam his verbis respexisse locum illum Zacharíæ, tam quoque certum est, non scripisses, Michaèilam disputasse cum Diábole de corpore Moctis, ... Imo ex eadem ratione liquidissime patet, Judam, que hic habet de corpore Moctis, non desumptissi ex apocrpopho aliquo Judaici ingenii, in quo hanc fabulam offendissent. Respexit Judas, ut jam dixi, ad locum Zacharíæ, et inde recte evicit, Satane, potentissimi angelii, ab ipso principo angelorum Michaèilæ in judicio in ipsum proferendo magnam habitam esse rationem: ac proin multo minus potesitates et glorias, hoc est, potentissimos principes, licet malos, nobisque adveros, a nobis esse vilipendéndos. Campegius Vitring. Observ. Sacr. i. 4. cap. ix. n. 35. p. 1003. 1004.

†† See Bib. Rafinnée. Tom. 31. P. 2. art. i. p. 243...269.

(o) Quid Petrus et Judas per alterum illud exemplum angelorum, qui pec-coverunt, principio et domicilio suo devolént, intenderint, et ad quam partem Historia Sacra respexerint, (ad Historiam enim Sacram respexisse certum est,) nunc prætermitto, alia fortea occasione commodiore indicandum. Id. ib. num. 55.

that these texts ever came in his way afterwards. I wish they had. For I also am much inclined to believe, that in all these places the Apostles referred to passages of the Old Testament.

This may affect us in forming a judgement concerning the opinion (p) of the Bishop of London, that St. Jude in his epistle, and St. Peter in the second chapter of his second epistle, copied, or imitated some Hebrew writer, who had left behind him a description of the false prophets of his own, or former times. Which indeed is ingenious, and plausible. Nevertheless I think, such conjectures ought not to be presently received as certain. St. Peter, and St. Jude, and all the Christians in general of their time, had before them the scriptures of the Old Testament. Many of the cases referred to by these Apostles are evidently found there, such as Cain, Korah, Balaam, the people of Sodom. And why should not the other instances be taken thence likewise? If they are, I presume, the argument would be more forcible with all, than otherwise it would have been. Nor does the resemblance of file in St. Peter and Jude afford a conclusive argument, that they both borrowed from some one Jewish author. The similitude of the subject might produce a resemblance of file. The design of St. Peter and St. Jude was to condemn some loose and erroneous Christians, and to caution others against them. When speaking of the same sort of persons, their file, and figures of speech, would have a great agreement. And certainly I think, that the Apostles needed not any other assistance in confuting and exposing corrupt Christians, than their own inspiration, and an acquaintance with the ancient Scriptures of the Jewish Church.

III. We are now to consider, to whom this epistle was sent.

Witsius says, it (q) was writ to all Christians everywhere, but especially to Christians converted from Judaism: forasmuch as St. Jude refers to Jewish writings and traditions. Moreover he wrote to the same Christians, to whom Peter wrote, who were such as had been Jews. To the like purpose (r) Estius.

Hammond (s) says, the epistle was writ to the Jews scattered abroad, who

(p) See His Dissertation concerning the Authority of the second Epistle of St. Peter. And here in this Volume, p. 445.

(s) Videntur autem, sicut epistolæ Jacobi et Petri, scripta fuissa ad Judæos dispersionis, Christianam Religionem amplexos, ut confirmarentur contra pravas who believed the Christian Religion, to secure them against the errors of the Gnostics.

Dr. Benson (t) thinks, that St. Jude wrote to Jewish Christians, as his brother James had done, and most probably, to the Jews of the Western dispersion.

Let us now observe the inscription of the epistle in the writer’s own words. Jude, the servant of Jesus Christ, and brother of James, to them that are sanctified by God the Father, and preferred in Jesus Christ, and called. ver. 1. And ver. 3. Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation: it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you, that ye should earnestly contend for the faith, which was once delivered unto the saints.

These expressions, as seems to me, lead us to think, that the epistle was designed for the use of all in general, who had embraced the Christian Religion. And if St. Jude writes to the same people, to whom St. Peter wrote, that is a farther argument for this supposition. For, that St. Peter wrote to all Christians in general, in the countries named at the beginning of his first epistle, was shewn (u) formerly.

The Time, when it was writ. IV. We now come to the last point, the time of writing this epistle. Here I shall observe the opinions of several.

Dr. Benson’s opinion is, “that (x) this epistle was writ before the destruction of Jerusalem, a few weeks, or months, after the second epistle of St. Peter: forasmuch as the state of things, as represented in both these epistles, is very much the same.”

Mill’s conjecture is, that (y) this epistle was writ about the year of Christ 90. But, as he says, there are no clear evidences of the exact time, when it was writ.

Dodwell (z) whom Cave (a) follows, argues, that this epistle was writ soon after the destruction of Jerusalem, in the year 71. or 72. But the reasonings of those learned men are far from being conclusive.

Lenfant and Beaupré were of opinion, that (b) this epistle may be placed with great probability between the year 70. and the year 75.

Witsius thinks, it (c) was writ, in this Apostle’s old age, and in the last age

(t) Preface to this ep. sect. ii. p. 446. See also his paraphrase of ver. 1.

(a) See before. p. 447.

(x) Preface to the epistle of St. Jude. sect. iii. p. 448.

(y) Fortasse quidem circa annum vulgaris ærae xc. Verum de ipso præciso tempore nihil habemus explorati. Proleg. num. 147.

(z) Diff. Iren. i. num. xiv.

(h) H. Lr in S. Judæ.

(b) On ne se trompera pas en plaçant cette epître entre les années 70. et 75. de l’ere Chrétienne. Pref. sur l’épître de S. Jude.

(c) Tempus scriptæ hujus epistolæ, uti ad postremam Apostolorum ætatem referendum est, quod colligitur ex ver. 17. Ita ad extremam quoque Judæ fæ- necītem pertinet. &c. Wits. in Jud. num. ix.
age of the Apostles of Christ, and when few, or perhaps none of them, were living, beside St. John.

To the like purpose (d) Estius.

Occumenius in his note upon ver. 17. 18. of this epistle. Remember the words, which were spoken before of the Apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ: that they told you, there should be mockers in the last time. ... "Meaning: "(e) says he, by Peter in his second epistle, and by Paul in almost all his epistles. Hence it is evident, that he wrote late, after the decease of the Apostles."

If St. Jude referred here to St. Peter's second epistle, it must be allowed, that he had seen it, and wrote after St. Peter. Which indeed is the opinion of many. So Occumenius appears to have thought. So also says (f) Estius. Dr. Benson expresseth himself after this manner: "that (g) it seems highly probable, that St. Jude had seen and read the second epistle of St. Peter. For there are found in St. Jude several similar passages, not only to those in the second chapter of the second of St. Peter, but also in the other parts of that epistle."

Nevertheless I must still say, this appears to me doubtfull. For it seems very unlikely, that St. Jude should write so similar an epistle, if he had seen St. Peter's. In that case St. Jude would not have thought it needful for him to write at all. If he had formed a design of writing, and had met with an epistle of one of the Apostles, very suitable to his own thoughts and intentions, I think, he would have forbore to write.

Indeed the great agreement in subject and design between these two epistles affords a strong argument, that they were writ about the same time. As therefore I have placed the second epistle of St. Peter in the year 64. I am induced to place this epistle of St. Jude in the same year, or soon after, in 65. or 66. For there was exactly the same state of things in the Christian Church, or in some part of it, when both these epistles were writ.

I do not insist upon the expression, in the last time, which is in ver. 18. Some would understand thereby the last period of the Jewish state and constitution, immediately preceding the destruction of Jerusalem. But I cannot interpret the phrase, the last time, in Jude, or last days in St. Peter iii. 3, in so limited a sense. I think, that thereby must be meant the days of the Messiah, or the late ages of the world.

However,

(e) ... ut ôò τῶν αποστόλων: τῶν ὑπὸ πέτρου ἡ τῇ δευτέρᾳ ἐπιστολῇ, κατὰ δὲ σάλως καὶ σακχάρωσιν ἐπιστολῆς. Εἰ τάτις γὰρ δήλω, ὅτι εἰσχατος μετὰ τὸ παραλείπει τὴν αποστόλου, ἴσηθί τούτῳ. Oecum. T. 2. p. 633. D.

(g) Preface to St. Jude, sec. iii.
However, undoubtedly, that exhortation, ver. 17. and 18. But, beloved, remember ye the words, which were spoken before by the Apostles of the Lord Jesus Christ: that they told you, there should be mockers in the last time: do imply, as Witius, and Estius, observe, that it was then the last age of the Apostles: when several of them had left the world, and few of them were still surviving. Which well suits the date, before mention ed, the year 64. or 65. or 66.

When St. Jude adviseth the Christians to recollect, and be mindfull of the words of the Apostles of Christ, he may intend their preaching, which these Christians had heard, or the writings of Apostles, which they had read, and had in their hands. Such discourses of St. Paul may be seen recorded in Acts xx. 29. 30. And he writes to the like purpose 1 Tim. iv. 1. . 5. and 2 Tim. iii. and iv. They who suppose, that St. Jude had seen and read the second epistle of St. Peter, must think, that he refers also to 2 Pet. ch. iii. 1. . 5.

There are some other expressions in this epistle, which may deserve to be here taken notice of by us. ver. 3. It was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you, that ye should earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints. and ver. 5. I will therefore put you in remembrance, though ye once knew this. These expressions seem to imply, that now some considerable time had passed, since the whole scheme of the Christian Doctrine had been published to the world, and since the persons, to whom the Apostle is writing, were first instructed in it.

Upon the whole, as before said, this epistle might be writ in the year of Christ 64. or 65. or 66.

CHAP. XXII.

The Revelation of St. JOHN.

I. It's Genuiness shown from Testimonie. II. from internal characters. III. It's Time.

It's Genuiness shown from Testimonie. W. E are now come to the last book of the New Testament, the Revelation: about which there have been different sentiments among Christians, many receiving it as the writing of John, the Apostle and Evangelist, others ascribing it to John a Presbyter, others to Cerinthus, and some rejecting it, without knowing to whom it should be ascribed.

I shall therefore here rehearse the testimonie of ancient Christians, as it ariseth in several ages.

It is probable, that Hermas had read the book of the Revelation, and imitated it. He has many things resembling it. Vol. i. p. 135. . 141. It is referred to by the Martyrs at Lyons. p. 341. There is reason to think, think, it was received by Papias. p. 238. 239. 251...253.

It was also fixed in the year 140. was acquainted with this book, and received it, as writ by the Apostle John. For in his Dialogue with Trypho he expressly says: "And a man from among us, by name John, one of "the Apostles of Christ, in the revelation made to him, has prophesied "that the believers in our Christ shall live a thousand years in Jerusalem, "and after that shall be the general, and, in a word, the eternal "resurrection and judgement of all together." p. 278. 279. To this "very passage we supposeth Eusebius to refer in his Ecclesiastical Historie, when giving an account of Jujin's works, he observes to this purpose: "He also mentions the Revelation of John, expressly calling it the Apo- "stle's." See the same volume p. 278. note (a). Among the works of Melito, Bishop of Sardis, one of the seven churches of Asia, about the year 177. Eusebius mentions one, entitled, "Of the Revelation of John." p. 328. 329. It is very probable, that Melito ascribed this book to the Apostle of that name, and esteemed it a book of canonical au- thority. Ireneus, Bishop of Lyons in Gaul, about 178. who in his younger days was acquainted with Polycarp, often quotes this book, "as the Revelation of John, the disciple of the Lord," p. 378. And in one place he says: "It was seen not long ago, but almost in our age, at the end of the reign of Domitian." p. 379. And see p 346.

Theophilus was Bishop of Antioch about 181. Eusebius speaking of a work of his against the heresie of Hermogenes, says, "he therein made use of testimones, or quoted passages, from John's Apocalyse." Vol. ii. p. 427. The book of the Revelation is several times quoted by Clen- ment of Alexandria, who flourished about 194. and once in this manner: "Such an one, though here on earth he is not honored with the first feat, shall sit upon the four and twenty thrones judging the people, as John says in the Revelation." p. 515. Tertullian, about the year 200. often quotes the Revelation, and supposeth it to have been writ by St. John, the same, who wrote the first epistle of John, universally received. p. 621. Again: "The Apostle John in the Apocalyse describes a sharp two edged sword coming out of the mouth of God." p. 622. He also says: "We have churches, that are disciples of John. For though Marcion rejects the Revelation, the succession of Bishops, traced to the original, will assure us, that John is the author." p. 622. By John, undoubtedly, meaning the Apostle.

From Eusebius we learn, that Apollonius, who wrote against the Montaniists about the year 211. quoted the Revelation. Vol. iii. p. 16. By Caius, about the year 212. it was ascribed to Cerinus, p. 32...35. It was received by Hippolytus, about the year 220. p. 110...112. and by Origen about 230. p. 236. 241. It is often quoted by him. He seems not to have had any doubt about it's genuinenesse. In his Com- mentarie upon St. John's Gospel he speaks of it in this manner: "There- fore John, the son of Zebedee, says in the Revelation." p. 272. See also p. 273, 274, and 409.

Dionysius, Bishop of Alexandria, about the year 247. or somewhat later, wrote a book against the Millenarians, in which he allows the Re-
The Revelation. Ch. XXII.

Revelation to be writ by John, a holy and divinely inspired man. But he says, he cannot easily grant him to be the Apostle, the son of Zebedee, whose is the Gospel according to John, and the Catholic Epistle.” Vol. iv. p. 672. He rather thinks it may be the work of John, an Elder, who also lived at Ephesus, in Asia, as well as the Apostle. p. 676. See likewise p. 727. 728. 733. Moreover, it appears from a conference, which Dionysius had with some Millenarians, that the Revelation was about the year 240. and before, received by Nepos, an Egyptian Bishop, and by many others in that country. p. 584. 667. . . 669. and that it was in great reputation. p. 727. It was received by Cyprian, Bishop of Carthage, about 248. and by the church of Rome in his time. p. 836. . . 838. and by divers Latin authors, whose historie is writ in the fourth volume of this work. As may be seen in the alphabetical Table of principal Matters, in the article of the Revelation.

The Revelation was received by Novatus, and his followers. Vol. v. p. 100. 103. and by divers other authors, whose historie is writ in that volume.

It is also probable, that it was received by the Manicheans. Vol. vi. p. 338.

It was received by Laetantius. Vol. vii. 191. 192. and by the Donatists. p. 244. by the later Arnobius, about 460. p. 56. and by the Arians, p. 280.

In the time of Eusebius, in the former part of the fourth century, it was not received by all. And therefore it is reckoned by him among contradicted books. Vol. viii. 96. Nevertheless it was generally received. p. 111. and 159. Eusebius himself seems to have hesitated about it. For he says, “It is likely, that the revelation was seen by John the Elder, if not by John the Apostle.” p. 160. 161. It may be reckoned probable, that the critical argument of Dionysius, of Alexandria, was of great weight with him, and others of that time. See p. 159. . . 165.

The Revelation was received by Athanasius. p. 227. 233. and by Epiphanius. p. 304. 310. But we also learn from him, that it was not received by all in his time. p. 311. 312. It is not in the catalogue of Cyril of Jerusalem, about 348. and seems, not to have been received by him. p. 270. 274. It is also wanting in the catalogue of Laodicea, about 363. p. 292. Nevertheless I do not think, it can be thence concluded, that this book was rejected by the Bishops of that Council. Their design seems to have been to mention by name those books only, which should be publicly read. And they might be of opinion, that upon account of it’s obscurity, it should not be publicly read, though it was of sacred authority. And some may be of opinion, that this observation should likewise be applied to Cyril’s catalogue just taken notice of.

The Revelation is not in Gregorie Nazianzen’s catalogue. Vol. ix. 133. Nevertheless it seems to have been received by him. p. 134. . . 136. It is in the catalogue of Amphilochius. But he says, it was not received by all. p. 148. It is also omitted in Ebedjesu’s catalogue of the books of Scripture, received by the Syrians. p. 218. Nor is it in the ancient Syriac version. p. 222.

It was received by Jerome. Vol. x. p. 77. 80. 100. 109. But he says, it it was rejected by the Greek Christians. p. 123. It was received by Rufin. p. 187. by the third Council of Carthage in 397. p. 194. and by Augulfin. p. 211. 257. But it was not received by all in his time. p. 252. It is never quoted by Chrysiflem, and, probably, was not received by him. p. 340.

It is in the catalogue of Dionysius, called the Areopagite, about 490. Vol. xi. p. 219. 220. It is in the Alexandrian Manuscript. p. 240. . 244. It was received by Sulpicius Severus, about 401. p. 11. 12. and by J. Damafcen. p. 393. and by Oecumenius. p. 415. 416. and by many other authors, whose historie is writ in the eleventh volume. Andrew, Bishop of Cafarea in Cappadocia, at the end of the fifth centurie. p. 227. and Arethas, Bishop of the fame place in the sixth centurie, wrote commentaries upon it. p. 288. But it was not received by Severian, Bishop of Gabala. p. 5. 6. nor, as it seems, by Theodoret. p. 89. . 91.

Upon the whole it appears, that this book has been generally received in all ages: though some have doubted of it, or rejected it, particularly, the Syrians, and some other Christians in the East. However, for more particulars, see St. John, and the Revelation, in the alphabetical Table, which is in the xii. volume of this work.

It may not be improper for me here to remind my readers of the sentiments of divers learned moderns, concerning this book, which were put together in Vol. iv. p. 721. 733. 734. after having largely represented the criticisms of Caius, and Dionysius of Alexandria, in the third centurie upon the file of this book, and of the other writings ascribed to St. John. Where also is proposed this observation. p. 733. "It may be questioned, whether their exceptions, founded in the difference of file, and such like things, or any other criticisms whatever, can be sufficient to create a doubt concerning the author of this book: which was owned for a writing of John, the Apostle and Evangelift, before the times of Dionysius and Caius, and, so far as we know, before the most early of those, who disputed it's genuinnesse."

II. Having thus represented the external evidence of the genuinnesse of the book of the Revelation, or of it's being writ by St. John, I should proceed to consider the internal evidence. But I need not enlarge here, because the objections taken from the file, and some other particulars, were flated, and considered, in the fourth volume, in the article of Dionysius, above named, Bishop of Alexandria.

I now intend therefore only to take notice of a few things, of principal note, which learned men insift upon, as arguments, that the Revelation has the fame author with the Gospel, and Epiftles, that go under the name of the Apostle and Evangelift John.

1. Ch. i. ver. 1. The Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to shew unto his servants things, which must shortly come to pass. And he sent, and signified it by his angel, unto his servant John.

Hence it is argued, that (a) John ites himself the servant of Christ, in a sense

(a) ... sed effe fe inter notabiles Christi Jesu ministros, quos ad Ecclesiæ suam docendam, regendam, et curandam adhibebat. ... Hoc sensu Mofes, David, a sense not common to all believers, but peculiar to those, who are especially employed by him. So Paul, and other Apostles, call themselves servants of God, and of Christ. Particularly Rom. i. 1. Paul a servant of Jesus Christ. James. i. 1. James a servant of God, and of the Lord Jesus Christ. 2 Pet. i. 1. Simon Peter, a servant, and an Apostle of Jesus Christ. Jude v. 1. Jude, a servant of Jesus Christ. So Moses is called the servant of God. Numb. xii. 7. and Hebr. iii. 2. And in like manner divers of the Prophets. And in this very book, ch. x. 7. is the expression: as he has declared unto his servants the Prophets.

This observation may be of some weight for shewing, that the writer is an Apostle. But it is not decisive. And in the same verse, whence this argument is taken, the phrase is used in its general sense. Which God gave unto him, to shew unto his servants.

2. Ver. 2. Who bare record of the word of God, and of the testimonie of Jesus Christ, and of all things that he saw.

Some suppose, the writer herein to refer to the written Gospel of St. John, and to say, that he had already bore testimonie concerning the word of God, and Jesus Christ. But, as (b) formerly observed, these words may be understood of this very book, the Revelation, and the things contained in it. The writer says here very properly, at the beginning, and by way of preface, that he had performed his office in this book, having therein faithfully recorded the word of God, which he had received from Jesus Christ.

For certain, if these words did clearly refer to a written Gospel, they would be decisive. But (c) they are allowed to be ambiguous, and other senses have been given of them. By some they have been understood to contain a declaration, that the writer had already bore witness to Jesus Christ before magistrates. Moreover, I think, that if St. John had intended to manifest himself in this introduction, he would have more plainly characterized himself in several parts of this book, than he has done.

This observation therefore appears to me to be of small moment for determining, who the writer is.

3. Farther, it is argued, in favour of the genuineness of this book, "that there are in it many instances of conformity, both of sentiment and

(b) See Vol. i. p. 703. Edit. Lard.

(c) Ver. 2. Qui teftatus est fermanem Dei, et teftimonium J. C. et quæ vidit.] Duplici modo haec accipi posunt, vel Joannem confessionem veritatis folennem coram tribunali Praefecti Asia Romani edidisse, ob quam ipse missus fuerit in exilium: vel ipsum Evangelio a fe edito solenne de Christo, ejusque diutius et gestis edidisse testimonium. Prior fens vox μαρτύριον scriptoribus Gracis posteroris temporis receptissima est, et manifefta etiam fumitur a Paulo. 1 Tim. vi. 13... Veni igitur ullo in illam fententiam, quæ haec Joannis verba refert ad Evangelium non prædicatum tantum a Joanne folenniter, fed et scriptis confirmatum... Quæ si fane fit hujus loci interpretatio, certò simul teftabitur de illius auctore, Joanne Apostolo, ac prōinde de libri hujus divinitate, et summa auctoritate. Vitræ. in Apoc. cap. i.

ver. 2.
and expression, between the Revelation and the uncontested writings of St. John."

Divers such coincidences, or inferences of agreement, were taken notice of formerly, and remarks were made upon them. Vol. iv. p. 709. . . 718. That which is at p. 716. appears to me, as striking, as any. I shall therefore enlarge upon it here. Our Saviour says to his disciples. John xvi. 33. Be of good cheer. I have overcome the world. Christian firmness under trials is several times represented by overcoming, or overcoming the world, or overcoming the wicked one, in St. John’s first epistle. ch. ii. 13. 14. iv. 4. v. 4. 5. And it is language peculiar to St. John, being in no other books of the New Testament. And our Lord says Rev. iii. 21. To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne. Compare ch. ii. 7. 11. 17. 26. iii. 5. 12. 21. and xxi. 7.

III. Concerning the time of writing this book, I need not now say much, having before shewn, in (d) the historic of St. John, that it is the general testimonie of ancient authors, that St. John was banished into (e) Patmos, in the time of Domitian, in the later part of his reign, and reftored by his successor Nerva. But the book could not be published, till after St. John’s release, and return to Ephesus, in Asia.

As Domitian died in 96. and his persecution did not commence, till near the end of his reign, the Revelation seems to be fitly dated in the year 95. or 96. Mill (f) placeth the Revelation in the year of Christ 96. and the last year of the Emperor Domitian. At first, he supposed, that the Revelation was writ in Patmos. But afterwards (g) he altered his mind, and thought, it was not writ untill after his return to Ephesus from Patmos. He builds upon the words of Rev. i. 9. If so, I apprehend, it might not be published before the year 97. or, at the soonest, near the end of the year 96.

Bofireage

(d) See p. 134. . . 143.

(e) Eodem ordine septem itaæ Asiæ civilitates enumerantur, quo ex Patmo insula adiri debebant. Wetsten. in Apoc. i. 11. Tom. 2. p. 750.

(f) Paucis post condictas has epiftolas annis, exorta est Christianorum perfecutio sub Domitian. . . . In insula vero Patmo, in quam relegatus erat Ioannes, Domitianis ultimo, seu anno æae vulgaris xcv. . . . facta est ipfi Revelatio: quam univerfam polleæ expresso Christi mandato scriptis confirmavit. Scriptamque Domini ejusdem jussi misit ad septem ecclesias Asiæ. Unde manifestum est, viñionem non modo Ioanni factam fuìfe, sed etiam ab eo literis traditam in insula Patmo. . . . Scriptam fuisse ex prædictis confult anno vulgaris æae xcvi, feu Domitianis xvi. et quidem ad finem ejusdem imperii, inquit Irenæus, seu tempore æâsto æae vulg. xcvi. Preleg. num. 157.

Bafnage (b) placeth the Revelation in the year of Christ 96.

Le Clerc (i) likewife, who readily admits the genuinenesse of this book, speaks of it at the same year.

Mr. Lowman * supposes, St. John to have had his visions in the isle of Patmos in the year 95.

But Mr. Wetstein (k) favors the opinion of those, who have argued, that the Revelation was writ before the Jewish war. He moreover says, that (l) if the Revelation was writ before that war, it is likely, that the events of that time should be foretold in it. To which I answer, that (m) though some interpreters have applied some things in this book to those times, I cannot say, whether they have done it rightly, or not, because I do not understand the Revelation. But to me it seems, that though this book was writ before the desolation of Jerusalem, there was no necessity, that it should be foretold here: because our blessed Lord had in his own preaching at divers times spoke very plainly, and intelligibly, concerning the calamities coming upon the Jewish People in general, and the city and temple of Jerusalem, in particular. And his plain predictions, and symbolical prefigurations of those events, were recorded by no laws than three historians and Evangelists, before the war in Judea broke out.

Grotius,

(b) Vid. ann. 96. num. xii.

* See the Scheme and Order of the Prophecies in the Book of the Revelation, which is prefixed to his Paraphræse.

(k) Nos quidem, omnibus expensis, cum iis facimus, qui statuunt, Apocalypsin ante bellum Judaicum fuisse scriptum. Wetst. N. T. Tom. 2. p. 746. m.

(l) Quaelibet non levis momenti, cum vera Apocalypsose interpretatio maximam partem inde pendeat. Si enim scripita est ante bellum Judaicum, et bella civilia in Italia; nullo modo probabilis est, tantam rerum conversionem omnino prateriri atque negligi potuisse. Sin autem po t ills mutus compositos scripita est, probabrior eir eorum sententia, qui eventus in Apocalypsin prædicitos in seculorum sequentium historia quærendos existimant. Id. ib.

(m) Lightfootus in genere censet. Apocalypsin hanc editam esse ante novissimum Hierofolymorum excidium. Et certe si Joannes hanc Revelationem vere a Christo Jesu accepiisset sub Claudio, magna cum specie negari non potest docilissimi his viris, quædam figillorum vita ad fata judaismi non adeo incommode applicari posse. Sed obitant graves rationes, quæ nos in hanc sententiam Grotius, who, as \((n)\) formerly seen, placeth this book in the reign of Claudius, was of opinion, that \((p)\) the visions of this book were seen at several times, and afterwards joined together in one book: in like manner, as the visions and prophecies of some of the Prophets of the Old Testament.

Concerning this opinion it is not proper for me to dispute: though there appears not any foundation for it in the book itself, as \((p)\) Vitringa has observed. But that the book of the Revelation, in it's present form, went as an epistle to the seven churches of Asia, ch. i. ver. 4. was not composed, and published before the reign of Domitian, appears to me very probable from the general, and almost universally concurring testimonie of the ancients, and from some things in the book itself.

Now therefore I shall transcribe \((q)\) a part of Lenfant's and Beaufobre's preface to the Revelation, at the same time referring to Vitringa \((r)\) in the margin, who has many like thoughts.

Having

\(\text{pitiam ire vetant.} \)

\(\text{Vitring. in Apoc. cap. i. ver. 2. p. 7. Vid. et in cap. vi. ver. 1. 2. p. 101... 105.} \)

\(\text{(n) See p. 135.} \)

\(\text{(o) Et mitte septem ecclesias. Nempe hujus visi descriptionem. Neque ad cetera hujus libri pertinet. Diverfa vasa diversis temporibus Joanni obtigere, ut et Prophetis alius. Grot. ad Apoc. cap. i. 11.} \)

Poit absolutum Vifum, monita falutaris continens, ad septem episcopos et ecclesias... Sequuntur Vifæ alia, quæ diversis temporibus Apolloto obtigere, et poftea in unum volumen redacta sunt: quod et in prophetais alius evenit, si epie etiam non annotata temporis discrimine, sed dato intelligi ex ipsis quæ loco quoque continentur. Pertinet autem hæc Vifæ ad res Judeorum uque ad finem capitis undecimi: deinde ad res Romanorum, uque ad finem capitis vicefimi: deinde ad statum florentissimum Ecclesiae Christianæ ad finem uque.

\(\text{(q) Preface sur l' Apoc. de S. Jean. p. 613. 614.} \)

\(\text{(r) Primo dubium non est, quin si testimoniis Veterum res conchiesta fit: communis antiquæ Ecclesiae traditio, firmata auctoritate Irenæi, hic multum praoperandet testimoniis Epiphani. Irenæus enim temporibus Joannis Apostoli proprius fuit, tanquam qui eodem adhuc seculo cum Joanne vixerit, et traditionem nobis retulit suo etate communem, et omnibus notissimam.} \)

\(\text{Sed quod plus etiam momenti caute notirae addit: Non nitiitur nohra hæc sententia de tempore scriptæ Apocalypsi sula traditione Veterum. Poteft illa ex ipso hoc libro, etiam abaque ullæ traditione veteris Ecclesiae demonstrari. Quare secundo observari velim, ex ipsa Apocalypsi evidentiissimæ adducere posse probationes, ex quibus evincatur, hæc librum non utique sub Claudio, sed omnino post Claudi et Neronis tempora, quin imo sub Domitianum denum in lucem edidit esse... Quo tempore scripta est Apocalypsis, eclesiae jam per Asiam inferiorem in celebrioribus locis non tantum erant fundatae et confabilitaæ, sed jamdudum fundatae et stabilitaæ suisse supponuntur.} \)

Redar.
Having quoted Irenæus, Origen, Eusebius, and divers other ancients, placing St. John's banishment in Patmos, in the later part of the reign of Domitian, and saying, that he there saw the revelation, they say: "To these uncontestable witnesses it is needless to add a long list of others, of all ages, and of the same sentiment: to whom the authority of Epiphanius is收盘

Redarguuntur enim pleræque a Domino gravius vitiorum et criminum, quæ tracta longioris temporis ecclesiæ illas obreperant. Ephesina jam reliquerat primam suam charitatem. Sardicenses dicesebeat, nomine vivere, sed vero mortue efse. Laodicensam megnum occupaverat tepor, eratque ærurnus et miferabilis.

Hæ vero quam belle conveniunt temporibus Claudii! Ex ecclesiæ enim feptem, quæ hic memorantur, in Actibus Apostolorum, aliarum mentio non est, quam Ephesina et Laodicena. Ephesina autem a Paulo Apostolo demum fundata est, secundum Annales Cæsarienses, anno Claudii Imperatoris extremo.

... Lliet ex iifdem epiftolis Joannis, illo tempore, quo edita est Apocalypsis, Gnosticorum harrefes, quæ dicuntur, in florentiflimis Afoæ ecclesiæ altas jam egisse radices. Ad illas enim carnalitum hominum docttinas sub mytlicis nominibus Bileamitarum et Nicolaitarum in variis locis alluditur. Illam harrefin prævidebat Petrus in Ecclesia brevi exorturam, quando epiftolam suam scribent postferiorem, non longe ante Hierofylorum excitium. Judas, qui epiftolam suam edidit, ut probabilis ratio suadet, post Hierofylom-orum illud excitium, hoc femon in prima vidit herba. Sed quo tempore scripta ef Apocalypsis non nata tantum, sed confirmata erat hæc harrefes, et præcipius Afoæ ecclesiæ inquinaverat. Quæ si Judas Apostolus epiftolam suam scripfit sub Vepfiano: quis neget, Apocalypsin editam esse sub Domitiano? In ipsis illis Épífolis paffim supponuntur affilictiones, graviores, quas

Ecclesia Chrifti religiosis fua caufa jam fuiinebat, et fuiinearet: et inter illas fupplicium capitale, quo defeptores veritatis affieebantur. Sic Dominus ad Angélem ecclefiæ Ephesina: Novi laborum tium, ý vťν υποµορων ων, et tolerantiam in affilitionibus. Ad Angélem Smyrnensis: Novi opéra tua, et τᏋ θλίψων, affilitionem, et paupertatem. Ad Angélem Pergamenæ: Nec abnagfia fìdem meum, ne quidem in diebus, quibus Antipas, tesfis meus fidelis, απετράβων, occifus eft. Supponunt hæc manifeftæ, tempore edita Apocalypsis Gentiles jam cæriffe in Chrifianos fævire, et ipsam etiam mortem poene loco illis quandoque folenniis judiciis irrogasse. Id vero haftens non liquet fæcum effe imperante Claudio. Nero, potquæ humanitate exuiffet, fanguinem

Christiæ primus bibt: Romæ tamen, magis quam in provinciis. Post

Neronem Domitianus, ultimus imperii fui, idem tentavit. Quod audt tempores

Domitianæ perfecutionis in his locis hauud dubie alluditur. Neronis enim illam perfecutionem in provinciis Romani Imperii æque ac Romæ ariffe, nec liquet, nec probabile eft. Ad Domitianæ itaque perfecutionem hic manifeftæ alluditur. Quod argumento eft, Apocalypsin hanc sub ipfo editam esse.

Ejusdem hujus Domitianis temporis manifestum habemus characterem in Joanne. Dicit enim exerse, fè accepti fæn revaluationem a Domino Iesu, cum ob confeffionem veritatis evangelicæ agent in insula Patmo. Vocatque fe Chrifilis-norum, illo tempore affiliorum, focium in affilitione, regna, et patiente exiellatione

Iesu Chrifti. Fuitigitur Joannes in exile, caufa veritatis relegatus in insu-lam Patmon. Id vero quo modo acciderit sub Claudio? Illum enim in Chrif-tianos in provinciis aut exilio aut caede faviíse, nullibi legitur. ... Domitianæ igitur hic, et nullius alius Imperatoris character eft. Nòro enim Chrifianos capitali fupplicio Romæ affecit: fed Domitianus plures exilio, pauco morte punivit, ut certi tesfes sunt Dio et Eufebius, et pluribus profecutus eft Dcd wellus. Diff. xi. De Pæac. Mart. §. xvii. Quid cælimus itaque tam evodentibus probationibus conviíí fídem adhibere traditioni Veterum apud Irenæum

Vitring. in Apoc. Cap. i. ver. 2. p. 9. ... 11.
Ch. XXII.
The Revelation.

is by no means comparable." And then they go on: "We must add "to so confant a tradition other reasons, which farther shew, that the "Revelation was not writ, till after Claudius, and Nero. It appears from "the book itself, that there had been already churches for a consider"able space of time in Asia: forasmuch as St. John in the name of Christ "proves faults, that happen not but after a while. The church of "Ephefus had left her first love. That of Sardis had a name to live, but "was dead. The church of Laodicea was fallen into lukewarmneffe and "indifference. But the church of Ephefus, for instance, was not founded by St. Paul, before the last years of Claudius. When in 61. or "62. St. Paul wrote to them from Rome, instead of reproving their "want of love, he commends their love and faith. ch. i. 15. 2. It apppears from the Revelation, that the Nicolaitans made a feft, when this "book was writ, since they are expressly named: whereas they were "only foretold, and described in general terms by St. Peter in his second "epiffle, writ after the year fixty, and in St. Jude's about the time "of the destruction of Jerusalem by Vespasian. 3. It is evident from "divers places of the Revelation, that there had been an open per-fecution in the provinces. St. John himself had been banifhed into "Patmos for the testimonie of Jesus. The church of Ephefus, or it's "Bifhop, is commended for their labour and patience, which seems to "imply persecution. This is still more manifest in the words directed "to the church of Smyrna. ch. ii. 9. I know thy works, and tribulation. "For the original word always denotes persecution, in the scriptures of "the New Teftament: as it is also explained in the following verfe. In "the thirteenth verfe of the fame chapter is mention made of a Martyr, "named Antipas, put to death at Pergamus. Though ancient ecclefaia-tical historie gives us no information concerning this Antipas, it is ne-verthefefs certain, that according to all the rules of language, what is "here faid, ought to be understood literally. . . . All that has been now "observed concerning the persecution, of which mention is made in the "first chapters of the Revelation, cannot relate to the time of Claudius, "who did not persecute the Christians, nor to the time of Nero, whose "persecution did not reach the provinces. And therefore it must relate "to Domitian, according to ecclefaialical tradition."

The visions therefore here recorded, and the publication of them in this book, must be assigned, fo far as I can fee, to the years of Christ 95. and 96. or 97.

I. Their Order in ancient Authors. II. General Observations upon their Order. III. The Order of the several Parts of the N. T. 1. the Gospels. 2. the Acts. 3. St. Paul's Epistles in general. 4. their Order severally. 5. Of placing them in the order of Time. 6. The Order of the Catholic Epistles. 7. The Revelation.

Their Order in ancient Authors. I. N. shewing the order of the books of the New Testament, I begin with a passage of Eusebius, in a chapter, which is entitled "Concerning the (a) divine scriptures, which are universally received, and those which are not such." "But, says he, it will be proper to enumerate here in a summary way the (b) books of the New Testament, which have been already mentioned. And in the first place are to be ranked the sacred four Gospels. Then the book of the Acts of the Apostles. After that are to be reckoned the epistles of Paul. In the next place, that called the first epistle of John, and the [sirft] Epistle of Peter, are to be esteemed authentic. After these is to be placed, if it be thought fit, the Revelation of John, about which we shall observe the different opinions at a proper season. Of the controverted, but yet well known, [or approved by the moft, or many:] are that called the Epistle of James, and that of Jude, and the second of Peter, and the second and third of John: whether they are writ by the Evangelift, or by another of that name."

This passage, as my readers may well remember, was transcribed by us (c) formerly. And here the order is very observable: the four Gospels, the Acts, St. Paul's Epistles, the two Catholic Epistles of St. John, and St. Peter, which were universally received, and then the books that were controverted, that is, not received by all, though by many.

The same order seems to have been followed by that ancient writer Irenæus. For in the third book of his works against heretics, where he is confuting the Valentinians, he (d) in several chapters argues from the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John. Then, in the twelfth chapter of that book, he largely quotes the book of the Acts. After which he considers the authority of the Apostle Paul, and quotes both him, and Peter.

In the Festal Epistle of Athanasius the books of the New Testament are enumerated in this order. "The (e) four Gospels, the Acts of the Apostles, the seven Catholic Epistles, the fourteen Epistles of the Apostle Paul;

(a) Πεπι τῶν ὁμολογημένων θείων γραφῶν, καὶ τῶν μη τοιώτων. H. E. l. 3. cap. 25.
(b) ... τίς κατά διαθήκην γραφᾶς.
(c) Vol. viii. p. 96. Ed. L.
(d) Iren. l. 3. cap. ix. x. xi.
Paul, and the Revelation." They stand exactly in the same order, in (f) the Synopsis ascribed to him, though not composed till more than a hundred years after his time. The same is the order (g) of our Alexandrian manuscript. So likewise in (b) Cyril of Jerusalem: "the four Gofpels, the Acts of the Apostles, seven Catholic Epistles, and the fourteen Epistles of the Apostle Paul." He omits the Revelation. The same is the order of (i) the catalogue of the Council of Laodicea, omitting also the Revelation. So likewise in the (k) catalogue of John Damascen:
"the four Gospels, the Acts of the Apostles, the Catholic Epistles, fourteen Epistles of the Apostle Paul, and the Revelation." The same is the order of (l) Leontius. And in the Syrian catalogues as given by (m) Ebed-jesu: "the four Gospels, the Acts, three Catholic Epistles, and the fourteen Epistles of Paul."
Rufini’s order is "the (n) Gospels, the Acts, Paul’s Epistles, the Catholic Epistles, and the Revelation." The same order is in (o) the catalogue of the third Council of Carthage. In Gregorie Nazianzen (p) also "the four Gospels, the Acts, the fourteen Epistles of Paul, the Catholic Epistles." The Revelation is wanting. The same order is in the catalogue of (q) Amphilochius, with the Revelation at the end, mentioned doubtsful. In the Stichometrie (r) also of Nicephorus, Patriarch of Constantinople, about the year 806. "the four Gospels, the Acts, Paul’s fourteen Epistles, and the seven Catholic Epistles."
That is the order of Eusebius, and, probably, of Irenæus, likewife, as before shewn, consequently, the most ancient. It is also the order, which is now generally received. And to me it appears to be the best.
In Epiphanius (s) the books of the New Testament are enumerated in this order: "the four sacred Gospels, the fourteen Epistles of the Apostle Paul, the Acts of the Apostles, the seven Catholic Epistles, and
the Revelation."
I imagine, that this must have been the order of Euthalius. For (t) he is supposed to have first published an edition of Paul’s Epistles, and afterwards an edition of the Acts, and the Catholic Epistles, about the year 490. In his prologue to the Acts of the Apostles, addrested to Abba-navus then Bishop of Alexandria, he says: "Having (u) formerly divided the Epistles of Paul into sections, I have now done the like in the book of the Acts, and the seven Catholic Epistles." Hence I am led to argue, that this was his order: Paul’s Epistles, the Acts, and the Catholic Epistles.

Jerome’s

(f) The same, p. 245. 246.
(h) Vol. viii. p. 270. 271.
(k) Vol. xi. p. 393.
(m) Vol. ix. p. 216 ... 218.
(o) Ib. p. 193. 194.
(ut) Εναγγελία τόνων, ως ἐφικτά, τῆς ἑκατέρου ἀνεγραμμέναι, αὐτής ἐπιστὰς, κα τοιχία τῶν τῶν ἀποστολῶν περάσον, ἀμά τῆς τῶν καθολικῶν ἐπιστολῶν ἐπιθρότεροι, σω-Jerome's order, in his letter to Paulinus, is (x) "the four Gospels, St. Paul's Epistles, the Acts, the Catholic Epistles, and the Revelation." Which is very agreeable to the order of Epiphanius, and also of Euthalius, if I understand him aright. But in Jerome's work of the interpretation of Hebrew Names the order is thus: "The (y) Gospels, the Acts of the Apostles, the seven Catholic Epistles, the fourteen Epistles of Paul, and the Revelation." In the letter to Laeta the order is, "the (z) Gospels, the Acts, and the Epistles of the Apostles."

In the catalogue of Innocent the first, Bishop of Rome, this order is observable: "the (d) four Gospels, St. Paul's fourteen Epistles, seven Catholic Epistles, the Acts, and the Revelation." Isidore of Seville, in his several works, has three or four catalogues of the books of the New Testament. In (e) all of them we see this order: "first the Gospels, then the Epistles of the Apostle Paul, then the Catholic Epistles, after them the Acts, and then the Revelation." There were according to him, two parts or divisions of the New Testament, one called the Gospels or the Evangelists, the other the Apostles or the Epistles. And in this last part the book of the Acts was placed. The same is the order in the Complexions or short Commentaries of Cassiodorus: they (f) are upon St. Paul's Epistles, the Catholic Epistles, the Acts of the Apostles, and the Revelation.

The three writers, alleged in this last paragraph agree very much with Augustin in the two passages first cited from him in the preceding paragraph.

Chrysostom's order, in the Synopis ascribed to him, as formerly observed, is very singular: the (g) fourteen Epistles of the Apostle Paul, the four Gospels, the book of the Acts, and three Catholic Epistles."

The catalogue of Gefasius also is particular for the place of the Revelation. For he enumerates the books in this order: "the (b) four Gospels, the Acts, St. Paul's fourteen Epistles, the Revelation, and the Catholic Epistles."

I suppose, I ought not to omit the order of the books in the 85. Apostolical Canon, as it is called, which is this. "The (i) four Gospels, See Lardner's Ed. for the above.

pels, Paul's fourteen Epistles, seven Catholic Epistles, two Epistles of Clement, the Constitutions, the Acts of the Apostles."

I shall transcribe nothing more of this kind. They who are desirous to see more examples, may consult the alphabetical table at the end of the twelfth volume, in that article, The New Testament. Here is enough to be a foundation for such remarks, as are proper to be made, relating to this point.

II. It is obvious to remark upon what we have now seen, that in the several ages of Christianity, and in several parts of the world, there has been some variety in the disposition of the books of the New Testament, in two particulars especially. For in some catalogues St. Paul's Epistles precede the Catholic Epistles, in others they follow them. And the book of the Acts is sometimes placed next after the Gospels, in other catalogues it follows all the Epistles.

Dr. Mill, who in his Prolegomena, has an article concerning the order of the books of the New Testament, with regard to the first particular, the placing in divers catalogues the Catholic Epistles before St. Paul's, says: "that (it) possibly the Christians of those times supposed them to deserve precedence, because they were not directed to one church, or person only, as St. Paul's are, but to Christians in general, and many churches scattered over the world. Some might also think the Catholic Epistles entitled to precedence, because they were writ by those who were Apostles before Paul, and had accompanied our Lord in his personal ministrations here on earth."

Mill likewise argues, that this was the most ancient order, because it is that of the Alexandrian, and some other ancient manuscripts. But I do not think that to be full proof. For Eusebius is older, and his order is the same as ours. The same order is in the catalogues of Rufin, the Council of Carthage, Gregorie Nazianzen, Amphilochius, and divers others, very probably older than any manuscripts now in being. And in many other writers, likewise of great antiquity, St. Paul's Epistles precede the Catholic Epistles. Whereby I am induced to think, this must have been the most ancient order.

The reason, why the book of the Acts was sometimes placed after all the Epistles, some may think, was, because it was not so generally received as the Gospels, the thirteen Epistles of Paul, and some of the Catholic Epistles. Mr. Wetstein (l) hints at that reason. But I rather think,

(1) In epistololarum quidem dispositione variatum est. In antiquissimis, quos habemus manuscriptis, etiam Alexandrinus nostro Paulinis præmissa sunt Catholicae: eo quod hæ Judæis, per orbem quaquaverum dispersa, adeoque pluribus ecclesiis inscripta sunt: illæ vero singulis fve ecclesiis, five etiam hominibus. Ne dicam, quod in isthæ dispositione rationem forsan habuerint dignitatis Apostolorum, a quibus scriptæ sunt: ut nempæ Apostoli Judæorum, specifque jam ab initio electi a Domino, ac cum eo per omne ministerii ipsius tempus veriæ, praeponerentur Paulo, Apostolo Gentium, ac cui novissime omnium visus erat. Postea autem Pauline poëtae sunt ante Catholicas. Mill. Prolog. num. 236.

See Lardner’s Edit. for the above.

think, that by some it was judged proper, that the Epistles of Apostles should immediately follow the Gospels, containing the historie of our Lord himself: and that the historie of the Apostles, and of their preaching, writ by an apostolical man, should not precede, but rather follow their writings. For by Eusebius, as we have seen, the Book of the Acts of the Apostles is reckoned among scriptures univerfally acknowledged by catholic Christians. It is so considered likewise by (m) Origen. And indeed, that this has been all along an univerfally acknowledged facer book of the New Testament, appears from our collections from every age of christianity from the beginning. See Acts of the Apostles in the alphabetical table of matters at the end of the twelfth volume.

Mr. Wettlen (n) argues from the 85. Apoftolical Canon, where the Acts of the Apostles are mentioned laft. To which I anwer, firstly, that the age, when those Canons were composed, is uncertain. And secondly, that order may have been there chosen out of a regard to the common rules of modestie. For it is thus: "the (o) Gospels, Paul's Epiftles, the Catholic Epiftles, two Epiftles of Clement, the Constitutions, and (p) the Acts of us the Apostles." When a man took upon himself the character of the Apostles, and expreffed himself in that manner, it was natural enough to reckon the book, which contained the historie of their own actions, laft of all. Surely, it is trifling to form an argument from that position in this canon. And Mr. Wettlen might have observed, that in many catalogues, undoubtedly ancient, the Acts immediately follow the Gospels: and that, not only in those catalogues, where St. Paul's Epiftles have the precedence before the Catholic Epiftles, but in divers others likewise, where the Catholic Epiftles precede.

III. Having made these general observations, I now now proprose to consider diftinctly the order of the several parts of the New Testament: the Gospels, the Acts, St. Paul's Epiftles, the Catholic Epiftles, and the Revelation.

1. The Gospels. The order of the four Gospels has generally been this, Matthew, Mark, Luke, John. This is their order in (q) Irenæus, (r) Origen, (s) Eusebius, in his Ecclesiastical Historie, and in his ten Canons, as represented in his letter to Carpian, (t) Athanasius, (u) the Council of Laodicea, (x) Epiphanius, (y) the 85. Apoftolical Canon, (z) Gregoriæ Nazianzen, (a) Amphilochius, (b) the Syrian catalogue, (c) Jerome, (d) Rufin, (e) Auguflin, (f) the Alexandrian manuscript,

(r) Vol. iii. p. 235–244.
(s) Vol. viii. p. 92.
(t) Ib. p. 227. and see p. 246.
(v) Ib. p. 305. 306.
(x) Vol. x. p. 133.
(y) Ib. p. 402.
(a) Ib. p. 147.
(b) Vol. x. p. 76. 80. 83. 84.
(c) Ib. p. 211.

The Acts of the New Testament it was generally placed by the ancients: whether in the Evangelicon, or the Apostolicon. And undoubtedly, by those who mention it after St. Paul's Epistles, or after all the Epistles of the Apostles, it was placed in the later part. But, as we have seen, it is often mentioned by ancient writers next after the four Gospels. Was it then reckoned a part of the Evangelicon, or of the Apostolicon? From some passages of Tertullian it was formerly argued by us, that (r) the book of the Acts was placed in the second part of the New Testament, and at the beginning of it. I would now add, that I think, the same may be argued from Irenæus, who (s) having alleged passages from the four Gospels, proceeds to the Acts, and considers what he allegeth thence as the doctrine, particularly, of the Apostles. And Mill supposeth, that (t) in the most ancient times the Acts were placed with the Epistles, but before them, as the first book of that part. However, it is observable, that the Cambridge manuscript has the Acts of the Apostles, though it has not the Epistles. But then Mill lays, that (u) volume once

(g) Ib. p. 249.
(h) Ib. p. 266. 267.
(i) Ib. p. 297.
(k) Ib. p. 370.
(l) Ib. p. 381.
(m) See Vol. ii. p. 633. 634.

See Lardner's Edit. for the above.

(q) Vidiit tamen, nif admodum fallor, hunc ipsum Codicum Cantabrigiænsem, qui unus et solus omnium Codicum Graecæ Scriptorum hunc ordinem servat. Wettstein. Prolegom. p. 28.
(s) Vid. Iren. contr. Her. l. 5. cap. xi. fin. et cap. xii. in.
(u) Marci Evangelii suffixa est etiam notula, significans, post illud proxime poni librum Actuum. Verum hæc est scribæ recentioris. Sequens enim folium, quam prima facie duodecim postremos verius epistolæ tertiarum D. Jo-once had the Epistles, as well as the Gospels. And therefore, probably, the book of the Acts stood at the head of that part, which contained the Epistles. And for certain, I think, it bef that the historical books of the New Testament should appear together. Accordingly, as we have seen, the Acts do in many ancient catalogues immediately follow the Gospels. And I wish, that Mr. Wetstein had followed that order, which now prevails, and that he had not placed the Acts of the Apostles, as he has done, at the head of the Catholic Epistles, and after the Epistles of St. Paul.

3. In the catalogues lately alleged, we have seen St. Paul's Epistles in general.

4. I must say something about the order of St. Paul's Epistles severally: our order is that of his thirteen Epistles, which have been universally acknowledged, and then the Epistle to the Hebrews, about which there had been doubts in the minds of many for a good while.

Among the ancients there is some variety. To the Romans, the Corinthians, the Galatians, the Ephesians, the Philippians, the Colossians, the Thessalonians, Hebrews, Timothy, Titus, Philemon. So (x) in the Septuagint of Athanasius, and (y) in the Synopsis ascribed to him, and (z) in the catalogue of the Council of Laodicea, and (a) in the Alexandrian manuscript. In others may be found our present order, as (b) in the iambic poem of Amphilocho, the (c) Syrian catalogue in Ebedjeus, (d) Jerome, in his article of St. Paul, (e) Augustin in his work of the Christian Doctrine, (f) Oecumenius, and many others.

Epiphanius, observing how Marcion had disturbed the order of St. Paul's Epistles, says, that (g) in some editions of the New Testament, the Epistle to the Hebrews was the fourteenth, in others the tenth, being placed before the two epistles to Timothy, and the epistles to Titus, and Philemon: and that (b) in all good copies the Epistle to the Romans was the first, not that to the Galatians, as Marcion had disposed them.

Theodoret

(a) Vol. xi. p. 240.
(b) Vol. ix. p. 147. (c) Vol. ix. 217. 218.
(d) Vol. x. p. 112. (e) Vol. x. p. 211.
(f) Vol. x. p. 411. (g) Hær. 42. p. 373. C.

See Lardner's Edit. for the above.

(b) Πάντα δὲ τὰ ἀντιγραφα τὰ σῶα καὶ ἀληθῆ τὰ σπὸς Φωμαῖος ἔχονται συμφωνικοῦς τῶν ζυγωμένων τῶν σπῶν γαλάταις ίτας ἵνα συνέλθῃν. H. 42. p. 373. D.
Theodoret (i) and Chrysostom (k) have particularly taken notice, that the epistle to the Romans was placed first, though it was not the first in the order of time.

Concerning the reason of that disposition of the epistle to the Romans, Theodoret observes, “that it (l) had been placed first, as containing the "most full and exact representation of the Christian doctrine in all it's "branches. But some say, it had been so placed out of respect to the "city, to which it had been sent, as presiding over the whole world.”

I have sometimes thought, the first observation might have been applied to all St. Paul's Epistles, as the ground and reason of their situation. For the first five Epistles, that to the Romans, the two to the Corinthians, and the Epistles to the Galatians, and the Ephesians, are the largest of St. Paul's epistles. And all that follow are shorter, excepting the Epistle to the Hebrews, which has been placed after those sent to churches, or last of all, after those likewise, which were sent to particular persons, because it's genuineness was not universally allowed of.

But the other, the dignity of the cities and people, to whom the epistles were sent, has been more generally supposed to be the ground and reason of the order, in which they are placed. How this is represented by Mill, may appear in his own words, which (m) I place below.

I also shall shew this, as well as I can. Epistles to churches are placed first. Afterwards those to particular persons. The epistles to churches are placed very much according to the rank of the cities, or places to which they were sent. The epistle to the Romans is placed first, because Rome was the chief city of the Roman Empire. The two epistles to the Corinthians come next, because Corinth was a large, and polite, and renowned city. Galatia was a country, in which were several churches, and therefore the epistle to them might be placed before others, writ to one church only. Nevertheless the epistles to the Romans and the Corinthians have been preferred, as is suppos'd, upon account of the great eminence of those two cities. The epistle to the Ephesians follows next, because Ephesus was the chief city of Asia, strictly so called. Afterwards follow the epistles to the Philippians, the Colossians, and the Thessalonians. But how to account for this order, according to the method we here observe, I do not well know. Colosse indeed might be reckoned a city of inferior rank, and Philippi was a Roman colonie. But Thessalonica was the chief city of Macedonia, in which

(k) Vol. x. p. 331. the same.
(m) In iis vero dispositionis (excepta una ad Hebræos, de qua mox,) spectata est omnino dignitas ecclesiæ et hominum, quibus missi sunt. Epistola ad ecclesias Galatiae, quae erat integra provincia, merito præcedebat illas, quæ ad unam datæ erant civitatem, Laodiceam, Philippum, Colossum, Thessaloniam. His tamen præponere vifum est epibilas ad Romanos et Corinthios, ob eminentem harum urbium dignitatem, qua provinciam itam super-rare videbantur. Epibilas integras ecclesiæ inscriptas sequuntur, quæ ad singulos homines data sunt. Proleg. num. 237.

Vol. II.
which Philippi stood. And if the epistles were disposed according to the dignity of places, it is not easy to conceive, why the two epistles to the Thessalonians were placed after those to the Philippians, and the Colossians. So that in this method, as seems to me, the order of the epistles is made out in but a lame and imperfect manner. And there may be reason to apprehend, that the brevity of the two epistles to the Thessalonians, especially of the second, procured them this situation: though they are the first written epistles of our Apostle, and indeed the first writ of all the sacred scriptures of the New Testament.

Among the epistles to particular persons, those to Timothy have the precedence, as he was a favourite disciple of St. Paul, and those epistles are the largest and fullest. The epistle to Titus comes next, as he was an Evangelist. And that to Philemon is last, as he was supposed by many to be only a private Christian. Undoubtedly Titus was a person of greater eminence, and in a higher station than Philemon. Moreover by many the design of that epistle was thought to be of no great importance.

The epistle to the Hebrews is fitly enough placed after the rest, because for a while it was doubted of, as before said. I likewise think it to be the last written of all St. Paul's Epistles.

Of placing his Epistles in the Order of Time.
5. Some learned men, who have examined the chronology of St. Paul's Epistles, have proposed, that they should be placed in our Bibles, according to the order of time. Dr. Wall, at the end of the preface to his Critical Notes upon the New Testament, has an argument to this purpose. But first, it will be difficult to alter the order, which has been so long established in all editions of the original Greek, and in all versions. Secondly, the order of their times has not been yet settled. Many, I suppose, are of opinion, that Dr. Wall's order is not right. Must the order be altered again and again, to suit every one's phantasy? That would create a very troublesome and disagreeable confusion.

I think, that the knowledge of the order, in which St. Paul's Epistles were writ, must be very entertaining, and useful. And I have done what is in my power to find it out. But I am far from desiring, that they should be placed, and bound up together, according to my calculations. Before an attempt of that kind is made, the order of time should be settled, and determined to the general satisfaction of all learned and inquisitive men. And judicious Christians, who have studied the chronological order of the writings of the New Testament, may have an advantage by it, though the books are continued in their present order.

The Catholic Epistles.
6. I say nothing here concerning the order of the seven Catholic Epistles, because I have spoken to it sufficiently in a (n) preceding chapter.

The Revelation.
7. Finally, the book of the Revelation is now placed the last of all, and has been generally so placed in former times, and very fitly, as (o) Mill says in his observations upon the order

(n) See p. 365.
(o) Athenaeum Novi Foederis librorum claudit Apocalypsis. Quae cum circa diversum plane a reliquis veretur argumentum, atque minus apte inter order of the books of the New Testament, "it being prophetical of things to be hereafter fulfilled, and therefore of a different kind from the rest: and having also near the end that remarkable clause, ch. xxii. 18. 19. containing a caution against adding to, or taking from it. Which may be applied to all the books of Scripture." To which might be added, that there are not wanting divers reasons to think, it is the last written of all the books of the New Testament.

CHAP. XXIV.

That the Books of the New Testament, consisting of a Collection of sacred Writings, in two Parts, one called Gospel, or Gospels, or Evangelicon, the other Epistles, or Apostle, or Apistles, or Apostolicon, were early known, read, and made use of by Christians.

That the Gospels, the Acts, and the Epistles of the New Testament, or divers of those Epistles, were soon well known, much read, and collected together, may be argued from internal marks and characters, and from testimonies.

I. Internal marks and characters are such as these.

1. It is obvious from the nature of the thing. Who composes and publishes any works, without desiring to have them perused? It is very likely therefore, that the authors of the books of the New Testament, who were at the pains of writing histories, or epistles, would take care, that they should be known. The same zeal that prompted any man to write, would induce him to provide for the publication. The importance of the subject would justify a concern to spread the work. All must allow, that there never were, and that there cannot be, any writings, containing more important facts and principles. To suppose, that any of these writers were indifferent about the success and acceptance of what they had composed, is very absurd and unreasonable.

2. All the writings, of which the New Testament consists, were addressed to some, who would set a great value on them, and would willingly recommend them to others. All the Epistles, and the Revelation, as is manifest, are sent to Christian societies, or particular persons. St. Luke's Gospel, and the Acts, were sent to the most excellent, or most noble Theophilus. St. John intended his Gospel for some, whom he had in his eye. As appears from ch. xx. 30. 31. and from xxi. 24. 25. And it is very likely, that St. Matthew, and St. Mark also wrote for some, who inter Evangelia et Epistolam media suisset interposita, commodissime in fine omnium collocata sunt: quoniam tanquam liber propheticus futura refpectis adhuc implenda: ac denique insignem illum habet in calce clausulam de non addendo quidpam illi prophetiae, vel ab ea detractando: quia etiam ad omnes N. T. libros accommodata, canonem universum veluti obsignare, convenientissimum videbatur. Mill. Proleg. num. 239.

who would gladly receive, and highly value their books, and get them copied for the use and satisfaction of others.

3. In several of the books of the New Testament directions are given, which would tend to make them well known. St. Paul at the end of his first epistle to the Thessalonians, one of his first written epistles, enjoins, that it should be read to all the holy brethren. 1 Thess. v. 27. The same method, undoubtedly, was observed with regard to the second epistle, sent to the same Thessalonians, and writ not long after. Probably, the same practice obtained in all the Christian churches, to which St. Paul afterwards sent any epistle. And the Christian people of other churches, beside those who had letters sent to them, would be desirous to see the epistles of their great Apostle, by whom they had been converted, and would therefore get them transcribed for their own use. At the end of the epistle to the Colossians, iv. 16. he directs: And when this epistle is read among you, cause that it be read in the church of the Laodiceans, and that ye read the epistle from Laodicea: meaning, probably, the epistle to the Ephesians, which was to come round to Colosse from Ephesus, by the way of Laodicea. The Apostle therefore was willing, and even desirous, that his epistles should be read by others, beside those to whom they were sent, for the sake of general edification. And can it be questioned, whether other Gentile churches in these parts, all which were of his own planting, would not thankfully embrace the encouragement hereby given them to look into his epistles, and get them transcribed, and read in their assemblies also?

4. St. Peter writes to this purpose in his second epistle, which we may suppose to have been writ in the year 64. And account, that the long suffering of the Lord is salvation, even as our beloved brother Paul also, according to the wisdom given to him, has written unto you. As also in all his epistles, speaking of these things, in which there are some things hard to be understood. Which they that are unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do the other scriptures, unto their own destruction. 2 Pet. iii. 15. 16.

Here are several things to be observed. First, Peter speaks of epistles of Paul sent to the same Christians, to whom himself was writing. Secondly, he speaks of other epistles of Paul: As also in all his epistles. Thirdly, Peter therefore had a knowledge of several epistles of Paul, sent to the Christians of those countries, and likewise of divers others, which he intends in the phrase, all his epistles. Fourthly, the Christians, to whom Peter writes, were well acquainted with the epistles, which Paul had writ to them, and with the rest of his epistles, or divers of them. Fifthly, it is supposed, and implied, that all, or at least many of Paul's epistles, were well known, and much read. For Peter speaks of some, whom he calls, unlearned, and unstable, who wrested Paul's epistles, or some things in them, to their own destruction. And very probably there were other readers of the same epistles, who emproved them to their edification, and salvation.

It seems to me, that what Peter says here, affords reason to think, that at the time of writing this epistle, Paul's epistles, (most, or all of them,) were well known among Christians, and that Peter had good evidence of it.

When Peter says: as our beloved brother Paul has writ unto you: some learned learned men, Mill (a) in particular, have supposed, that thereby Peter intended the epistle to the Hebrews. But I think without reason, as Mr. Hallett (b) has largely shewn. St. Peter's epistles are addressed to the strangers scattered throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia. It is not unlikely therefore, that St. Peter intends Paul's epistles to the Galatians, and the Ephesians, and the Colossians, all situated in those countries: and likewise the two epistles to Timothy, who refided much at Ephesus, and must have received the epistles writ to him, when in that city, and the epistle to Philemon, who was of Colosse. And in the expression, all his epistles, some others must be intended, and included: such as the epistles to the Thessalonians, the Corinthians, Romans, Philippians, Titus: so many, however, as the Apostle Peter was then acquainted with. Mill has observed passages in (c) the first epistle to the Thessalonians, and in (d) the epistle to the Romans, and in (e) that to the Philippians: in which are some of those things hard to be understood, to which St. Peter may be supposed to have an eye.

These marks and characters there are in the books of the New Testament, which may induce us to believe, that they were soon dispersed among Christians, and well known to them.

II. This is also manifest from testimonies.

1. The accounts, which we find in the ancients, concerning the occasions of the several Gospels, lead us to think, that they were soon spread abroad after they were writ. Matthew is said to have writ his Gospel at the request of the believers in Judea: and Mark his, at the desire of the Christians at Rome, for the assistance of their memories. When therefore those Gospels had been written, divers copies would be soon taken, that the ends, for which they had been writ, might be answered. The several defective and imperfect accounts, which had been published of our Lord's words and works, induced St. Luke to write. And when his fuller and exacter account was published, it must have been attended to, and would be transcribed, and communicated to many. Before St. John wrote, he had seen the other three Gospels. And the Christians in Asia, where he resided, were acquainted with them. Therefore they were well known, and joined together. And when his Gospel was writ, undoubtedly it was added to them, and they were all joined together in one volume, for general use.

That the first three Gospels were well known in the world, before St. John wrote, is supposed by Eusebius of Cæsarea, who was well acquainted with the writings of Christians before his time. These are the words of that eminent man. Having spoken of St. Matthew's Gospel, he goes on: "And (f) when Mark and Luke had published the Gospels according to them, it is said, that John, who all this while had preached by word of mouth, was induced to write for this reaon. The three first written Gospels being now delivered to all men, and to John himself, "

(a) Prolegom. num. 86.
(b) See his Introduction to the Epistle to the Hebrews. p. 21. &c.
(c) Proleg. num. 5. (d) Ib. num. 28. (e) Ib. num. 70.

K k 3
"it is said, that he approved them." And what follows. Before this last Evangelist wrote, the other three Gospels had been delivered unto all men, and to John. He therefore had seen them before, and they were in the hands of many people.

What has been now said of the Gospels, is applicable, in a great measure, to the Acts, and the Epistles of the New Testament: as may be perceived by all, without my enlarging any farther.

2. Ignatius, who was honored with the crown of martyrdom about the year 107. does, in his epistles, use expressions, denoting (g) two codes, or collections, one of Gospels, the other of Epistles of Apostles. Such volumes there were then, and may have been some good while before.

I shall here remind my readers of a few other like instances. In the epistle to Diognetus, certainly very ancient, and by some ascribed to Justin Martyr, are these expressions: "The (b) fear of the Lord is celebrated, and the grace of the Prophets is known, the faith of the Gospel is established, and the tradition of the Apostles is kept." By these last expressions denoting, as is reasonable to think, a volume of the Gospels, and another of epistles of Apostles. Irenæus speaks of the Evangelic and Apostolic writings in a passage, which will be alleged presently. Tertullian speaks (i) of "the sayings of the Prophets, the Gospels, and the Apostles." And in another place says: "This (k) I perceive both in the Gospels, and the Apostles." I go no lower, my intention at present being only to allege a few writers of the earliest times,

3. As before shewn (l) from Eusebius, they who in the reign of Trajan, about the year 112. travelled abroad to teach the Christian Religion in remote countries, "took with them the scriptures of the divine Gospels." Nor can there be any reason to doubt, that our Ecclesiastical Historian here speaks of the four Gospels, so well known in his own time.

4. By Justin Martyr, about the year 140. in his account of the Christian worship, which is in his Apologie to the Emperour and Senate of Rome, the whole world was assured, that (m) the Gospels, which he calls Memoirs of the Apostles, and their Companions, were publicly read in the assemblies of Christians every Lord's-day.

Certainly, the Gospels were then well known, and had been so for some while before.

5. Tatian, who flourished some time before and after the year 170, composed

(g) See Vol. i. 177. . . . 180. and 188. and likewise vol. xii. p. 26. . . .
(b) See Vol. i. p. 294. or 296. The same.
(i) Compendiis panorum verborum, quot attinguntur edicta Propheta-rum, Evangeliorum, Apostolorum? De Oratione cap. 9. p. 152. C. quoted (m) See Vol. i. p. 268. 269. and Vol. xii. p. 35. 36. Lardner's Edit.
composed a Harmonium of the four Gospels. We \((n)\) have full assurance of it. Is not this sufficient evidence, that the Gospels were then, and had been for a good while, generally known, and in common use? And does it not also afford reason to believe, that it was then, and had been for some while, an established, or generally received opinion among Christians, that there were four, and no more than four authentic memoirs or histories of Jesus Christ?

6. I forbear to allege any thing from Clement of Alexandria, Irenæus, or Tertullian, for shewing the notoriety of the books of the New Testament in early times, because I now insist only upon writers of the highest antiquity. But I shall take notice of some things, which we have in the accounts of the heresies of the second century.

However, that this argument may not be too prolix, I entirely pass by Baphnides.

7. Valentin is placed by Cave \((o)\) as flourishing about the year 120. By Bagnage \((p)\) he is placed at the year 124. By Mill \((q)\) between 123 and 127. And by Irenæus we are assured, “that \((r)\) the Valentinians endeavored to support their opinions from texts of the Evangelic and Apostolic scriptures,” or of the Gospels and Apostles, that is, both parts of the New Testament: “and that \((s)\) they argued especially from the Gospel according to John.”

And Tertullian allows, that \((t)\) Valentin used the books of the New Testament entire, without altering them, as Marcion did.

Mr. Wetstein says, the \((u)\) Valentinians rejected the Acts of the Apostles. And he thinks, this appears from Irenæus. But to me it appears manifest from Irenæus, that they received the Acts. For in his confutation of them, in his third book against Herefies, he \((x)\) argues against them largely, first from the Gospels, then from the book of the Acts, and lastly from the epistles of Apostles. And Maffuet, the learned Benedictin editor of Irenæus, allows, that \((y)\) according to that ancient \((o)\) Hist. Lit. p. 50.

\((p)\) Ann. 124. num. vii.

\((q)\) Proleg. num. 265.

\((r)\) Kal. ob mores ex twn iuavgelikon, twn apostolikon pelegantai tas apostolikon pelegantai. Iren. l. i. c. 3. n. 0. p. 17.

\((s)\) Ha autem qui a Valentinio sunt, eo quod est secundum Joannem plenissime utentes, ad ostensionem conjurationem suarum, ex ipso detegentur, nihil recte dicentes. Id. l. 3. cap. xi. n. 7. p. 190.

\((x)\) Vid. Iren. contr. Haer. l. 3. cap. xi. xii.

\((y)\) At ipsi Valentinio nihil simile usu quam adscribit Irenæus. Immutum loca cient writer, the Valentinians did not reject any books of the New Testament.

Irenæus, as we have just seen, says, that the Valentinians endeavored to support their opinions by the Evangelic and Apostolic Scriptures. The Acts were included in this second volume of the New Testament, according to the method of the ancient Christians.

8. Heracleon, a learned Valentinian, is supposed by (z) Grabe to have been contemporaneous with his master, Valentin, and to have appeared about the year 123. However, he might continue a good while after that. Bajnagé (a) speaks of him at the year 125. And Cave (b) places him at 126. They who are so pleased, may recollect what was said of his age (c) formerly.

Heracleon seems to have written commentaries upon several parts of the New Testament. Clement of Alexandria having quoted the words of Matth. x. 32 or Luke xii. 8. and of Luke xii. 11. 12. says: "Heracleon (d) explaining this place has these very words." Which I need not transcribe at present, though it be a valuable passage. There is in Clement (e) another short passage of Heracleon's commentary upon St. Luke.

Origen, in his commentary upon St. John's Gospel, often quotes Heracleon. The passages of Heracleon's commentary upon that Gospel, with Origen's remarks, are collected by (f) Grabe. And from him they have been placed by Moffet in his Appendix to Irenæus. The passages of Heracleon, quoted by Origen, are above forty in number, and some of them long.

Heracleon's commentaries upon the Gospels of St. Luke, and St. John, are an early proof of the respect shewn to the books of the New Testament. And it may be reasonable to think, that others beside Heracleon, both catholics and heretics, published about the same time commentaries upon some of the books of the New Testament.

Origen (g) has at once given us Heracleon's observations upon Matt. viii. 12. and If. i. 2.

Heracleon likewise received St. Paul and his writings. For (h) he quotes, loco max citato, tum lib. i. cap. viii. et ix. et alibi passim, fatis significat, Valentinianos sibi coaevos sic canonem scripturarum novo Evangelio auxiffe, ut nihil quidquam, nullum librum integrum, nullam ejusdem partem, (quod Marcionis non semel exprobab.) ab eo abjecissent: sed vel parabolas Dominicas, vel dictiones Propheticas, aut sermones Apostolicos, ad hypothefim suam aptare conatus, calumniæ univelle Scripturis. Moffet. Diff. i. num. ix. p. xvii.

(a) Ann 125. num. iii.
(b) H. L. p. 53.
(c) Vol. ii. p. 539. note (r). Lardner's Edit.
(d) Tūto ἰδαγγέλου τοῦ τόπου ἡρακλείου... κατὰ λίγα φησίν... Stron.}

4. p. 592. A... D.
(f) Spic. T. 2. p. 85... 117.
(h) καὶ δὲ δὲ ἄφθονος; διδάσκει, λέγω, λογικόν λατείαι τὸν τεῖάσας quotes, as his, the beginning of the twelfth chapter of the epistle to the Romans. Moreover Origen (i) has given us Hermacleon's interpretation of 1 Cor. xv. 53. 54.

I might add here some other things. But this is sufficient to shew, that in the very early days of Christianity the books of the New Testament were well known, much used, and greatly respected.

9. Marcion about (k) the year 138. placed by some (l) sooner, in 127. or 130. had, and probably, in imitation of other Christians, a (m) Gospel, and an Apostle, or an Evangelicon, and Apostolicon.

In the former, as is generally said, was (n) St. Luke's Gospel only, and that curtailed. But Mr. Lampe says, that (o) Marcion did not reject the other Gospels, though he preferred St. Luke's. This he infers from a passage in Tertullian, which seems to shew, that Marcion did not reject St. Matthew's Gospel.

I shall add another from Iisdore of Pelusium, where he says: "Take (p) the Gospel [or the Evangelicon] of Marcion, and you will presently see at the very beginning a proof of their impudence. For they have left out our Lord's genealogie from David and Abraham. And"

(n) Et super hæc, id quod eft secundum Lucam Evangelium circumcidentis. Iren. l. 1. cap. 27. 2. al. cap. 29.

(p) Et σωπροχύλια ἐν τῷ μακεδονίων σωμάτω ελαστρίας, το τεχν' ἐκεῖνος ἐσχάζομεν ἐναγγέλιον λαοῦν ἀναγγελών, καὶ ἐν θρόνων καὶ ἐν τοῖς ἑρμήνευσιν ἐκεῖνοι καὶ ἐν τοῖς ἑρμαρμαρίζοντις καπέτοις. Καὶ μικρὰ ὑπὲρ έρωτῶν ἄλλων άφιέρων κακώνσαν. Αἱ σεβομεντοι γὰρ τοῦ τύττους φωνῆς, οὐκ ἡλίου, ἀλλ' ἔσυντο, καταλέγοι, τὸν νέον, ἄ τοις σωπροχύλας, ἐστὶν ἀνεφέρεται, ἵνα καταλέγοι, καταλέγοι, καταλέγοι, καταλέγοι, καταλέγοι, καταλέγοι. Ἡλίος αὐτῶν, ἄλλα ἐλωρυγώσαν. Isid. Pel. l. i. ep. 371.
"if you proceed a little farther, you will see another instance of their wickedness, in altering our Lord's words. I came not, says he, to destroy the Law, or the Prophets. But they have made it thus: Think ye, that I came to fulfill the Law, or the Prophets? I am come to destroy, not to fulfill." Matt. v. 17.

It might be also argued from the Dialogue against the Marcionites, that they used St. Matthew's Gospel. But I forbear to allege any places in particular.

So that it may be reckoned probable, that Marcion did not reject any of the four Gospels. But undoubtedly he made alterations in them, agreeable to his own particular opinions, under a pretense, that (q) they had been corrupted by some before his time.

Perhaps (r) Marcion filled up St. Luke's Gospel out of the rest, taking from them such things as suited his purpose. Tertullian says, that (s) his Gospel, or Evangelicon, had no title. That may have been the reason of it. And we can hence conclude, that in very ancient times, among the Catholics, the four Gospels were entitled, and inscribed with the names of the several Evangelists. Which (t) has been denied, or doubted of by some.

Marcion had also an Apostolicon. In this were ten Epistles only of St. Paul, and those diminished, at least some of them. Their order according to him, as we are informed by (u) Epiphanius, was this: the epistle to the Galatians, the first and second to the Corinthians, to the Romans, the first and second to the Thessalonians, to the Ephesians, the Colossians, Philemon, the Philippians.

He received not any other epistles of St. Paul. It is supposed likewise, that he rejected the Catholic Epistles, and the Revelation. Whether he received the Acts of the Apostles, I cannot say certainly: though (x) some learned men think, he did not receive them. But then it should be observed by us, that (y) the Marcionite Apostolicon was reckoned very defective by the catholic Christians.

And

(q) Vid. Tertull. adv. Marcion. l. 4. cap. 4.
(s) Contra Marcion Evangelium, sicelicet suo, nullum aferbit auctorem: quasi non licuerit illi titulum quoque adstringere, cui nefas non fuit ipsum corpus evertere. Et possum hic jam gradum fitgere, non agnoscendum contendens opus, quod non erigit frontem, quod nullam confiantiam praerat, nullam fidem repromittat de plenitude tituli, et profccione debita auctoris. Contr. Marc. l. 4. cap. 2.
(t) Vid. Mill. Prol. num. 347.
(u) Har. 42. num. ix. et alibi.
And it may be inferred from the accounts, which we have in the best writers of the most early ages, that Marcion was the most arbitrarie, and most licencious of all the ancient heretics, in his judgement concerning the Scriptures that should be received, and in his manner of treating such as were received by him. So that his opinion can be no prejudice to the genuinenesse, or the notoriety of any of those books of the New Testament, which were received by the catholiques, and indeed by most heretics likewise.

I shall place below (z) a remarkable passage of Ireneus, where he says:

"Marcion and his followers curtail the Scriptures with great assurance, rejecting some entirely, and diminishing the Gospel according to Luke, and the Epistles of Paul, affirming those parts of them alone to be genuine, which they have preferred. ... All others, who are puffed up with the science falsely so called, receive the Scriptures, whilst they pervert them by wrong interpretations."

In another place he says, "that (a) Marcion alone had openly dared to curtail the Scriptures." And my readers can easily recollect, how (b) severely Tertullian censures Marcion (c) for altering the text of the Scriptures, openly employing a knife, as he says, not a stile, to render them agreeable to his erroneous opinions.

However, I think, here is full proof, that the books of the New Testament were well known in Marcion's time, and before him: and that they were collected together in two parts, or volumes, an Evangelicon and Apostolicon. He and other Christians had a Gospel and an Apostle. But theirs were fuller than his.

10. We might, perhaps, not unprofitably recollect here those (d) passages of Eusebius of Cesarea, where he speaks of the Scriptures of the New Testament: some of which were universally received, others were contradicted: divers of which last, nevertheless, were received by many. The universally received by the founder part of Christians were the four Gospels, the Acts of the Apostles, thirteen epistles of Paul, one of Peter, one of John. It may be reckoned not unlikely, that all these had been from ancient time inferred by most Christians in their two volumes of the Gospel and Apostle. And, probably, divers of the other books, called controverted, or contradicted, were joined with the rest in the volumes of a good number of Christians.

III. There

(z) Unde et Marcion, et qui ab eo sunt, ad intercidendas conversi sunt Scripturas, quasdam quidem in totum non cognoscentes, secundum Lucam autem Evangelium, et Epistolam Pauli decurtantes, hae sola legitima esse dicit, qua ipsi minoraverunt. ... Reliqui vero omnes falsi scientiae nomine inflati Scripturas quidem confutetur, interpretationes vero convertuntur. Iren. adv. Her. l. 3. cap. xii. n. 12. p. 158. b. Meffuet.

(a) Sed hic quidem, quoniam et solus manifeste auferus est circumcidere Scripturas, &c. Iren. l. i. cap. 27. n. 4. p. 106. al. cap. 29. Vid. ib. num. 2.

(c) Marcion enim exerxe et palam machera, non silo usus est: quoniam ad materiam suam cadem Scripturarum confecit. De Praefer. Her. cap. 38. p. 246. C.

(d) See Vol. viii. p. 90. ... 105. Lardner's Ed.
III. There are some observations of Mr. Henry Dodwell concerning the late forming of the canon of the New Testament, which cannot be easily overlooked, and seem to require some notice in this place.

1. He says, "that (e) the canon of the sacred books was not determined, nor what number of them should be of authority in points of faith, before the time of the Emperor Trajan, who began his reign in the year of Christ 98."

And if hereby be meant all the books of our present canon, this may be true. But then it is a trifling proposition. For some of them were not writ, or have been supposed by many not to have been writ, till near the end of the first century. How then could they be sooner made a part of sacred scripture? or how could they be placed in the number of books, esteemed to be the rule of faith? But the first three Gospels, of St. Matthew, St. Mark, and St. Luke, and possibly the fourth likewise, St. John’s, and many of the Epistles of the New Testament, were well known before the reign of Trajan, even as soon as they were writ. And wherever they were known, and by whomsoever they were received, they were reckoned a part of the rule of faith.

2. The same learned man says likewise: "the (f) canonical scriptures of the New Testament lay hid in the cabinets of particular churches, and private persons, till the reign of Trajan, and perhaps till the reign of Adrian."

But I presume, we have just now sufficiently shewn the fallhood of this, and that the Gospels, and other books of the New Testament, were writ and published with a design to be read, and made use of, and that they were soon divulged abroad, and not purposely hid by any.

3. Farther, says Mr. Dodwell: "The (g) epistles of Paul were well known soon after they were writ. His many travels, and the mark of his hand at the end of them occasioned this."

We readily acknowledge it. It is very true. We think also, that the Gospels, the Acts, and other books of the New Testament, were well known soon after they were writ: and that in a short space of time many copies were taken of them, and thus they were divulged abroad. The first three Gospels were well known to St. John, and to many others, before he wrote his Gospel. Which must have been writ before the end

(e) Atqui certe ante illam epocham, quam dixi, Trajani, nondum consitutus est librorum facrorum canon, nec receptus alquis in ecclesia catholica librorum certus numerus, quos deinde adhibere oportuerit in sacris fidei caufis judicandis, nec rejeti haereticorum pseudepigraphi, monitive fideles, ut ab eorum ufa deinde caverent. Dodw. Diff. Iren. i. num. 39. in p. 67.

(f) Latitabant enim uſque ad recentiora illa feu Trajani, feu etiam forte feu Hadriani tempora, in privatum ecclesiarum, feu etiam hominum scrib. scripta illa canonica, ne ad ecclesiae catholicae notitiam pervenirent. Ibid. num. 38. p. 60.

(g) Sequuntur Epiftolae Paulinae, quas a prima uſque scripitione celeberimus fecere ipsius Apostoli tam crebrae peregrinationes, et nota ejus in omni epiftola manus. . Proinde meminit eorum et Petrus, meminit s. Clemens, meminit Ignatius, et Polycarpus. Ibid. num. 41. p. 73.
end of the first century, and, probably, a good while before the end of it.

4. The same learned writer, speaking of the apostolical fathers, Clement of Rome, Barnabas, Hermes, Ignatius, Polycarp, says, they (b) several times quote apocryphal books. And he so expresseth himself, as if he intended to affirm this of all of them.

To which I must answer, that so far as I am able to perceive, after a careful examination, there are not any quotations of apocryphal books in any of the apostolical fathers. They who are desirous of farther satisfaction therein, are referred to their several chapters in the first volume of this work, and to (i) some additional observations in the Recapitulation, which is in the twelfth volume.

5. Once more. The same learned writer says, “that (k) before the reign of Trajan the pseudepigraphal books of heretics had not been rejected. Nor had the faithfull been cautioned, not to make use of them.”

Which appears to me an observation of little, or no importance. If those pseudepigraphal books were not in being before the reign of Trajan, how should they be rejected before that time? That they were not sooner in being, has been (l) sufficiently shewn. They are the productions of heretics, who arose in the second century: who asserted two principles, had a disadvantageous opinion of marriage, and denied the real humanity of our Saviour. In that second century many pseudepigraphal Gospels, Acts, Travels, or Circuits of Apostles were composed. Which were afterwards made use of by the Manicheans, the Priscillianists, and some others.

But those pseudepigraphal books of heretics never were joyned with the genuine writings of the Apostles and Evangelists. They were always distinguished from them, and were esteemed by all catholic Christians in general to be of little value, and no authority. As appears from our collections out of ancient authors, and particularly from the accounts given of those books by (m) the learned Bishof of Cesearea, at the beginning of the fourth century.

(b) Habemus hodieque horum temporum scriptores ecclesiasticos luculentissimos, Clementem Romanum, Barnabam, Hermam, Ignatium, Polycarpum. . . Sed et apocrypha adhibent idem aliquoties, quae certum est in hodiernis non haberi Evangelii. Ib. n. 39. p. 67.

(i) See Vol. xii. p. 33. and 158. & c. Lardner’s Edit.

(k) See before. p. 428, note (e). The same.

(l) Vol. xii. p. 164. . . 167. The same.

(m) See Vol. viii. p. 98. . . 100. and Vol. xii. p. 158. . . 160. The same.
The Question considered, whether any sacred Books of the New Testament have been lost.

Here is a question, which has been proposed by some learned men: Whether any sacred books of the New Testament, or any epistles of Apostles and Evangelists, writ by divine inspiration, have been lost? And some have taken the affirmative, particularly, (a) Mr. John Ens, and (b) Mr. C. M. Pfaff, in a work, published by him in the early part of his life. Herman Witsius likewise (c) has argued on the same side in several of his works.

I. Here, in the first place, I observe, that some suppositions have been made, and propositions laid down by learned men, which may form a prejudice in favour of the affirmative side of the question, but afford no proof. Such things should not be advanced by fair disputants.

As first, that (d) the Apostles of Christ were ever ready to serve all the exigences of the Church. Which is very true. And yet it does not follow, that any epistles, or other writings, were composed by them for the general use of Christians, beside those which we have. And,

Itaque hoc misso, inspiciamus et rite perpendamus, quin probationi interfiant, ad evincendum, quod Apostoli plura exararent scripta vere divina, quam nunc exstant. Id. ib. §. vi. p. 22.

(b) Chr. Matth. Pfaffi Differtationi Critica de genuinis Librorum N. T. Lectionibus. p. 46. . . . 48. Amst. 1709.

(d) Prima observatio est, quod alacres et paratisimi fuerint Apostoli ad omnia conferenda, quae uel et utilitati Ecclesiæ interfiræ poterant. Ens ubi supra. §. xx. p. 35.

secondly, that (c) it is unlikely, that all the apostles of Christ should have writ no more letters, than now remain: as it is also, that (f) Paul should have writ no more than fourteen epistles. These, and such like observations, though adopted by (g) Witius, as well as some others, I choose to dismiss without a particular discussion, as they contain not any real argument.

A man, who thinks of our Lord's great character, and the unparalleled excellence of his discourses, and the great number of his miraculous works, and that he had twelve Apostles, and seventy other disciples, employed by him, all zealous for the honour of their Master, and the good of his people, might be disposed to say: Certainly, there were many Gospels, or authentic histories of his life, writ before the destruction of Jerusalem. And yet, if there is any credit to be given to ecclesiastical historie, when John was desired to write his Gospel, about the time of that event, or after it; there were brought to him no more than three Gospels, to be confirmed by him, or to have some additions made to them. One of which only had been writ by an Apostle, even Matthew's. And it is the concurrent testimonie of all Christian Antiquity, that there were but four Gospels, writ by Apostles, and Apostolical men. And yet we have no reason to say, that the true interest of mankind has not been duly consulted.

II. I observe, secondly: It is generally allowed by learned men, and by (b) Mr. Ens, and (f) Witius, that the epistles to the Thessalonians are among the first of St. Paul's epistles, that remain, or were written by him. And I think, that the conclusion of the first epistle to the Thessalonians suggests a very probable argument, that it is the first epistle, which was writ by him with divine and apostolical authority for the edification of Christians. The words intended by me, are those of 1 Theff. v. 27. I charge you by the Lord, that this epistle be read unto all the holy brethren. This, as (k) was formerly observed, I take to be the first instance of enjoying the reading of a Christian writing in their religious assemblies, as a part of their worship. Christian people had before now, very probably, read in that manner the books of the Old Testament. St. Paul, who knew the fulness of the apostolical inspiration, afferts his authority, and requires, that the same respect should be now shewn to his epistle, and

(f) Immo nec illud veritatis speciem habet, ipsum Paulum non plures quam quatuordecim epistolas scripsisse. Quod tertio observavi velim. Id. §. xxv. p. 41.

(g) Nullus equidem dubito, quin Apostoli omnes pro singulari sua diligentia frequentissimas litteras ad ecclesias sue commissas dederint: quibus praefentes semper adeps non licebat, et quibus multa tamen identidem habebant inculcanda. Witf. De Vita Pauli. fæct. 7. num. xi. p. 98.

Laudanda profectione Dei benignitas eft, quod ex tot Paulinis epistolis, quae perierunt, hanc tamen, [ad Phil.] mole exiguam, et de re domestica agentem, superare voluerit. Id. ib. fæct. 12. num. xvi.

(b) Ens ubi supra. §. xxviii. p. 45.

(i) At nobis de Paulinis Epistolis nunc est agendum: quorum quae superfunt primas esse confit utramque ad Theesalonicenses, Corinthi, ut initio dixi, scriptas. Udi supra fæct. 7. num. xii. p. 99.

(k) See before p. 235.
and that it should be publicly read among them for their general edification. If any such thing had been done before, there would not have been occasion for so much earnestness, as is expressed in this direction. This epistle is supposed to have been writ in the year 52. consequently, not till near twenty years after our Lord's ascension. If this be the first epistle of Paul, writ with apostolical authority; there were no sacred writings of his of a more ancient date to be lost. And his other remaining epistles are as many, as could be reasonably expected.

III. There are many considerations, tending to satisfy us, that no sacred writings of the Apostles of Christ are lost.

1. The four Gospels, which we have, were writ (l) for the sake of those, who certainly would receive them with respect, keep them with care, and recommend them to others. And if any other such authentic histories of Jesus Christ had been writ by Apostles, or Apostolical Men, they would have been received, and preferred in the like manner, and would not have been lost.

2. We can perceive from the testimonie of divers ancient Christian writers, that (m) the book of the Acts, which we still have, was the only authentic historie of the preaching of the Apostles after our Lord's ascenion, which they had in their hands, or had heard of. Consequently, there was no other such historie to be lost.

3. The epistles of Paul, James, Peter, John, Jude, were sent to churches, people, or particular persons, who would shew them great regard, when received, and would carefully preserve them, and readily communicate them to others, that they might take copies of them, and make use of them, for their establishment in religion and virtue. If those Apostles had writ other epistles, and if other Apostles had sent epistles to churches planted by them, or to particular persons, their disciples, or Christian friends, the case would have been much the same. Those epistles would have been esteemed, preserved, and frequently copied, and could not easily have been lost.

4. Moreover, the Apostles and Evangelists, who drew up any writings for the instruction, or confirmation of Christian people, must have been careful of them. The same principle of Zeal for the doctrine taught by them, and for the welfare of Christian people, which induced them, amidst their many labours, fatigues, and difficulties, to compose any writings, would lead them to take due care, that they should answer the ends, for which they were compsoed. Proofs of such care we evidently discern in divers of the epistles of Apostles, which we have. A like care, probably, was taken of the rest, and would be taken of epistles writ by any other Apostles. They would be sent by fit messengers, and be faithfully delivered. And they might be accompanied with some proper directions, such as we find in several of St. Paul's epistles: as that in the first epistle to the Thessalonians, requiring it to be read to all the brethren: and that in the epistle to the Colossians iv. 16. that it should be read read first among themselves, and then sent to the church of the Laodi-ceans: and that they likewise should read the epistle, that would be brought to them from Laodicea.

All which considerations must induce us to think, that no sacred writings of Apostles, composed for the instruction and edification of Christian people, their friends, and converts, could be easily lost.

IV. There are no sufficient reasons to believe, that any sacred writings of the New Testament have been lost. Let us however see what they are. For divers difficulties have been thought of.

1. St. Paul says (a) 2 Thess. ii. 1. 2. Now we beseech you, brethren, ... that ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither by spirit, nor by word, nor by letter, as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand.

These words, as I apprehend, afford not any proof, that St. Paul wrote more epistles to the Thessalonians, than those which we have. For a person, who had never writ one letter before, might use such expressions, if he had any ground to suspect, that some men were disposed to forge letters in his name.

2. 2 Thess. iii. 17. (o) The salutation of Paul with my own hand. Which is the token in every epistle. So I write.

But I think, he might say this, though it were the very first epistle writ by him: provided he thought, that he should have occasion to write more, and had reason to suspect, that there were some men, who might be dispersed to falsify his name. Nor does it follow, that he afterwards wrote any more epistles to the Thessalonians. However, he could not be certain, that he should not have occasion to write to them again. And he might judge it to be very likely, that he should write more letters, either to them, or to others. This declaration, then, was a proper mark, which might be of use to the Thessalonians, and to others, and a security against all impositions of that kind.

3. 2 Cor. x. 9. 10. 11. That I may not seem, as if I would terrify you by letters. For his letters, say they, are weighty and powerful, but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible. Let such an one think this, that such as we are in word by letters, when we are absent, such will we be also in deed, when we are present.

Hence it is argued, that (p) the Apostle had before now writ more than one, even several letters, to the Corinthians.

(a) Atqui hujus rei nullum fuisset periculum, nulla monendi necessitas, nisi varias acceperunt Thessalonicensepistolas a Paulo misisas. Qui enim unam ac alteram solummodo ad ecclesias scribaret epistolam, illius nomen falsae epiftolae ad ecclesias datex non facile mentiri poterat. J. Ensubifupr. §. xxix. p. 46.

(o) Illud idem iterum agnofcit Apostolus factum allegato cap. iii. 17. dato signo epistolis suis peculiari, quo nullae epistolae fae misfæ carent. ... Se dicit γράφων, sciliber. Quod paucis admodum epistolis vix conrumgum videtur:
praeterim quando dicit, et ος γράφων, ut salutatio propria manu fit signum et ος γράφων, in qua cumque epistola ... Quid erat periculi, quod datis epiftolis committeraret fallacia, si nullas praeter, et post hae duas ad illos daret epistolam? Id. ib. §. xxx. p. 46. 47.

(p) Cum duobus illis ex epist. ad Thessalonicensepistolas locis conferam Pauli dictum ad Corinthios. 2. x. 9. 10. 11. Quibus verbis Apostolus statuit, quod non unam epistolam, sed plures ad Corinthios scripsit. Id. ibid. §. xxxiii. p. 49.
To which I answer. It is very common to speak of one epistle in the plural number, as all know. And St. Paul might well write, as he here does, though he had as yet sent but one letter to those, to whom he is writing. And from so long a letter, as is the first to the Corinthians, men might form a good judgement concerning his manner of writing letters, though they had seen no other.

4. 1 Cor. v. 9. I wrote unto you in an epistle, not to company with fornicators.

Hence it is argued, that (q) St. Paul had writ an epistle to the Corinthians, before he wrote the first of those two, which we have. Consecutively, here is proof of the loss of a sacred writing, which would have been canonical, if extant.

And it must be acknowledged, that several (r) learned men have concluded as much from this text. Others however see not here any such proof. And on this side have argued (s) Whitby, and (t) others. And I think, it is of no small weight, that several ancient writers understood the Apostle to say: I have writ to you in this epistle. So (u) Theodoret, (x) Theophylact, and (y) Photius in Oecumenius. They suppose, that the Apostle here refers to somewhat before said by him in this same epistle, and in this very chapter, ver. 2. or 6. 7.

And that hereby is meant this epistle, seems to me very evident. That interpretation suits the words. And there are divers other places, where the same phrase is, and must be so rendered. Rom. xvi. 22. I Tertius, who wrote this epistle. Of which, 1 Thess. v. 27. I charge you by the Lord, that this epistle be read unto all the holy brethren.

Interpretation who are cried, 1 Cor. iv. 4. Hence (v) toward the place. Hence (w) toward the place. Hence (x) toward the place. Hence (y) toward the place. Hence (z) toward the place. Hence (a) toward the place.

(q) Inter illas est epistolæ quædam . . . ad Corinthios scripta ante illam, quæ nobis prima est, de qua Apostolus: Ἐγέφασε ὑμῖν ἐν τῇ ἑπιστολῇ, σcripsisse nobis in epistolæ. 1 Cor. v. 9. Enst. id. §. xxxiii. p. 51.

(r) Ex quibus verbis hoc concluso, ante hanc ad Corinthios epistolam aliarm extitisse, ubi Paulus a conversione sumum fornicatoribus eos dehortatus fuerit. C. M. Pfeiff. ibi supr. p. 46.

(1) See him upon the place.

(u) Ἐγέφασε ὑμῖν ἐν τῇ ἑπιστολῇ, σcripsisse nobis in epistolæ. 1 Cor. v. 9. Enst. id. §. xxxiii. p. 51.

(v) I might refer to many other texts of Scripture, and to passages of other writers.
Fabricius says, the (z) words, I have writ unto you, may be understood as equivalent to, I do write. And it may be remembred, that (a) some while ago I quoted an ancient writer, who gives this interpretation. “I (b) have writ unto you, that is, I write.” And intending, I think, somewhat to be afterwards said by the Apostle in this epistle. Which appears to me to be right. Many like instances might be alleged. I shall put in the margin some passages (c) from A. Gellius, where it is said: “I have subjoyned the words of Varro: that is, I shall subjoyn them. In another place. “I have transcribed the words of Plutarch.” And in like manner often: when the words of an author had not yet been transcribed, but were to be transcribed soon after.

In John iv. 38. Our Lord says to the disciples: I sent you to reap that, whereon ye have bestowed no labour. Nevertheless the disciples had not yet been sent forth by him. But knowing what he designed to do, and also knowing beforehand what would be the circumstances of their mission, he says to them: “When I shall send you to preach the gospel, you will find the case to be as I now represent it.”

In like manner St. Paul having in his mind the whole plan of the epistle, which he was writing, and considering some directions, which he should give in the remaining part of the epistle, says: I have writ unto you. If it be asked, where are those directions? I answer: I think, they are in the tenth chapter of this epistle, where the Apostle cautions against idolatrie, and dangerous temptations to it, and against doing what might be understood to be religious communion with idols, and idolaters. These things, I apprehend, the Apostle then had in his mind.

What he says therefore here in ch. v. 9. 10. 11. is to this purpose: “I shall in this epistle deliver some cautions against a dangerous and offensive intimation with idolaters. But when I do so, it is not my intention, writers. Matth. xxvi. 8. ἔγαφα τῆς σήμερον. xxviii. 15. ... μείχε τῆς σήμερον. ... Apoc. i. 3. κι ἀνάκοπος τῆς λόγου τῆς σωφροσύνης, id est, τατάσας σωφροσύνης, quomodo accept Latinus. Grot. in loc. So Liban. ep. 1174. p. 558. “Ε- μιλλε μὴ λείπητε μὴ την ἑστηκολήν. κ. λ. Etiamsi ego has literas non scripsi, falso, ... Ep. 1177. p. 559. Καὶ μὴ κατά καὶν ἑξίαν, ὅτι μαίρονος ἀπολάσθη τῆς ψυχας σου σφόνοιας, μετὰ την ἑστηκολήν. poft traditas has literas.

(a) Possum etiam verba, ἔγαφα υμῖν, reddii, scrivo vobis, &c. Bib. Gr. l. 4. cap. 4. Tom. 3. p. 154.

(c) Verba Varronis subjici. A. Gell. No. Att. l. 2. cap. 20.

Propterea verba Atteei Capitonis ex quinto Librorn, quos de Pontificio Jure compositum, scripsi. Ib. l. 4. cap. 6.

Verba ipsa Plutarchi, quoniam res inopinat eft, sub scripsi. Ib. cap. 12.

Ex quo libro plura verba adscriptis, ut simul ibidem quid ipse inter res geftas et annales effe dixerit, oftendimus. Ib. l. 5. cap. 18.

Ipsa autem verba Chrysippi, quantum valui memoria adscriptis. In libro enim scripti scriptores quarto dicit. ... Ib. l. 6. cap. 2.

L. 12
tion, to prohibit all civil commerce with Gentil people, who are fornicators, or covetous, or extortioners, or idolaters. For at that rate you could not live in the world. But here I am speaking of such as are professed Christians. And I have now written unto you, that is, I now charge you, and require it of you: If any man, called a brother, a professed Christian, be a fornicator, or covetous, or an idolater, or an extortioner, with such an one, no not to eat: that is, not to have any conversation with him." Compare 2 Thess. iii. 14. 15.

That appears to me the most probable account of this text. But if any hesitate about the reference to a place, that follows in the remaining part of the epistle; I still hope, I may insist upon it, that is τὰ ἵππον, which we have rendred in an epistle, does, and must signify, in this epistle.

5. 2 Pet. iii. 15. 16. And account, that the longsuffering of God is salvation: even as our beloved brother Paul also, according to the wisdom given unto him, has written unto you.

Hence it is argued, that (d) St. Paul wrote several letters to the dispersed Jews, which are now lost. I answer, that this argument depends upon the supposition, that the epistles of St. Peter were sent to believing Jews. Which is far from being certain. It is more probable, as was (e) formerly shewn, that St. Peter's epistles were sent to believing Gentils in Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia, and Bithynia, or to all Christians in general in those countries. To which Christians Paul had indeed sent several letters. To them were sent his epistle to the Galatians, the Ephesians, the Cisleans. To which might be added his two epistles to Timothy, then residing at Ephesus, the chief city of Asia. To these, and other epistles of the Apostle Paul, St. Peter might refer. Nocr can I see any reason at all to doubt, whether the epistles of Paul, intended by St. Peter, are not still in being.

6. 3 John ver. 9. I wrote unto the church. Hence (f) some have argued, that St. John wrote an epistle to the church, where Diotrephes affected to have pre-eminence, which is now lost.

Indeed this text has exercised the thoughts of many critics, as may be seen in Wolfii Curae. However the words may be translated thus: I had writ, or I should have writ to the church. This version has been approved by (g) some. And to me it appears very right. If this interpretation be admitted, there is no reason to conclude, that (b) any writing of St. John has been lost.

7. It

(e) See before. p. 448. &c.

(f) Eodem modo et literæ S. Joannis, ad Ecclesiæ, in qua Diotrephes & c.

(g) See Whitby, et p. 47; Joh. ver. 9. memora, et p. 47, note [x].

(b) "Some would, from hence, gather, that St. John wrote an epistle, which is now lost. But the primitive Christians were not so careless about preserving the apostolic writings. There is not the least hint among the ancients,
7. It is argued, that (i) Polycarp, writing to the Philippians, expresseth himself, as if he thought, St. Paul had writ to them more epistles than one.

To which it is easy to answer, that though the word be in the plural number, one epistle only might be meant. Secondly, it is not improbable, that Polycarp intended the epistle to the Philippians, and also the two epistles of Paul to the Thessalonians, who were in the same province of Macedonia, as was shewn (k) formerly. Indeed this objection is so obviated by what was said, when we largely considered the testimony of Polycarp to the New Testament, that I think nothing more needs to be added here.

V. In treating this subject Mr. Ens could not help thinking of those passages of Origen, and Eusebius, where they speak of the Apostles not being solicitous to write many volumes. Which passages were taken notice of by us (l) long ago. He endeavors to evade the proper conclusion to be thence drawn. But he owns, that (m) the ancients had no knowledge of those writings of the Apostles, which he and some others have imagined to be lost. And he thinks it almost miraculous, or however a very wonderful dispensation of Providence, that they should so soon perish, as to be unknown to the ancients, as well as to us.

But does not that shew, that this whole argument is frivolous and insignificant? For plausible speculations cannot be valid against fact and evidence. If the primitive Christians knew not of any apostolical writings, beside those, which have been transmitted to us; it is very probable, there were none.

... Dr. Benson upon the place, p. 703.

(k) See Vol. i. p. 201. ... 203. or p. 204. 205. See Lardner’s Edit.

(m) Fateor ingenue, vix concipi potest, unde tam cito tanta fuerit inter veteres ignorantia de eo, quod Apololori multo plura scripsissent, quam quidem illorum, et nostras pervenit ad manus. Fateor, vix concipi potest, ubi tam profunde latere potuerint scripta illa apostolica, ut omnium fugerint oculos. Afl divina hic mihi admiranda ac adoranda videtur providentia, quae ad tempus data scripta, dum aliorum quae permanerent in vitre canonem perpetuum nondum effet in ecclesiis copia, deinde protinus e medio tolli voluerit. Ens ibid. §. li. p. 68.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Gospels, &amp;c.</th>
<th>Place.</th>
<th>A. D.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>St. Matthew's.</td>
<td>Judea, {or near it.}</td>
<td>about 64.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>St. Mark's.</td>
<td>Rome.</td>
<td>... 64.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>St. Luke's.</td>
<td>Greece.</td>
<td>{or 64.}</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>St. John's.</td>
<td>Ephesus.</td>
<td>{or 68.}</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Acts of the Apostles.</td>
<td>Greece.</td>
<td>{or 64.}</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

A Scheme of the Times, Places, and Occasions of writing the Gospels, according to Dr. Owen's Account.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Gospels.</th>
<th>Place.</th>
<th>A. D.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>St. Matthew's.</td>
<td>Jerusalem.</td>
<td>about 38.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>St. Luke's.</td>
<td>Corinth.</td>
<td>For the use of the Jewish Converts. about 53.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>St. John's.</td>
<td>Ephesus.</td>
<td>For the use of Christians at large. about 69.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

To confute the Corinthian and other Heresies.

A Table of St. Paul's Epistles, in the common Order, with the Places where, and the Times, when they were writ:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Epistles.</th>
<th>Places.</th>
<th>A. D.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Romans.</td>
<td>Corinth.</td>
<td>about February 58.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 Corinthians.</td>
<td>Ephesus.</td>
<td>beginning of 56.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 Corinthians.</td>
<td>Macedonia.</td>
<td>about October 57.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Galatians.</td>
<td>Corinth, {or Ephesus.}</td>
<td>near the end of 52.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ephesians.</td>
<td>Rome.</td>
<td>the beginning of 53.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Philippians.</td>
<td>Rome.</td>
<td>about April 61.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Colossians.</td>
<td>Rome.</td>
<td>before the end of 62.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 Thessalonians.</td>
<td>Corinth.</td>
<td>52.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 Thessalonians.</td>
<td>Macedonia.</td>
<td>56.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 Timothy.</td>
<td>Rome.</td>
<td>about May 61.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 Timothy.</td>
<td>Macedonia, {or near it.}</td>
<td>before the end of 56.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Titus.</td>
<td>Rome.</td>
<td>before the end of 62.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Philemon.</td>
<td>Rome.</td>
<td>{or 62.}</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hebrews.</td>
<td>Italy.</td>
<td>in the spring of 63.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

A Table
A Table of St. Paul's Epistles, in the Order of Time, with the Places where, and the Times, when they were writ.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Epistles.</th>
<th>Places.</th>
<th>A. D.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1 Theſſalόnians.</td>
<td>Corinth, or Ephefus.</td>
<td>near the end of 52.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 Theſſalόnians.</td>
<td>Corinth.</td>
<td>or the beginning of 53.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Galatians.</td>
<td>Ephefus.</td>
<td>the beginning of 56.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 Corinthians.</td>
<td>Macedonia.</td>
<td>56.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1 Timothie.</td>
<td>Macedonia, or near it.</td>
<td>before the end of 56.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Titus*.</td>
<td>Macedonia.</td>
<td>about October 57.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 Corinthians.</td>
<td>Corinthians.</td>
<td>about February 58.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Romans.</td>
<td>Rome.</td>
<td>about April 61.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ephesians.</td>
<td>Rome.</td>
<td>about May 61.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 Timothie.</td>
<td>Rome.</td>
<td>before the end of 62.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Philippians.</td>
<td>Rome.</td>
<td>before the end of 62.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Colοffians.</td>
<td>Rome.</td>
<td>before the end of 62.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Philemon.</td>
<td>Rome, or Italie.</td>
<td>in the spring of 63.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

A Table of the seven Catholic Epiftles, and the Revelation, with the Places where, and the Times, when they were writ.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Epiftles, &amp;c.</th>
<th>Places.</th>
<th>A. D.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The Epiftle of St. James.</td>
<td>Judea.</td>
<td>or the beginning of 62.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The two Epiftles of St. Peter.</td>
<td>Rome.</td>
<td>64.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>St. John's first Epiftle.</td>
<td>Ephesus.</td>
<td>about 80.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>His second and third Epiftles.</td>
<td>Ephesus.</td>
<td>between 80. and 90.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Epiftle of St. Jude.</td>
<td>Unknown.</td>
<td>64. or 65.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The Revelation of St. John.</td>
<td>Patmos, or Ephesus.</td>
<td>95. or 96.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Tabula Chronologica Librorum N. T. juxta J. Millium, ab J. Alberto Fabricio concinnata; jam vero correctior.

- A. D. 52. Claud. 12. I & 2 Ep. ad Theſſalοnicenses, Corinthi, Act. xviii. 5. cum Timotheus & Silas illuc reverſi effent, 1 Thess. iii. 6. Has refpicit Petrus 2 Ep. iii. 16.
- A. D. 57. Neronis 3. I Ep. ad Cor. ante feftum Paschale, 1 Cor. v. 8. Act. xix. 21. cum Ephesum cogitaret antequam Hierofo-lymam ascendiſſet, et ante iter in Macedonian, 1 Cor. xvi. 3, 4, 5.
- A. D. 58. Neronis 4. 2 Ep. ad Cor. sub extremum anni, c. xii. 2. Act. xix. 23. Philippis, per Titum & Lucam, uti habet sub- scriptio.

- Ep. ad Galatas, c. ii. 10. in itinere Hieroſlymam ver-fus, forteſſis Troade. Jacobi Evang. Matthaei, cum Paulus prima vice Romam venisset.

Mæri Evang. Romæ, post Petri & Pauli ex ea urbe dicesellum.

END OF VOLUME SECOND.